credit for United States tax purposes approximate the earnings and profits of the United Kingdom corporation as computed in the United Kingdom for United Kingdom tax purposes. This assumption, of course, is not always valid and there will be situations where the earnings and profits differ for United Kingdom and United States tax purposes. Accordingly, it will be necessary for United States shareholders to maintain separate records to reflect these differences. Such records must currently be maintained by United States shareholders of foreign corporations where the amount of earnings and profits of that corporation differ under the rules of the respective countries. Separate records will be especially important where United States shareholders do not own all of the shares of a United Kingdom corporation. Quite often the shares of a United Kingdom corporation are owned by both United States and foreign shareholders. In these cases, the payment of an ACT credit to the United States shareholder will require a separate computation of earnings and profits for United States tax purposes which reflects that shareholder's proportionate interest in the corporation.

Paragraph (2) of this Article parallels paragraph (1) with respect to the treatment of United States taxes paid by a resident of the United Kingdom. Under this paragraph, the United Kingdom will allow a resident of the United Kingdom as a credit against United Kingdom taxes paid to the United States in accordance with the provisions of the law of the United Kingdom for the allowance of credits for taxes to territories outside the United Kingdom (as it may be amended from time to time without changing the general principle of paragraph (2)). Such credit shall be allowed with respect to taxes payable in accordance with this Convention on profits or income from sources within the United States, as determined by subparagraph (3) of this Article (excluding, in the case of a dividend, tax payable in respect of the profits out of which the dividend is paid).

In the case of a dividend paid by a United States corporation to a corporation which is a resident of the United Kingdom which controls directly or indirectly 10 percent or more of the voting power of that paying corporation, the United Kingdom shall also allow a credit for the appropriate amount of taxes paid or accrued to the United States by the United States corporation paying such dividends with respect to the profits out of which such dividends are paid.

Paragraph (3) sets forth the source of income rules applicable for purposes of determining the allowance of tax credits under this Article. For purposes of the preceding paragraphs, income or profits derived by a resident of a Contracting State which are taxed in the other Contracting State in accordance with the Convention (other than by reason of the saving clause referred to below) shall be deemed to arise from sources within that other Contracting State. However, where a United States citizen is subject to tax in the United States by reason of his citizenship under the saving clause of paragraph (3) of Article 1 (Personal Scope), the United Kingdom will allow that person a tax credit for any United States tax paid with respect to income which under the internal laws of the United Kingdom has its source in the United States; and the United States will allow that person, subject to limitations of the Internal Revenue Code to claim a credit for taxes paid to the United Kingdom with respect to income which under the internal laws of the United States has its source in the United Kingdom. This paragraph has particular relevance with respect to a United States citizen who is a resident of the United Kingdom for purposes of this Convention (see Article 4 (Fiscal Residence)).

In the case of third country income earned by a United States citizen who is a resident of the United Kingdom (e.g., dividends from Germany), the United Kingdom is not required to allow a credit for United States taxes on that income. Double taxation of income may be avoided, however, under the overall method for computing foreign tax credits. In such case, the United States will allow under its internal law a credit for both the United Kingdom and third country taxes.

Finally, paragraph (4) makes it clear that the credit allowed for taxes paid to the United Kingdom, especially the petroleum revenue tax, shall be subject to the tax credit limitations of the Tax Reduction Act of 1975 which apply to foreign oil and gas extraction income.

ARTICLE 24. NON-DISCRIMINATION

Paragraph (1) provides that individuals who are nationals of a Contracting State and who are residents of the other Contracting State will not be subjected in that other Contracting State to taxation or any other requirement connected therewith which is other or more burdensome than the taxation or requirements connected therewith to which nationals of that other Contracting State in the same circumstances are or may be subjected. Thus, for example, a national of the United Kingdom who is a resident of the United States and who meets the requirements specified in Code section 911 would, under this Article, be entitled to the benefits of that section even though he is not also a national of the United States. On the other hand, just as a United States citizen who becomes a non-resident alien at any time during a taxable year or whose spouse is a non-resident alien cannot in the absence of an election file a joint return for that year, a United Kingdom national would not be entitled to file a joint return with his spouse in the absence of such election if either is a non-resident alien at any time during the taxable year.

Paragraph (2) provides that a permanent establishment which an enterprise of one Contracting State has in the other Contracting State will not be subject in that other Contracting State to less favorable taxation than an enterprise of that other Contracting State carrying on the same activities.

Subject to the provisions of paragraph (4), discussed below, paragraph (3) provides that interest, royalties, and other disbusements paid by an enterprise of a Contracting State to an enterprise of the other Contracting State shall, if reasonable in amount, be deductible for purposes of determining the taxable profits of the enterprise in that Contracting State under the same conditions as if they had been paid to a resident of the Contracting State. This rule is not limited to payments to related parties.

For purposes of this paragraph, the term "other disbursements" includes charges for amounts expended by a resident of the other Contracting State for the benefit of the enterprise. The term "other disbursements" is to be broadly defined, to include charges or allocations by such resident for the benefit of such enterprise, including reasonable allocations of executive and general administrative overhead (except to the extent such expenses are not for the benefit of the enterprise, but are for "stewardship" or "overseeing" functions for the resident's own benefit as an investor in the enterprise). The term also includes charges and allocations of research and development expenses where the enterprise has the benefits of such activities under a cost or risk sharing agreement and other expenditures by the resident of a group of enterprises which includes such enterprise.

Paragraph (4) states that paragraph (3), above, does not apply to interest, royalties, or other disbursements to which the provisions of Article 9 (Associated Enterprises), paragraphs (5) and (7) of Article 11 (Interest), or paragraph (5) of Article 12 (Royalties) apply with respect to transactions between related parties.

Paragraph (5) prohibits one Contracting State from subjecting an enterprise of such Contracting State, the capital of which is wholly or partly owned or controlled, directly or indirectly, by one or more residents of the other Contracting State, to any taxation or any requirement connected with taxation which is other or more burdensome than is applicable to enterprises of the first-mentioned Contracting State carrying on the same activities, the capital of which is wholly or partly owned or controlled by one or more residents of the first-mentioned Contracting State.

Paragraph (6) provides that nothing in this Article obliges a Contracting State to grant to individual residents of the other Contracting State any personal allowances, reliefs, or deductions for taxation purposes on account of civil status or family responsibilities which it grants to its own residents.

This Article is similar to Article XXI of the 1945 Convention and Article 24 (Non-Discrimination) of the OECD Model Convention.

Article 25. Mutual Agreement Procedure

This Article generally extends the mutual agreement procedures found in Article XXA of the 1945 Convention and is similar to Article 25 (Mutual Agreement Procedure) of the OECD Model Convention.

Under paragraph (1), when a resident or national of a Contracting State considers that the actions of one or both Contracting States results or will result in taxation which is not in accordance with the Convention, he may, notwithstanding the remedies provided by the national laws of those States, present his case to the competent authority of the Contracting State of which he is a resident or national. A resident or national of a Contracting State need not, although it is anticipated that in the normal situation he will, exhaust his other administrative or judicial remedies prior to resorting to the use of the mutual agreement procedure.

Under paragraph (2), if the claim is considered to be justified by the competent authority and if it cannot alone arrive at an appropriate solution to the issue involved, that competent authority shall endeavor to resolve the case by agreement with the competent authority of the other Contracting State, with a view to the avoidance of taxation which is contrary to the Convention. In cases in which the competent authorities reach an agreement, taxes will be imposed, and refunds or credits of taxes will be allowed, as appropriate, by the Contracting States in accordance with such agreement. In the case of the United States, where an agreement is reached between the competent authorities which requires the United States to make a refund of tax or to extend any other similar credit, such refund or credit will be made, assuming presentation of his case to the competent authority within a reasonable period, notwithstanding any procedural barriers otherwise existing under United States law, including any statute of limitations. In cases where an agreement cannot be reached between the competent authorities, the United States will not be required to provide any relief for double taxation on a unilateral basis.

Paragraph (3) permits the competent authorities of the two Contracting States to endeavor to resolve by mutual agreement any difficulties or doubts arising as to the application of the Convention. In particular, the competent authorities may reach agreement on the attribution of income, deductions, credits, or allowances of an enterprise of a Contracting State to its permanent establishment situated in the other Contracting State; the allocation of income, deductions, credits, or allowances between persons; the nature of particular items of income; the meaning of terms not otherwise defined in this Convention; the place where a particular item of income has its source; and the elimination of double taxation in respect of income paid out of trusts. In the case of trust distributions, the competent authorities may conclude that elimination of double taxation requires that the character of the income giving rise to such distributions must be determined. In such a case, taxpayers will be expected to have the records necessary to demonstrate the character of income underlying a trust distribution.

Under paragraph (4), the competent authorities may communicate with each other directly and, when advisable, meet together for an oral exchange of opinions, for the purpose of reaching an agreement.

Article 26. Exchange of Information and Administrative Assistance

This Article extends without change the exchange of information Article (Article XX) and the assistance in collection Article (Article XIXA) of the 1945 Convention.

Paragraph (1) provides for a system of administrative cooperation between the competent authorities of the two

Contracting States by requiring an exchange of information necessary for the carrying out of the Convention and of the domestic laws of the Contracting States concerning taxes covered by the Convention insofar as the taxation thereunder is in accordance with the Convention. The competent authorities may exchange information in connection with tax compliance generally, not merely illegal acts or crimes. Information need be exchanged, however, only if it is of a class that can be obtained under the laws and administrative practices of each Contracting State with respect to its own taxes.

The information exchanged must be treated as secret. However, such information may be disclosed to any persons or authorities (including a court or administrative body) concerned with the assessment, collection, or enforcement of, or prosecution with respect to, the taxes which are the subject of the Convention. No information may be exchanged which would disclose any trade, business, industrial or profesional secret or any trade process.

Paragraph (2) provides that one Contracting State will give the other Contracting State limited assistance in collecting its taxes. Thus, each Contracting State is required to collect on behalf of the other Contracting State only those taxes imposed by such other Contracting State as will ensure that any exemption or reduced rate of tax granted under this Convention by such other Contracting State is not enjoyed by persons not entitled to such benefits.

Paragraph (3) makes clear that a Contracting State is not obligated to carry out measures which are at variance with its laws or the administrative practice with respect to the collection of its own taxes; or which would be contrary to its sovereignty, security or public policy. A Contracting State may also consider, in determining the administrative measures it will use, the administrative measures utilized by the other Contracting State in a comparable situation.

Paragraph (4) provides that the competent authorities will consult to cooperate and advise each other on the implementation of these provisions.

ARTICLE 27. EFFECT ON DIPLOMATIC AND CONSULAR OFFICIALS AND DOMESTIC LAWS

Paragraph (1) of this Article provides that nothing in the Convention will affect the fiscal privileges of diplomatic and consular officials under the general rules of international law or under the provisions of special agreements.

Paragraph (2) provides that the Convention will not restrict in any manner any exclusion, exemption, deduction, credit, or other allowance now or hereafter accorded by the laws of a Contracting State. This rule reflects the principle that a Convention should not increase the tax burden on residents of the Contracting States.

ARTICLE 28. ENTRY INTO FORCE

Paragraph (1) provides that the proposed Convention shall be ratified and that the instruments of ratification shall be exchanged at Washington, D.C. as soon as possible after both States have ratified the Convention.

Paragraph (2) provides that the Convention will enter into force on the thirty-first day following the date of exchange of the instruments of ratification. With respect to the United Kingdom, the proposed Convention will take effect in the following manner. In relation to any dividend to which subparagraph (2)(a)(ii) of Article 10 (Dividends) applies, the provisions of that Article shall apply to any year of assessment beginning on or after April 6, 1973. For this purpose, a dividend paid on or after April 1, 1973, and before April 6, 1973, shall be treated for tax credit purposes (i.e., for purposes of any refund of the ACT) as paid on April 6, 1973. United States shareholders who derived dividends from corporations which were residents of the United Kingdom during this period will be entitled to claim refunds from the United Kingdom in respect of those dividends and in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 2(a)(ii) of Article 10. It is anticipated that the United Kingdom will prescribe the procedures for claiming those refunds upon ratification of this Convention.

In the case of dividends to which subparagraph (2)(a)(i) of Article 10 (Dividends) applies (i.e., dividends received from a corporation which is a resident of the United Kingdom by a United States corporation owning 10 percent or more of the voting stock thereof), and any other provision of the Convention in respect of income tax and payments of tax credits (i.e., refunds of ACT), and in respect of the United Kingdom capital gains tax, those provisions shall be effective for any year of assessment beginning on or after April 6, 1975. Refunds of tax may be claimed in the manner to be prescribed by the United Kingdom.

The Convention will be effective in respect of the United Kingdom corporation tax, for any financial year beginning on or after April 1, 1975, in respect of the United Kingdom petroleum revenue tax, for any chargeable period beginning on or after January 1, 1975, and (in accord with Article V of the Protocol of [March 31], 1977) in respect of the special domicile rule of paragraph (4) of Article 4 (Fiscal Residence) for any year of assessment beginning on or after April 6, 1976.

For the United States, tax credits for taxes paid to the United Kingdom on or after April 1, 1973, shall be allowed for the period subsequent to that date in accordance with paragraph (1) of Article 23 (Elimination of Double Taxation). In the case of dividends received for any year of assessment beginning on or after April 6, 1973, and before any year of assessment beginning on or after April 6, 1975, by a United States corporation described by paragraph (2)(a)(i) of Article 10 (Dividends), the full amount of ACT paid in respect of such dividends shall be regarded as a tax imposed on the distributing corporation.

With respect to taxes withheld at source, this Convention shall become effective in the United States on January 1, 1975, for taxes withheld on or after that date and with respect to all other taxes, this Convention will be effective in the United States for taxable years beginning on or after January 1, 1975.

Subject to the provisions of paragraph (4) of this Article, the 1945 Convention, as amended by the Supplementary Protocol of June 6, 1946, by the Supplementary Protocol of May 25, 1954, by the Supplementary Protocol of August 19, 1957, and by the Supplementary Protocol of March 17, 1966, will cease to have effect in respect of taxes to which this Convention in accordance with the provisions of paragraph (2) of this Article applies.

Where any provision of the 1945 Convention would have afforded any greater relief from tax, any such provision will continue to have effect for any year of assessment or financial year in the United Kingdom and for any taxable year in the United States beginning, in either case, before January 1, 1976.

The 1945 Convention will terminate on the last date on which it has effect in accordance with the foregoing provisions of this Article. In addition, this Convention will not affect any Agreement in force extending the 1945 Convention in accordance with Article XXII thereof. In those cases, the 1945 Convention will continue to apply to those territories. The United States has requested the United Kingdom to advise territories to which the 1945 Convention has been extended that the United States desires to renegotiate the Convention as it affects those territories so as to reflect the principles of this Convention.

The amendments to this Convention effected by the Notes exchanged at London on April 13, 1976 shall enter into force on the same date as determined under paragraph (2) of this Article and, in accord with the provisions of Article V of the Protocol of August 26, 1976 and of Article VI of the Protocol of [March 31], 1977, the amendments to this Convention effected by those protocols shall, upon ratification, enter into force on the thirty-first day following the date of the exchange of the instruments of ratification of those Protocols. Once in force, the provisions of the Notes and the two protocols shall have effect in accordance with this Article.

ARTICLE 29. TERMINATION

This Article is drafted in substantially the same manner as the termination Article of the 1945 Convention.

Paragraph (1) provides that the Convention will remain in force indefinitely, but that either Contracting State may, on or before June 30 in any year after the year 1980, give to the other Contracting State through diplomatic channels notice of termination. When notice is properly given, the Convention ceases to be effective for taxable years beginning on or after January 1 of the following year for United States tax; for a year of assessment beginning on or after April 6 of the following year for United Kingdom income tax and capital gains tax; for a financial year beginning on or after April 1 of the following year for United Kingdom corporation tax; and for a chargeable period beginning on or after January 1 of the following year for United Kingdom petroleum revenue tax.

Under paragraph (2), the termination of the proposed Convention will not have the effect of reviving any treaty or arrangement abrogated by the present Convention or by treaties previously concluded between the Contracting States.

Technical Explanation [1] of the Third Protocol Signed at London on March 15, 1979 (the "Third Protocol" or the "Protocol") Further Amending the Convention Between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland for the Avoidance of Double Taxation and the Prevention of Fiscal Evasion with Respect to Taxes on Income and Capital Gains Signed at London, on December 31, 1975, as Amended by the Notes Exchanged at London on April 13, 1976, and the Protocols Signed at London on August 25, 1976 and March 31, 1977 (the Convention as Amended by the Notes and the Two Protocols Being Referred to as the "Convention") [2]

The Third Protocol contains seven articles which modify Articles 2 (Taxes covered), 7 (Business profits), 9 (Associated enterprises), 10 (Dividends), 19 (Government service), 23 (Elimination of double taxation), and 28 (Entry into force) of the Convention. In addition, Article VI of the Protocol adds a new Article 27A (Offshore activities) to the Convention. Set forth below is an explanation of each article of the Protocol.

ARTICLE I

Article I contains three paragraphs serving to conform the text of the Convention to the United States Senate's reservation which was made a part of its June 27, 1978 resolution of advice and consent to ratification. The references to income taxes imposed by political subdivisions or local authorities are deleted from paragraphs (2) and (3) of Article 2 (Taxes covered) and from paragraph (4) of Article 9 (Associated enterprises). The other provisions of those paragraphs are restated. Taxes imposed by political subdivisions and local authorities remain subject to the provisions of Article 24 (Non-discrimination) of the Convention, by reason of paragraph (4) of Article 2 (Taxes covered).

ARTICLE II

Article II adds a new subparagraph (6A) to Article 7 (Business profits) of the Convention. The new subparagraph provides that the United States excise tax on insurance premiums paid to foreign insurers, imposed by section 4371 of the Internal Revenue Code (the "Code"), will not apply to insurance or reinsurance premiums received by a business of insurance conducted by a United Kingdom enterprise regardless of whether that business is carried on through a permanent establishment in the United States.

[1] It is the practice of the Treasury Department to prepare for the use of the Senate and other interested persons a Technical Explanation of the tax protocols, which are submitted to the Senate for its advice and consent to ratification.

An Income Tax Protocol with the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland was signed on March 15, 1979, and submitted by the President to the Senate on April 12, 1979. On June 6, 1979, the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations held hearings and this Technical Explanation was presented. The Senate voted its advice and consent on July 9, 1979, and instruments of ratification were exchanged on March 25, 1980.

Under paragraph (1) of Article 7 (Business profits) and subparagraph (2)(a) of Article 2 (Taxes covered) of the Convention, no insurance excise tax (or income tax) is payable with respect to premiums paid to a United Kingdom enterprise if the enterprise does not have a permanent establishment in the United States. In the case of an enterprise with a permanent establishment in the U.S., the United States will tax the income effectively connected with a U.S. trade or business, under section 864 of the Code, as is permitted by paragraphs (1) and (7) of Article 7.

In the case of a United Kingdom enterprise with a permanent establishment in the United States, there was some uncertainty over the applicability of the insurance excise tax. The intention of the Convention was that the excise tax would not be imposed in addition to the income tax on premiums or income arising from the insurance of United States risks. However, since the income tax and the insurance excise tax are not necessarily mutually exclusive under the Code, and since the application of the non-discrimination provisions of Article 24 (Non-discrimination) was not entirely clear in the circumstances, it was thought desirable to provide explicitly that only the income tax would apply in the case of a British enterprise with a United States permanent establishment.

ARTICLE III

A corporation organized under the laws of the United States, one of the states, or the District of Columbia is a United States resident under subparagraph (1)(b)(ii) of Article 4 (Fiscal residence). Such a corporation may also be a resident of the United Kingdom, however, under subparagraph (1)(a)(ii) of that Article if its business is managed and controlled in the United Kingdom. Paragraph (5) of Article 10 (Dividends) of the Convention, which corresponds to Article XV of the 1945 Convention, prohibits (with certain exceptions) a Contracting State from taxing dividends paid by a corporation which is a resident of the other Contracting State. Although paragraph (2) of Article 1 (Personal scope) precludes a dual resident corporation from claiming relief under Article 10, a question arose over whether paragraph (5) of Article 10 of the Convention would prohibit the United States from withholding tax on dividends paid by such a dual resident corporation, since the relief granted by paragraph (5) extends to the recipient of a dividend and not to the paying corporation. Article III of the Protocol amends paragraph (5) to provide clearly that the United States is not prohibited from applying its withholding tax in cases where the corporation paying the dividends is a resident of both the U.K. and the U.S.

ARTICLE IV

Under United Kingdom law (sections 367 or 373, Income and Corporation Taxes Act 1970), United States nationals, who are not also United Kingdom nationals, are not subject to U.K. income tax on their remuneration received from the United States government (or any agency or instrumentality thereof) for services rendered to the United States in the United Kingdom. Although U.K. internal law does not provide for taxation in those circumstances, concern has been expressed that paragraph (1) of Article 19 (Government service) of the Convention would permit the U.K. to impose a tax if the U.S. national did not become a resident of the U.K. solely for the purpose of performing the services.

To allay this concern, Article IV of the Protocol modifies subparagraph (b) of paragraph (1) of Article 19 (Government service) to permit a Contracting State to tax remuneration (other than a pension) paid by the other Contracting State for services rendered to it only where the services are rendered in the first-mentioned State and the recipient is a resident and national of that State.

ARTICLE V

Article V replaces paragraph (4) of Article 23 (Elimination of double taxation) with a new paragraph (4). The new paragraph limits the credit for the United Kingdom petroleum revenue tax allowed against United States tax by subparagraph (2)(b) of Article 2 (Taxes covered) and subparagraph (1)(a) of Article 23 (Elimination of double taxation). The limit prescribed by new paragraph (4) of Article 23 is to be applied before applying the provisions and limitations relating to the foreign tax credit contained in the Code. These provisions include, among others, the rules in section 907 of the Code pertaining to foreign oil and gas extraction income and foreign oil related income. Application of the provisions of United States law as they now exist or as they may be amended from time to time (without changing the general principle of allowance of a credit) may limit the amount of PRT allowable as a credit in any taxable year to an amount less than that arrived at by applying the rules of new paragraph (4) of Article 23.

The limit for a taxable year prescribed by subparagraph (a) of new paragraph (4) is arrived at by making the computations explained in steps (1)-(4) below.

Step (1). The first step involves multiplying the maximum statutory United States tax rate applicable to the taxable income of a corporation for the taxpayer's taxable year by the amount of the taxpayer's taxable income (computed under United States standards) from the extraction of minerals from oil or gas wells in the United Kingdom.

The maximum statutory United States tax rate applicable to the taxable income of a corporation is the highest rate of tax specified in section 11 of the Code. This rate is currently 46 percent for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1978.

In arriving at taxable income from extraction for purposes of computing the limit, principles similar to those under section 907(c)(1)(A) and section 907(c)(3) of the Code shall be applied. Taxable income from extraction includes taxable income derived by a person holding a royalty or other economic interest in an oil or gas well, even though the extraction is physically performed by a person other than the taxpayer.

Step (2). From the product arrived at under Step (1) is subtracted other United Kingdom tax on income from the extraction of minerals from oil or gas wells in the United Kingdom. Because other United Kingdom tax may be calculated under United Kingdom law on a base which includes income from non-extraction activities, it may be necessary to allocate other United Kingdom tax to the income from extraction. In making this allocation, principles similar to those under section 907(c)(5) of the Code are to apply. The difference between the product computed under Step (1) above and the other United Kingdom tax computed here is the limit with respect to the PRT on income from extraction.

Step (3). Under the United Kingdom's Oil Taxation Act of 1975, as amended on March 15, 1979 ("OTA"), which imposes the PRT, it is possible for PRT to be levied on what under United States standards would be income from activities other than extraction. Specifically, the base on which PRT is computed is determined by reference to the value of oil or gas after initial transportation to the place in the United Kingdom (on land) at which the seller could reasonably be expected to deliver it, and after initial treatment and initial storage. (These terms shall have the meaning specified in the OTA.) Because of this, total PRT paid or accrued will have to be allocated to (a) income from extraction, and (b) income from initial transportation, initial treatment, and initial storage.

The allocation of PRT is to be made by multiplying total PRT (other than amounts deemed to have been paid or accrued in the year by reason of the carryback or carryforward provisions set forth in new subparagraphs (b) and (c) of paragraph (4)) by a fraction, the numerator of which is taxable income from extraction (computed under U.S. standards, i.e. the same number as that determined under Step (1)) and the denominator of which is taxable income from extraction, initial transportation, initial treatment, and initial storage. If the denominator so computed is less than taxable income from extraction alone, then the denominator shall be taxable income from extraction.

Step (4). The lesser of the PRT paid or accrued with respect to extraction income under Step (3) or the limit determined under Step (2) is treated as an income tax paid or accrued for the taxable year for purposes of computing the credit allowable under section 901. Such amount will also be treated as oil and gas extraction taxes for purposes of section 907(c)(5) of the Code. Amounts in excess of the limit determined under Step (2) are not deductible if the taxpayer chooses to take to any extent the benefits of paragraph (1) of Article 23 for the taxable year.

Subparagraph (b) of paragraph (4) applies in cases where the PRT allocable to extraction income (determined under Step (3) above) exceeds the credit limit provided under subparagraph (a) (determined under Step (2) above). In such cases, the lesser of such excess or 2 percent of the taxable income from extraction (see Step (1) above) shall be treated as income tax paid or accrued in the second preceding taxable year, the first preceding taxable year, and in the first, second, third, fourth, or fifth succeeding taxable year in that order and to the extent not deemed paid or accrued in a prior taxable year. In determining the year in which such PRT carried back or forward shall be deemed to have been paid, the limitation of subparagraph (a) of new paragraph (4) shall apply.

If an amount of PRT which does not exceed the limit of subparagraph (a) is limited by application of sections 907 or 904 and is carried to another taxable year pursuant to sections 907 or 904, the amount treated as paid or accrued in such other taxable year will be treated as an income tax and will not be again subject to the limitation of new paragraph (4).

Subparagraph (c) of paragraph (4) applies to determine the limit on the PRT with respect to income from initial transportation, initial treatment, and initial storage. These three items of income are to be combined for this purpose. The limit is computed by applying mutatis mutandis, Steps (1), (2) and (4) described with respect to subparagraph (a) above. As with extraction, taxable income is to be determined by United States standards. The PRT allocable to initial transportation, treatment, and storage is the PRT paid or accrued in the current year not allocable to extraction income. The PRT allocated to initial transportation, initial treatment, and initial storage is not treated as oil and gas extraction tax under section 907(c)(5) of the Code but will be treated as income tax on foreign oil related income within the meaning of section 907(c)(2) of the Code.

Where the PRT allocable to initial transportation, initial treatment, and initial storage exceeds the limit of subparagraph (c) for the taxable year, such excess shall be deemed paid or accrued under subparagraph (c) in the second preceding taxable year, the first preceding taxable year and in the first, second, third, fourth, or fifth succeeding taxable years in that order and to the extent not deemed paid or accrued in a prior taxable year by reason of the limitation of subparagraph (c).

If an amount of PRT which does not exceed the limit of subparagraph (c) is limited by application of sections 907 or 904 and is carried to another taxable year pursuant to sections 907 or 904, the amount treated as paid or accrued in such other taxable year will be treated as an income tax and will not be again subject to the limitation of new paragraph (4).

Miscellaneous Rules: In the case of a United States corporation owning at least 10 percent of the voting stock of a corporation which is a resident of the United Kingdom from which it receives dividends in any taxable year, the appropriate amount of PRT paid to the United Kingdom by that U.K. resident corporation with respect to the profits out of which such dividends are paid shall be a ratable portion of the PRT attributable to the accumulated profits out of which the dividend is paid.

ARTICLE VI

Article VI adds a new Article 27A (Offshore activities) to the Convention, to deal with activities carried on in connection with the exploration or exploitation of the seabed or subsoil and their natural resources. The new Article 27A has particular relevance to activities in the United Kingdom sector of the North Sea. It would apply reciprocally, however, to activities conducted by United Kingdom enterprises with respect to exploration or exploitation of the seabed or subsoil of the United States.

Except in cases where the de minimis rule in paragraph (2) applies, paragraph (1) of Article 27A treats a resident of one State as carrying on a business in the other State through a permanent establishment or fixed base with respect to activities in the other State (whether physically carried out on land or offshore) in connection with the exploration or exploitation of the seabed or subsoil and their natural resources situated in that other State. This permanent establishment or fixed base is deemed to exist notwithstanding the provisions of Article 5 (Permanent establishment) and Article 14 (Independent personal services). This provision is not intended to apply in the case of a determination under Article 15 (Dependent personal services).* A permanent establishment is a prerequisite for taxation of business profits in the State of source under paragraph (1) of Article 7 (Business profits) and a "fixed base" is one of the prerequisites for taxation of income derived from services performed in an independent personal capacity in the State or source under Article 14 (Independent personal services).

In determining the business profits or income from independent personal services that are attributable to the permanent establishment or fixed base, the United Kingdom Inland Revenue would normally rely on a taxpayer's branch accounts if they accurately and realistically measure the commercial profits generated by the activities of the permanent establishment or fixed base and reflect generally accepted accounting principles. In the case of offshore activities such accounts would normally include, as income, the gross receivables attributable to the services and trading activities performed on the United Kingdom Continental Shelf and, as expenses, the direct expenditures together with such indirect costs as are properly attributable to these activities, apportioned in a fair and reasonable manner in light of the particular facts of the case. The profit or loss shown by such accounts is then subject to adjustment in the usual way in accordance with the general rules for computing United Kingdom taxable profits of a trade. In particular, a deduction would be allowed for depreciation of plant and machinery based on the length of time during which the activities are performed on the United Kingdom Continental Shelf. A deduction would also normally be allowed for any interest paid on borrowings from third parties in respect of such assets.

In the United States, the business profits or income from independent personal services that are attributable to a permanent establishment or fixed base deemed to exist by reason of Article 27A would be the enterprise's effectively connected income determined under the rules of section 864 of the Code. Gross income would include amounts which are effectively connected with the conduct of the trade or business within the United States. Under section 638(1) of the Code the term "United States" when used in the geographical sense includes the Continental Shelf. The deductions alowable in arriving at taxable income would include all deductions generally allowable by the Code to the extent they are connected with effectively connected gross income.

Paragraph (2) of Article 27A establishes the minimum threshold for application of the Article. Activities carried on in connection with exploration or exploitation of the seabed or subsoil will not be treated as giving rise to a permanent establishment or fixed base if the activities are carried on for 30 days or less in the aggregate in any 12 month period. In making this computation, the time spent by an enterprise engaged in activities described in paragraph (1) of Article 27A, and the time spent by any related enterprise on activities which are substantially the same, will be aggravated. This rule is designed to prevent abuse of the 30 day rule. Aggregation of time spent by related persons will be applied only for the purpose of determining whether the requirement of presence for more than 30 days is met. The profits or income which can be taxed, once the threshold is met, will reflect the actual time spent by each taxpayer.

Paragraph (3) of new Article 27A provides that the exemption provisions of Article 8 (Shipping and air transport) will not prevent a State from taxing earnings from the operation of a drilling rig or any vessel the principal function of which is the performance of activities other than the transportation of goods or passengers. Rentals received under a bareboat charter of a drilling rig or other vessel are not considered activities within the scope of new Article 27A, even if the vessel is used in connection with exploration or exploitation of the seabed or subsoil.

ARTICLE VII

The delay in ratification of the Convention has raised administrative questions under United States and United Kingdom internal law relating to refund claims which may arise upon the entry into force of the Convention by reason of its retroactive effect under Article 28 (Entry into force) upon taxes paid for prior years. Article VII adds a new paragraph (7) to Article 28, providing for a specific three-year time limit during which such claims may be filed and relief granted.

For example, a calendar year taxpayer who paid the insurance excise tax imposed by section 4371 for the year 1975 with respect to insurance premiums remitted to a United Kingdom enterprise could file a timely claim for refund of such taxes under the Protocol within the three-year period after the calendar year in which the Convention enters into force, notwithstanding the expiration of the period set forth in section 6511 of the Code for filing claims for refunds. Similarly, the United Kingdom Inland Revenue will make payments of the United Kingdom tax credit on dividends under its imputation system of company taxation, to the extent it is required to do so under subparagraph (2)(a) of Article 10 (Dividends), notwithstanding the expiration of the period under internal law during which claims for relief must be filed.

* Corrected.

ARTICLE VIII

The Third Protocol will enter into force immediately upon the expiration of 30 days following the date on which the instruments of ratification are exchanged. Upon its entry into force, it will have effect, with the exception of new Article 27A (Offshore activities) in accordance with Article 28 (Entry into force) of the Convention.

The provisions of new Article 27A (Offshore activities) will only have effect as of the date of entry into force of the Protocol. In determining whether the de minimis threshold of paragraph (2) of Article 27A is met, periods of time spent in the State of source before the date on which the Protocol enters into force will not be counted.

United States-United Kingdom Income Tax Convention

1980-21 I.R.B.

A procedure providing information with respect to how qualifying United States taxpayers should go about claiming a refund from the United Kingdom Government of the United Kingdom Advance Corporation Tax provided by Article 10 of the new United States-United Kingdom Income Tax Convention, and providing information with respect to the United States tax consequences of the new Convention for United Kingdom residents with respect to refunds of United States tax and additional United States tax due. Rev. Proc. 80-18 [1]

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

The purpose of this revenue procedure is to set forth procedures for taxpayers to follow in applying certain provisions of the United States-United Kingdom Income Tax Convention, signed on December 31, 1975, as amended by an Exchange of Notes, signed on April 13, 1976, and Protocols, signed on August 26, 1976, March 31, 1977, and March 15, 1979 (the "Convention"), page 5, this Bulletin. The provisions of the Convention that are the subject of this revenue procedure concern: (1) payments from the United Kingdom of a tax credit representing United Kingdom Advance Corporation Tax to qualifying U.S. shareholders of United Kingdom corporations; and (2) U.S. tax consequences of the Convention for United Kingdom residents in regard to amounts with respect to which U.S. tax has been paid prior to April 25, 1980, or is due for periods prior to April 25, 1980 (the date the Convention enters into force). The provisions of the Convention and the rules for its application are described and explained in the Technical Explanation of the Convention prepared by the Department of the Treasury (the "Treasury Explanation"), page 62, this Bulletin.

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND

In 1973, the United Kingdom adopted a new system of corporate taxation that partially integrates its corporate and individual income taxes. Under this system, Advance Corporation Tax ("ACT") is levied on a United Kingdom corporation upon the payment of a dividend by that corporation to its individual shareholders. ACT is an advance payment in partial satisfaction of the corporation's general corporate tax ("mainstream tax") liability.

The rate of ACT has varied since 1973 but is currently 3/7 (approximately 42.86 percent) of the dividend. At the corporate level, ACT is generally credited against the distributing corporation's mainstream tax for the year of the distribution and, if in excess of the part of that year's mainstream tax that may be offset, under United Kingdom law, by ACT (or if there is no mainstream tax), may be carried back two years and carried forward indefinitely. At the shareholder level, ACT paid by the distributing corporation is allowed as a credit against the shareholder's own income tax liability or paid in cash to the extent that the ACT credit exceeds the shareholder's own income tax liability. The shareholder must include in taxable income the sum of ACT and the dividend received; that is, the dividend is "grossed up" by the amount of ACT paid by the distributing corporation.

In the absence of a specific tax treaty provision, ACT is not credited or refunded to persons not resident in the United Kingdom. Article 10 (Dividends) of the Convention provides for a payment from the United Kingdom of a tax credit ("refund") of ACT to qualifying U.S. taxpayers and allows the United Kingdom to reduce the refund by an amount that serves the function of a withholding tax.

Other provisions of the Convention affect the computation of the U.S. foreign tax credt for United Kingdom taxes, including the portion of ACT that is not refunded to U.S. corporations owning, directly or indirectly, 10 percent or more of the voting stock of a distributing United Kingdom corporation ("direct investors"). Section 3 of the revenue procedure explains the procedures applicable to these ACT related matters.

The Convention also contains provisions regarding the U.S. tax applicable to income of residents of the United Kingdom. Certain of these provisions result in a different U.S. tax liability from that provided for in the Income Tax Convention between the United States and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland effective for taxable years beginning on or after January 1, 1945, T.D. 5569, 1947-2 C.B. 100, as amended by Protocols signed on June 6, 1946, T.D. 5569, 1947-2 C.B. 100, May 25, 1954, 1957-1 C.B. 665, August 19, 1957, 1958-2 C.B. 1078 and March 17, 1966, 1966-2 C.B. 582 (the "1945 Convention"). Under Article 28 (Entry Into Force) of the Convention, the 1945 Convention ceases to have effect in the United States in respect of withholding taxes for amounts paid or credited on or after January 1, 1975 and, in respect of other taxes, for taxable years beginning on or after January 1, 1975. Under paragraph (4) of Article 28, however, if any provision of the 1945 Convention would have afforded greater relief than the Convention, the provision of the 1945 Convention has effect in the United States for any taxable year beginning prior to January 1, 1976.

Thus, the Convention applies for U.S. tax purposes to amounts with respect to which U.S. tax has been paid prior to April 25, 1980 or is due for periods prior to April 25, 1980. Section 4 of this revenue procedure explains the procedures applicable to the payment or refund of U.S. tax with respect to such amounts.

SEC. 3. APPLICATION OF ACT REFUNDS TO UNITED STATES SHAREHOLDERS

.01 Amount of ACT Refunds. Paragraph (2)(a) of Article 10 (Dividends) provides a mechanism whereby U.S. direct investors and others who are U.S. residents and hold stock in a corporation resident in the United Kingdom, within the meaning of paragraph (1)(a)(ii) of Article 4 (Fiscal Residence) (a "United Kingdom corporation"), may avail themselves of the benefits of the shareholder credit available, in the absence of the Convention, only to United Kingdom residents. Such benefits will be available to U.S. residents as long as ACT credit is allowed in the United Kingdom to individual United Kingdom residents. Paragraph (2) of Article 10. Otherwise, United Kingdom taxation of dividends derived by U.S. residents from a corporation resident in the United Kingdom will be limited to 15 percent of the gross amount of the dividends. Paragraph (1) of Article 10.

[1] Also released as News Release IR-80-57, dated April 25, 1980.

Under paragraph (2)(a) of Article 10, separate rules are provided for the taxation of dividends beneficially owned by U.S. direct investors and for the taxation of dividends beneficially owned by other U.S. residents ("portfolio investors"). For portfolio investors, paragraph (2)(a)(ii) of Article 10 provides for the refund by the United Kingdom of the full amount of ACT paid with respect to a dividend. This refund is reduced, however, by a 15-percent withholding on the sum of the dividend and the ACT refund. For direct investors, paragraph (2)(a)(i) of Article 10 provides for the refund by the United Kingdom of an amount equal to one-half of the ACT paid with respect to a dividend. This refund is reduced, however, by a 5-percent withholding on the sum of the dividend and the portion of ACT refunded (one-half).

.02 Shareholders Entitled to ACT Refunds. Shareholders entitled to ACT refunds include only residents of the United States, within the meaning of paragraph (1)(b)(i) and (ii) of Article 4 (Fiscal Residence), that derive and beneficially own dividends paid by a corporation resident in the United Kingdom.

Paragraph (4) of Article 10 (Dividends) provides that ACT refunds are not available to U.S. shareholders who have a permanent establishment in the United Kingdom or perform personal services from a fixed base therein if the holding with respect to which the dividends are paid is effectively connected with the permanent establishment or fixed base. Paragraph (7) of Article 10 provides that an ACT refund is not available in certain circumstances where tax avoidance may occur. Paragraph (7) is explained in the Treasury Explanation.

Pursuant to paragraph (2) of Article 1 (Personal Scope), an ACT refund is not available to a U.S. corporation that is also a resident of the United Kingdom within the meaning of paragraph (1)(a)(ii) of Article 4. However, an ACT refund is available to qualifying shareholders with respect to a dividend from a U.S. corporation that is also a resident of the United Kingdom.

U.S. shareholders are entitled to ACT refunds based on whether they meet the standards of the Convention as of the time the United Kingdom corporation paid the dividend subject to ACT that is refundable under the Convention.

.03 Effective Dates for ACT Refunds. The ACT refunds described in paragraph (2)(a)(i) of Article 10 (Dividends) are available to direct investors for dividends with respect to years of assessment beginning on or after April 6, 1975.

The ACT refunds described in paragraph (2)(a)(ii) of Article 10 are available to portfolio investors for dividends with respect to years of assessment beginning on or after April 6, 1973. A dividend paid on or after April 1, 1973, and before April 6, 1973, shall be treated for tax purposes as paid on April 6, 1973. The year of assessment referred to in the Convention (and in this paragraph .03) is the United Kingdom general income tax year, which begins on April 6 of each year.

.04 Year of Inclusion of ACT Refunds. Paragraph (2)(a)(iii) of Article 10 (Dividends) provides that for U.S. tax credit purposes the sum of a dividend and ACT refund paid by the United Kingdom to a U.S. corporation or other U.S. resident, without reduction for the amount withheld thereon, shall be treated as a dividend. For U.S. income tax purposes such amount must be included in the shareholder's gross income in the year the shareholder becomes entitled to such a refund. Thus, a calendar year U.S. taxpayer must include refunds of ACT paid prior to April 25, 1980 in his income for 1980 and a fiscal year U.S. taxpayer must do so for the first taxable year ending after April 24, 1980.

.05 Allowance of Foreign Tax Credits With Respect to ACT Refunds. Paragraph (1) of Article 23 (Elimination of Double Taxation) provides that the United States shall allow to its citizens and residents a foreign tax credit for the appropriate amount of tax paid to the United Kingdom, subject to the limitations of the laws of the United States for the taxable year. These limitations include the provisions of sections 904, 905, and 907 of the Internal Revenue Code. The Treasury Explanation, this paragraph .05, and paragraph .06 below provide rules to be used in determining the U.S. foreign tax credit pursuant to Article 23.

Paragraph (1)(a) of Article 23 provides that, for purposes of applying the U.S. credit, the United Kingdom income tax, capital gains tax, corporation tax and petroleum revenue tax are considered to be income taxes for persons entitled to the benefits of Article 23. Paragraph (1)(b) of Article 23 provides that the amount of 5-percent or 15-percent withholding, as the case may be, under paragraph (2)(a)(i) or (ii) of Article 10 (Dividends) from the grossed-up dividend (the sum of the dividend and the ACT refund) is to be treated as an income tax imposed on the recipient of the dividend (the U.S. shareholder).

Paragraph (1)(c) of Article 23 provides, in addition, that the one-half of the ACT paid by a United Kingdom corporation that is not refunded to a U.S. direct investor and that would be credited or refunded to a United Kingdom individual resident is treated as an income tax imposed on the distributing United Kingdom corporation (rather than the U.S. shareholder). Under United Kingdom law, a United Kingdom corporation that pays ACT may, however, transfer to a related United Kingdom corporation the right to apply ACT against mainstream tax liability. Thus, for example, a United Kingdom subsidiary of a United Kingdom corporation may benefit from the parent's ACT payment by offsetting part or all of the ACT against its own liability for United Kingdom mainstream tax. In such a case, for U.S. foreign tax credit purposes and pursuant to Article 23, the parent corporation has not paid or accrued the unrefunded ACT offset against the subsidiary's mainstream tax and has contributed to the capital of the subsidiary an amount equal to the unrefunded ACT offset. The subsidiary is considered to have paid or accrued only mainstream tax paid or accrued in excess of the ACT offset, plus the amount of unrefunded ACT so offset.

For purposes of Articles 10 and 23 of the Convention, refunded ACT offset against the United Kingdom subsidiary's mainstream tax is a deemed distribution from such subsidiary to the United Kingdom parent corporation (and from the parent to the U.S. shareholder) only if and to the extent that such refunded ACT was not useable by the parent (inasmuch as the parent owes no mainstream tax) and was imposed with respect to profits distributed by the subsidiary to the parent and which were then immediately redistributed to the U.S. shareholder. In all other cases, refunded ACT is a deemed dividend distribution only from the United Kingdom parent corporation to the U.S. shareholder.

A U.S. direct investor seeking to claim an indirect foreign tax credit as provided in paragraph (1)(c) of Article 23 (and pursuant to section 902 or section 960 of the Code) for the one-half of the ACT not refunded to such direct investor must compute the credit pursuant to this revenue procedure and the rules and examples set forth in the Treasury Explanation. Those rules and examples attribute ACT to accumulated profits, state which years' accumulated profits have been distributed as actual dividend distributions and ACT refund "dividends," and establish which accumulated profits are attributable to a U.S. shareholder that owns less than all of the stock of a distributing United Kingdom corporation. The rules in the Treasury Explanation for attributing ACT refunds to accumulated profits apply whether ACT is refunded at the time of the payment of the dividend that is subject to the ACT or at a later date (e.g., because the Convention enters into force in 1980 with retroactive effect). Thus, a refund in 1980 of ACT imposed with respect to a prior dividend distribution is a dividend distribution out of the years' accumulated profits to which, under this revenue procedure and the rules of the Treasury Explanation, the ACT is attributable. Accumulated profits and earnings and profits are determined under U.S. principles under sections 902 or 960, as the case may be, and the regulations thereunder.

As stated in section 2.05 of this revenue procedure, the right to receive ACT refunds gives rise to income for U.S. income tax purposes. For U.S. direct investors that prior to April 25, 1980 received actual distributions and claimed foreign tax credits for ACT for which a refund can be obtained under the Convention, an adjustment is required for U.S. income tax purposes; the amount of any foreign tax credits previously claimed by the direct investor pursuant to section 902 or 960 of the Code with respect to ACT that is refundable as of April 25, 1980 must be reduced by the direct investor to the extent of the refundable ACT (without reduction for the 5 percent withheld under the Convention by the United Kingdom). Section 905(c) and section 1.905-1(c) of the Income Tax Regulations provide that if any credited tax payment is refunded, in whole or in part, the taxpayer shall immediately notify the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. For purposes of the Convention and this revenue procedure, the reference to immediate notification of the Commissioner shall be construed to mean notification within 120 days of the receipt of an ACT refund from the United Kingdom pursuant to the Convention. Notification is to be accomplished by submitting, to the Internal Revenue Service Center where the taxpayer files its income tax return, an amended income tax return accompanied by a revised Form 1116 or 1118, as the case may be, for each taxable year involved.

The 5 percent withheld by the United Kingdom at the time of such a refund of ACT may, pursuant to the Convention and section 6511(d)(3)(A) of the Code, be claimed by a U.S. direct investor as a foreign income tax paid or accrued. Under paragraph (2)(a)(i) of Article 10 (Dividends), the 5-percent withholding is imposed by the United Kingdom on the aggregate of the dividend and the ACT refund paid to the U.S. direct investor. In the case of refunds of ACT with respect to a dividend distribution prior to April 25, 1980, the portion of the 5-percent withholding that is attributable to the prior dividend distribution (and not attributable to the ACT refund) is a foreign income tax paid or accrued for the U.S. taxable year in which such prior dividend was included in income by the U.S. direct investor. Similarly, the portion of the 15-percent withholding by the United Kingdom on ACT refunds to U.S. portfolio shareholders that is attributable to a prior dividend received by such a shareholder is a foreign income tax paid or accrued for the U.S. taxable year in which the dividend was included in income by the U.S. shareholder. (Since for U.S. income tax purposes ACT is imposed on the distributing corporation, not the shareholder, U.S. portfolio shareholders are not entitled to a foreign tax credit for ACT. The 15-percent United Kingdom withholding authorized by Article 10 is, however, treated under the Convention as an income tax imposed on the U.S. shareholder.) The portion of the 5- and 15-percent withholdings attributable to the ACT refund (and not to the prior dividend distribution) is for U.S. purposes a foreign income tax paid or accrued in the year in which refundable ACT is taken into income for U.S. purposes.

.06 Exchange Rates. The rate of exchange between the United Kingdom pound and the U.S. dollar on April 25, 1980 differs from the rate at the time when ACT with respect to prior distributions was paid to the United Kingdom. The refund of ACT to a U.S. shareholder must be included in the shareholder's gross income at the rate of exchange in effect on April 25, 1980 unless the rate of exchange on the date of receipt of the refund differs from the April 25, 1980 rate, in which case the rate on the date of receipt applies. The same rate of exchange also applies for claiming a foreign tax credit for the full amount of the 5- and 15-percent withholdings provided for by the Convention (regardless of the years to which such withholdings are attributable).

The change in the exchange rate also has implications for the section 905(c) adjustment described in section 2.06 of this revenue procedure which requires a reduction for any refundable ACT previously claimed as a creditable foreign tax. In the case of a U.S. direct investor entitled to an ACT refund and which previously claimed a deemed paid foreign tax credit under section 902, the section 905(c) adjustment requires a reduction for any refundable ACT previously claimed as a deemed paid credit. The amount of ACT claimed as a foreign income tax paid or accrued by the United Kingdom corporation is reduced (and accumulated profits in excess of foreign income taxes are increased) in United Kingdom pounds by the amount of such ACT that is refundable. The U.S. direct investor must then recompute the amount of its income and the deemed paid foreign tax credit with respect to the prior dividend distribution or distributions, translating the three elements of the deemed paid tax credit formula into U.S. dollars at the rate of exchange in effect at the time of the prior distribution or distributions. See Bon Ami, 39 B.T.A. 825 (1939).

In the case of a U.S. direct investor entitled to an ACT refund and which previously claimed a deemed paid foreign tax credit for ACT under section 960 of the Code, the section 905(c) adjustment requires a reduction for any refunded ACT previously claimed as a deemed paid credit. The amount of ACT claimed as a foreign income tax paid or accrued by the United Kingdom corporation is reduced (and earnings and profits is increased) in United States dollars using the April 25, 1980 rate or, if it is different from the April 25, 1980 rate, the rate on the date of receipt of the ACT refund. The U.S. direct investor must then recompute its income and deemed paid foreign tax credit with respect to the prior inclusion.

In the case of a U.S. corporation managed and controlled in the United Kingdom which previously claimed a foreign tax credit for ACT under section 901(b) of the Code, and which has U.S. shareholders entitled to an ACT refund, section 905(c) requires a reduction, for any refundable ACT previously claimed as a credit, using the U.S. dollar amount of the refundable ACT at the rate of exchange on April 25, 1980 or, if it is different from the April 25, 1980 rate, the rate of exchange in effect on the date of receipt of the ACT refund.

.07 Manner of Claiming ACT Refunds from United Kingdom. A U.S. shareholder claiming ACT refunds as provided in paragraph (2)(a) of Article 10 must make such claim on the appropriate United Kingdom form. The appropriate United Kingdom forms are: 1) U.S. 7/Credit, for a U.S. direct investor to obtain authorization for a United Kingdom corporation to distribute future dividends with ACT refunds; 2) U.S./Corporation/Credit, for a U.S. corporation owning less than 10 percent of the voting stock of a distributing United Kingdom corporation, for a U.S. direct investor with respect to ACT which is not subject to a claim for relief pursuant to U.S. 7/Credit (including ACT paid with respect to dividends distributed prior to April 25, 1980), and for any other U.S. resident other than an individual (e.g., a partnership or a trust); 3) U.S./Individual/Credit, for U.S. individual residents. (U.S. persons must use other United Kingdom forms for relief under the Convention from United Kingdom tax on other items of income: 1) U.S./Individual (interest, royalties, pensions, annuities, alimony); 2) U.S./Corporation (interest, royalties).) In the United States the United Kingdom forms for ACT refunds may be obtained from the Office of International Operations, Internal Revenue Service, 1325 K Street, NW, ATTN: Taxpayer Service Division, Room 900, Washington, DC 20225. In the United Kingdom forms may be obtained from the Inspector of Foreign Dividends, Lynwood Road, Thames Ditton, Surrey, England, KT70DP.

The first claim under the Convention by a U.S. resident for an ACT refund should be initiated by filling out the appropriate United Kingdom form (in duplicate) and filing it with the Director of the Internal Revenue Service Center with which the shareholder's last U.S. income tax return was filed, so that it can be certified. The Service Center will transmit such United Kingdom forms that it certifies to the United Kingdom Inspector of Foreign Dividends. Because certification by the appropriate Service Center Director is necessary, the shareholder or the shareholder's representative should send the appropriate form to the appropriate Service Center for processing in sufficient time to make a timely claim for refund in the United Kingdom. Claims for ACT refunds must normally be made, under United Kingdom law, within 6 years of the end of the year of assessment in which a dividend distribution is made. Under the United Kingdom system the year of assessment ends on April 5. In addition, paragraph (7) of Article 28 (Entry Into Force) provides a three-year period after the end of the calendar year in which the Convention enters into force to obtain refunds of taxes pursuant to the Convention, notwithstanding the expiration of the period of limitations provided by United Kingdom internal law.

Any claim for ACT refunds by a U.S. resident after the first claim does not require prior certification by an Internal Revenue Service Center. The appropriate United Kingdom forms should be filed in such cases directly with the United Kingdom Inspector of Foreign Dividends.

SEC. 4. APPLICATION OF UNITED STATES TAX ON UNITED KINGDOM RESIDENTS

.01 Refunds of U.S. Tax. Certain provisions of the Convention reduce U.S. tax of United Kingdom residents below the amount due under the provisions of the 1945 Convention. For example, dividends paid by a U.S. corporation to a corporation which is a resident of the United Kingdom which owns 10 percent or more of the voting stock of the U.S. corporation paying the dividend is subject to a U.S. tax of 5 percent of the dividend pursuant to paragraph (2)(b)(i) of Article 10 (Dividends). Under paragraph (1) of Article VI of the 1945 Convention, dividends beneficially owned by a resident of the United Kingdom were subject to U.S. tax at a rate of 15 percent. Article 28 (Entry Into Force) provides that the Convention applies in the United States to taxes withheld at source after January 1, 1975. Consequently, a resident of the United Kingdom which previously qualified for the 15-percent rate under paragraph (1) of Article VI of the 1945 Convention and which qualifies for the 5-percent rate under paragraph (2)(b)(i) of Article 10 is entitled to a refund of U.S. tax. The reduction to 5 percent applies to dividends paid on or after January 1, 1975.

The benefits of Article 10 are not available to a United Kingdom resident which is a U.S. corporation.

Another reduction in U.S. tax is provided by virtue of paragraph (2)(a) of Article 2 (Taxes Covered) and paragraphs (1) and (6A) of Article 7 (Business Profits). These provisions of the Convention state that insurance or reinsurance premiums received by certain United Kingdom enterprises are entitled to exemption from U.S. taxes otherwise imposed on insurance premiums paid to foreign insurers or reinsurers. The term "United Kingdom enterprise" includes a corporation, but only if the corporation is organized outside of the United States and is managed and controlled in the United Kingdom.

Other provisions of the Convention, such as paragraph (1) of Article 17 (Artistes and Athletes), paragraph (1) of Article 20 (Teachers) (with respect to researchers), and paragraph (2) of Article 18 (Pensions) (with respect to alimony), may also give rise to refunds of U.S. tax to certain United Kingdom residents.

A United Kingdom resident seeking a refund of U.S. income taxes pursuant to the Convention may obtain such refund by filing Forms 1040NR, 1040X, 1120F or 1120X, as the case may be, with the Philadelphia Service Center. Pursuant to paragraph (7) of Article 28, refunds may be obtained by filing the appropriate income tax form with the Philadelphia Service Center for certain U.S. taxable years with respect to which the U.S. statute of limitations has expired. A separate income tax form must be filed for each taxable year.

.02 Additional U.S. Tax Due. Certain provisions of the Convention eliminate U.S. tax benefits previously available to United Kingdom residents under the provisions of the 1945 Convention; thus, certain United Kingdom residents are subject to additional U.S. tax liability. (No provision of the Convention increases the U.S. tax of a United Kingdom resident above the amount due under the Code in the absence of the Convention.) For example, Article 6 (Income from Immovable Property (Real Property)) allows the United States to impose the 30-percent tax of Code sections 871(a) and 881 on fixed or determinable income from real property that is not effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States. In contrast, Article IX of the 1945 Convention limited the U.S. tax on certain mineral royalties and real property rents to 15 percent if derived by a United Kingdom resident not engaged in trade or business in the United States. The 30-percent U.S. tax is due pursuant to the Convention with respect to any taxable year beginning on or after January 1, 1976. Thus, certain mineral royalties and real property rents paid for a U.S. taxable year beginning on or after January 1, 1976 are subject to an increase in U.S. tax (15 percent of the remittance) under the Convention. Other provisions of the Convention which may result in an increase in U.S. tax due include the provisions of Articles 13 (Capital Gains) and 17 (Artistes and Athletes).

The additional U.S. tax due for all open U.S. taxable years must be remitted to the Philadelphia Service Center along with Form 1040NR, 1040X, 1120F or 1120X, as the case may be, for each such taxable year.

.03 Withholding. Every person required to withhold any U.S. tax pursuant to the Code must, with respect to payments entitled to the benefits of the Convention, withhold U.S. tax pursuant to the provisions of the Convention only with respect to amounts paid on or after April 25, 1980. A nonresident alien or foreign corporation claiming the benefits of the Convention and seeking a reduction in or exemption from withholding of U.S. tax must satisfy any applicable requirements of the Code such as sections 1441, 1442, and 1461, and the regulations thereunder.

.04 Interest. Pursuant to Article 28 (Entry Into Force) and for purposes of section 6601 of the Code, the last date prescribed for payment of U.S. tax due for U.S. taxable years ending on or before April 24, 1980 shall be April 26, 1980, but only with respect to any additional U.S. tax due solely because the provisions of the Convention provide less relief from U.S. taxes than do the provisions of the 1945 Convention. Pursuant to Article 28 and for purposes of section 6611, the date of overpayment shall be considered to be April 25, 1980, but only with respect to refunds of U.S. tax due solely because the provisions of the Convention are more favorable than the provisions of the 1945 Convention.

SECTION 5. INQUIRIES

Inquiries regarding this revenue procedure may generally be addressed to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Attention: T:C:C:3, 1111 Constitution Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20224. Inquiries concerning the filing of forms may be addressed to the Taxpayer Service Division of the I.R.S. Office of International Operations (address stated in section 3.07 of this revenue procedure), 202-566-5941 (not a toll-free number).

SECTION 6. EFFECTIVE DATE OF THIS REVENUE PROCEDURE

This revenue procedure is effective on the date of its publication and applies to the taxable years affected by the Convention.

Part IV. Items of General Interest

Clarification of the Rules for Deducting Club Dues Relating to an Entertainment Facility

Announcement 80-66

Recently enacted Public Law 96-222, 1980-20 I.R.B. 5, clarifies the rules for deducting club dues for entertainment facilities under section 274 (a)(2)(C) of the Internal Revenue Code. Previously, only country club due that met the business use test were deductible. For items paid or incurred after December 31, 1978, all social, athletic and sporting club dues or fees that satisfy the business use test and other applicable rules under section 274 are deductible.

Taxpayers who are entitled to this deduction could not claim it when they filed their income tax returns for fiscal year 1978-79, calendar year 1979, or fiscal year 1979-80. These taxpayers should file amended returns, using Form 1120X, Form 1040X, or the appropriate amended return.

Schedule B (Form 3468)-FY 1979-80, Computation of Business Energy Investment Credit, is available in Internal Revenue Service district offices. This new schedule incorporates the business energy investment credit provisions contained in the Crude Oil Windfall Profit Tax Act of 1980 (Public Law 96-223).

In general, these provisions apply to qualified investment in certain energy property acquired or built after December 31, 1979. Major changes to the business energy investment tax credit are as follows: the 10% credit was increased to 15% for solar, wind, and geothermal properties; a 15% credit is allowed for ocean thermal property; an 11% credit is allowed for qualified hydroelectric generating property; and the existing 10% credit is extended to cogeneration property, qualified intercity buses, and some new kinds of alternative energy property. The Act also provides that the refundable solar and wind energy credit becomes a nonrefundable credit, effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 1979.

Schedule B (Form 3468)-FY 1979-80 is to be used by taxpayers who have tax years beginning in 1979 and ending in 1980. Taxpayers who have already filed their fiscal year 1979-80 income tax returns without claiming the business energy credit to which they are now entitled should file amended returns. These taxpayers should use Form 1120X, 1040X, or the appropriate amended return; they should attach a completed Schedule B (Form 3468)-FY 1979-80 to show the computation of the credit.

Taxpayers filing for calendar year 1979 are not to use the 1979-80 schedule, but must use the 1979 Schedule B (Form 3468).

Announcement of the Disbarment, Suspension, or Consent to Voluntary Suspension of Attorneys, Certified Public Accountants, Enrolled Agents and Enrolled Actuaries from Practice before the Internal Revenue Service

Under Section 1026, Title 31 of the United States Code (1970 ed.), the Secretary of the Treasury, after due notice and opportunity for hearing, is authorized to suspend or disbar from practice before the Internal Revenue Service any person who has violated the rules and regulations governing the recognition of attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents or enrolled actuaries to practice before the Internal Revenue Service.

Attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries are prohibited in any Internal Revenue Service matter from directly or indirectly employing, accepting assistance from, being employed by or sharing fees with, any practitioner disbarred or under suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service.

To enable attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries to identify such disbarred or suspended practitioners, the Director of Practice will announce in the Internal Revenue Bulletin the names and addresses of practitioners who have been disbarred or suspended from such practice, their designation as attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, and the date of disbarment or period of suspension. This announcement will appear and will continue to appear in the weekly Bulletins for five successive weeks for each attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary so suspended or disbarred and will later be consolidated and published in the Cumulative Bulletin.

By decision on appeal from an initial decision in an administrative hearing, the following individuals have been suspended or disbarred from further practice before the Internal Revenue Service:

Name	Address	Designation	Effective Date
Sydney M. Eisenberg	Milwaukee, WI	Attorney	April 17, 1980 Disbarment
Leon Feldt	El Paso, TX	Certified Public Accountant	March 26, 1980 Disbarment
David I. Kali	Tucson, AZ	Attorney	Indefinite Suspension from April 1, 1980
Angelos P. Romas	Endicott, NY	Attorney	April 9, 1980 Disbarment

After due notice and opportunity for hearing, the following individual was disbarred from further practice before the Internal Revenue Service:

William A. Carbaugh	Greenville, SC	Enrolled Agent	March 21, 1980

Under 31 Code of Federal Regulations, Part 10, an attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, in order to avoid the institution or conclusion of a proceeding for his disbarment or suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, may offer his consent to suspension from such practice. The Director of Practice, in his discretion, may suspend an attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary in accordance with the consent offered.

Attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries are prohibited in any Internal Revenue Service matter from directly or indirectly employing, accepting assistance from, being employed by or sharing fees with, any practitioner disbarred or under suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service.

To enable attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries to identify practitioners under consent suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, the Director of Practice will announce in the Internal Revenue Bulletin the names and addresses of practitioners who have been suspended from such practice, their designation as attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, and the date or period of suspension. This announcement will appear in the weekly Bulletin at the earliest practicable date after such action and will continue to appear in the weekly Bulletins for five successive weeks or for as many weeks as is practicable for each attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary so suspended and will later be consolidated and published in the Cumulative Bulletin.

The following individuals have been placed under consent suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service:

Name	Address	Designation	Term of Suspension
Frank H. Abernathy	Richmond, VA	Certified Public Accountant	Indefinite effective April 9, 1980
Carl L. Harthun	Denver, CO	Attorney	Indefinite effective April 9, 1980
John T. Kelly, Jr.	Virginia Beach, VA	Certified Public Accountant	Indefinite effective April 15, 1980
Fran A. Moor	Fort Worth, TX	Certified Public Accountant	Indefinite effective April 15, 1980

Definition of Terms

Revenue Rulings and Revenue Procedures (hereinafter referred to as "rulings") that have an effect on previous rulings use the following defined terms to describe the effect:

Amplified describes a situation where no change is being made in a prior published position, but the prior position is being extended to apply to a variation of the fact situation set forth therein. Thus, if an earlier ruling held that a principle applied to A, and the new ruling holds that the same principle also applies to B, the earlier ruling is amplified. (Compare with modified, below).

Clarified is used in those instances where the language in a prior ruling is being made clear because the language has caused, or may cause, some confusion. It is not used where a position in a prior ruling is being changed.

Distinguished describes a situation where a ruling mentions a previously published ruling and points out an essential difference between them.

Modified is used where the substance of a previously published position is being changed. Thus, if a prior ruling held that a principle applied to A but not to B, and the new ruling holds that it applies to both A and B, the prior ruling is modified because it corrects a published position. (Compare with amplified and clarified, above).

Obsoleted describes a previously published ruling that is not considered determinative with respect to future transactions. This term is most commonly used in a ruling that lists previously published rulings that are obsoleted because of changes in law or regulations. A ruling may also be obsoleted because the substance has been included in regulations subsequently adopted.

Revoked describes situations where the position in the previously published ruling is not correct and the correct position is being stated in the new ruling.

Superseded describes a situation where the new ruling does nothing more than restate the substance and situation of a previously published ruling (or rulings). Thus, the term is used to republish under the 1954 Code and regulations the same position published under the 1939 Code and regulations. The term is also used when it is desired to republish in a single ruling a series of situations, names, etc., that were previously published over a period of time in separate rulings. If the new ruling does more than restate the substance of a prior ruling, a combination of terms is used. For example, modified and superseded describes a situation where the substance of a previously published ruling is being changed in part and is continued without change in part and it is desired to restate the valid portion of the previously published ruling in a new ruling that is self contained. In this case the previously published ruling is first modified and then, as modified, is superseded.

Supplemented is used in situations in which a list, such as a list of the names of countries, is published in a ruling and that list is expanded by adding further names in subsequent rulings. After the original ruling has been supplemented several times, a new ruling may be published that includes the list in the original ruling and the additions, and supersedes all prior rulings in the series.

Suspended is used in rare situations to show that the previous published rulings will not be applied pending some future action such as the issuance of new or amended regulations, the outcome of cases in litigation, or the outcome of a Service study.

INTERNAL REVENUE BULLETIN

The Introduction on page 3 describes the purpose and content of this publication. The weekly Internal Revenue Bulletin is sold on a yearly subscription basis by the Superintendent of Documents. Current subscribers are notified by the Superintendent of Documents when their subscriptions must be renewed.

CUMULATIVE BULLETINS

The contents of the weekly Bulletin are consolidated semiannually into a permanent, indexed, Cumulative Bulletin. These are sold on a single copy basis and are not included as part of the subscription to the Internal Revenue Bulletin. Subscribers to the weekly Bulletin are notified when copies of the Cumulative Bulletin are available. Certain issues of Cumulative Bulletins are out of print and are not available. Persons desiring available Cumulative Bulletins, which are listed on the reverse, may purchase them from the Superintendent of Documents.

BULLETIN INDEX-DIGEST SYSTEM

The Bulletin Index-Digest System (12-78) provides a fast and easy way to research Revenue Rulings, Revenue Procedures, Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and other matters of a permanent nature published in the weekly Internal Revenue Bulletin, or Cumulative Bulletin from 1953 on. It is a comprehensive and up-to-date research tool that requires no filing or other clerical maintenance. The current revision consists of four Services, available on a subscription basis, each including a basic volume that covers the period 1953-1978 and a cumulative supplement covering material published in subsequent Bulletins for the following two-year period. Cumulative supplements are issued quarterly for the Income Tax Service and semiannually for the Estate and Gift, Employment, and Excise Tax Services.

HOW TO ORDER

Check the publications and/or subscription(s) desired on the reverse, complete the order blank, enclose the proper remittance, detach entire page, and mail to the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. Please allow two to six weeks, plus mailing time, for delivery.

Statement of Principles of Internal Revenue Tax Administration

The function of the Internal Revenue Service is to administer the Internal Revenue Code. Tax policy for raising revenue is determined by Congress.

With this in mind, it is the duty of the Service to carry out that policy by correctly applying the laws enacted by Congress; to determine the reasonable meaning of various Code provisions in light of the Congressional purpose in enacting them; and to perform this work in a fair and impartial manner, with neither a government nor a taxpayer point of view.

At the heart of administration is interpretation of the Code. It is the responsibility of each person in the Service, charged with the duty of interpreting the law, to try to find the true meaning of the statutory provision and not to adopt a strained construction in the belief that he is "protecting the revenue." The revenue is properly protected only when we ascertain and apply the true meaning of the statute.

The Service also has the responsibility of applying and administering the law in a reasonable, practical manner. Issues should only be raised by examining officers when they have merit, never arbitrarily or for trading purposes. At the same time, the examining officer should never hesitate to raise a meritorious issue. It is also important that care be exercised not to raise an issue or to ask a court to adopt a position inconsistent with an established Service position.

Administration should be both reasonable and vigorous. It should be conducted with as little delay as possible and with great courtesy and considerateness. It should never try to overreach, and should be reasonable within the bounds of law and sound administration. It should, however, be vigorous in requiring compliance with law and it should be relentless in its attack on unreal tax devices and fraud.

Introduction

The Internal Revenue Bulletin is the authoritative instrument of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for announcing official rulings and procedures of the Internal Revenue Service and for publishing Treasury Decisions, Executive Orders, Tax Conventions, legislation, court decisions, and other items of general interest. It is published weekly and may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. Bulletin contents of a permanent nature are consolidated semiannually into Cumulative Bulletins, which are sold on a single-copy basis.

It is the policy of the Service to publish in the Bulletin all substantive rulings necessary to promote a uniform application of the tax laws, including all rulings that supersede, revoke, modify, or amend any of those previously published in the Bulletin. All published rulings apply retroactively unless otherwise indicated. Procedures relating solely to matters of internal management are not published; however, statements of internal practices and procedures that affect the rights and duties of taxpayers are published.

Revenue rulings represent the conclusions of the Service on the application of the law to the pivotal facts stated in the revenue ruling. In those based on positions taken in rulings to taxpayers or technical advice to Service field offices, identifying details and information of a confidential nature are deleted to prevent unwarranted invasions of privacy and to comply with statutory requirements.

Rulings and procedures reported in the Bulletin do not have the force and effect of Treasury Department Regulations, but they may be used as precedents. Unpublished rulings will not be relied on, used, or cited as precedents by Service personnel in the disposition of other cases. In applying published rulings and procedures, the effect of subsequent legislation, regulations, court decisions, rulings, and procedures must be considered, and Service personnel and others concerned are cautioned against reaching the same conclusions in other cases unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same.

The Bulletin is divided into four parts as follows:

Part I.—1954 Code.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

Part II.—Treaties and Tax Legislation.

This part is divided into two subparts as follows: Subpart A, Tax Conventions, and Subpart B, Legislation and Related Committee Reports.

Part III.—Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous.

To the extent practicable, pertinent cross references to these subjects are contained in the other Parts and Subparts.

Part IV.—Items of General Interest.

With the exception of the disbarment and suspension list included in this part, none of these announcements is consolidated in the Cumulative Bulletins.

The first Bulletin for each month includes an index for the matters published during the preceding month. These monthly indexes are cumulated on a quarterly and semiannual basis, and are published in the first Bulletin of the succeeding quarterly and semi-annual period, respectively.

The Bulletin Index-Digest System, a research and reference service supplementing the Bulletin, may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. It consists of four Services: Service No. 1, Income Tax; Service No. 2, Estate and Gift Taxes; Service No. 3, Employment Taxes; Service No. 4, Excise Taxes. Each Service consists of a basic volume and a cumulative supplement that provide (1) finding lists of items published in the Bulletin, (2) digests of revenue rulings, revenue procedures, and other published items, and (3) topical indexes of Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and Tax Conventions.

The contents of this publication are not copyrighted and may be reprinted freely. A citation of the Internal Revenue Bulletin as the source would be appropriate.

Part I. Rulings and Decisions Under the Internal Revenue Code of 1954

Section 61.—Gross Income Defined

26 CFR 1.61-2: Compensation for services, including fees, commissions, and similar items.

Whether compensation received by a taxpayer disabled in the line of duty, when the taxpayer is performing "light duty" for the municipality making the payments, is includible in gross income. See Rev. Rul. 80-137, page 6.

26 CFR 1.61-7: Interest.

Whether the lender of a municipal bond is entitled to exclude from gross income an amount, equal to the interest on the bond, received from a broker who borrowed the bond to cover a short sale. See Rev. Rul. 80-135, below.

Section 103.—Interest on Certain Governmental Obligations

(Also Section 61; 1.61-7.)

Municipal bond loaned to cover short sale; payment received in lieu of interest. The lender of a municipal bond to a broker who borrowed the bond to cover a short sale is not entitled to exclude from gross income under section 103(a)(1) of the Code an amount received from the broker that is equal to the interest the lender would have received on the bond.

Rev. Rul. 80-135

ISSUE

Is the lender of a municipal bond entitled to exclude from gross income under section 103(a)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code an amount, equal to the interest on the bond, received from a broker who borrowed the bond to cover a short sale?

FACTS

A, an individual, owned a municipal bond (bearer bond) the interest on which was excludable from A's gross income under the provisions of section 103(a)(1) of the Code. A broker asked to borrow A's bond to cover a short sale between two of the broker's clients. A delivered the bond to the broker and the broker subsequently delivered the bond to the purchaser under the short sale. The purchaser, as the new owner, is excluding from gross income the interest received on the bond. Under the agreement with the broker, A is entitled to receive a similar bond from the broker upon demand. In addition, the broker will pay A an amount equal to the interest that would have been received by A on the bond transferred until a similar bond is returned to A.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 103(a)(1) of the Code provides that interest on the obligations of a state or political subdivision of a state is excludable from the gross incomes of the holders of the obligations.

A short sale transaction involves the borrowing by the seller of the securities delivered to the buyer. Subsequently, the seller must deliver similar securities to the lender in order to close the transaction. Short sales are ordinarily made through a broker who borrows the securities for delivery to the purchaser. The character of gain or loss from short sales is determined under the provisions of section 1233 of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 74-482, 1974-2 C.B. 267, holds that interest accrued on tax-exempt municipal bonds after ownership of the bonds had been transferred by a dealer in municipal bonds is not excludable from the gross income of the dealer under the provisions of section 103(a)(1) of the Code because only the owner of obligations described in section 103 may treat the interest accruing on such obligations as excludable from gross income.

Rev. Rul. 60-177, 1960-1 C.B. 9, holds that an amount equal to a cash dividend, paid to a lender of stock by a "short-seller" with respect to the stock borrowed to cover a short sale, is not a dividend within the meaning of section 316(a) of the Code. Section 316(a) provides that the term "dividend" means any distribution of property made by a corporation to its shareholders out of its earnings and profits accumulated after February 28, 1913, or out of its earnings and profits of the taxable year. The phrase in section 316(a) "to its shareholders" means the owners of stock. Rev. Rul. 60-177 states that the purchaser, rather than the lender, is the real owner of the stock because title to the stock passed to the purchaser as a result of the short sale.

In this case the lender delivered the bond to the broker for transfer to the purchaser in the short sale transaction. Because title passed to the purchaser as a result of the short sale, the lender is no longer the owner of the bond. Therefore, the amount received by the lender is not interest on an obligation of a state or political subdivision of a state within the meaning of section 103 of the Code.

HOLDING

The lender of the municipal bond is not entitled to exclude from gross income under section 103(a)(1) of the Code the amount, equal to the interest on the bond, received from the broker who borrowed the bond to cover the short sale.

26 CFR 1.103-10: Exemption for certain small issues of industrial development bonds.

Industrial development bonds; townships and towns; incorporated municipalities. Townships and towns that have substantial governmental powers qualify as "incorporated municipalities" as that term is used in section 103(b)(6)(E)(i) of the Code if a state statute or the highest court of the state recognizes the entities as being municipal corporations; Rev. Rul. 74-381 modified.

Rev. Rul. 80-136

ISSUE

Do townships and towns qualify as "incorporated municipalities" as such term is used in section 103(b)(6)(E)(i) of the Internal Revenue Code in the situations described below?

Situation 1. Under state statute, townships of certain populations have corporate powers that are vested in an elected Board of Commissioners. Such townships may purchase and hold property, establish a police force, adopt ordinances and resolutions regulating the governmental affairs of the township, exercise the power of eminent domain, and levy taxes. The statutes of the state also provide that the term "municipal corporations" and "municipalities" include townships. The townships may not elect to incorporate.

Situation 2. Under state statute, a town is a governmental unit comprising the inhabitants within its boundaries and formed for the purpose of exercising such powers and discharging such duties of local government conferred or imposed on it by law.

State law provides that a town may acquire real property by condemnation, establish a police department and provide for enforcement of local laws by legal or equitable proceedings, and cause real property taxes to be levied for town purposes. Although the county government performs the act of levying and extending the taxes on the assessment roll, the town government evaluates real property for tax purposes, prepares the assessment roll, determines the amount of taxes to be levied for town purposes, and requires the County to levy such taxes by adopting and presenting a town budget to the county governing body. Taxes are collected by the town tax collector.

The highest court of the state recognizes the towns as municipal corporations.

Situation 3. The facts are the same as in Situation 2, except that neither the state statutes nor the highest court of the state recognizes the towns as municipal corporations.

LAW

Section 103(b)(6)(D) of the Code, as amended by the Revenue Act of 1978, section 331(a), Pub. L. 95-600, 1978-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1, 73, provides that for purposes of determining if the exempt small issue limitation of $10,000,000 ($5,000,000 for obligations issued before January 1, 1979) has been exceeded, capital expenditures made with respect to facilities described in section 103(b)(6)(E) must be aggregated with the face amount of the obligations. The $10,000,000 limitation also applies to capital expenditures made after December 31, 1978, with respect to bonds issued before January 1, 1979. The facilities described in section 103(b)(6)(E) are those located in the same incorporated municipality or located in the same county (but not in any incorporated municipality) and the principal user is the same person or two or more related persons.

HOLDING

The townships described in Situation 1 and the towns described in Situation 2 qualify as "incorporated municipalities" as that term is used in section 103(b)(6)(E)(i) of the Code because the state recognizes such entities as being municipal corporations and because the entities have substantial governmental powers. The towns described in Situation 3 do not qualify as "incorporated municipalities" as such term is used in section 103(b)(6)(E)(i) because the towns are not recognized either by the state statutes or the highest court of the state as being municipal corporations.

EFFECT ON OTHER REVENUE RULINGS

Rev. Rul. 74-381, 1974-2 C.B. 34, holds that townships that could have elected to become incorporated towns but did not do so, fail to qualify as "incorporated municipalities" as that term is used in section 103(c)(6)(E)(i) of the Code (redesignated as 103(b)(6)(E)(i)); that revenue ruling is modified to hold that such townships will be treated as incorporated municipalities if they possess substantial governmental powers and the state statute or the highest court of the state recognizes the townships as municipal corporations or as municipalities.

Section 104.—Compensation for Injuries or Sickness

26 CFR 1.104-1: Compensation for injuries or sickness.
(Also Section 61; 1.61-2.)

Workmen's compensation; disabled police officer assigned to light duty. Payments made by a municipality to a disabled police officer who has returned to work, but is assigned to light duty because the injury keeps the officer from performing regular police duties, are not excludable from gross income under section 104(a)(1) of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 80-137

ISSUE

Are payments made by a municipality to a disabled police officer performing "light duty" excludable from gross income under section 104(a)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code?

FACTS

B, a police officer employed by City M in the State of New York, was injured in the line of duty on January 5, 1979, and hospitalized. On March 1, 1979, B returned to work and, because B was unable to perform regular police duties as a result of the injury, B was assigned to "light duty." Since the date of B's injury, including the period B has been assigned to "light duty," M has paid to B the full amount of B's regular salary pursuant to the New York General Municipal Law section 207-c (McKinney 1974).

Section 207-c of the New York Law provides, under certain circumstances, for the payment of the full amount of salary or wages to a police officer, employed by a municipality, who is absent from work due to an injury or sickness incurred during, or resulting from, the performance of duties.

Section 207-c.2 of the Law provides that the payment of the full amount of regular salary shall be discontinued with respect to any police officer who is permanently disabled as a result of an injury or sickness incurred in, or resulting from, the performance of duties if the police officer is granted an accidental disability retirement allowance or pension.

Section 207-c.3 of the Law provides that if the disabled police officer is not eligible for, or is not granted, an accidental disability retirement allowance or pension and is nevertheless, in the opinion of the applicable health authorities, unable to perform regular police duties because of a job incurred injury or sickness, but is able to perform specified types of light police duty, payment of the full amount of regular salary shall be discontinued with respect to such police officer if the police officer should refuse to perform the light police duty if the same is available and offered.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 61 of the Code provides that gross income means all income from whatever source derived, including compensation for services.

Section 104(a)(1) of the Code provides that, except in the case of amounts attributable to (and not in excess of) deductions allowed under section 213 (relating to medical, etc., expenses) for any prior taxable year, gross income does not include amounts received under workmen's compensation acts as compensation for personal injuries or sickness.

Section 1.104-1(b) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that the exclusion under section 104(a)(1) of the Code applies not only to amounts received under workmen's compensation acts but also to amounts received under a statute in the nature of a workmen's compensation act which provides compensation to employees for personal injuries or sickness incurred in the course of their employment.

Section 104(a)(1) of the Code and the regulations thereunder do not allow the exclusion from gross income of payments of salary. Even though the services performed by B are limited because of a job incurred disability, the payments received by B are salary payments.

HOLDING

The payments made by M to B during the period B is performing "light duty" are not excludable from the gross income under section 104(a)(1) of the Code because such payments are salary payments made in return for services performed by B.

TITLE 26.—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER I, SUBCHAPTER A, PART 1.—INCOME TAX; TAXABLE YEARS BEGINNING AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1953

Moving expenses of members of the Armed Forces of the United States

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Final regulations.

SUMMARY: This document provides final regulations relating to the moving expenses of members of the Armed Forces of the United States. The final regulations amend the rules under section 217(g) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 to make them consistent with the rules in the Joint Travel Regulations, promulgated by the Departments of Defense and Transportation under the authority contained in sections 404 through 411 of title 37 of the United States Code.

DATE: The amendments are effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1975.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

Since this Treasury decision will not be detrimental to any taxpayer, it is found unnecessary to issue this Treasury decision with notice and public procedure thereon under subsection (b) of section 553 of title 5 of the United States Code.

EXPLANATION OF PROVISIONS

Section 217(g) of the Internal Revenue Code provides special moving expense rules for members of the Armed Forces of the United States on active duty who move pursuant to a military order and incident to a permanent change of station. For these military members, moving expenses furnished in kind or by reimbursement need not be included in gross income, and the Secretary of Defense and the Secretary of Transportation are not required to make information reports with respect to these expenses. The regulations under section 217(g) presently provide that a permanent change of station includes a move in connection with and within 90 days of retirement or other termination of active duty.

This regulation project amends § 1.217-2(g)(3)(ii) to provide that a permanent change of station includes a move in connection with and within 1 year of retirement or other termination of active duty. The Joint Travel Regulations extend the 1-year period for members undergoing hospitalization, medical treatment, education, or training, or in other deserving cases approved by the Secretary of the appropriate branch of the Armed Forces or by the Secretary's representative. The Income Tax Regulations as amended provide a corresponding extension.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of these regulations is Barbara B. Coughlin of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing these regulations, both on matters of substance and style.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, 26 CFR Part 1 is amended by revising § 1.217-2(g)(3)(ii) to read as follows:

§ 1.217-2 Deduction for moving expenses paid or incurred in taxable years beginning after December 31, 1969.

* * * * *

(g) Rules for members of the Armed Forces of the United States. * * *

(3) Permanent change of station. * * *

(ii) A move from the last post of duty to home or a nearer point in the United States in connection with retirement, discharge, resignation, separation under honorable conditions, transfer, relief from active duty, temporary disability retirement, or transfer to a Fleet Reserve, if such move occurs within 1 year of such termination of active duty or within the period prescribed by the Joint Travel Regulations promulgated under the authority contained in sections 404 through 411 of title 37 of the United States Code.

Because this Treasury decision will not be detrimental to any taxpayer, it is found unnecessary to issue this Treasury decision with notice and public procedure thereon under subsection (b) of section 553 of title 5 of the United States Code or subject to the effective date limitation of subsection (d) of that section.

This Treasury decision is issued under the authority contained in sections 217(j) and 7805 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (78 Stat. 50 and 68A Stat. 917; 26 U.S.C. 217(j) and 7805).

Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

Assistant Secretary
of the Treasury.

Section 402.—Taxability of Beneficiary of Employees' Trust

26 CFR 1.402(a)-1: Taxability of beneficiary under a trust which meets the requirements of section 401(a).

Employer securities; transferred to new trust; basis. The transfer of employer securities (consisting of stock in the parent corporation) from an exempt employees' trust that is maintained by the parent corporation and its subsidiary to a newly established exempt employees' trust of the subsidiary corporation will not change the basis of the securities for purposes of computing the net unrealized appreciation in such securities; Rev. Rul. 67-181 superseded.

The purpose of this revenue ruling is to restate the position in Rev. Rul. 67-181, 1967-1 C.B. 91, in view of the enactment of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA), Pub. L. 93-406, 1974-3 C.B. 1.

The issue presented in Rev. Rul. 67-181 is whether the transfer of employer securities (consisting of stock in the parent corporation) from an exempt employees' trust maintained by a corporation and its subsidiary to a newly established exempt employees' trust of the subsidiary, under the circumstances described below, changed the basis of these securities for the purpose of computing the net unrealized appreciation in such securities.

A wholly owned subsidiary corporation was a participating employer under the parent's qualified profit-sharing trust. Pursuant to an amendment to its plan, the subsidiary discontinued participation under the parent's trust, established its own trust, limited coverage to its own employees, and restricted future benefits to a share of its own profits. The trustees of the parent's trust transferred to the subsidiary's trust all assets held for the benefit of the subsidiary's employees. Under this arrangement no amounts were distributed or made available to the subsidiary's employees. The assets transferred to the trustees of the subsidiary's trust included securities of the parent corporation.

Section 402(a)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code provides that the amount actually distributed or made available to any distributee by any employees' trust described in section 401(a), which is exempt from tax under section 501(a), shall be taxable to the distributee in the year in which so distributed or made available under section 72 (relating to annuities). Section 402(a)(1) further provides that the net unrealized appreciation in securities of an employer corporation attributable to the amount contributed by an employee is excludable from a distributee's income at the time amounts are made available or distributed.

Section 1.402(a)-1(b)(1)(i) of the Income Tax Regulations sets forth the extent to which the amount of net appreciation in the securities of the employer corporation may be excluded from the gross income of the distributee where such securities are included in a distribution made by a trust described in section 401(a) of the Code and exempt under section 501(a).

Section 1.402(a)-1(b)(1)(ii) of the regulations provides that "securities of the employer corporation" includes securities of a parent corporation.

Section 1.402(a)-1(b)(2) of the regulations provides that the amount of net unrealized appreciation in securities of the employer corporation which are distributed by the trust is the excess of the market value of the securities at the time of distribution over the cost or other basis of such securities to the trust.

The only significant changes for the participants in this case were that their benefits were restricted to a share of the subsidiary's profits, and assets held on their behalf were separated from those held for employees of the parent. The amounts previously credited to their accounts were unchanged and no taxable event occurred.

Since no taxable event occurred upon the transfer of assets to the newly established trust, such transfer did not change the basis of the securities of the parent for the purpose of computing net unrealized appreciation in such securities.

Rev. Rul. 67-181 is superseded because the position stated therein is restated under current law in this revenue ruling.

Section 403.—Taxation of Employee Annuities

26 CFR 1.403(b)-1: Taxability of beneficiary under annuity purchased by a section 501(c)(3) organization or public school.

Annuity contracts; staff of teachers' retirement system. Amounts contributed by a state teachers' retirement system to purchase annuity contracts for the employees of the retirement system are not excludable from the employees' gross income under section 403(b) of the Code; Rev. Rul. 68-178 superseded.

Rev. Rul. 80-139

The purpose of this revenue ruling is to update and restate, under current law, Rev. Rul. 68-178, 1968-1 C.B. 177.

The issue in Rev. Rul. 68-178 is whether amounts contributed by a state teachers' retirement system to purchase annuity contracts for employees of the retirement system are excludable from the gross income of the employees under section 403(b) of the Internal Revenue Code under the circumstances described below.

A state established a teachers' retirement system for the purpose of administering a retirement program established for the benefit of the teachers and administrators of the state public schools. The retirement system is a qualified employees' trust within the meaning of section 401(a) of the Code. It makes all the rules and regulations necessary for the functioning of the teachers' retirement program and invests the funds contributed to the system. The retirement system entered into an arrangement with its employees, intended to meet the requirements of section 403(b), under which the retirement system purchased annuity contracts for those employees.

Section 403(b) of the Code provides that certain amounts contributed by an employer to purchase an annuity contract shall be excluded from the gross income of the employee for the taxable year if the conditions set forth therein are met. Amounts may not be excluded under that section unless the annuity is purchased (1) for an employee by an employer described in section 501(c)(3) which is exempt from tax under section 501(a), or (2) for an employee (other than one described in clause (1)), who performs services for an educational organization described in section 170(b)(1)(A)(ii), by an employer which is a state, a political subdivision of a state, or an agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing.

An educational organization described in section 170(b)(1)(A)(ii) of the Code is one which normally maintains a regular faculty and curriculum and normally has a regularly enrolled body of pupils or students in attendance at the place where its educational activities are regularly carried on.

A person is considered an employee who performs services for an educational organization if he or she is performing services directly or indirectly for such an organization. The principal, clerical employees, custodial employees, and teachers at a public school are employees performing services directly for such educational organization. An employee who performs services involving the operation or direction of a state's education program, as carried on through educational organizations, is an employee performing services indirectly for such organizations. An employee participating in an "in-home" teaching program is included because such program is merely an extension of the activities carried on by such educational organization. See section 1.403(b)-1(b)(5) of the Income Tax Regulations.

The purpose of the state teachers' retirement system in this case is to administer the retirement program established for the benefit of the teachers and administrators of the state public schools. Since it is a qualified trust under section 401(a) of the Code, the retirement system is neither an organization described in section 501(c)(3) which is exempt from tax under section 501(a), nor is it an educational organization, or a part thereof, described in section 170(b)(1)(A)(ii). Further, since the employees' services are limited to the administration of the retirement program, they do not perform services directly or indirectly for an educational organization.

Accordingly, amounts contributed by the state teachers' retirement system to purchase annuity contracts for employees of the retirement system are not excludable from the employees' gross income under section 403(b) of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 68-178 is superseded because the position stated therein is updated and restated, under current law, in this revenue ruling.

Section 404.—Deduction for Contributions of an Employer to an Employees' Trust or Annuity Plan and Compensation Under a Deferred-Payment Plan

26 CFR 1.404(a)-1: Contributions of an employer to an employees' trust or annuity plan and compensation under a deferred payment plan; general rule.
(Also Section 4975.)

Employer's contribution; term promissory note. The delivery of an employer's own term promissory note to an employees' trust does not constitute payment for purposes of section 404(a) of the Code, and the issuance of such a note to a plan is a prohibited transaction within the meaning of section 4975; Rev. Rul. 71-95 superseded.

Rev. Rul. 80-140

The purpose of this revenue ruling is to restate and expand Rev. Rul. 71-95, 1971-1 C.B. 130, in light of the enactment of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, Pub. L. 93-406, 1974-3 C.B. 1, and the decision of the United States Supreme Court in Don E. Williams Co. v. Commissioner, 429 U.S. 569 (1977), Ct. D. 1984, 1977-1 C.B. 109.

Held, the delivery of a taxpayer's own term promissory note to an employees' trust does not constitute payment for purposes of section 404(a) of the Internal Revenue Code.

Furthermore, the employer's issuance of such a note to a plan constitutes a "prohibited transaction" within the meaning of section 4975 of the Code and is subject to the penalties set out in that section.

Rev. Rul. 71-95 is superseded because the position stated therein is restated and expanded in this Revenue Ruling.

Section 471.—General Rule for Inventories

(Also Section 162; 1.162-1.)

Inventories; service fees paid to supplier. A sales-service fee equal to a percentage of a customer's purchases that a wholesale grocer charges retail grocers under franchise agreements, whether or not the retailers use any services provided by the wholesaler, must be included in the cost of the retailers' inventories. Other service fees that the wholesaler charges retailers only for services that are actually rendered are deductible by the retailers under section 162 of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 80-141

ISSUE

Are the sales-service fee and charges on a per-service-rendered basis paid by the taxpayer to its supplier, a wholesale grocer, necessary charges incurred in acquiring inventory within the meaning of section 1.471-3(b) of the Income Tax Regulations and therefore part of the cost of inventory?

FACTS

W, a wholesale grocer, holds the exclusive Y franchise rights for the area in which M, an independent grocer, operates. M and W enter into an agreement (the "Agreement") whereby M receives a Y franchise and the right to advertise itself as a Y food store. Pursuant to the Agreement, M may, together with other food stores holding Y franchises from W, purchase grocery items from W's warehouse distribution facility.

In addition to selling groceries to holders of a Y franchise, W offers certain services to such franchise-holders, but the decision to use these services is up to each franchise-holder. These services include the following:

1. Store engineering service and assistance.
2. Merchandising programs in general.
3. Merchandising bulletins.
4. Merchandising programs for Y meat.
5. Produce, dairy, and frozen foods merchandising.
6. Printed order form books.
7. Comparative price checking.
8. Store supervision and operations evaluation.
9. Management counseling and membership meetings.
10. Product placement and relocation.

To cover the cost of these services, W charges a sales-service fee that is based on the volume of purchases through the warehouse distribution facility of W rather than on a "per-service-rendered basis." For example, the sales-service fee ranges from a maximum of 4.5 percent for purchases of 400*x* dollars or less to a minimum of 2 percent for purchases over 3,750*x* dollars.

M cannot purchase grocery items from W without being charged a sales-service fee. M is not required to use the services provided by W. Therefore, it is possible that M could elect to receive only the grocery items from W in return for its payment of the warehouse cost and the sales-service fee to W.

W also offers to the holders of Y franchises the following services for which W charges on a per-service-rendered basis.

1. Circular and newspaper advertising program.
2. Weekly window poster and special sales material.
3. Store retail accounting program.

The amount charged for these services depends on the amount of services utilized by a Y franchise-holder. The volume of purchases from W's warehouse distribution facility has no effect upon the amount charged for these services.

LAW

Section 1.162-1(a) of the regulations provides that business expenses deductible from gross income include the ordinary and necessary expenditures directly connected with or pertaining to the taxpayer's trade or business, except items that are used as the basis for a deduction or a credit under provisions of the Code other than section 162. The cost of goods purchased for resale, with proper adjustment for opening and closing inventories, is deducted from gross sales in computing gross income. No item shall be included in business expenses to the extent that it is used by the taxpayer in computing the cost of property included in its inventory or used in computing the gain or loss basis of its plant, equipment or other property.

Section 1.471-2(c) of the regulations provides that the basis of inventory valuation most commonly used by business concerns and that meets the requirements (clear reflection of income) of section 471 of the Code are (1) cost and (2) cost or market, whichever is lower.

Section 1.471-3 of the regulations provides that the term "cost" means: (a) in the case of merchandise on hand at the beginning of the taxable year, the inventory price of such goods; (b) in the case of merchandise purchased since the beginning of the taxable year, the invoice price less trade or other discounts, except strictly cash discounts approximating a fair interest rate, which may be deducted or not at the option of the taxpayer, provided a consistent course is followed. To this net invoice price should be added transportation or other necessary charges incurred in acquiring possession of the goods.

The cost of goods in inventory is defined in section 1.471-3(b) of the regulations to be the net invoice price of the goods purchased plus transportation or other necessary charges incurred in acquiring possession of the goods. In order for M to purchase goods from W, M must pay the sales-service fee, whether or not M wants the services and whether or not M receives any service. Furthermore, the service fee is directly incurred as a result of the acquisition of M's inventory, and the amount of the fee is exclusively dependent upon the volume of M's purchases rather than the amount of services provided by W. These facts indicate that the payment of the sales-service fee is a necessary charge incurred in acquiring possession of the goods and not a charge incurred to obtain services.

W also provides M with certain services for which W charges on a per-service-rendered basis. It is not necessary for M to incur this separately stated and independently determined service charge in order to purchase goods from W. Thus, the amount charged on a per-service-rendered basis is not a necessary charge incurred in acquiring possession of the goods.

HOLDING

The sales-service fee paid by M to W is a necessary charge incurred in acquiring inventory within the meaning of section 1.471-3(b) of the regulations. Therefore, it must be included in the cost of such inventory and it is not deductible under section 162 of the Code.

The amount charged on a per-service-rendered basis is not a necessary charge incurred in acquiring inventory within the meaning of section 1.471-3(b) of the regulations. This amount is deductible as an ordinary and necessary business expense under section 162 of the Code.

26 CFR 20.2040-1: Joint interests.

Jointly owned stock; stock dividend. An individual acquired common stock of a corporation and placed it in a joint tenancy with rights of survivorship. Before the individual's death, the corporation distributed a one-share-for-four stock dividend and another dividend that was paid in stock in lieu of cash at the joint tenants' election. The value of all the stock except one-half the elective stock dividend is includible in the decedent's gross estate.

Rev. Rul. 80-142

ISSUE

What is the amount includible in the decedent's gross estate with respect to jointly owned stock, under the following circumstances?

FACTS

The decedent, D, died in 1976. In 1970, D purchased 800 shares of X corporation common stock and placed the shares in a joint tenancy, with rights of survivorship, with A. The stock of X corporation is publicly traded.

In 1972, X corporation distributed a stock dividend of one share of X corporation common stock for every four shares of X corporation common stock owned.

Thereafter, D and A owned 1,000 shares jointly.

In 1974, X corporation declared a cash dividend of two dollars with respect to each share of stock held by the shareholders. The company offered to distribute additional shares of common stock in lieu of the cash dividends at the rate of forty dollars per share. D and A elected to receive additional shares rather than the cash dividend, and therefore, jointly acquired an additional fifty shares of stock.

At D's death, 1,050 shares of X corporation common stock, with a value of 50 dollars per share, were owned jointly by D and A.

Under applicable local law, income produced by property held jointly is regarded as belonging to the joint tenants in equal shares.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Under section 2040(a) of the Code, in pertinent part, the gross estate includes the value of property held jointly at the time of the decedent's death by the decedent and another person with the right of survivorship, except the portion of the property or the consideration therefor that originally belonged to the other joint owner and was not acquired by the other joint owner from the decedent for less than adequate and full consideration in money or money's worth.

The 1972 common stock dividend represents a fragmentation of the original interest in the corporation which D transferred into joint tenancy rather than an increased interest therein. This reasoning, which is the basis for not taxing the dividends as income, is also the basis for including them in D's estate under section 2040. Inclusion of the stock dividends on this basis is supported by the analysis of Estate of Schlosser v. Commissioner, 277 F. 2d 268 (3rd Cir. 1960), cert. denied, 364 U.S. 819 (1960).

In Schlosser, the court stated that ordinary dividends, which change the shareholder's proportionate interest in the corporation or give him something different in kind from the original stock, would not be included in the property valued in the gross estate. See Tuck v. United States, 282 F. 2d 405 (9th Cir. 1960), and English v. United States, 270 F. 2d 876 (7th Cir. 1959).

In the situation of a common stock dividend issued with regard to common stock, the period to which the capitalized profits are attributable should not be controlling, and the analysis of McGehee v. Commissioner, 260 F. 2d 818 (5th Cir. 1958), will not be followed.

In contrast to the 1972 dividend, the 1974 elective stock dividend constitutes something different in kind from the shares originally transferred by D into joint tenancy. Like a cash dividend, which is treated as the contribution by the survivor under section 20.2040-1(c)(5), an elective stock dividend constitutes income to the recipient under section 305(b)(1), and income tax considerations are relevant to the determination of includibility for estate tax purposes in this case. If a shareholder has the option to take cash or stock and decides to take stock the result is the same as if he had received a cash dividend and purchased additional stock. See, for example, Rev. Rul. 76-53, 1976-1 C.B. 87.

Under local law, each joint tenant is entitled to an equal share of the elective stock dividend. Therefore, each joint tenant would be taxed on the value of this property as income. See Rev. Rul. 56-519, 1956-2 C.B. 123.

HOLDING

The amount includible in D's gross estate is $51,250 or the value of 1,025 shares of the X corporation stock. The value of twenty-five shares, which constitute A's share of the 1974 elective stock dividend, or $1,250, is excluded as the contribution of A.

Section 3506.—Individuals Providing Companion Sitting Placement Services

26 CFR 31.3506-1: Companion sitting placement services.

TITLE 26.—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER I, SUBCHAPTER A, PART 1.—INCOME TAX; TAXABLE YEARS BEGINNING AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1953; PART 31—EMPLOYMENT TAXES; APPLICABLE ON OR AFTER JANUARY 1, 1955

Companion Sitting Placement Services

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Final regulations.

SUMMARY: This document provides final regulations relating to the exemption of companion sitting placement services from employer status. Changes in the applicable tax law were made by the Act of November 12, 1977 [Pub. L. 95-171, 1978-1 C.B. 457]. The regulations provide the public with the guidance needed to comply with the applicable part of this Act.

EFFECTIVE DATE: The regulations apply to remuneration received after December 31, 1974.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND AND EXPLANATION OF PROVISIONS

On May 30, 1979, the Federal Register published proposed amendments to the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) and Employment Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 31) to conform the regulations to section 10 of the Act of November 12, 1977 (Public Law 95-171, 31 Stat. 1356) which added section 3506 to the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. No public hearing was requested or held. This Treasury decision adopts the amendments as proposed.

These regulations add a new § 31.3506-1 under section 3506. Section 31.3506-1 provides that, for purposes of employment taxes, a companion sitting placement service shall not be treated as the employer of its sitters if the placement service neither pays nor receives the salary or wages of the sitters. A "companion sitting placement service" is an individual, trust, estate, partnership, association, company, or corporation engaged in the trade or business of placing sitters with individuals who desire the sitters' services. "Sitters" are individuals who provide companionship, personal attendance, or household care services to children, the elderly, or the disabled.

The principal concern expressed in the comments received on the notice of proposed rulemaking was that the proposed regulations would result in the loss of social security coverage of the sitters. However, a sitter who is deemed by § 31.3506-1 not to be the employee of a placement service is then deemed to be self-employed and becomes liable for the tax imposed by section 1401 on self-employment income earned after 1974. Except where net earnings from self-employment for the taxable year are less than $400, the sitter will be liable for tax and will continue to have earnings reported on which social security benefits may be based.

It is also important to note that the general rule of § 31.3506-1 only operates to remove sitters and placement services from the employee-employer relationship when, under §§ 31.3121(d)-1 and 31-3121(d)-2, that relationship would otherwise exist. Therefore, if under the common law a sitter is the employee of the individual for whom the sitting is performed rather than the employee of the placement service, that employee-employer relationship remains intact.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of these regulations is David B. Cubeta of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulation, both on matters of substance and style.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, the proposed amendments to 26 CFR Parts 1 and 31, as set forth in the notice of proposed rulemaking published in the Federal Register on May 30, 1979 (44 F.R. 31025), are hereby adopted as follows:

INCOME TAX REGULATIONS

Paragraph 1. Paragraph (a) of § 1.1402(c)-3 is amended by revising the parenthetical sentence at the end thereof to read as follows:

§ 1.1402(c)-3 Employees.

(a) General rule. * * * (As to when an individual is an employee, see section 3121(d) and (o) and section 3506 and the regulations under those sections in part 31 of this chapter (Employment Tax Regulations).)

* * * * *

EMPLOYMENT TAX REGULATIONS

(26 CFR Part 31)

Par. 2. Paragraph (a)(1) of § 31.3121(d)-1 is amended by revising the first sentence thereof to read as follows:

§ 31.3121(d)-1 Who are employees.

(a) In general. (1) Whether an individual is an employee with respect to services performed after 1954 is determined in accordance with section 3121(d) and (o) and section 3506. * * *

* * * * *

Par. 3. A new § 31.3506-1 is added immediately after § 31.3505-1. This new section reads as follows:

(a) Definitions—(1) Companion sitting placement service. For purposes of this section, the term "companion sitting placement service" means a person (whether or not an individual) engaged in the trade or business of placing sitters with individuals who wish to avail themselves of the sitters' services.

(2) Sitters. For purposes of this section, the term "sitters" means individuals who furnish personal attendance, companionship, or household care services to children or to individuals who are elderly or disabled.

(b) General rule. For purposes of subtitle C of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (relating to employment taxes), a companion sitting placement service shall not be treated as the employer of its sitters, and the sitters shall not be treated as the employees of the placement service. However, the rule of the proceding sentence shall apply only if the companion sitting placement service neither pays nor receives (directly or through an agent) the salary or wages of the sitters, but is compensated, if at all, on a fee basis by the sitters or the individuals for whom the sitting is performed.

(c) Individuals deemed self-employed. Any individual who, by reason of this section, is deemed not to be the employee of a companion sitting placement service shall be deemed to be self-employed for purposes of the tax on self-employment income (see sections 1401-1403 and the regulations thereunder in part 1 of this chapter (Income Tax Regulations)).

(d) Scope of rules. The rules of this section operate only to remove sitters and companion sitting placement services from the employee-employer relationship when, under §§ 31.3121(d)-1 and 31.3121(d)-2, that relationship would otherwise exist. Thus, if, under §§ 31.3121(d)-1 and 31.3121(d)-2, a sitter is considered to be the employee of the individual for whom the sitting is performed rather than the employee of the companion sitting placement service, this section has no effect upon that employee-employer relationship.

(e) Examples. The provisions of this section may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). X is an agency that places babysitters with individuals who desire babysitting services. X furnishes all the sitters with an instruction manual regarding their conduct and appearance, requires them to file semimonthly reports, and determines the total fee to be charged the individual for whom the sitting is performed. Individuals who need a babysitter contact the agency, are informed of the charges, and, if agreement is reached, a sitter is sent to perform the services. The sitter collects the entire amount of the charges and remits a percentage to X as a fee for the placement. X is a companion sitting placement service within the meaning of paragraph (a)(1) of this section. Therefore, since the agency does not actually pay or receive the wages of the sitters, X is not treated as the employer of the sitters for purposes of this subtitle. The sitters are deemed to be self-employed for the purpose of the tax imposed by section 1401.

Example (2). Assume the same facts as in example (1), except that the individual for whom the sitting is performed pays to X the entire amount of the charges. X retains a percentage and pays the difference to the sitter. Since X actually receives and pays the wages of the sitters, X is the employer of the sitters.

Example (3). As a service to the community a neighborhood association maintains a list of individuals who are available to babysit. Parents in need of a sitter contact the association and are provided with a list of names and telephone numbers. The association charges no fee for the service and takes no action other than compiling the list of sitters and making it available to members of the community. Issues such as hours of work, amount of payment, and the method by which the services are performed are all resolved between the sitter and parent. A, a parent, used the list to hire B to sit for A's child. B performs the services four days a week in A's home and follows specific instructions given by A. Under § 31.3121(d)-1, B is the employee of A rather than the employee of the neighborhood association. Consequently, this section does not apply and B remains the employee of A.

This Treasury decision is issued under the authority contained in sections 3506 and 7805 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (91 Stat. 1356, 26 U.S.C. 3506; 68A Stat. 917, 26 U.S.C. 7805).

JEROME KURTZ,
Commissioner of
Internal Revenue.

Approved March 25, 1980.

DONALD C. LUBICK,
Assistant Secretary
of the Treasury.

Part III. Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous

Delegation Order No. 149 (Rev. 1) Revocation Notice (Effective February 29, 1980)

Delegation of Authority to Levy on Property in Hands of Third Parties

1. Delegation Order No. 149 (Rev. 1) [1979-43 I.R.B. 25], issued July 11, 1979, granted authority to the Chief, Collection Branch in the Compliance Division, Cincinnati Service Center, to levy on wages, salaries, other income and bank deposits in the possession of third parties; to issue final demand for enforcement of levy; and to release levy and return property. Authority to redelegate to Collection Branch personnel in the GS-1169 series and selected GS-592-7 and GS-592-6 Tax Examiners the authority to levy on wages, salaries, other income and bank deposits in the possession of third parties; and to release levy and return property, was also granted. Redelegation authority to issue final demand for enforcement of levy was restricted to GS-1169 series personnel in the Collection Branch.

2. The taxpayer delinquent account batch processing operation, which required this authority, transferred November 1, 1979 from the Cincinnati Service Center to the district offices.

3. Accordingly, Delegation Order No. 149 (Rev. 1) issued July 11, 1979, is revoked.

JEROME KURTZ,
Commissioner.

If an organization listed above submits information that warrants the renewal of its classification as a public charity or as a private operating foundation, the Internal Revenue Service will issue a ruling or determination letter with the revised classification as to foundation status. Grantors and contributors may thereafter rely upon such ruling or determination letter as provided in section 1.509(a)-7 of the Income Tax Regulations. It is not the practice of the Service to announce such revised classification of foundation status in the Internal Revenue Bulletin.

Beginning January 1, 1979, a taxpayer who mixed alcohol with gasoline on which the 4 cents a gallon federal excise tax had been imposed is eligible for a credit or refund of the gasoline tax. The alcohol must have been made from other than petroleum, natural gas, or coal and the mixture must have included at least 10% of 190 proof alcohol and have been sold or used in the taxpayer's trade or business.

Gasoline used in the mixture from January 1, 1979, through April 2, 1980, is considered sold or used on April 2, 1980, for purposes of claiming a refund or credit.

To claim a refund, a taxpayer must be able to claim at least $200 a quarter for the tax on the gasoline. Form 843, Claim, is used to file a claim for any of the first three quarters of the claimant's taxable year and must be filed before the end of the next quarter. The taxpayer checks the box "Other" on line 9 and specifies "gasoline/alcohol mixture" and the number of gallons of gasoline used on line 10. Taxpayers qualifying to use Form 843 for tax paid on gasoline which is mixed with alcohol and sold or used between January 1, 1979, and June 30, 1980, should file for refund on or after July 1, 1980, and on or before September 30, 1980. Those taxpayers not eligible to file Form 843 for any given quarter, or who did not file the form, and all taxpayers for the fourth quarter of their taxable year can claim a credit on Form 4136, Computation of Credit for Federal Tax on Gasoline, Special Fuels, and Lubricating Oil. This is to be attached to their income tax return. The taxpayer enters on line 1c the number of gallons of gasoline used, identifies it as "gasoline/alcohol mixture," and completes the rest of the form. If the credit exceeds the income tax liability, the excess will be refunded.

The amount of refund or credit claimed is includible in the taxpayer's gross income.

Announcement of the Disbarment, Suspension, or Consent to Voluntary Suspension of Attorneys, Certified Public Accountants, Enrolled Agents and Enrolled Actuaries from Practice before the Internal Revenue Service

Under Section 1026, Title 31 of the United States Code (1970 ed.), the Secretary of the Treasury, after due notice and opportunity for hearing, is authorized to suspend or disbar from practice before the Internal Revenue Service any person who has violated the rules and regulations governing the recognition of attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents or enrolled actuaries to practice before the Internal Revenue Service.

Attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries are prohibited in any Internal Revenue Service matter from directly or indirectly employing, accepting assistance from, being employed by or sharing fees with, any practitioner disbarred or under suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service.

To enable attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries to identify such disbarred or suspended practitioners, the Director of Practice will announce in the Internal Revenue Bulletin the names and addresses of practitioners who have been disbarred or suspended from such practice, their designation as attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, and the date of disbarment or period of suspension. This announcement will appear and will continue to appear in the weekly Bulletins for five successive weeks for each attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary so suspended or disbarred and will later be consolidated and published in the Cumulative Bulletin.

By decision on appeal from an initial decision in an administrative hearing, the following individuals have been suspended or disbarred from further practice before the Internal Revenue Service:

Name	Address	Designation	Effective Date
Sydney M. Eisenberg	Milwaukee, WI	Attorney	April 17, 1980 Disbarment
Leon Feldt	El Paso, TX	Certified Public Accountant	March 26, 1980 Disbarment
Angelos P. Romas	Endicott, NY	Attorney	April 9, 1980 Disbarment

After due notice and opportunity for hearing, the following individuals have been disbarred from further practice before the Internal Revenue Service:

Name	Address	Designation	Date of Disbarment
Robert B. Clarkson	Anderson, SC	Attorney	April 25, 1980

Under 31 Code of Federal Regulations, Part 10, an attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, in order to avoid the institution or conclusion of a proceeding for his disbarment or suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, may offer his consent to suspension from such practice. The Director of Practice, in his discretion, may suspend an attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary in accordance with the consent offered.

Attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries are prohibited in any Internal Revenue Service matter from directly or indirectly employing, accepting assistance from, being employed by or sharing fees with, any practitioner disbarred or under suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service.

To enable attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries to identify practitioners under consent suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, the Director of Practice will announce in the Internal Revenue Bulletin the names and addresses of practitioners who have been suspended from such practice, their designation as attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, and the date or period of suspension. This announcement will appear in the weekly Bulletin at the earliest practicable date after such action and will continue to appear in the weekly Bulletins for five successive weeks or for as many weeks as is practicable for each attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary so suspended and will later be consolidated and published in the Cumulative Bulletin.

The following individuals have been placed under consent suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service:

Name	Address	Designation	Term of Suspension
Frank H. Abernathy	Richmond, VA	Certified Public Accountant	Indefinite effective April 9, 1980
Carl L. Harthun	Denver, CO	Attorney	Indefinite effective April 9, 1980
John T. Kelly, Jr.	Virginia Beach, VA	Certified Public Accountant	Indefinite effective April 15, 1980

INTERNAL REVENUE BULLETIN

The Introduction on page 3 describes the purpose and content of this publication. The weekly Internal Revenue Bulletin is sold on a yearly subscription basis by the Superintendent of Documents. Current subscribers are notified by the Superintendent of Documents when their subscriptions must be renewed.

CUMULATIVE BULLETINS

The contents of the weekly Bulletin are consolidated semiannually into a permanent, indexed, Cumulative Bulletin. These are sold on a single copy basis and are not included as part of the subscription to the Internal Revenue Bulletin. Subscribers to the weekly Bulletin are notified when copies of the Cumulative Bulletin are available. Certain issues of Cumulative Bulletins are out of print and are not available. Persons desiring available Cumulative Bulletins, which are listed on the reverse, may purchase them from the Superintendent of Documents.

BULLETIN INDEX-DIGEST SYSTEM

The Bulletin Index-Digest System (12-78) provides a fast and easy way to research Revenue Rulings, Revenue Procedures, Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and other matters of a permanent nature published in the weekly Internal Revenue Bulletin, or Cumulative Bulletin from 1953 on. It is a comprehensive and up-to-date research tool that requires no filing or other clerical maintenance. The current revision consists of four Services, available on a subscription basis, each including a basic volume that covers the period 1953-1978 and a cumulative supplement covering material published in subsequent Bulletins for the following two-year period. Cumulative supplements are issued quarterly for the Income Tax Service and semiannually for the Estate and Gift, Employment, and Excise Tax Services.

HOW TO ORDER

Check the publications and/or subscription(s) desired on the reverse, complete the order blank, enclose the proper remittance, detach entire page, and mail to the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. Please allow two to six weeks, plus mailing time, for delivery.

INCOME TAX

Rev. Rul. 80-143, page 6.

Municipal bonds redeemed prior to maturity; discount. Unearned original issue discount received upon redemption of municipal bonds before maturity is not interest income excludable from gross income under section 103(a)(1) of the Code but is gain from the sale or exchange of a capital asset. The provisions of this revenue ruling will not be applied to municipal obligations issued prior to June 9, 1980. Rev. Rul. 72-587 modified.

Rev. Rul. 80-144, page 7.

Foreign tax credit carryover; acquiring corporation. A foreign corporation, all of whose income was effectively connected with a U.S. business, transferred substantially all of its properties to a related domestic corporation in a reorganization under section 368(a)(1)(D) of the Code. Any unused foreign income taxes of the transferor foreign corporation may be carried over and used in computing the foreign tax credit of the acquiring domestic corporation under section 901(a). Rev. Ruls. 68-350 and 72-452 obsoleted for reorganizations described in section 381(a)(2) occurring after December 10, 1971, pursuant to a plan of reorganization or contract entered into on or after September 29, 1971.

Rev. Rul. 80-150, page 24.

Liquidating trust. A trust established under state law for the purpose of liquidating and distributing assets (land, a heating plant located thereon, a right-of-way to the land, and mining claims) that were transferred by a liquidating corporation and that could not be sold other than under distress conditions within the 12-month period following the corporation's adoption of a plan of liquidation is classified as a liquidating trust under section 301.7701-4(d) of the regulations. The shareholders of the liquidating corporation are considered the owners of the trust and are taxable on the trust income.

Announcement 80-80, page 27.

As a result of the passage of the Technical Corrections Act of 1979, the computation of adjusted itemized deductions for an estate or trust using Form 6251, Alternative Minimum Tax Computation, has been changed.

Internal Revenue Service

Statement of Principles of Internal Revenue Tax Administration

The function of the Internal Revenue Service is to administer the Internal Revenue Code. Tax policy for raising revenue is determined by Congress.

With this in mind, it is the duty of the Service to carry out that policy by correctly applying the laws enacted by Congress; to determine the reasonable meaning of various Code provisions in light of the Congressional purpose in enacting them; and to perform this work in a fair and impartial manner, with neither a government nor a taxpayer point of view.

At the heart of administration is interpretation of the Code. It is the responsibility of each person in the Service, charged with the duty of interpreting the law, to try to find the true meaning of the statutory provision and not to adopt a strained construction in the belief that he is "protecting the revenue." The revenue is properly protected only when we ascertain and apply the true meaning of the statute.

The Service also has the responsibility of applying and administering the law in a reasonable, practical manner. Issues should only be raised by examining officers when they have merit, never arbitrarily or for trading purposes. At the same time, the examining officer should never hesitate to raise a meritorious issue. It is also important that care be exercised not to raise an issue or to ask a court to adopt a position inconsistent with an established Service position.

Administration should be both reasonable and vigorous. It should be conducted with as little delay as possible and with great courtesy and considerateness. It should never try to overreach, and should be reasonable within the bounds of law and sound administration. It should, however, be vigorous in requiring compliance with law and it should be relentless in its attack on unreal tax devices and fraud.

Introduction

The Internal Revenue Bulletin is the authoritative instrument of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for announcing official rulings and procedures of the Internal Revenue Service and for publishing Treasury Decisions, Executive Orders, Tax Conventions, legislation, court decisions, and other items of general interest. It is published weekly and may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. Bulletin contents of a permanent nature are consolidated semiannually into Cumulative Bulletins, which are sold on a single-copy basis.

It is the policy of the Service to publish in the Bulletin all substantive rulings necessary to promote a uniform application of the tax laws, including all rulings that supersede, revoke, modify, or amend any of those previously published in the Bulletin. All published rulings apply retroactively unless otherwise indicated. Procedures relating solely to matters of internal management are not published; however, statements of internal practices and procedures that affect the rights and duties of taxpayers are published.

Revenue rulings represent the conclusions of the Service on the application of the law to the pivotal facts stated in the revenue ruling. In those based on positions taken in rulings to taxpayers or technical advice to Service field offices, identifying details and information of a confidential nature are deleted to prevent unwarranted invasions of privacy and to comply with statutory requirements.

Rulings and procedures reported in the Bulletin do not have the force and effect of Treasury Department Regulations, but they may be used as precedents. Unpublished rulings will not be relied on, used, or cited as precedents by Service personnel in the disposition of other cases. In applying published rulings and procedures, the effect of subsequent legislation, regulations, court decisions, rulings, and procedures must be considered, and Service personnel and others concerned are cautioned against reaching the same conclusions in other cases unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same.

The Bulletin is divided into four parts as follows:

Part I.—1954 Code.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

Part II.—Treaties and Tax Legislation.

This part is divided into two subparts as follows: Subpart A, Tax Conventions, and Subpart B, Legislation and Related Committee Reports.

Part III.—Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous.

To the extent practicable, pertinent cross references to these subjects are contained in the other Parts and Subparts.

Part IV.—Items of General Interest.

With the exception of the disbarment and suspension list included in this part, none of these announcements is consolidated in the Cumulative Bulletins.

The first Bulletin for each month includes an index for the matters published during the preceding month. These monthly indexes are cumulated on a quarterly and semiannual basis, and are published in the first Bulletin of the succeeding quarterly and semi-annual period, respectively.

The Bulletin Index-Digest System, a research and reference service supplementing the Bulletin, may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. It consists of four Services: Service No. 1, Income Tax; Service No. 2, Estate and Gift Taxes; Service No. 3, Employment Taxes; Service No. 4, Excise Taxes. Each Service consists of a basic volume and a cumulative supplement that provide (1) finding lists of items published in the Bulletin, (2) digests of revenue rulings, revenue procedures, and other published items, and (3) topical indexes of Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and Tax Conventions.

The contents of this publication are not copyrighted and may be reprinted freely. A citation of the Internal Revenue Bulletin as the source would be appropriate.

For sale by the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. Prices: Domestic—$2.00 a single copy, $55.00 a year subscription; Foreign—$2.50 a single copy, $68.75 a year subscription.

failure of an employer to make contributions to its profit-sharing plan for five consecutive years due solely to the absence of current or accumulated earnings or profits is not a complete discontinuance of contributions within the meaning of section 411(d)(3) of the Code in a situation in which the employer is required to resume contributions as soon as it does have profits; Rev. Rul. 74-419 superseded.

EXEMPT ORGANIZATIONS

T.D. 7692, page 10.

Amendments to the regulations under section 528 of the Code relate to the qualification of homeowners associations.

ESTATE TAX

Rev. Rul. 80-148, page 17.

Formula marital deduction clause; pre-1977 will. An individual executed a will containing a maximum formula marital deduction clause in 1975, transferred $210,000 to the spouse in 1977, died in 1978, and left an adjusted gross estate valued at $300,000. The will was not amended after 1976, and the decedent's state of residence has not enacted a statute construing formula marital deduction clauses with respect to the provisions in the Tax Reform Act of 1976. The estate is allowed a marital deduction for the entire $210,000.

EMPLOYMENT TAXES

Rev. Rul. 80-149, page 18.

Transportation services; transit authority. A transit authority was created as a political subdivision of a state in 1965. The authority covered its employees for social security purposes by means of an agreement with HEW under section 218 of the Social Security Act. In 1972 the authority acquired a private transit company, which was its first acquisition from private ownership of any part of its system, and all of the company's employees became employees of the authority. At the time of the acquisition there was no general retirement system covering the employees of the authority, and the services performed by all of its employees became "covered transportation service" within the meaning of section 3121(j) of the Code.

EXCISE TAXES

T.D. 7694, page 19.

Temporary regulations relate to withholding and depositing of windfall profit tax when the producer is an integrated oil company.

Announcement Relating to Decisions of the Tax Court

It is the policy of the Internal Revenue Service to announce in the Internal Revenue Bulletin at the earliest practicable date the determination of the Commissioner to acquiesce or not acquiesce in a decision of the Tax Court which disallows a deficiency in tax determined by the Commissioner to be due.

Notice that the Commissioner has acquiesced or nonacquiesced in a decision of the Tax Court relates only to the issue or issues decided adversely to the Government.

Actions of acquiescences in adverse decisions shall be relied on by Revenue officers and others concerned as conclusions of the Service only to the application of the law to the facts in the particular case. Caution should be exercised in extending the application of the decision to a similar case unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same, and consideration should be given to the effect of new legislation, regulations, and rulings as well as subsequent court decisions and actions thereon.

Acquiescence in a decision means acceptance by the Service of the conclusion reached, and does not necessarily mean acceptance and approval of any or all of the reasons assigned by the Court for its conclusions.

No announcements are made in the Bulletin with respect to memorandum opinions of the Tax Court.

The announcements published in the weekly Internal Revenue Bulletins are consolidated semiannually and annually. The semiannual consolidation appears in the first Bulletin for July and in the Cumulative Bulletin for the first half of the year and the annual consolidation appears in the first Bulletin for the following January and in the Cumulative Bulletin for the last half of the year.

The Commissioner ACQUIESCES in the following decisions:

Taxpayer	Docket No.	Report
Bolnick, Ted, et ux[1]	3503-62	44	245

Section 61.—Gross Income Defined

26 CFR 1.61-7: Interest.

Whether unearned discount on a municipal bond that was redeemed prior to maturity is exempt from tax. See Rev. Rul. 80-143, below.

Section 103.—Interest on Certain Governmental Obligations

(Also Sections 61, 7805; 1.61-7, 301.7805-1.)

Municipal bonds redeemed prior to maturity; discount. Unearned original issue discount received upon redemption of municipal bonds before maturity is not interest income excludable from gross income under section 103(a)(1) of the Code but is gain from the sale or exchange of a capital asset. The provisions of this revenue ruling will not be applied to municipal obligations issued prior to June 9, 1980. Rev. Rul. 72-587 modified.

Rev. Rul. 80-143

ISSUE

Is the unearned portion of original issue discount received upon redemption of municipal bonds before maturity interest income that is excludable from the gross income of the bondholder under the provisions of section 103(a)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code?

FACTS

An individual taxpayer acquired a 20-year, 6-percent municipal bond with a face amount of $1,000 for a price of $800 on the date of issue, January 2, 1969. The $200 discount ($1,000 less $800) was original issue discount. At the time the bond was issued, the issuer had no intention of redeeming the bond before maturity. The terms of the bond provided that it was callable at its face amount 10 years after the issue date. The bond was not an industrial development bond within the meaning of section 103(b)(2) of the Code or an arbitrage bond described in section 103(c)(2).

On January 2, 1979, the issuer redeemed the bond for its face amount of $1,000 plus accrued annual interest of $60. The bond qualified as a capital asset as defined in section 1221 of the Code during the period held by the taxpayer.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 103(a)(1) of the Code provides that gross income does not include interest on an obligation of a state or political subdivision of a state.

Rev. Rul. 73-112, 1973-1 C.B. 47, holds that the discount at which obligations described in section 103(a)(1) of the Code are originally issued (original issue discount), whether they are interest bearing or not, is treated as tax-exempt interest income apportioned ratably over the term of the obligations. It further states that this tax-exempt income is apportioned among the original holders of the obligations and subsequent purchasers and each respective holder is entitled to treat as exempt from federal income tax that proportion of the amount of the discount at which the obligations were issued that the number of days (computed on an actual calendar day basis) the obligations were owned by him bears to the total number of days from the date of issuance of the obligation to the date of maturity.

Rev. Rul. 72-587, 1972-2 C.B. 74, holds that when bonds described in section 103(a)(1) of the Code are redeemed prior to maturity the amount designated as "discount" may be classified as earned discount and unearned discount. Although not defined in Rev. Rul. 72-587, the term "earned discount" referred to the proportion of original issue discount that under the principles of Rev. Rul. 73-112, would have been considered as interest to the holder of the bonds if they were sold instead of redeemed. Rev. Rul. 72-587 concludes that both earned and unearned discount are tax-exempt interest.

Section 1232(a)(2)(B)(ii) of the Code provides that on the sale, exchange or redemption before maturity (see section 1232(a)(1)) of bonds issued by a government or political subdivision thereof and held by the taxpayer more than 1 year, any gain realized that does not exceed an amount that bears the same ratio to the original issue discount as the number of complete months that the bond was held by the taxpayer bears to the number of complete months from the date of original issue to the date of maturity, shall be considered ordinary income if at the time of issuance there was no intention to call the bonds before maturity. Gain in excess of such amount shall be considered gain from the sale or exchange of a capital asset held more than one year.

Section 1232(a)(2)(C)(i) of the Code provides that the provisions of section 1232(a)(2) do not apply to obligations the interest on which is not includable in gross income under section 103.

Congress' intent in enacting section 1232(a)(2)(B)(ii) was to distinguish between the portion of proceeds received upon the sale, exchange or retirement of an obligation that represented interest income and the portion that represented capital gain. See H. Rep. No. 1337, 83d Cong., 2d Sess. 83, A276 (1954); S. Rep. No. 1622, 83d Cong., 2d Sess. 112, 434 (1954).

In three cases dealing with the treatment of original issue discount under the Internal Revene Code of 1939, but decided after the enactment of section 1232(a)(2) of the 1954 Code, the courts' conclusions as to the portion of original issue discount that represented interest were consistent with the rules contained in section 1232(a)(2)(B)(ii). In United States v. Midland-Ross Corporation, 381 U.S. 54 (1965), 1965-2 C.B. 474, the Supreme Court of the United States held that earned original issue discount on promissory notes issued by a private corporation must be treated as interest taxable as ordinary income upon the sale of such notes. The Court stated that earned discount was unlike capital appreciation because it is earned in a "predict-able and measurable" manner. 381 U.S. at 57.

In Leavin v. Commissioner, 37 TC. 766 (1962) the Tax Court of the United States concluded that the entire original issue discount was interest income where the facts indicated that at the time of issuance of certain debentures with a 6-year maturity there had been an understanding between the issuer and the purchaser that the debentures would be redeemed as soon as the issuer had completed and marketed the project for which the debentures provided financing.

In Bolnick v. Commissioner, 44 T.C. 245 (1965), acq. on this issue, page 5, this Bulletin, withdrawing nonacq., 1967-1 C.B. 3, the Tax Court of the United States held that only the earned portion of original issue discount on corporate debentures redeemed before maturity was interest income and the remainder was capital gain. The court found that there had not been any understanding that the debentures would be redeemed before maturity. The court specifically noted that although section 1232(a)(2) of the Code was not applicable, it evidenced "congressional recognition of the distinction between the situation in which there is no plan for early redemption and that in which there is an understanding that debentures will be redeemed prior to maturity." 44 T.C. at 256.

On the basis of the cases discussed above, it may reasonably be concluded that the rules contained in section 1232(a)(2)(B)(ii) of the Code are consistent with the definition of interest as "compensation for the use or forbearance of money." Deputy v. duPont, 308 U.S. 488, 498 (1940), 1940-1 C.B. 118, 122. There is no reason why amounts that are not treated as interest under section 1232(a)(2)(B)(ii) should be treated as interest for purposes of section 103(a). Compare Rev. Rul. 119, 1953-2 C.B. 95. Accordingly, upon the redemption before maturity of an obligation described in section 103(a)(1), only the earned portion of original issue discount will be treated as tax-exempt interest.

In this case the issuer redeemed the bond after it had been held by the taxpayer for 120 months. Therefore, $100, representing one-half (120 months/240 months) of the original issue discount is interest earned during the period the municipal bond was held by the taxpayer. Such interest is excludable from the gross income of the taxpayer pursuant to the provisions of section 103(a)(1) of the Code. The $60 of annual accrued interest also is excludable from gross income. The $100 unearned portion of the original issue discount does not represent interest earned on the bonds during the period they were held by the taxpayer.

HOLDING

The $100 unearned portion of the original issue discount is not interest income excludable from the gross income of the taxpayer under the provisions of section 103(a)(1) of the Code. Such amount is gain from the sale or exchange of a capital asset held for more than one year.

EFFECT ON OTHER DOCUMENTS

To the extent that Rev. Rul. 72-587 holds that the unearned discount on state bonds that were redeemed before maturity is interest that is excludable from the gross income of the bondholder, such revenue ruling is modified.

PROSPECTIVE APPLICATION

Pursuant to the authority contained in section 7805(b) of the Code, the conclusions of this revenue ruling will not be applied to municipal obligations issued prior to June 9, 1980, the date this revenue ruling is published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin.

Rev. Rul. 80-144

ISSUE

Are certain foreign taxes paid by a foreign corporation available to an acquiring domestic corporation for foreign tax credit purposes as a result of a reorganization under section 368(a)(1)(D) of the Internal Revenue Code?

FACTS

P, a foreign corporation, owns all the stock of corporations S-1 and S-2. S-1 is a foreign corporation that is incorporated in country X and engaged in trading, syndicating and investing in foreign notes and loans with third parties in the United States. S-2 is a domestic corporation engaged in the banking business in the United States. S-1 is not subject to any income tax in country X. S-1 is a holder of notes from obligors in country Y from which S-1 derives foreign source interest income. S-1 is engaged in the active conduct of a financing business within the United States within the meaning of section 864 of the Code and all of its income, including the interest on the foreign notes, is effectively connected with that United States business. It files its United States returns on a calendar year basis. Country Y, which has no tax treaty with the United States, taxes interest received by financial entities domiciled outside country Y from business concerns resident within Country Y.

In January 1976, for valid business reasons, S-1 transferred substantially all of its properties to S-2 solely in exchange for additional stock in S-2. S-1 distributed the S-2 stock to P, and then S-1 dissolved. The transaction was a nondivisive reorganization under section 368(a)(1)(D) of the Code because it met the requirements of section 354(b)(1)(A) and (B). Because the transaction is of a type described in section 367(b), the notice requirement of section 7.367(b)-1(c) of the Temporary Income Tax Regulations under the Tax Reform Act of 1976 were complied with by S-1 in a timely manner.

In the years preceding the transfer, S-1 was required to pay income tax to country Y with respect to interest income it earned on the notes it held that originated in Country Y. This tax qualified as an income tax within the meaning of section 901 of the Code. S-1 and S-2 have always computed their respective section 904 limitations on the foreign tax credit under the overall limitation method. As of the date of the transfer, S-1 had paid foreign taxes for 1975 for which it had not taken a United States tax credit for foreign taxes.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 901(a) and (b)(1) of the Code provides that a domestic corporation may claim a credit against the tax imposed by chapter 1 of the Code for income taxes paid or accrued to foreign countries.

Section 901(b)(4) of the Code provides that in the case of foreign corporations, the amount determined pursuant to section 906 shall be allowed as the credit under subsection (a), subject to the provisions of section 904.

Section 906(a) of the Code provides that a foreign corporation engaged in a trade or business within the United States during the taxable year shall be allowed a credit under section 901, subject to certain limitations contained in section 906(b) that are not here relevant, for the amount of any income, war profits, and excess profits taxes paid or accrued during the taxable year to any foreign country with respect to income effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States.

Section 904(c) of the Code provides that to the extent taxes paid or accrued to foreign countries exceed the limitations under section 904(a), such taxes may be carried back to certain preceding taxable years or carried forward to certain succeeding taxable years in accordance with the rules described therein.

Section 904(d)(1)(A) of the Code provides that the provisions of subsections (a), (b), and (c) of section 904 shall be applied separately with respect to the interest income described in section 904(d)(2). Section 904(d)(2)(B) provides that the interest income described in section 904(d) is interest other than interest derived in the conduct by the taxpayer of a banking, financing, or similar business.

Section 381(a)(2) of the Code provides that in acquisitions described in section 381(a), such as a reorganization within the meaning of section 368(a)(1)(D) (but only if the requirements of subparagraphs (A) and (B) of section 354(b)(1) are met), the acquiring corporation shall succeed to and take account of the items described in section 381(c). Unused foreign tax credits is not one of the items listed in section 381(c).

Since unused foreign tax credits is not listed in section 381(c) of the Code, the Service, prior to the effective date of section 383, continued to apply certain restrictions developed under pre-1954 Code case law in determining whether unused foreign tax credits could be carried over in reorganizations under the 1954 Code. Thus, Rev. Rul. 68-350, 1968-2 C.B. 159, provides that any foreign taxes for which a United States tax credit has not been taken that belong to a domestic transferor corporation involved in a statutory merger under section 368(a)(1)(A) may be carried over by an acquiring corporation to a post-merger taxable year of the acquiring corporation. However, Rev. Rul. 68-350 also provides that the foreign taxes carried over by the acquiring corporation can only be credited against United States income taxes imposed on the foreign taxable income of the acquiring corporation attributable to the pre-fusion business of the transferor corporation. This restriction on the carryover of foreign tax credits is based on Libson Shops v. Koehler, 353 U.S. 382 (1957), 1957-2 C.B. 891, which involved the carryover of a net operating loss in a reorganization under the 1939 Code.

Rev. Rul. 72-452, 1972-2 C.B. 438, applies the holding in Rev. Rul. 68-350 to a reorganization described in section 368(a)(1)(C) of the Code. Rev. Rul. 68-350 and Rev. Rul. 72-452 involve the carryover of foreign tax credits in reorganizations occurring prior to the effective date of section 383. Section 383 applies to carryovers of unused foreign tax credits in cases of reorganizations described in section 381(a)(2) occurring after December 10, 1971, pursuant to a plan of reorganization or contract entered into on or after September 29, 1971.

Section 383 of the Code provides that if, in the case of a reorganization specified in section 381(a)(2), there is a change in ownership described in section 382(b)(1)(B), then the limitations provided in section 382 in such cases with respect to net operating losses shall apply in the same manner with respect to any excess foreign taxes of the corporation which can otherwise be carried forward under section 904(c).

By enacting section 383 of the Code, Congress has preempted the application of pre-1954 Code case law in determining whether unused foreign tax credits may be carried over by the acquiring corporation in reorganizations described in section 381(a)(2) occurring after the effective date of section 383. See section 1.383-3(b)(1) of the Income Tax Regulations, which provides that the unused foreign tax credit carried over by the acquiring corporation is to be determined in accordance with the principles of section 381(c)(23) and the regulations thereunder (relating to the carryover of unused investment credit).

Rev. Rul. 58-603, 1958-2 C.B. 147, provides that the Service will not apply the Libson Shops principle to transactions described in section 381(a) to disallow the carryover of net operating losses. The rationale underlying this ruling was that the enactment of section 381 had preempted pre-1954 Code case law on this point. Similarly, section 383 preempted prior law regarding certain carryovers of foreign tax credits. Therefore, Rev. Rul. 68-350, Rev. Rul. 72-452, and the Libson Shops principle no longer apply to the carryover of unused foreign tax credits with respect to reorganizations described in section 381(a)(2) occurring after the 1971 effective date of section 383. Consequently, the amount of a transferor corporation's unused foreign tax credit that the acquiring corporation in such reorganizations can use is no longer limited to the amount of United States income tax imposed on the foreign taxable income of the acquiring corporation attributable to the continuation of the transferor's pre-fusion business.

For reorganizations described in section 381(a)(2) of the Code and thus section 383, section 1.383-3(b)(2) of the regulations provides rules for computing the amount of the reduction in the carryover of unused foreign taxes if section 382 requires a reduction. However, because immediately before the reorganization P owned all the stock of corporations S-1 and S-2 within the meaning of section 382(b)(3), sections 382(b)(1) and 383 do not require a reduction in S-1's unused foreign taxes that can be carried over by S-2.

HOLDING

As a result of the nondivisive section 368(a)(1)(D) reorganization, any unused foreign income taxes of S-1 may be used by S-2 in computing its foreign tax credit under section 901(a) of the Code, subject to the limitations of section 904.

EFFECT ON OTHER DOCUMENTS

Rev. Rul. 68-350 and Rev. Rul. 72-452 are obsoleted in the case of reorganizations described in section 381(a)(2) occurring after December 10, 1971, pursuant to a plan of reorganization or contract entered into on or after September 29, 1971.

Section 404.—Deduction for Contributions of an Employer to an Employees' Trust or Annuity Plan and Compensation Under a Deferred-Payment Plan

26 CFR 1.404(a)-9: Contributions of an employer to an employees' profit-sharing or stock bonus trust that meets the requirements of section 401(a); application of section 404(a)(3)(A).

Profit-sharing; contributions; deduction limitation. In determining the deduction limitations under section 404(a)(3)(A) and (a)(7) of the Code for employer contributions to a qualified profit-sharing plan, including the computation of credit carryovers and contribution carryovers, the definition of compensation provided in sections 1.404(a)-9(b) and 1.404(a)-13(a) of the regulations applies regardless of the definition of compensation used in the plan; Rev. Rul. 71-542 superseded.

Rev. Rul. 80-145

The purpose of this revenue ruling is to restate Rev. Rul. 71-542, 1971-2 C.B. 214, pursuant to the enactment of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, Pub. L. 93-406, 1974-3 C.B. 1.

The issue presented in Rev. Rul. 71-542 is whether, in determining the deduction limitations for contributions under a qualified profit-sharing plan, including the computation of credit and contribution carryovers, the definition of compensation provided in section 1.404(a)-9(b) of the Income Tax Regulations applies regardless of the definition used in the plan.

A qualified profit-sharing plan provides that annual contributions thereunder shall be limited to profits, but shall not exceed a specified percentage of the participants' compensation. "Compensation" is defined in the plan to mean basic pay, exclusive of bonuses, commissions, and overtime.

Section 404(a)(3)(A) of the Internal Revenue Code limits the deduction for contributions under a qualified profit-sharing plan to fifteen percent of compensation otherwise paid or accrued during the taxable year to all employees under the plan except for years to which credit carryovers are available, in which case the deduction may be as high as twenty-five percent. For purposes of applying the limitations of section 404(a)(3) of the Code, section 1.404(a)-9(b) of the regulations defines "compensation otherwise paid or accrued" to mean all of the compensation paid or accrued except that for which a deduction is allowable under a plan that qualifies under section 401(a) of the Code. Section 404(a)(7) of the Code and section 1.404(a)-13(a) of the regulations also contain limits on deductions that use the same definition of compensation.

Accordingly, for purposes of determining the deduction limitations under section 404(a)(3)(A) and (a)(7) of the Code, including the computation of credit carryovers and contribution carryovers, the definition of compensation set forth in sections 1.404(a)-9(b) and 1.404(a)-13(a) of the regulations applies regardless of the definition of compensation used in the plan.

Rev. Rul. 71-542 is superseded because the position stated therein is updated and restated in this revenue ruling.

Section 411.—Minimum Vesting Standards

26 CFR 1.411(d)-2: Termination or partial termination; discontinuance of contributions.
(Also Section 401; 1.401-1.)

Profit-sharing; contributions; discontinuance. The failure of an employer to make contributions to its profit-sharing plan for five consecutive years due solely to the absence of current or accumulated earnings or profits is not a complete discontinuance of contributions within the meaning of section 411(d)(3) of the Code in a situation in which the employer is required to resume contributions as soon as it does have profits; Rev. Rul. 74-419 superseded.

Rev. Rul. 80-146

The purpose of this revenue ruling is to restate the position of Rev. Rul. 74-419, 1974-2 C.B. 135, in view of the enactment of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, Pub. L. 93-406, 1974-3 C.B. 1.

The issue to be considered is whether, under the circumstances described below, employer contributions were completely discontinued within the meaning of section 411(d)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code.

A corporation established a profit-sharing plan that met the requirements for qualification under section 401(a) of the Code. The plan provides for annual employer contributions of 15 percent of the participants' compensation to be made from the employer's current or accumulated profits. During each of the first three years of the plan's existence, the corporation contributed, out of its profits, 15 percent of the participating employees' annual compensation. For the next five years, however, the corporation sustained net operating losses. As a result of these losses, the corporation had no current or accumulated profits at the end of any of those five years. No contributions were made to the profit-sharing plan during the five-year period. The plan requires the employer to resume contributions as soon as it has profits.

Section 411(d)(3 of the Code provides that in the case of a plan to which section 412 does not apply, such as a profit-sharing plan, the plan must provide that upon complete discontinuance of contributions under the plan the rights of all employees to benefits accrued to the date of such discontinuance, to the extent then funded, or the amounts credited to the employees' accounts, are nonforfeitable.

Section 1.401-1(b)(1)(ii) of the Income Tax Regulations states that a profit-sharing plan is a plan established and maintained by an employer to provide for participation in profits by employees or their beneficiaries. Section 1.401-1(b)(2) provides that, in the case of a profit-sharing plan, it is not necessary that the employer contribute every year or that it contribute the same amount or contribute in accordance with the same ratio every year. To be a profit-sharing plan, there must be recurring and substantial contributions out of profits for the employees.

Section 1.411(d)-2(d)(1) of the regulations provides that whether a complete discontinuance of contributions has occurred will depend on the facts and circumstances in the particular case.

The regulations require that contributions to a profit-sharing plan be made out of profits. Failure by an employer to make contributions solely because there are no current or accumulated profits does not constitute a discontinuance of contributions in a situation where it is reasonable to expect profits to exist in future years.

In this case, failure to make plan contributions was due solely to the absence of current or accumulated profits. In addition, the plan requires the employer to resume contributions as soon as it has profits.

Accordingly, in the instant case, there was not a complete discontinuance of contributions by the employer under the profit-sharing plan within the meaning of section 411(d)(3) of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 74-419 is superseded because the position stated therein is restated under current law in this revenue ruling.

Section 528.—Certain Homeowners Associations

26 CFR 1.528-1: Homeowners associations.

T.D. 7692 [1]

TITLE 26.—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER I, SUBCHAPTER A, PART 1.—INCOME TAX; TAXABLE YEARS BEGINNING AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1953; PART 7.—TEMPORARY INCOME TAX REGULATIONS UNDER THE TAX REFORM ACT OF 1976

Homeowners associations

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Final regulations.

SUMMARY: This document provides final regulations relating to homeowners associations. Changes to the applicable tax law were made by the Tax Reform Act of 1976 [Pub. L. 94-455, 1976-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1]. These regulations provide necessary guidance to the public to determine whether a particular organization qualifies as a homeowners association. If an organization qualifies as a homeowners association, its tax liability may be reduced as a result of the new provision under the Act.

DATE: The regulations are effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1973.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

On January 9, 1979, the Federal Register published proposed amendments to the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) under section 528 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (44 FR 1985). The amendments were proposed to conform the regulations to section 2101(a) of the Tax Reform Act of 1976 (90 Stat. 1897). After consideration of all comments regarding the proposed amendments, those amendments are adopted as revised by this Treasury decision.

[1] This publication of the Treasury Decision contains the complete text of amendments to the regulations. The instructions for modifying the notice of proposed rulemaking have been omitted.

EXPLANATION OF THE REGULATIONS

For taxable years beginning after December 31, 1973, howeowners associations described in section 528 of the Code may elect to be subject to the tax imposed by section 528 and to be otherwise exempt from Federal income taxes. To be considered a homeowners association an organization must be either a condominium management association or a residential real estate management association and must meet a number of specific additional requirements. Cooperative housing corporations are not eligible to be treated as homeowners associations.

For an organization to qualify as a homeowners association it must be organized and operated to provide for the acquisition, construction, management, maintenance, and care of association property. In addition, a homeowners association must meet both a source of income test (which generally requires that at least 60 percent of its gross income consists of membership dues, fees, or assessments from members of the association) and an expenditure test (which generally requires that at least 90 percent of its expenditures be in furtherance of its exempt purposes). If an association meets the required tests and makes the election under section 528, it will not be taxable on that portion of its income which consists of dues, fees, and assessments from its members. To the extent that a homeowners association does have taxable income, it will be taxed (with certain modifications described in section 528 and these regulations) as a corporation taxable under section 11.

ADDITIONAL CONSIDERATIONS

These regulations are needed in order to provide guidance to the public as well as government employees responsible for the implementation of section 528 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. Considering both the direct and indirect effects of these regulations, it is believed that they satisfactorily implement section 2101(a) of the Tax Reform Act of 1976. These regulations do not institute new recordkeeping or recording burdens. Evaluation of the effectiveness of the regulations after issuance will be based upon comments received from offices within the Internal Revenue Service and the Treasury Department, other govermental agencies, State and local governments, and the public.

PUBLIC COMMENTS

A number of comments were received which suggested that the provisions relating to the use for residential purposes are too restrictive. This has not resulted in any change to the regulations because it is felt that such a change would be in conflict with the statute.

A suggestion was made that § 1.528-8(e) should be amended to provide that organizations exempt under section 501(c)(4) may not have their exempt status revoked retroactively, just prospectively. The standards for revoking an organization's exempt status are beyond the scope of the proposed regulations. Section 1.528-8(e) simply permits an organization whose exempt status has been revoked retroactively to make a timely election under section 528.

Another criticism of the proposed regulations was that they did not adequately take into account the existence of separate subdivisions within the same homeowners association. The final regulations permit the use of association property to be allocated to certain members of the association provided that all members are treated in an equitable manner and have access to comparable facilities. The final regulations require equal access to the same or comparable property because the legislative history indicates that this was the intent of Congress.

Comments were also received which suggested that the final regulations provide that investment income and income from unrelated activities not be taxed. The final regulations do not reflect these suggestions because to do so would be inconsistent with the statute.

Finally, comments were received which suggested changes that either conflicted with the express statutory language or would have made the regulations unreasonably long and complex. Those suggestions were rejected.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of these regulations is Phoebe A. Mix of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulations, both on matters of substance and style.

Adoption of the regulations

Accordingly 26 CFR Part 1 and Part 7 are amended as follows:

Paragraph 1. The following sections are inserted in the appropriate places:

(a) In general. Section 528 only applies to taxable years of homeowners associations beginning after December 31, 1973. To qualify as a homeowners association an organization must either be a condominium management association or a residential real estate management association. For the purposes of section 528 and the regulations under that section, the term "homeowners association" shall refer only to an organization described in section 528. Cooperative housing corporations and organizations based on a similar form of ownership are not eligible to be taxed as homeowners associations. As a general rule, membership in either a condominium management association or a residential real estate management association is confined to the developers and the owners of the units, residences, or lots. Furthermore, membership in either type of association is normally required as a condition of such ownership. However, if the membership of an organization consists of other homeowners associations, the owners of units, residences, or lots who are members of such other homeowners associations will be treated as the members of the organization for the purposes of the regulations under section 528.

(b) Condominium. The term "condominium" means an interest in real property consisting of an undivided interest in common in a portion of a parcel of real property (which may be a fee simple estate or an estate for years, such as a leasehold or subleasehold) together with a separate interest in space in a building located on such property. An interest in property is not a condominium unless the undivided interests in the common elements are vested in the unit holders. In addition, a condominium must meet the requirements of applicable state or local law relating to condominiums or horizontal property regimes.

(c) Residential real estate management association. Residential real estate management associations are normally composed of owners of single-family residential units located in a subdivision, development, or similar area. However, they may also include as members owners of multiple-family dwelling units located in such areas. They are commonly formed to administer and enforce covenants relating to the architecture and appearance of the real estate development as well as to perform certain maintenance duties relating to common areas.

(d) Tenants. Tenants will not be considered members for purposes of meeting the source of income test under section 528(c)(1)(B) and § 1.528-5. However, the fact that tenants of members of a homeowners association are permitted to be members of the association will not disqualify an association under section 528(c)(1) if it otherwise meets the requirements of section 528(c) and these regulations.

§ 1.528-2 Organized and operated to provide for the acquisition, construction, management, maintenance and care of association property.

(a) Organized and operated—(1) Organized. To be treated as a homeowners association an organization must be organized and operated primarily for the purpose of carrying on one or more of the exempt functions of a homeowners association. For the purposes of section 528 and these regulations, the exempt functions of a homeowners association are the acquisition, construction, management, maintenance, and care of association property. In determining whether an organization is organized and operated primarily to carry on one or more exempt functions, all the facts and circumstances of each case shall be considered. For example, when an organization provides in its articles of organization that its sole purpose is to carry on one or more exempt functions, in the absence of other relevant factors it will be considered to have met the organizational test. (The term "articles of organization" means the organization's corporate charter, trust instruments, articles of association or other instruments by which it is created.)

(2) Operated. An organization will be treated as being operated for the purpose of carrying on one or more of the exempt functions of a homeowners association if it meets the provisions of § 1.528-5 and § 1.528-6.

(b) Terms to be interpreted according to common meaning and usage. As used in section 528 and these regulations, the terms acquisition, construction, management, maintenance, and care are to be interpreted according to their common meaning and usage. For example, maintenance of association property includes the painting and repairing of such property as well as the gardening and janitorial services associated with its upkeep. Similarly, the term "construction" of association property includes covenants or other rules for preserving the architectural and general appearance of the area. The term also includes regulations relating to the location, color and allowable building materials to be used in all structures. (For the definition of association property see § 1.528-3.)

§ 1.528-3 Association property.

(a) Property owned by the organization. "Association property" includes real and personal property owned by the organization or owned as tenants in common by the members of the organization. Such property must be available for the common benefit of all members of the organization and must be of a nature that tends to enhance the beneficial enjoyment of the private residences by their owners. If two or more facilities or items of property of a similar nature are owned by a homeowners association, and if the use of any particular facility or item is restricted to fewer than all association members, such facilities or items nevertheless will be considered association property if all association members are treated equitably and have similar rights with respect to comparable items or facilities. Among the types of property that ordinarily will be considered association property are swimming pools and tennis courts. On the other hand, facilities or areas set aside for the use of nonmembers, or in fact used primarily by nonmembers, are not association property for the purposes of this section. For example, property owned by an organization for the purpose of leasing it to groups consisting primarily of nonmembers to be used as a meeting place or a retreat will not be considered association property.

(b) Property normally owned by a governmental unit. "Association property" also includes areas and facilities traditionally recognized and accepted as being of direct governmental concern in the exercise of the powers and duties entrusted to governments to regulate community health, safety and welfare. Such areas and facilities would normally include roadways, parklands, sidewalks, streetlights and firehouses. Property described in this paragraph will be considered association property regardles of whether it is owned by the organization itself, by its members as tenants in common or by a governmental unit and used for the benefit of the residents of such unit including the members of the organization.

(c) Privately owned property. "Association property" may also include property owned privately by members of the organization. However, to be so included the condition of such property must affect the overall appearance or structure of the residential units which make up the organization. Such property may include the exterior walls and roofs of privately owned residences as well as the lawn and shrubbery on privately owned land and any other privately owned property the appearance of which may directly affect the appearance of the entire organization. However, privately owned property will not be considered association property unless—

(1) There is a covenant or similar requirement relating to exterior appearance or maintenance that applies on the same basis to all such property (or to a reasonable classification of such property);

(2) There is a pro rata mandatory assessment (at least once a year) on all members of the association for maintaining such property; and

(3) Membership in the organization is a condition of ownership of such property.

§ 1.528-4 Substantially test.

(a) In general. In order for an organization to be considered a condominimum management association or a residential real estate management association (and therefore in order for it to be considered a homeowners association), substantially all of its units, lots or buildings must be used by individuals for residences. For the purposes of applying paragraph (b) or (c) of this section, an organization which has attributes of both a condominium management association and a residential real estate management association shall be considered that association which, based on all the facts and circumstances, it more closely resembles. In addition, those paragraphs shall be applied based on conditions existing on the last day of the organization's taxable year.

(b) Condominium management associations. Substantially all of the units of a condominium management association will be considered as used by individuals for residences if at least 85% of the total square footage of all units within the project is used by individuals for residential purposes. If a completed unit has never been occupied, it will nonetheless be considered as used for residential purposes if, based on all the facts and circumstances, it appears to have been constructed for use as a residence. Similarly, a unit which is not occupied but which has been in the past will be considered as used for residential purposes if, based on all the facts and circumstances, it appears that it was constructed for use as a residence, and the last individual to occupy it did in fact use it as a residence. Units which are used for purposes auxiliary to residential use (such as laundry areas, swimming pools, tennis courts, storage rooms and areas used by maintenance personnel) shall be considered used for residential purposes.

(c) Residential Real Estate Management Associations. Substantially all of the lots or buildings of a residential real estate management association (including unimproved lots) will be considered as used by individuals as residences if at least 85% of the lots are zoned for residential purposes. Lots shall be treated as zoned for residential purposes even if under such zoning lots may be used for parking spaces, swimming pools, tennis courts, schools, fire stations, libraries, churches and other similar purposes which are auxiliary to residential use. However, commercial shopping areas (and their auxiliary parking areas) are not lots zoned for residential purposes.

(d) Exception. Notwithstanding any other provisions of this section, a unit, or building will not be considered used for residential purposes, if for more than one-half the days in the association's taxable year, such unit, or building is occupied by a persons or series of persons, each of whom so occupies such unit, or building for less than 30 days.

§ 1.528-5 Source of income test.

An organization cannot qualify as a homeowners association under section 528 for a taxable year unless 60 percent or more of its gross income for such taxable year is exempt function income as defined in § 1.528-9. The determination of whether an organization meets the provisions of this section shall be made after the close of the organization's taxable year.

(a) In general. An organization cannot qualify as a homeowners association under section 528 for a taxable year unless 90 percent or more of its expenditures for such taxable year are qualifying expenditures as defined in paragraphs (b) and (c) of this section. The determination of whether an organization meets the provisions of this section shall be made after the close of the organization's taxable year. Investments or transfers of funds to be held to meet future costs shall not be taken into account as expenditures. For example, transfers to a sinking fund account for the replacement of a roof would not be considered an expenditure for the purposes of this section even if the roof is association property. In addition, excess assessments which are either rebated to members or applied against the members' following year's assessments will not be considered an expenditure for the purposes of this section.

(b) Qualifying expenditures. Qualifying expenditures are expenditures by an organization for the acquisition, construction, management, maintenance, and care of the organization's association property. They include both current operating and capital expenditures on association property. Qualifying expenditures include expenditures on association property despite the fact that such property may produce income which is not exempt function income. Thus expenditures on a swimming pool are qualifying expenditures despite the fact that fees from guests of members using the pool are not exempt function income. Where expenditures by an organization are used both for association property as well as other property, an allocation shall be made between the two uses on a reasonable basis. Only that portion of the expenditures which is properly allocable to the acquisition, construction, management, maintenance or care of association property, shall constitute qualifying expenditures.

(c) Examples of qualifying expenditures. Qualifying expenditures may include (but are not limited to) expenditures for—

(1) Salaries of an association manager and secretary;

(2) Paving of streets;

(3) Street signs;

(4) Security personnel;

(5) Legal fees;

(6) Upkeep of tennis courts;

(7) Swimming pools;

(8) Recreation rooms and halls;

(9) Replacement of common buildings, facilities, air conditioning, etc.;

(10) Insurance premiums on association property;

(11) Accountant's fees;

(12) Improvement of private property to the extent it is association property; and

(13) Real estate and personal property taxes imposed on association property by a State or local government.

§ 1.528-7 Inurement.

An organization is not a homeowners association if any part of its net earnings inures (other than as a direct result of its engaging in one or more exempt functions) to the benefit of any private person. Thus, to the extent that members receive a benefit from the general maintenance, etc. of association property, this benefit generally would not constitute inurement. If an organization pays rebates from amounts other than exempt function income, such rebates will constitute inurement. In general, in determining whether an organization is in violation of this section, the principles used in making similar determinations under section 501(c) will be applied.

§ 1.528-8 Election to be treated as a homeowners association.

(a) General rule. An organization wishing to be treated as a homeowners association under section 528 and this section for a taxable year must elect to be so treated. Except as otherwise provided in this section, such election shall be made by the filing of a properly completed Form 1120-H (or such other form as the Secretary may prescribe). A separate election must be made for each taxable year.

(b) Taxable years ending after December 30, 1976. For taxable years ending after December 30, 1976, the election must be made not later than the time, including extensions, for filing an income tax return for the year in which the election is to apply.

(c) Taxable years ending before December 31, 1976, for which a return was filed before January 31, 1977. For taxable years ending before December 31, 1976, for which a return was filed before January 31, 1977, the election must be made not later than the time provided by law for filing a claim for credit or refund of overpayment of taxes for the year in which the election is to apply. Such an election shall be made by filing an amended return on Form 1120-H (or such other form as the Secretary may prescribe).

(d) Taxable years ending before December 31, 1976, for which a return was not filed before January 31, 1977. For taxable years ending before December 31, 1976, for which a return was not filed before January 31, 1977, the election must be made by October 20, 1980. Instead of making such an election in the manner described in paragraph (a) of this section, such an election may be made by a statement attached to the applicable income tax return or amended return for the year in which the election is made. The statement should identify the election being made, the period for which it applies and the taxpayer's basis for making the election.

(e) Revocation of exempt status. If an organization is notified after the close of a taxable year that its exemption for such taxable year under section 501(a) is being revoked retroactively, it may make a timely election under section 528 for such taxable year. Notwithstanding any other provisions of this section, such an election will be considered timely if it is made within 6 months after the date of revocation. The preceding sentence shall apply to revocations made after April 18, 1980. If the revocation was made on or before April 18, 1980, the election will be considered timely if it is made before the expiration of the period for filing a claim for credit or refund for the taxable year for which it is to apply.

(f) Effect of election—(1) Revocation. An election to be treated as an organization described in section 528 is binding on the organization for the taxable year and may not be revoked without the consent of the Commissioner.

(2) Exception. Notwithstanding paragraph (f)(1) of this section, an election under this section may be revoked prior to July 18, 1980. Such a revocation shall be made by filing a statement with the director of the Internal Revenue Service Center with whom the return of the organization for the year in which the revocation is to apply was filed. The statement shall include the following information.

(i) The name of the organization.

(ii) The fact that it is revoking an election made under section 528.

(iii) The taxable year for which the revocation is to apply.

§ 1.528-9 Exempt function income.

(a) General rule. For the purposes of section 528 exempt function income consists solely of income which is attributable to membership dues, fees, or assessments of owners of residential units or residential lots. It is not necessary that the source of income be labeled as membership dues, fees, or assessments. What is important is that such income be derived from owners of residential units or residential lots in their capacity as owner-members rather than in some other capacity such as customers for services. Generally, for the membership dues, fees, or assessments with respect to a residential unit or lot to be exempt function income, the unit must be used for (or the unit or lot must be expected to be used) for residential purposes. However, dues, fees, or assessments paid to an organization by a developer with respect to unfinished or finished but unsold units or lots shall be exempt function income even though the developer does not use the units or lots. If an assessment is more in the nature of a fee for the provision of services in the course of a trade or business than a fee for a common activity undertaken by a collective group of owners for the purpose of enhancing or maintaining the value of their residences, the assessment will not be considered exempt function income to the organization. Furthermore, income attributable to dues, fees, or assessments will not be considered exempt function income unless each member's liability for payment arises solely from membership in the association. Dues, fees, or assessments that are based on the extent, if any, to which a member avails him or herself of a facility or facilities are not exempt function income. For the purposes of section 528, dues, fees, or assessments which are based on the assessed value or size of property will be considered as arising solely as a result of membership in the organization. Regardless of the organization's method of accounting, excess assessments during a taxable year which are either rebated to the members or applied to their future assessments are not considered gross income and therefore will not be considered exempt function income for such taxable year. However, if such excess assessments are applied to a future year's assessments, they will be considered gross income and exempt function income for that future year. In addition, assessments in a taxable year, such as an assessment for a capital improvement, which are not treated as gross income do not enter into the determination of whether the organization meets the source of income test for that taxable year.

(b) Examples of exempt function income. Assessments which are considered more in the nature of a fee for common activity than for the providing of services and which will therefore generally be considered exempt function income include assessments made for the purpose of—

(1) Paying the principal and interest on debts incurred for the acquisition of association property;

(2) Paying real estate taxes on association property;

(3) Maintaining association property;

(4) Removing snow from public areas; and

(5) Removing trash.

(c) Examples of receipts which are not exempt function income. Exempt function income does not include—

(1) Amounts which are not includible in the organization's gross income other than by reason of section 528 (for example, tax-exempt interest);

(2) Amounts received from persons who are not members of the association;

(3) Amounts received from members for special use of the organization's facilities, the use of which is not available to all members as a result of having paid the dues, fees or assessments required to be paid by all members;

(4) Interest earned on amounts set aside in a sinking fund;

(5) Amounts received for work done on privately owned property which is not association property; or

(6) Amounts received from members in return for their transportation to or from shopping areas, work location, etc.

(d) Special Rule. Notwithstanding paragraph (a) and (c)(3) of this section, amounts received from members or from tenants of residential units owned by members (notwithstanding § 1.528-1(d)) for special use of an association's facilities will be considered exempt function income if—

(1) The amounts paid by the members are not paid more than once in any 12 month period; and

(2) The privilege obtained from the payment of such amounts lasts for the entire 12 month period or portion thereof in which the facility is commonly in use.

Thus, amounts received as the result of payments by members of a yearly fee for use of tennis courts or a swimming pool shall be considered exempt function income. However, amounts received for the use of a building for an evening, weekend, week, etc. shall not be considered exempt function income.

§ 1.528-10 Special rules for computation of homeowners association taxable income and tax.

(a) In general. Homeowners association taxable income shall be determined according to the provisions of section 528(d) and the rules set forth in this section.

(b) Limitation on capital losses. If for any taxable year a homeowners association has a net capital loss, the rules of sections 1211(a) and 1212(a) shall apply.

(c) Allowable deductions—(1) In general. To be deductible in computing the unrelated business taxable income of a homeowners association, expenses, depreciation and similar items must not only qualify as items of deduction allowed by chapter 1 of the Code but must also be directly connected with the production of gross income (excluding exempt function income). To be "directly connected with" the production of gross income (excluding exempt function income), an item of deduction must have both proximate and primary relationship to the production of such income and have been incurred in the production of such income. Items of deduction attributable solely to items of gross income (excluding exempt function income) are proximately and primarily related to such income. Whether an item of deduction is incurred in the production of gross income (excluding exempt function income) is determined on the basis of all the facts and circumstances involved in each case.

(2) Dual use of facilities or personnel. Where facilities are used both for exempt functions of the organization and for the production of gross income (excluding exempt function income), expenses, depreciation, and similar items attributable to such facilities (for example, items of overhead) shall be allocated between the two uses on a reasonable basis. Similarly, where personnel are employed both for exempt functions and for the production of gross income (excluding exempt function income), expenses and similar items attributable to such personnel (for example, items of salary) shall be allocated between the two activities on a reasonable basis. The portion of any such item so allocated to the production of gross income (excluding exempt function income) is directly connected with such income and shall be allowable as a deduction in computing homeowners association taxable income to the extent that it qualifies as an item of deduction allowed by chapter 1 of the Code. Thus, for example, assume that X, a homeowners association, pays its manager a salary of $10,000 a year and that it derives gross income other than exempt function income. If 10 percent of the manager's time during the year is devoted to deriving X's gross income (other than exempt function income), a deduction of $1,000 (10 percent of $10,000) would generally be allowable for purposes of computing X's homeowners association taxable income.

(d) Investment credit. A homeowners association is not entitled to an investment credit.

(e) Cross reference. For the definition of exempt function income, see § 1.528-9.

Par. 2. Section 7.0 of this chapter (26 CFR Part 7), promulgated by Treasury Decision 7459, 1977-1 C.B. 587, is hereby revoked to the extent it applies to elections under section 528.

This Treasury decision is issued under the authority contained in section 7805 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (68A Stat. 917; 26 U.S.C. 7805).

Canada; contract carrier; waiver of exemption. A Canadian corporation engaged in business as a contract carrier of goods between points in the U.S. and Canada through a permanent establishment in the U.S. may annually choose whether to include in gross income for federal income tax purposes service income that is effectively connected with its U.S. business and deduct the allocable expenses, even though the income is exempt from federal income tax under a reciprocal provision of Article V of the United States-Canada Income Tax Convention.

Rev. Rul. 80-147

ISSUE

If a tax convention grants a reciprocal exemption for an item of income that otherwise would be subject to federal income tax, can the taxpayer, a foreign corporation, annually choose whether to remain subject to federal income tax on that item?

FACTS

M, a corporation organized in Canada, owns and operates contract carriers. M operates a carrier service in Canada and also transports goods between points in the United States and Canada. M maintains a branch of its operations in the United States. Because of its branch activities, M was engaged in business through a permanent establishment in the United States for its 1978 taxable year. During 1978 M received 100*x* dollars of service income that was effectively connected with its United States branch and incurred 225*x* dollars in expenses allocable to that income. M also received 125*x* dollars of interest income that was effectively connected with its U.S. business. M included the 125*x* dollars of interest income in gross income on its federal income tax return for 1978, without the benefit of a reduced income tax rate because such income was effectively connected with its U.S. business. Compare Rev. Rul. 73-562, 1973-2 C.B. 434.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 882(a)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code provides that a foreign corporation engaged in trade or business within the United States during the taxable year shall be taxable on its taxable income which is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States.

Section 882(c)(1)(A) of the Code provides that a foreign corporation shall be allowed deductions to the extent they are connected with income which is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States; and the proper apportionment and allocation of the deductions for this purpose shall be determined as provided in regulations prescribed by the Secretary.

Section 1.861-8(d)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that no deduction shall be allowed under this section, for any amount, or part thereof, allocable and apportionable to a class of exempt, excluded, or eliminated income, if such amount is not allowed as a deduction under another section of the Code. See section 265 and the regulations thereunder.

Section 265(1) of the Code provides that no deduction shall be allowed for any expense (other than interest) that is otherwise allowable as a deduction and is allocable to one or more classes of exempt income.

Section 894(a) of the Code provides that income of any kind, to the extent required by any treaty obligation of the United States, shall not be included in gross income and shall be exempt from taxation under the income tax provisions of the Code.

Article I of the United States-Canada Income Tax Convention, signed March 4, 1942, 1943 C.B. 526 (Convention), provides that an enterprise of one of the contracting States is not subject to taxation by the other contracting State in respect to its industrial and commercial profits except in respect of such profits allocable to its permanent establishment in the latter State.

Article V of the Convention, as amended by the supplementary convention, signed August 8, 1956, 1957-2 C.B. 1014 (supplementary convention), provides that an enterprise of one of the contracting States engaged in the operation of motor vehicles, as a common carrier or as a contract carrier, shall be exempt from tax by the other contracting State in respect of income (if taxed by the former State in respect of such income) arising from the transportation of property for hire between points in one State and points in the other State.

Paragraph 10 of the Protocol accompanying the Convention, as renumbered by the supplementary convention, provides that the provisions of the Convention shall not be construed to restrict in any manner any exemption, deduction, credit or other allowance accorded by the laws of one of the contracting States in the determination of the tax imposed by such State.

The Service views the language of paragraph 10 of the Protocol to mean that the amount of the tax paid by an enterprise of the foreign contracting state to the United States under a tax treaty should not result in a higher amount than would be due under the Code. See "Hearings on S. Exec. Doc. A Before a Subcommittee of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee," 80th Cong., 1st Sess. 153-154 (1947), 1. U.S. Tax Conv. 945, 1091-1092 and Treasury Department's Technical Memorandum accompanying the United States-Thailand proposed treaty before the Senate in 1965, "Hearings on S. Exec. Doc. E Before a Subcommittee of the Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee," 89th Cong., 1st Sess. 48-49 (1965).

Article V of the Convention, as amended, and section 894 of the Code allow M to exclude from its federal income tax return the service income it received that is effectively connected to its United States business.

For federal income tax purposes, M can only claim expense allocable to its service income if that income is subject to United States tax, because section 1.861-8(d)(2) of the regulations and section 265(1) of the Code disallow a deduction for any expense (other than interest) allocable to the earnings of tax-exempt income. Therefore, M could not exclude the 100*x* dollars of service income under Article V of the Convention and deduct the 225*x* dollars of expenses attributable thereto against the 125*x* dollars of interest income still subject to tax.

To carry out the intent of paragraph 10 of the Protocol accompanying the Convention, M must be allowed to report on its federal income tax return the income it derives from transporting goods between points in the United States and Canada even though under Article V that income is exempt from tax.

HOLDING

A taxpayer may annually choose to remain subject to federal income tax if a tax convention grants a reciprocal exemption for an item of income that otherwise would be subject to federal income tax. Therefore, M for its 1978 taxable year, may choose to report in gross income for federal income tax purposes the 100*x* dollars of service income that is effectively connected with its United States business, and claim 225*x* dollars of related deductions. If M chooses to report such income and claim the related deductions for federal income tax purposes, M will have taxable income of zero.

26 CFR 20.2056(c)-1: Marital deduction; limitation on aggregate of deductions; in general.

Formula marital deduction clause; pre-1977 will. An individual executed a will containing a maximum formula marital deduction clause in 1975, transferred $210,000 to the spouse in 1977, died in 1978, and left an adjusted gross estate valued at $300,000. The will was not amended after 1976, and the decedent's state of residence has not enacted a statute construing formula marital deduction clauses with respect to the provisions in the Tax Reform Act of 1976. The estate is allowed a marital deduction for the entire $210,000.

Rev. Rul. 80-148

ISSUE

For purposes of section 2056 of the Internal Revenue Code, as amended by the Tax Reform Act of 1976, Pub. L. 94-455, 1976-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1, what is the allowable marital deduction with respect to property received by the decedent's spouse if the decedent died after December 31, 1976, and before January 1, 1979, and the decedent's will, executed before January 1, 1977, contained a formula provision for property passing to the surviving spouse, under the circumstances described below?

FACTS

On June 1, 1975, the decedent, D, a resident of State X, executed a will with a formula clause providing that the spouse is to receive the amount of property that would qualify for the maximum allowable marital deduction, taking into account all other property passing to the spouse. The formula in the will was not subsequently amended at any time after December 31, 1976, and before the death of the decedent.

D transferred cash of $210,000 to the spouse on March 20, 1977, and died on April 7, 1978. The $210,000 was included in the gross estate under section 2035 of the Code. The value of the adjusted gross estate was $300,000.

State X has not enacted any statute construing formula marital deduction clauses with respect to the provisions in the Tax Reform Act of 1976.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 2056(a) of the Code allows a marital deduction for the value of any interest in property that is included in the gross estate and that passes from the decedent to the decedent's surviving spouse.

Prior to the Tax Reform Act of 1976, section 2056(c) limited the amount of the allowable marital deduction to one-half of the value of the adjusted gross estate. The Tax Reform Act of 1976 generally changed the limitation of section 2056(c) to the greater of $250,000 or one-half of the value of the adjusted gross estate. The change in the maximum allowable marital deduction is effective for decedents dying after December 31, 1976.

Section 2002(d)(1)(B) of the Tax Reform Act of 1976 provides a transitional rule regarding the application of section 2056(c). Section 2002(d)(1)(B) provides that the change shall not apply to estates if:

> (i) the decedent dies after December 31, 1976, and before January 1, 1979, (ii) by reason of the death of the decedent property passes from the decedent or is acquired from the decedent under a will executed before January 1, 1977, or a trust created before such date, which contains a formula expressly providing that the spouse is to receive the maximum amount of property qualifying for the marital deduction allowable by Federal law, (iii) the formula referred to in clause (ii) was not amended at any time after December 31, 1976, and before the death of the decedent, and (iv) the State does not enact a statute applicable to such estate which construes this type of formula as referring to the marital deduction allowable by Federal law as amended by subsection (a). . . . [Emphasis added.]

The transitional rule is intended to prevent the distortion of a decedent's disposition of property to the surviving spouse, under a will or a trust agreement executed before January 1, 1977. H. R. Rep. No. 94-1380, 94th Cong., Sess. 18 (1976), 1976-3 C.B. (Vol. 3) 752, explains the purposes of the transitional rule:

> Because, under [prior] law the maximum marital estate tax deduction [was] limited to one-half the adjusted gross estate, many existing wills and trusts provide a maximum marital deduction formula clause. Your committee is concerned that many testators, although using the formula clause, may not have wanted to pass more than one-half the estate (recognizing the [prior] law limitation) to the spouse. For this reason, a [two] year transition rule has been added to provide that the increased estate tax marital deduction, as provided by this bill, will not apply to transfers resulting from a will executed or trust created before January 1, 1977. . . . [Emphasis supplied.]

Pursuant to the transitional rule, if the instrument provides for distribution under a formula clause referring to the maximum allowable marital deduction, if the formula was not amended after December 31, 1976, and if there is no specific indication under the terms of the instrument that the decedent intended that changes in the federal estate tax law relating to the marital deduction should apply to his estate, property passing to the spouse under the instrument qualifies for the marital deduction only in such amount that, along with all of the assets passing to the spouse outside of the will or trust, does not exceed fifty percent of the adjusted gross estate. The amended provision of section 2056 allowing a marital deduction to $250,000 is not generally applicable with respect to property distributed under the formula clause. Since the value of property passing to a surviving spouse outside of a will or trust agreement is not limited by a formula clause, the transitional rule does not apply to such property.

In the present situation, the transitional rule does not apply to D's cash gift of $210,000 to the spouse. Consequently, the full value of the gift, or $210,000, qualifies for the marital deduction. Since the will was executed before January 1, 1977, and the value of property passing to the spouse outside of the will exceeds fifty percent of the adjusted gross estate, no additional marital deduction is allowable. This result carries out the intent of Congress, as explained in the House Committee Report. The amount of property passing to the surviving spouse under the will is the same amount that would have passed under the will prior to the enactment of the Tax Reform Act of 1976.

HOLDING

Because the cash gift of $210,000 does not pass to the surviving spouse under a will or trust agreement, the transitional rule does not apply to the cash gift. Therefore, the marital deduction allowed to D's estate is $210,000.

(Also Section 31.3121(j)-1.)

Transportation services; transit authority. A transit authority was created as a political subdivision of a state in 1965. The authority covered its employees for social security purposes by means of an agreement with HEW under section 218 of the Social Security Act. In 1972 the authority acquired a private transit company, which was its first acquisition from private ownership of any part of its system, and all of the company's employees became employees of the authority. At the time of the acquisition there was no general retirement system covering the employees of the authority, and the services performed by all of its employees became "covered transportation service" within the meaning of section 3121(j) of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 80-149

ISSUE

Are the services performed by employees of a transit authority excepted from employment under section 3121(b)(7) of the Internal Revenue Code, under the circumstance described below?

FACTS

The transit authority was created in 1965 by an act of the state legislature as a political subdivision of the state for the purpose of planning, designing, leasing (as lessee), maintaining, administering, and operating a rapid transit system within a metropolitan area. From 1965 to 1971 the authority was involved only in planning and designing a system.

From 1965 to 1971 the authority had employees who were covered for social security purposes by means of an agreement between the state and the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, entered into pursuant to section 218 of the Social Security Act, as amended, 42 U.S.C. 418 (1976).

In 1972 the authority acquired all of the stock of a privately owned transit company. The private company was immediately liquidated and all of its employees became employees of the authority. At the time of the acquisition of the privately owned company neither the state nor the political subdivision had a general retirement system covering substantially all the services performed in connection with the operation of the transportation system. This was the first acquisition from private ownership by the authority of any part of its transportation system.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 3121(b)(7) of the Code excepts from the definition of employment, for purposes of the Federal Insurance Contributions Act, service performed in the employ of a state or any of its political subdivisions, unless the service is covered transportation service as defined in section 3121(j).

Section 3121(j)(3) of the Code provides that all service performed in the employ of a state or a political subdivision in connection with its operation of a public transportation system is "covered transportation service," if the transportation system was not operated by the state or political subdivision prior to 1951 and, at the time of its first acquisition (after 1950) from private ownership of any part of its transportation system, the state or political subdivision did not have a general retirement system covering substantially all service performed in connection with the operation of the transportation system.

Section 3121(j)(4)(A) of the Code defines "general retirement system" as any pension, annuity, retirement, or similar fund or system established by a state or by a political subdivision thereof for its employees.

An agreement for social security coverage under section 218 of the Social Security Act is not a "general retirement system" within the meaning of section 3121(j)(4)(A) of the Code.

Services that are "covered transportation service" within the meaning of section 3121(j) of the Code are excluded from coverage under a 218 agreement. 42 U.S.C. 418(c)(6)(C).

In this case the conditions of section 3121(j)(3) of the Code are met because the transportation system was not in operation prior to 1951, and at the time of the acquisition of the privately owned transit company there was no "general retirement system" covering the employees of the authority.

HOLDING

The service performed by all of the employees of the transit authority became "covered transportation service" within the meaning of section 3121(j) of the Code at the time of the acquisition of the privately owned company and is not excepted from employment under section 3121(b)(7).

TITLE 26.—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER I, SUBCHAPTER D, PART 150.—TEMPORARY EXCISE TAX REGULATIONS UNDER THE CRUDE OIL WINDFALL PROFIT TAX ACT OF 1980

Withholding and depositing of windfall profit tax where the producer is an integrated oil company

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Temporary regulations.

SUMMARY: This document provides temporary excise tax regulations relating to the windfall profit tax on domestic crude oil imposed by title I of the Crude Oil Windfall Profit Tax Act of 1980 [Pub. L. 96-223]. The temporary regulations provide rules to be followed by purchasers of domestic crude oil and integrated oil companies. In addition, the text contained in the temporary regulations set forth in this document serves as the comment document for the notice of proposed rulemaking published in the Proposed Rules section of this issue of the Federal Register.

DATES: These temporary regulations are effective with respect to oil removed after February 29, 1980. Written comments and requests for a public hearing must be delivered or mailed by June 24, 1980.

ADDRESS: Send comments and requests for a public hearing to: Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Attention: CC:LR:T (LR-71-80), Washington, DC 20224.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION

BACKGROUND

On April 4, 1980, the Federal Register published temporary regulations (45 FR 23384) under sections 4986, 4987, 4988, 4989, 4991, 4992, 4993, 4994, 4995, 4996, 4997, 6050C, 6076, and 6402 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. The temporary regulations were required to implement various sections of the Crude Oil

Windfall Profit Tax Act of 1980. This document contains amendments to those temporary regulations.

The regulations promulgated in this document are also proposed to be prescribed as final Excise Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 51).

EXPLANATION OF PROVISIONS

Under the rules contained in the temporary regulations published on April 4, 1980 to implement the windfall profit tax (26 CFR Part 150), the first purchaser of domestic crude oil generally is responsible for withholding tax from the purchase price, depositing the tax, and filing quarterly tax returns. However, withholding is not required when the oil is removed from the premises before sale or refined on the premises, or when the producer of the oil is an integrated oil company. When withholding is not required, each producer of the oil is required to make deposits of the windfall profit tax liability and file quarterly tax returns.

After publication of the temporary regulations, purchasers of crude oil have commented that in certain instances they may have difficulty determining whether any of the producers (as defined in the temporary regulations) of oil produced from a property are integrated oil companies and hence not subject to withholding.

Furthermore, it has been suggested that when an integrated oil company holds an interest in the production from a property but is not the operator of the property, there is frequently a substantial passage of time between the removal of oil and the receipt by the company of information necessary to properly compute its windfall profit tax due on that removal. As a result, the estimation of tax deposits and the timely filing of accurate quarterly tax returns may be difficult.

The amendments to the regulations made by this document are intended to ease these administrative difficulties without imposing new administrative burdens on purchasers who have developed the techniques necessary to comply with the original rules.

As amended, the regulations provide the general rule that the producer of oil produced by an integrated oil company is required to withhold unless the purchaser has received a certificate identifying the producer as an integrated oil company. Withholding is improper after receipt of a certificate. The certificate is required to be furnished to the purchaser if the integrated oil company is the operator of the property. In other cases, it may be furnished at the option of the integrated oil company.

However, an interim rule is provided for oil payments made during the period ending 30 days after the publication of final regulations (which will occur after written comments are received and a public hearing, if requested, is held). The interim rule provides that purchasers are not required to withhold tax from payments made to an integrated oil company if the purchaser does not, in fact, deduct, withhold, and deposit. Thus, in effect, the interim rule provides purchasers with the option of withholding or not withholding tax from payments made to an integrated oil company prior to receipt of the company's certificate, if any. After the receipt of a certificate, the purchaser no longer has the option to withhold.

The respective obligations of purchasers or producers to make windfall profit tax deposits flow from the withholding requirement. If withholding is required, the purchaser is required to deposit the amount required to be withheld, and the producer is not required to deposit tax with respect to that oil. If withholding is not required, the producer must deposit the tax liability with respect to that oil.

In sum, the amended regulations provide the following rules:

1. Every integrated oil company that is the producer of oil from a property of which the company is the operator (as determined in the temporary regulations) must submit a certificate to each purchaser of its oil from that property (unless the operator and purchaser have made the election permitted in § 150.4995-4). In other cases, integrated oil companies, at their option, may furnish a certificate.

2. It is improper for a purchaser to withhold tax from payments made for an integrated oil company's share of production after receipt of a certificate.

3. Prior to the receipt of a certificate, the purchaser must withhold except in the case of oil payments made during the interim period. During the interim period the purchaser, at its option, may treat withholding from payments for an integrated oil company's share of production either as required or not required. Withholding is considered to be required if the purchaser deducts, withholds, and deposits the tax. Withholding is considered not to be required if the purchaser does not deduct, withhold, and deposit. If the purchaser has withheld but chooses before depositing the withheld amount to treat withholding as not required, the withheld amount should be refunded to the producer.

4. The obligation of the integrated oil company producer to deposit is imposed if withholding is not required. Thus, the producer must generally deposit the tax imposed upon its production if the company is the operator of the property. However, during the interim period, if the purchaser treats withholding as required the producer need not deposit prior to the receipt by the purchaser of the integrated oil company's certificate. In the case of an integrated oil company that is not the operator, the company is required to deposit the tax on its production if the company furnishes a certificate to the purchaser or if, during the interim period, the purchaser treats withholding as not required. Accordingly, it is necessary for such companies to determine the practice of the purchaser for the interim period so that the company can meet its deposit responsibilities in the absence of withholding.

WAIVER OF PROCEDURAL REQUIREMENTS OF TREASURY DIRECTIVE

The expeditious adoption of the provisions contained in this document is necessary because of the need for immediate guidance to taxpayers liable for the windfall profit tax on domestic crude oil and to other persons required to withhold and deposit tax, file returns, provide information, etc. For this reason, Jerome Kurtz, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, has determined that the provisions of paragraphs 8 through 14 of the Treasury Department directive implementing Executive Order 12044 must be waived.

COMMENTS AND REQUESTS FOR A PUBLIC HEARING

Before adoption of the final regulations proposed in this document, consideration will be given to any written comments that are submitted (preferably six copies) to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. All comments will be available for public inspection and copying. A public hearing will be held upon written request to the Commissioner by any person who has submitted written comments. If a public hearing is held, notice of the time and place will be published in the Federal Register.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of these regulations is David B. Cubeta of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulations, both on matters of substance and style.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, part 150, Temporary Excise Tax Regulations under the Crude Oil Windfall Profit Tax Act of 1980, is amended as follows:

Paragraph 1. Paragraph (a) of § 150.4995-1 is amended by revising subparagraph (3). Amended paragraph (a) reads as follows:

§ 150.4995-1 Requirement of withholding.

(a) General rule; when required. Except as otherwise provided in this section, the purchaser (as defined in § 150.4996-1(a)) of domestic crude oil shall deduct and withhold tax from amounts payable by that purchaser for the oil. However, the preceding sentence shall not apply if—

(1) The crude oil is removed from the premises (as defined in § 150.4996-1(d)) before it is sold, or

(2) The manufacture or conversion of crude oil into refined products begins before the oil is removed from the premises, or

(3) The producer of the oil is an integrated oil company (as defined in § 150.4996-1(g)) that has furnished a certificate to the purchaser pursuant to paragraph (c)(2) of § 150.4995-2 (or, in the case of any payment for oil produced by an integrated oil company made before the date that is 30 days after the date of publication of final regulations under this paragraph, the purchaser does not in fact deduct, withhold, and deposit the tax).

The amount of tax to be deducted and withheld shall be determined in accordance with the rules of paragraphs (b) and (c) of this section. See, however, paragraph (d) of this section for rules applicable to certain payments made prior to June 4, 1980. The producer shall be treated as having paid on the last day of the first February after the calendar year in which the oil is removed from the premises the amount deducted and withheld with respect to such oil by the purchaser under this section.

Par. 2. Section 150.4995-2 is amended by adding a sentence to paragraph (a) and by revising paragraph (c). These added and revised provisions read as follows:

§ 150.4995-2 Producer's certificate.

(a) In general. The producer of "exempt Indian oil", as defined in section 4994(d), or the holder of any interest in crude oil that is a "qualified governmental interest" as defined in section 4994(a) or is a "qualified charitable interest" as defined in section 4994(b), may furnish an exemption certificate with respect to such oil to the purchaser of the oil or to the operator of the property from which the oil is produced (or, if the producer is a partner, to the partnership (see paragraph (e) of this section)), in accordance with the rules of paragraph (b) of this section. Any producer of "independent producer oil", as defined in section 4992, may furnish a certificate with respect to such oil to the purchaser of the oil or to the operator of the property from which the oil is produced (or, if the producer is a partner, to the partnership (see paragraph (e) of this section)), in accordance with the rules of paragraph (c) of this section. Every integrated oil company shall follow the rules of paragraph (c)(2) of this section (relating to mandatory and optional withholding exemption certificates). Any certificate provided under this section must set forth the facts that establish entitlement to the exemption or lower rates claimed. The certificate (or any revocation of a certificate) shall identify the producer by name, address, and employer identification (or social security) number and shall be signed by the producer (under the penalties of perjury except in the case of a revocation). For the requirement that the operator of a property who has received such a certificate furnish a copy of the certificate, or certify as to its contents, to each purchaser of oil from that property, see § 150.6050C-1(f). For the effect of the furnishing of such a certificate, see § 150.4995-1(b)(3) (relating to the withholding requirement). For the criminal penalty applicable to the furnishing of a false statement, see section 7206.

* * * * *

(c) Other producers' certificates—(1) Independent producer's certificate. An independent producer's certificate is a written statement certifying that the entire amount of the producer's oil expected to be sold to the purchaser is subject to the rates of tax provided in section 4987(b)(2) because the oil constitutes "independent producer oil" as defined in section 4992. No certificate may be furnished with respect to oil if it is reasonable to believe that the number of barrels to be affected by the certificate, taken together with all other oil with respect to which a certificate has been furnished by the producer to any operator, purchaser, or partnership, will exceed the producer's independent producer amount (see section 4992(c) and (e)).

(2) Integrated oil company's certificate—(i) Mandatory certificates. Every integrated oil company that is a producer of oil from a property of which that company is the operator (or would be the operator in the absence of a designation under § 150.4996-1(c)) shall furnish the statement described in paragraph (c)(2)(iii) of this section to each purchaser of oil from that property no later than the date by which the first statement by the operator to the purchaser under § 150.6050C-1 is required to be furnished (or May 12, 1980, if later).

(ii) Optional certificate. Any integrated oil company that is a producer of oil from a property of which that company is not the operator may, at its option, furnish such a statement with respect to such oil to the purchaser of the oil or to the operator of the property from which the oil is produced (or, if the producer is a partner, to the partnership (see paragraph (e) of this section)).

(iii) Contents of certificate. The certificate furnished pursuant to this subparagraph shall state that the producer is an integrated oil company (as defined in § 150.4996-1(g)), that the producer will deposit its own windfall profit tax liability, and that the producer's share of production is not to be withheld upon under §150.4995-1.

(iv) Date certificate becomes effective. Any certificate furnished pursuant to this subparagraph shall apply to all payments for oil of which the integrated oil company is the producer made after the date on which the purchaser received the certificate.

Par. 3. So much of paragraph (a)(1) of § 150.4995-3 as precedes subdivision (i) is amended to read as follows:

§ 150.4995-3 Depositary requirements.

(a) Deposits by integrated oil companies other than independent refiners—(1) In general. Every integrated oil company (as defined in § 150.4996-1(g)) other than an independent refiner (as defined in § 150.4996-1(h)) that is either liable as a producer for the tax imposed by section 4986 (unless such tax is required by § 150.4995-1 to be deducted and withheld by the purchaser) or is required as a purchaser to deduct and withhold tax pursuant to §150.4995-1 shall make deposits with respect to semimonthly periods (as defined in subparagraph (3)(i) of this paragraph). The amount to be deposited for each semimonthly period is the amount of tax imposed by section 4986 that is not required to be withheld under § 150.4995-1 on oil removed from the premises during that semimonthly period for which the company is liable as a producer, plus the amount required to be withheld by the company as a purchaser pursuant to § 150.4995-1 from payments that have been or will be made for oil removed from the premises during that semimonthly period. The deposits shall be made on or before the depositary date (as defined in subparagraph (3)(ii) of this paragraph) for the semimonthly period in which the oil was removed. These depositary requirements will be considered to have been met for a semimonthly period with respect to estimated deposits only if—

Par. 4. Section 150.6050C-1 is amended by deleting a sentence in the portion of paragraph (b) that precedes subparagraph (1) and by revising paragraph (f). The revised provisions read as follows:

(b) Information to be certified. In the case of exempt Alaskan oil or exempt front-end oil, the statement shall certify that the oil is exempt from tax. In all statements not certifying exemption, the following information is to be certified in the statement required under paragraph (a) of this section:

* * * * *

(f) Producer's certificate. If, pursuant to §150.4995-2, the operator receives a producer's certificate certifying a share of production to be exempt from tax, subject to a lower rate of tax, or not to be withheld upon, the operator shall either (1) furnish a copy of that certificate to each purchaser of oil from that property by the 15th day of the month following the month in which the certificate was received, or (2) if payment is to be received by the operator on behalf of the producers, furnish a certificate that summarizes the contents of the producers' certificates and states that the operator has received and has such certificates available for inspection.

There is need for the immediate guidance provided by the provisions contained in this Treasury decision. For this reason, it is found impracticable to issue this Treasury decision with notice and public procedure under subsection (b) of section 553 of title 5 of the United States Code or subject to the effective date limitation of subsection (d) of that section.

This Treasury decision is issued under the authority contained in section 4995, 6050C, and 7805 of title 26 of the United States Code and section 101(i)(2) of the Crude Oil Windfall Profit Tax Act of 1980.

TITLE 26.—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER I, SUBCHAPTER F, PART 301.—PROCEDURE AND ADMINISTRATION

Administrative review procedure for determination of a State tax agency's failure to safeguard Federal tax information

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Final regulations.

SUMMARY: This document provides final regulations concerning procedures for administrative review of a Service determination that a State tax agency has failed to safeguard Federal tax returns or return information received from the Service. Changes to the applicable tax law were made by the Tax Reform Act of 1976 [Pub. L. 94-455, 1976-3 (Vol. 1) 1]. The regulations provide State tax agencies with guidance needed to comply with that Act.

DATES: The regulations are effective immediately upon publication as a Treasury decision [April 18, 1980].

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

On October 2, 1979, the Federal Register published proposed amendments to the Regulations on Procedure and Administration (26 CFR Part 301) under section 6103(p)(7) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (44 FR 56715). These amendments were proposed to conform the regulations to certain provisions under section 1202(a)(1) of the Tax Reform Act of 1976 (90 Stat. 1667). After consideration of all comments received in response to the notice of proposed rulemaking, those amendments are adopted by this Treasury decision as proposed.

EXPLANATION OF PROVISIONS

The final regulations provide procedures required by section 6103(p)(7) of the Internal Revenue Code for administrative review by the Commissioner of a determination by the Internal Revenue Service that a State tax agency has failed to safeguard Federal tax returns or return information in accordance with the requirements of section 6103(p)(4). Notwithstanding section 6103(d), such a determination may result in the Service's terminating the disclosure of Federal tax returns or return information to the State tax agency concerned.

The final regulations establish procedures under which a State tax agency may appeal the above-described adverse determination directly to the Commissioner within 30 days after receiving notice thereof. These amendments also provide that, within 45 days after receiving such an appeal, the Commissioner or Deputy Commissioner will personally hold a conference with representatives of the State tax agency.

Several comments were received in response to the notice published in the Federal Register for October 2, 1979. One commentator urged that the Service not discontinue disclosure until the Commissioner reaches a final determination. Another urged that the regulations impose a 45-day deadline within which the Commissioner must make the final determination. After consideration of these comments, the Service concluded that the suggested changes would be inappropriate. Under the final regulations, disclosure of Federal tax returns and return information will not be discontinued following a preliminary determination unless Federal tax administration would otherwise be seriously impaired, in which case disclosure clearly should not continue pending the Commissioner's final determination.

Evaluation of the effectiveness of these regulations will be based on comments received from offices within the Treasury and the Internal Revenue Service, other governmental agencies, State and local governments, and the public. These regulations will impose no new reporting or recordkeeping requirements.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of these regulations is John A. Tolleris of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulations, both on matters of substance and style.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, 26 CFR Part 301 is amended as follows:

A new § 301.6103(p)(7)-1 is added immediately after § 301.6103(f)-1 to read as follows:

§ 301.6103(p)(7)-1 Procedures for administrative review of a determination that a State tax agency has failed to safeguard Federal tax returns or return information.

(a) Notice of Service's intention to terminate disclosure to a State tax agency. Notwithstanding subsection (d) of section 6103, the Internal Revenue Service may terminate disclosure of Federal returns and return information to a State agency, body, or commission described in section 6103(d) (hereinafter in this section referred to as a State tax agency) if the Service makes a determination that—

(1) A State tax agency has made unauthorized disclosure of Federal returns or return information received from the Service and that the State tax agency has not taken adequate corrective action to prevent repetition of the unauthorized disclosure, or

(2) A State tax agency does not satisfactorily maintain the safeguards described in subsection (p)(4) of section 6103, and has made no adequate plan to improve its system to maintain those safeguards satisfactorily. Prior to terminating disclosure, the Service will notify the State tax agency in writing of the Service's preliminary determination and of the Service's intention to discontinue disclosure of Federal returns and return information to the State tax agency. Upon so notifying the State tax agency, the Service, if it determines that Federal tax administration would otherwise be seriously impaired, may suspend further disclosure of Federal returns and return information to the State tax agency pending a final determination by the Commissioner or Deputy Commissioner described in subparagraph (2) of paragraph (c).

(b) State tax agency's right to appeal. A State tax agency shall have 30 days from the date of receipt of a notice described in paragraph (a) to appeal the preliminary determination described in paragraph (a). The appeal shall be made directly to the Commissioner.

(c) Procedures for administrative review. (1) To appeal a preliminary determination described in paragraph (a), the State agency shall send a written request for a conference to: Commissioner of Internal Revenue (Attention: C), 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224. The request must include a complete description of the State tax agency's present system of safeguarding Federal returns or return information received from the Service. The request must then state the reason or reasons that the State agency believes that such system, including improvements, if any, to such system expected to be made in the near future, is or will be adequate to safeguard Federal returns or return information received from the Service.

(2) Within 45 days of the receipt of a request made in accordance with the provisions of subparagraph (1) of this paragraph, the Commissioner or Deputy Commissioner will personally hold a conference with representatives of the State tax agency, after which the Commissioner or Deputy Commissioner will make a final determination with respect to the appeal.

This Treasury decision is issued under the authority contained in sections 6103(p)(7) and 7805 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (90 Stat. 1685, 26 U.S.C. 6103(p)(7); 68A Stat. 917, 26 U.S.C. 7805).

Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

26 CFR 301.7701-4: Trusts.

Liquidating trust. A trust established under state law for the purpose of liquidating and distributing assets (land, a heating plant located thereon, a right-of-way to the land, and mining claims) that were transferred by a liquidating corporation and that could not be sold other than under distress conditions within the 12-month period following the corporation's adoption of a plan of liquidation is classified as a liquidating trust under section 301.7701-4(d) of the regulations. The shareholders of the liquidating corporation are considered the owners of the trust and are taxable on the trust income.

Rev. Rul. 80-150

ISSUE

Under the circumstances described below, will an arrangement be classified as a liquidating trust?

FACTS

M, a corporation, has been in the business of owning and managing real property and interests in real property for a number of years. In 1979, the board of directors of M adopted a plan of complete liquidation for M. Within the 12-month period beginning on the date of adoption of the plan of liquidation, M was able to sell all of its assets except land on which is located a heating plant, a related right of way to that plant and certain mining claims. These assets represent less than 20 percent of M's total net assets as of the date of adoption of the plan of liquidation.

The heating plant is substantially landlocked except for a narrow right-of-way. This significantly restricts the marketability of the property primarily to those owners of adjoining parcels. The heating plant had been used to provide heat to tenants of M; however, the users of the heating plant found alternative energy sources and the plant has not been used for some time. Although one offer has been made for the heating plant, it was unreasonably low. The mining claims are inactive and were contributed to the company many years ago. Because of this inactivity questions have arisen as to the value of these properties as well as factual and legal questions as to the nature and extent of the claims. No offers have been made for these properties.

Within the 12-month period beginning on the date of adoption of the plan of liquidation, the board of directors called a meeting of the shareholders of M to amend the plan of liquidation to provide for distribution of the land, heating plant, right-of-way, and mining claims to a trust, established under state law, together with a sum not exceeding 500*x* dollars. This amount is anticipated to be necessary to pay for taxes, insurance, and costs related to the maintenance and sale of the properties transferred to the trust. The shareholders approved the amendment of the plan, selected a trustee of the trust and transferred the land, heating plant, right of way, mining claim and cash to the trust.

The trust instrument provides that the trust is organized for the primary purpose of liquidating the assets transferred to it with no objective to continue or engage in the conduct of a trade or business. The trust will terminate three years from the date of its creation or, if sooner, within 30 days after sale of the last of the property transferred to it. The investment powers of the trustee are limited to demand and time deposits in federally insured banks and savings institutions, and short-term certificates of deposit. Under the terms of the trust instrument the trustee is required to distribute at least semi-annually to known shareholders any proceeds from the sale of assets and income from investments. The trustee is to make continuing efforts to dispose of the trust assets, make timely distributions, and not unduly prolong the duration of the trust.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 301.7701-4(d) of the Procedure and Administration Regulations provides, in part, that certain organizations that are commonly known as liquidating trusts are treated as trusts for purposes of the Internal Revenue Code. An organization will be considered a liquidating trust if it is organized for the primary purpose of liquidating and distributing the assets transferred to it, and if its activities are all reasonably necessary to, and consistent with, the accomplishment of that purpose. A liquidating trust is treated as a trust for purposes of the Internal Revenue Code because it is formed with the objective of liquidating particular assets and not as an organization having as its purpose the carrying on of a profit-making business which normally would be conducted through business organizations classified as corporations or partnerships. However, if the liquidation is unreasonably prolonged or if the liquidation purpose becomes so obscured by business activities that the declared purpose of liquidation can be said to be lost or abandoned, the status of the organization will no longer be that of a liquidating trust.

In this case, because of the landlocked nature of the land and heating plant, it was not possible for M to sell that property other than under distress conditions within the 12-month period following the adoption of the plan of liquidation. Because of the factual and legal questions relating to the mining claims, they also could not be sold other than under distress conditions within the 12-month period. The transfer of the heating plant, right-of-way, mining claims, and cash to the trust does not evidence an objective to carry on a profit-making business. The primary purpose of the trust is the liquidation and distribution of the assets transferred to it.

HOLDING

The trust is classified as a liquidating trust for federal income tax purposes.

In addition, the shareholders of M will be considered the owners of the trust and will be taxable on the income therefrom under subpart E of subchapter J, chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code (section 671-687). See Rev. Rul. 72-137, 1972-1 C.B. 101.

Also under the circumstances described, the land, the heating plant, the related right-of-way to that plant and the mining claims will not be considered "readily marketable assets" within the meaning of section 3.05 of Rev. Proc. 79-1, 1979-1 C.B. 481.

Part III. Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous

Social Security Contribution and Benefit Base

Under provisions of the Social Security Amendments of 1977, Pub. L. 95-216, 1978-1 C.B. 462, the Secretary, Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, has announced (45 F.R. 21715) that the contribution and benefit base for 1980 that would have been in effect under pre-1977 law is $20,400. This "old-law" base is used only for certain purposes under the railroad retirement program and the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA), Pub. L. 93-406, 1974-3 C.B. 1, and for computing special minimum social security benefits for workers with many years of low earnings.

Part IV. Items of General Interest

Form 6251, Alternative Minimum Tax Computation

Announcement 80-80

The computation of adjusted itemized deductions for an estate or trust using Form 6251, Alternative Minimum Tax Computation, has been changed as a result of the passage of the Technical Corrections Act of 1979, Pub. L. 96-222, 1980-20 I.R.B. 5.

Step 2 of the line 4a instructions for an estate or trust should be changed to read as follows:

Subtract from adjusted gross income the items in (3) through (7) of step 1.

The deduction for personal exemption (item (2) of Step 1) should not be used in the computation for Step 2.

Estates and trusts that have already filed their 1980 income tax returns following the Step 2 instructions should file amended returns if the revision has any effect on their alternative minimum tax liability.

The income derived from the bonds and notes is subject to all taxes imposed by the Internal Revenue Code. The bonds and notes are subject to estate, inheritance, gift, or other excise taxes whether federal or state, but are exempt from all taxation now or hereafter imposed on the principal or interest thereof by any state, any possession of the United States, or any local taxing authority.

The bonds and notes will be acceptable to secure deposits of public moneys. They will not be acceptable in payment of taxes.

Announcement of the Disbarment, Suspension, or Consent to Voluntary Suspension of Attorneys, Certified Public Accountants, Enrolled Agents and Enrolled Actuaries from Practice before the Internal Revenue Service

Under Section 1026, Title 31 of the United States Code (1970 ed.), the Secretary of the Treasury, after due notice and opportunity for hearing, is authorized to suspend or disbar from practice before the Internal Revenue Service any person who has violated the rules and regulations governing the recognition of attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents or enrolled actuaries to practice before the Internal Revenue Service.

Attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries are prohibited in any Internal Revenue Service matter from directly or indirectly employing, accepting assistance from, being employed by or sharing fees with, any practitioner disbarred or under suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service.

To enable attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries to identify such disbarred or suspended practitioners, the Director of Practice will announce in the Internal Revenue Bulletin the names and addresses of practitioners who have been disbarred or suspended from such practice, their designation as attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, and the date of disbarment or period of suspension. This announcement will appear and will continue to appear in the weekly Bulletins for five successive weeks for each attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary so suspended or disbarred and will later be consolidated and published in the Cumulative Bulletin.

By decision on appeal from an initial decision in an administrative hearing, the following individuals have been suspended or disbarred from further practice before the Internal Revenue Service:

Name	Address	Designation	Effective Date
Sydney M. Eisenberg	Milwaukee, WI	Attorney	April 17, 1980 Disbarment
Leon Feldt	El Paso, TX	Certified Public Accountant	March 26, 1980 Disbarment
Angelos P. Romas	Endicott, NY	Attorney	April 9, 1980 Disbarment

After due notice and opportunity for hearing, the following individual has been disbarred from further practice before the Internal Revenue Service:

Under 31 Code of Federal Regulations, Part 10, an attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, in order to avoid the institution or conclusion of a proceeding for his disbarment or suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, may offer his consent to suspension from such practice. The Director of Practice, in his discretion, may suspend an attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary in accordance with the consent offered.

Attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries are prohibited in any Internal Revenue Service matter from directly or indirectly employing, accepting assistance from, being employed by or sharing fees with, any practitioner disbarred or under suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service.

To enable attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries to identify practitioners under consent suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, the Director of Practice will announce in the Internal Revenue Bulletin the names and addresses of practitioners who have been suspended from such practice, their designation as attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, and the date or period of suspension. This announcement will appear in the weekly Bulletin at the earliest practicable date after such action and will continue to appear in the weekly Bulletins for five successive weeks or for as many weeks as is practicable for each attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary so suspended and will later be consolidated and published in the Cumulative Bulletin.

The following individuals have been placed under consent suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service:

Name	Address	Designation	Term of Suspension
Frank H. Abernathy	Richmond, VA	Certified Public Accountant	Indefinite effective April 9, 1980
Carl L. Harthun	Denver, CO	Attorney	Indefinite effective April 9, 1980
John T. Kelly, Jr.	Virginia Beach, VA	Certified Public Accountant	Indefinite effective April 15, 1980

Announcement Relating to Proposed Regulations Published With Notice of Proposed Rulemaking

Changes in regulations as announced below have been published in the Federal Register in tentative or proposed form to provide interested parties with an opportunity to file their objections or suggestions for consideration prior to final adoption of such regulations. These announcements will appear in the Bulletin during the period which has been prescribed for the submission and consideration of any views, arguments, or suggestions pertaining to the proposed regulations so published. Statement of such views, arguments or suggestions should be submitted in writing, preferably six copies, to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Attention: CC:LR:T, Washington, D.C. 20224.

INTERNAL REVENUE BULLETIN

The Introduction on page 3 describes the purpose and content of this publication. The weekly Internal Revenue Bulletin is sold on a yearly subscription basis by the Superintendent of Documents. Current subscribers are notified by the Superintendent of Documents when their subscriptions must be renewed.

CUMULATIVE BULLETINS

The contents of the weekly Bulletin are consolidated semiannually into a permanent, indexed, Cumulative Bulletin. These are sold on a single copy basis and are not included as part of the subscription to the Internal Revenue Bulletin. Subscribers to the weekly Bulletin are notified when copies of the Cumulative Bulletin are available. Certain issues of Cumulative Bulletins are out of print and are not available. Persons desiring available Cumulative Bulletins, which are listed on the reverse, may purchase them from the Superintendent of Documents.

BULLETIN INDEX-DIGEST SYSTEM

The Bulletin Index-Digest System (12-78) provides a fast and easy way to research Revenue Rulings, Revenue Procedures, Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and other matters of a permanent nature published in the weekly Internal Revenue Bulletin, or Cumulative Bulletin from 1953 on. It is a comprehensive and up-to-date research tool that requires no filing or other clerical maintenance. The current revision consists of four Services, available on a subscription basis, each including a basic volume that covers the period 1953-1978 and a cumulative supplement covering material published in subsequent Bulletins for the following two-year period. Cumulative supplements are issued quarterly for the Income Tax Service and semiannually for the Estate and Gift, Employment, and Excise Tax Services.

HOW TO ORDER

Check the publications and/or subscription(s) desired on the reverse, complete the order blank, enclose the proper remittance, detach entire page, and mail to the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. Please allow two to six weeks, plus mailing time, for delivery.

Internal Revenue Service

Statement of Principles of Internal Revenue Tax Administration

The function of the Internal Revenue Service is to administer the Internal Revenue Code. Tax policy for raising revenue is determined by Congress.

With this in mind, it is the duty of the Service to carry out that policy by correctly applying the laws enacted by Congress; to determine the reasonable meaning of various Code provisions in light of the Congressional purpose in enacting them; and to perform this work in a fair and impartial manner, with neither a government nor a taxpayer point of view.

At the heart of administration is interpretation of the Code. It is the responsibility of each person in the Service, charged with the duty of interpreting the law, to try to find the true meaning of the statutory provision and not to adopt a strained construction in the belief that he is "protecting the revenue." The revenue is properly protected only when we ascertain and apply the true meaning of the statute.

The Service also has the responsibility of applying and administering the law in a reasonable, practical manner. Issues should only be raised by examining officers when they have merit, never arbitrarily or for trading purposes. At the same time, the examining officer should never hesitate to raise a meritorious issue. It is also important that care be exercised not to raise an issue or to ask a court to adopt a position inconsistent with an established Service position.

Administration should be both reasonable and vigorous. It should be conducted with as little delay as possible and with great courtesy and considerateness. It should never try to overreach, and should be reasonable within the bounds of law and sound administration. It should, however, be vigorous in requiring compliance with law and it should be relentless in its attack on unreal tax devices and fraud.

Introduction

The Internal Revenue Bulletin is the authoritative instrument of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for announcing official rulings and procedures of the Internal Revenue Service and for publishing Treasury Decisions, Executive Orders, Tax Conventions, legislation, court decisions, and other items of general interest. It is published weekly and may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. Bulletin contents of a permanent nature are consolidated semiannually into Cumulative Bulletins, which are sold on a single-copy basis.

It is the policy of the Service to publish in the Bulletin all substantive rulings necessary to promote a uniform application of the tax laws, including all rulings that supersede, revoke, modify, or amend any of those previously published in the Bulletin. All published rulings apply retroactively unless otherwise indicated. Procedures relating solely to matters of internal management are not published; however, statements of internal practices and procedures that affect the rights and duties of taxpayers are published.

Revenue rulings represent the conclusions of the Service on the application of the law to the pivotal facts stated in the revenue ruling. In those based on positions taken in rulings to taxpayers or technical advice to Service field offices, identifying details and information of a confidential nature are deleted to prevent unwarranted invasions of privacy and to comply with statutory requirements.

Rulings and procedures reported in the Bulletin do not have the force and effect of Treasury Department Regulations, but they may be used as precedents. Unpublished rulings will not be relied on, used, or cited as precedents by Service personnel in the disposition of other cases. In applying published rulings and procedures, the effect of subsequent legislation, regulations, court decisions, rulings, and procedures must be considered, and Service personnel and others concerned are cautioned against reaching the same conclusions in other cases unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same.

The Bulletin is divided into four parts as follows:

Part I.—1954 Code.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

Part II.—Treaties and Tax Legislation.

This part is divided into two subparts as follows: Subpart A, Tax Conventions, and Subpart B, Legislation and Related Committee Reports.

Part III.—Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous.

To the extent practicable, pertinent cross references to these subjects are contained in the other Parts and Subparts.

Part IV.—Items of General Interest.

With the exception of the disbarment and suspension list included in this part, none of these announcements is consolidated in the Cumulative Bulletins.

The first Bulletin for each month includes an index for the matters published during the preceding month. These monthly indexes are cumulated on a quarterly and semiannual basis, and are published in the first Bulletin of the succeeding quarterly and semi-annual period, respectively.

The Bulletin Index-Digest System, a research and reference service supplementing the Bulletin, may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. It consists of four Services: Service No. 1, Income Tax; Service No. 2, Estate and Gift Taxes; Service No. 3, Employment Taxes; Service No. 4, Excise Taxes. Each Service consists of a basic volume and a cumulative supplement that provide (1) finding lists of items published in the Bulletin, (2) digests of revenue rulings, revenue procedures, and other published items, and (3) topical indexes of Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and Tax Conventions.

The contents of this publication are not copyrighted and may be reprinted freely. A citation of the Internal Revenue Bulletin as the source would be appropriate.

For sale by the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. Prices: Domestic—$2.00 a single copy, $55.00 a year subscription; Foreign—$2.50 a single copy, $68.75 a year subscription.

Municipal bonds; interest; benefits of the Department of Energy Act of 1978. Interest on municipal bonds that are otherwise tax exempt and that are issued to develop geothermal energy is includible in the gross income of the bondholder if the municipality issuing the bonds elects to receive a federal guarantee of the bonds and interest differential payments as provided by Title V of the Department of Energy Act of 1978.

EMPLOYEE PLANS

Rev. Rul. 80-155, page 11.

Valuation and allocation of trust assets. A defined contribution plan does not qualify where trust earnings are allocated to participants, and the valuation of trust investments are made, at infrequent or irregular intervals or different valuation methods are used for different participants. However, a plan provision allowing interim valuations at the trustee's discretion in addition to a constant annual valuation will not disqualify a plan, provided the use of the interim valuations does not result in prohibited discrimination. Rev. Ruls. 70-125 and 71-27 superseded.

Profit-sharing plan; guaranteed payments received by designated beneficiary. The provisions of an annuity with a guaranteed period of payments that was purchased by the trustee of a noncontributory qualified profit-sharing plan gave the annuitant the right to receive the commuted value of the guaranteed payments, which would have been less than the amount required to purchase an annuity of comparable value. The value of the guaranteed payments received by the designated beneficiary had not been constructively received by the decedent and was excludable from the decedent's gross estate under section 2039 of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 80-159, page 15.

Marital deduction; installment payment of tax; interest. A decedent's will provided for a specific legacy to the decedent's parents with the balance of the estate to be divided equally between the decedent's spouse and child. The will stipulated that the parents' legacy was to be free of all death taxes. State law provides that property passing to the surviving spouse does not generate any death taxes and that interest payable with respect to death taxes must be apportioned in the same fashion as the taxes themselves. Interest paid on taxes deferred under section 6166A of the Code does not reduce the value of property passing to the surviving spouse for purposes of the marital deduction.

EXCISE TAXES

Announcement Relating to Decisions of the Tax Court

It is the policy of the Internal Revenue Service to announce in the Internal Revenue Bulletin at the earliest practicable date the determination of the Commissioner to acquiesce or not acquiesce in a decision of the Tax Court which disallows a deficiency in tax determined by the Commissioner to be due.

Notice that the Commissioner has acquiesced or nonacquiesced in a decision of the Tax Court relates only to the issue or issues decided adversely to the Government.

Actions of acquiescences in adverse decisions shall be relied on by Revenue officers and others concerned as conclusions of the Service only to the application of the law to the facts in the particular case. Caution should be exercised in extending the application of the decision to a similar case unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same, and consideration should be given to the effect of new legislation, regulations, and rulings as well as subsequent court decisions and actions thereon.

Acquiescence in a decision means acceptance by the Service of the conclusion reached, and does not necessarily mean acceptance and approval of any or all of the reasons assigned by the Court for its conclusions.

No announcements are made in the Bulletin with respect to memorandum opinions of the Tax Court.

The announcements published in the weekly Internal Revenue Bulletins are consolidated semiannually and annually. The semiannual consolidation appears in the first Bulletin for July and in the Cumulative Bulletin for the first half of the year and the annual consolidation appears in the first Bulletin for the following January and in the Cumulative Bulletin for the last half of the year.

The Commissioner ACQUIESCES in the following decisions:

Taxpayer	Docket No.	Report
		Volume	Page
United Telecommunications, Inc.[1]	7866-72	65 67	278 760
Wendle Ford Sales, Inc.	7614-76	72	447

Part I. Rulings and Decisions Under the Internal Revenue Code of 1954

Section 48.—Definitions, Special Rules [Rules for Computing Credit for Investment in Certain Depreciable Property]

(Also Section 1033.)

Investment credit; outdoor advertising displays. Examples illustrate how the Service will apply the criteria set forth in Whiteco Industries, Inc., in determining whether outdoor advertising displays are inherently permanent structures or tangible personal property that qualifies as section 38 property; Rev. Rul. 68-62 revoked.

Rev. Rul. 80-151

ISSUE

Are outdoor advertising displays tangible personal property for purposes of the investment tax credit?

FACTS

The taxpayer is in the business of erecting, maintaining, and renting, but not selling, outdoor advertising displays. These sign structures vary in cost, size, materials of construction, and complexity and are located on sites that have been purchased or leased. Of the many types of advertising displays used in taxpayer's business, structure X and structure Y, discussed herein, are representative of two types of sign structures that are classified differently for investment credit purposes.

Structure X—This sign assembly consists of a single sign face nailed to a wooden support frame and attached to wooden poles 30 feet in length. The sign face, made of exterior grade plywood, is 12 by 32 feet in size and $\frac{5}{16}$ inch in thickness. The poles are set in the ground and are secured in place with a ring of concrete. Dismantling and moving a sign structure of this type is a relatively quick and easy process. After the sign face and frame are removed, the poles are then pulled from the ground by the use of a truck mounted winch.

The taxpayer makes a practice of erecting signs of this type only after a contract, usually for a period of three years, has been entered into with an advertiser. However, in many cases, the contracts are renewed. The contracts permit the movement of the signs to new locations, in the event: (1) the view of the sign becomes obstructed, (2) a location is no longer available because, for example, a change takes place in the ownership of the leased property, or (3) the ground lease requires the taxpayer to move its signs in the event the owner of the land terminates the lease. Frequently it is necessary to remove and renovate the sign assembly after the initial contract period because of rotted, decayed, or damaged wood. The taxpayer's experience with this type of sign indicates that it normally remains in one location for a period of 5 years or less. Thus, these sign structures are designed and installed in such a manner so as to be easily moved.

Structure Y—This sign assembly has one illuminated 25 by 80 foot rectangular display panel that is attached to a welded steel frame. The frame is bolted to the top of a steel support column that is 5 feet in diameter. The overall height of the sign and its support structure is 74 feet. The steel support column is bolted to a steel reinforced concrete foundation fully embedded in the soil to a depth of 5 feet. Design specifications for this sign structure were based on an assumed maximum wind of 100 miles per hour. The sign is located on property leased for a period of one year with automatic extensions unless terminated by either party on 30-days written notice served prior to the end of any lease period.

None of these structures has ever been moved and the oldest has been in place for 18 years. Even though the location site is subject to a one year renewable lease, it is anticipated that the sign structures will remain in place for an indeterminate number of years. The advertising space is sold by the taxpayer for periods of varying duration.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Reconsideration has been given to Rev. Rul. 68-62, 1968-1 C.B. 365, which considered whether certain outdoor advertising displays are "section 1245 property" within the meaning of section 1245 of the Internal Revenue Code.

Rev. Rul. 68-62 provides that outdoor advertising displays, commonly known as "billboards," are inherently permanent structures by their nature and use and are not, therefore, tangible personal property within the meaning of section 1.1245-3(b) of the Income Tax Regulations. That revenue ruling also states that the business of advertising a client's products and services is not one of the specified qualifying activities in section 1245(a)(3) of the Code. Therefore, the taxpayer's outdoor advertising displays were held not to be section 1245 property. The displays were held to be "real property" and therefore "section 1250 property" for purposes of determining gain or loss for dispositions of such property. Tangible personal property is defined the same for purposes of section 38 and section 1245. See section 1.1245-3(b)(1).

The Unted States Tax Court, in Whiteco Industries, Inc. v. Commissioner, 65 T.C. 664 (1975), acq., page 5, this Bulletin, held that the outdoor advertising displays at issue in that case were tangible personal property rather than inherently permanent structures and thus qualified for the investment tax credit. The displays were constructed entirely of wood, were leased to customers for a term, on the average, of 3 to 5 years, and were erected, in general, on property not owned by the taxpayer. In making its determination, the court applied criteria in the form of the following questions to be considered in deciding whether property (other than items in the nature of machinery) is to be classified as tangible personal property: (1) Is the property capable of being moved, and has it in fact been moved? (2) Is the property designed or constructed to remain permanently in place? (3) Are there circumstances that tend to show the expected or intended length of affixation, that is, are there circumstances that show the property may or will have to be moved? (4) How substantial a job is removal of the property, and how time-consuming is it? (5) How much damage will the property sustain upon its removal? (6) What is the manner of affixation of the property to the land?

The Internal Revenue Service will apply the criteria set forth by the tax court in Whiteco in determining whether outdoor advertising displays are tangible personal property. Outdoor advertising displays will not be categorically treated as being either tangible personal property or inherently permanent structures. Rather, the criteria set forth by the tax court in Whiteco will be applied on a case-by-case basis.

Each of the questions set forth by the court in Whiteco has been considered to determine whether sign structures X and Y should be treated as tangible personal propety:

(1) The evidence indicates that structure X-type signs are capable of being moved and have in fact been moved. However, taxpayer's structure Y-type signs have never been moved and the economics of moving such signs make it impractical.

(2) Structure X-type signs are not designed or constructed to last permanently and it is anticipated that they will be removed and require substantial renovation within 5 years. Structure Y-type sign structures, on the other hand, are designed to remain in place for an indeterminate number of years. Even though the location sites for these structures are subject to renewable short-term leases, the sites have been selected so that it is unlikely that the signs will have to be moved or removed at the expiration of the lease term.

(3) As indicated above, a structure X-type sign is erected only after a contract has been entered into with an advertiser. The taxpayer's experience indicates that there can be numerous situations that would require the sign to be removed at, or prior to, the expiration of the contract. The sign may have to be moved because the owner of the leased land does not renew the lease, or the owner exercises the option to develop the land, or because there is a change in location of the road or the occurrence of some other condition that makes the position of the sign no longer desirable. For structure Y, however, a location site was selected that is expected to be available to the taxpayer for an extended period of time. The economics of constructing, erecting, and removing this type of sign structure requires that careful consideration be given to the prospect for long-term availability and viability of the site for advertising purposes.

(4) The disassembly and removal of a structure X-type sign is a relatively quick and easy process. All that is needed is a truck with a winch and some small hand tools. The removal of a structure Y-type sign, on the other hand, would be a substantial operation. Although the taxpayer has not had to remove a sign structure of this kind, it is clear that special crane and transportation equipment would be required. The taxpayer will also have to sever the steel support column into smaller sections for ease of transportation.

(5) The taxpayer has been able to move structure X signs with little or no damage to the support structure. Except in those cases in which the wood has deteriorated, only the sign faces require occasional replacement when the sign structure is moved. For a structure Y-type sign, however, the concrete foundation would be abandoned and the steel support column will have to be cut into smaller sections for ease of transportation.

(6) The poles of a structure X-type sign are placed in the ground and require little additional foundation support. Such poles can easily be removed from the ground, and as a matter of practice, they are so moved. Structure Y on the other hand has been designed to withstand 100-mile-per-hour winds and is bolted to a steel reinforced concrete foundation that is fully embedded in the soil. This structure would be extremely difficult to move.

HOLDING

1. The outdoor advertising displays described above as structure X are tangible personal property and qualify as section 38 property.

2. The outdoor advertising displays described above as structure Y are inherently permanent structures and do not qualify as section 38 property.

3. Section 1033(g)(3) of the Code permits a taxpayer to elect to treat property that constitutes an oudoor advertising display as real property for purposes of nonrecognition of gain on involuntary conversions, effective for taxable years begining after December 31, 1970. This election is not permissible with respect to property that has been treated as tangible personal property subject to the investment credit or additional first-year depreciation.

26 CFR 1.48-1: Definition of section 38 property.

Investment credit; livestock auctioning; holding pens. The business of livestock auctioning does not fall within the meaning of either "manufacturing" or "production" as used in section 1.48-1(d)(1) or (2) of the regulations, and holding pens used in the auctioning business do not qualify as section 38 property.

Rev. Rul. 80-152

ISSUE

Is the auctioning of livestock an activity included in the activities specified in section 48(a)(1)(B)(i) of the Internal Revenue Code so that the holding pens used by the taxpayer in the business of auctioning would qualify as section 38 property for investment credit purposes?

FACTS

The taxpayer, in the business of livestock auctions, made several improvements to its facilities for the purpose of increasing its capacity to conduct these auctions. These additions included, among other things, holding pens where the livestock are retained for sale. These holding pens are inherently permanent structures that are depreciable property and have a useful life of more than three years.

The taxpayer's facilities provide a place where local livestock producers may bring their animals for sale. The taxpayer does not take title to the livestock, but merely acts as an agent between buyer and seller. The taxpayer charges a commission for its services, plus whatever incidental costs are involved in holding the animals. Animals are identified by numbered tags so that identification can be made of each animal throughout the auction. No livestock are retained in the holding pens for any extended periods of time.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 38 of the Code allows a credit against federal income tax for qualified investment in "section 38 property." The determination of what qualifies as section 38 property is made in accordance with the rules provided in section 48.

Section 48(a)(1) of the Code and section 1.48-1(a) of the Income Tax Regulations provide that the term section 38 property means tangible personal property or other tangible property (not including a building and its structural components), but only if such other tangible property is used as an integral part of certain specified activities, including manufacturing and production, or constitutes research or storage facilities used in connection with those activities.

Section 1.48-1(d)(2) of the regulations provides that for purposes of the credit allowed by section 38 the terms "manufacturing," "production," and "extraction" include construction, reconstruction, or making property out of used or new materials by processing, manipulating, refining, or changing the form of an article or by combining or assembling articles. Also included are the cultivation of the soil, the raising of livestock and the mining of minerals. Therefore, section 38 property would include property used as an integral part of extracting, processing, or refining metallic and nonmetallic minerals, construction of roads, processing of meat, cultivation of orchards, production of lumber or lumber products, and the fabrication or treatment of textiles, paper, and glass.

The basic question here is whether the business of conducting livestock auctions is an activity that falls within the terms "manufacturing" or "production" as used in section 1.48-1(d)(1) of the regulations. Section 1.48-1(d)(2) discusses these terms and names certain activities that are included in those terms, among which is the raising of livestock. The included activities produce a product or property or are preparatory to production of a product that becomes physically available for sale or use in producing another product. However, the activity of selling the resultant product is not included. Rev. Rul. 68-345, 1968-2 C.B. 30, which deals with canopies erected over gasoline station pumps, states that certain other tangible property may qualify as "section 38 property" if used by the taxpayer as an integral part of its business in one of the activities specified in section 1.48-1(d)(1). However, the retail selling of gasoline is not one of the specified qualifying activities.

Similarly, the auctioning (selling) of livestock, like the selling of gasoline in Rev. Rul. 68-345, is not an activity specified in section 1.48-1(a)(1) or (2) of the regulations.

Although the raising of livestock qualifies as a production activity under section 1.48-1(d)(2) of the regulations, it is distinguishable from the auctioning of livestock, which is neither a production activity in itself, nor necessary for the completeness of the production activity of raising livestock. Therefore, other tangible property used in the activity of selling is not used as an integral part of manufacture or production and does not qualify as section 38 property under section 1.48-1(d)(1).

HOLDING

The auctioning of livestock is not an activity included in the activities specified in section 48(a)(1)(B)(i) of the Code. Therefore, the holding pens do not qualify as section 38 property for investment tax credit purposes.

26 CFR 1.61-1: Gross income.
(Also Sections 263, 612; 1.263(a)-1, 1.612-4.)

"Bottom hole" contribution. A "bottom hole" contribution is includible in the recipient's gross income and must be treated as capital expenditure by the payor.

Rev. Rul. 80-153

ISSUES

1. Is a "bottom hole" contribution includible in the gross income of the recipient or is it to be treated as a reduction of the recipient's cost of drilling the well?

2. Must the payor of a bottom hole contribution capitalize such contribution or may the payor elect to expense such contribution under the provisions of section 1.612-4 of the Income Tax Regulations?

FACTS

Taxpayers A and B leased adjacent tracts of land for exploration and development of hydrocarbons. A proposes to drill a well on its tract, the drilling and testing of which will provide specific information on any potential producing horizons encountered in addition to general geologic information. A and B entered into a bottom hole agreement whereby A agreed to furnish B the geological and testing information that was obtained during drilling to a specific depth in return for a contribution by B of 25*x* dollars. B wanted the information for use in determining whether to develop or retain the property. A and B did not enter into a joint venture or cost sharing arrangement.

A furnished B the geological information obtained during drilling and testing of specific horizons. B then paid A 25*x* dollars.

The well was determined to be nonproductive when drilled to the specified depth and was plugged as a dry hole.

Neither A nor B abandoned any leases in any adjacent tracts of land during the taxable year the well was plugged.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 61(a)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code provides that gross income means all income from whatever source derived including compensation for services.

Section 263(a) of the Code provides that no deduction shall be allowed for permanent improvements made to increase the value of property.

Section 1.612-4(a) of the regulations provide that intangible drilling and development costs incurred by an operator in the development of oil and gas properties may be chargeable to capital or expense at the option of the operator and that this option applies to all expenditures made by an operator incident to and necessary for the drilling of wells and the preparation of wells for the production of oil or gas.

In Island Creek Coal Co. v Commissioner, 30 T.C. 370, 384-85 (1958), amounts received for scrap materials were not permitted to be credited to an expenditure account, because this netting process reduced the expenditure and indirectly increased the operator's percentage depletion allowance. The Tax Court reasoned that reducing an expenditure increased the taxable income from the mineral property and that such increase allowed the operator to increase the maximum amount permitted as a percentage depletion allowance.

Upon payment of a bottom hole contribution, the payor does not enter into a joint venture or sharing arrangement with the recipient, because the payor does not intend to contribute to the recipient's reservoir of capital. The recipient is paid for the service of providing information to the payor and not as a reimbursement for a capital expenditure that the recipient may elect to expense in part under section 263(c) of the Code and section 1.612-4(a) of the regulations. Thus, a recipient of a bottom hold contribution may not utilize such payment to reduce the recipient's cost of drilling a well.

In addition, if a recipient of a bottom hole contribution was permitted to utilize such payment to reduce drilling costs, such reduction might indirectly increase the recipient's maximum percentage depletion allowance under section 613(a) of the Code. This is because if a recipient elects to expense the intangible costs of drilling a well and a bottom hole contribution is utilized to reduce such intangible drilling costs, the amount of the recipient's taxable income from the mineral property would be increased and thus the maximum amount of the recipient's percentage depletion allowance would also be increased. See Rev. Rul. 77-136, 1977-1 C.B. 167, for specific situations in which the intangible costs of drilling a nonproductive well would be deductible from gross income from the mineral property in determining taxable income for purposes of the limitation on the percentage depletion allowance.

The payor of a bottom hole contribution receives information relating to the retention of the payor's interest in mineral property. Such information is in the nature of a capital expenditure under section 263 of the Code. A bottom hole contribution is not the type of expenditure that may be expensed at the option of the payor under secion 1.612-4(a) of the regulations. The information received by the payor is exploratory in nature and is not incident to or necessary for the drilling of wells on the payor's mineral property or for the preparation of wells for the production of oil or gas on the payor's mineral property. In fact, the payor may decide not to drill wells on the payor's mineral property.

HOLDING

The recipient, A, is not permitted to use the bottom hole contribution to reduce or offset the cost of drilling the well but must include the 25*x* dollar bottom hole contribution in income.

The payor, B, must capitalize the 25*x* dollar bottom hole contribution because such payment relates to the retention of B's leasehold interest in mineral property. B may not elect to expense the bottom hole contribution, because such expenditure is for exploratory purposes and because such expenditure is not one of the types of expenditures that is described in section 1.612-4(a) of the regulations.

Section 103.—Interest on Certain Governmental Obligations

(Also Section 61; 1.61-7.)

Municipal bonds; interest; benefits of the Department of Energy Act of 1978. Interest on municipal bonds that are otherwise tax exempt and that are issued to develop geothermal energy is includible in the gross income of the bondholder if the municipality issuing the bonds elects to receive a federal guarantee of the bonds and interest differential payments as provided by Title V of the Department of Energy Act of 1978.

Rev. Rul. 80-161

ISSUE

Will the interest on municipal bonds that would otherwise be excludable from the gross incomes of the bondholders under section 103(a)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code become includible if the issuer obtains the benefits of the Department of Energy Act of 1978—Civilian Applications, Pub. L. 95-238, section 509 of Title V, 92 Stat. 87 (Act)?

FACTS

A city has decided to develop a project to produce energy from geothermal resources. The city will own and operate the power plant and the energy produced will be used within the city by the general public. The city proposes to issue bonds to finance the cost of constructing the project. The city also will apply for a federal guarantee of the bonds and for interest differential payments as provided by Title V of the Act.

LAW

The Geothermal Energy Research, Development, and Demonstration Act of 1974, Pub. L. 93-410, sections 201 through 204, 88 Stat. 1086, established a Geothermal Loan Guarantee Program to foster geothermal development by guaranteeing repayment of principal and interest on loans to qualified borrowers. Section 790.4(c) of the Department of Energy Regulations implementing the 1974 Act provides that no loan shall be guaranteed if the income from the loan is excludable from the recipients' gross incomes.

Section 509 of the 1978 Act amended the 1974 Act to provide a loan differential payment with respect to obligations issued by, or in behalf of, any state, political subdivision, or any Indian tribe that are guaranteed under Title V of the Act and "for which the interest paid on such obligations and received by the purchaser thereof is included in gross income for purposes of chapter 1 of the Internal Recenue Code of 1954. . . ."

H.R. Rep. No. 95-349, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. (1978), made applicable to the Act by statements contained on pages S1487 and S1488 of the Congressional Record of February 8, 1978, indicates at page 199 that the provisions of section 509 of the 1978 Act are intended to enable states, municipalities, or Indian tribes to benefit from the loan guarantee program and to receive interest differential payments whenever the income from such loans are subject to federal income tax. The legislative intent is to authorize the Department of Energy to guarantee otherwise tax-exempt municipal obligations for qualifying geothermal projects provided that the interest on the obligations is includible in the gross incomes of the recipients. The payment of the interest differential to the issuer is to compensate the issuer for its increased borrowing cost since the interest on its obligation will not be tax-exempt.

HOLDING

The interest on the city's bonds will not be excludable from the gross incomes of the bondholders under section 103(a)(1) of the Code if the city obtains the benefits of Title V of the Act.

Section 163.—Interest

Supersession of Rev. Rul. 79-72, 1979-1 C.B. 278, discussing the treatment of interest for federal income tax purposes, on a 6-month nonnegotiable time deposit certificate having a term that overlaps the end of a taxable year. See Rev. Rul. 80-157, page 13.

Section 263.—Capital Expenditures

26 CFR 1.263(a)-1: Capital expenditures; in general.

Whether the payor of a bottom hole contribution must capitalize such contribution. See Rev. Rul. 80-153, page 8.

26 CFR 1.305-2: Distribution in lieu of money.

Dividends; cash; required investment in stock. Section 305(a) of the Code applies to the distribution from profits of a foreign corporation to two U.S. corporations, its only shareholders, pursuant to a shareholder resolution that declared a cash dividend and provided that the dividend was to be used to increase capital investment in the foreign corporation. The distribution is not includible in the shareholders' gross incomes.

Rev. Rul. 80-154

ISSUE

Does section 305(a) of the Internal Revenue Code apply to a distribution by a foreign corporation to its shareholders, who are two United States corporations, under the circumstances described below?

FACTS

X and Y, both of which are United States manufacturing corporations, owned all of the outstanding stock (common) of Z, a business entity organized under the law of M, a foreign country, as an M limited liability corporation and classified as an association taxable as a corporation for federal income tax purposes. It is engaged in the manufacturing business in M. X owns 80 percent of the Z stock and Y owns 20 percent. Under M law the shareholders of an M limited liability corporation declare dividends or otherwise direct the disposition of the profits of the corporation. Furthermore, under M income tax law, corporate profits of a business year that are not capitalized and are not distributed to shareholders are taxed to the corporation at a higher rate than if they are capitalized. The capitalized profits are taxed under M capital yield tax law to the shareholders as dividends. In 1978, X and Y directed Z, pursuant to written resolution, to increase its capital by the amount of its previous year's profits and to distribute this amount. The resolution stated that "the payment will be made in cash without any delay" and that "the dividend shall be utilized to cover a new share" that will "participate in the profit earned by the company beginning with the current business year." No cash or shares of stock or certificates of participation were distributed by Z to X or Y. Accounting entries recorded the reduction of undistributed profits and the increase in the capital of Z.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 305(a) of the Code provides that gross income does not include the amount of any distribution of the stock of a corporation made by such corporation to its shareholders with respect to its stock, except as otherwise provided in section 305. Section 305(b)(1) provides that section 305(a) does not apply and that the distribution will be treated as a distribution of property to which section 301 applies, if the distribution is, at the election of any of the shareholders (whether exercised before or after the declaration thereof), payable either in stock or in property.

A resolution declaring a cash dividend raises the presumption that a cash dividend is intended. However, this presumption is rebutted when the corporate resolution ties up the "cash" dividend so effectively that the shareholders never receive it, never exercise any control with respect to it, and the dividend is used to pay for additional stock. See Maverick-Clarke Litho Company v. Commissioner, 11 T.C. 1087 (1948), acq., 1949-1 C.B. 3, aff'd., 108 F.2d 587 (5th Cir. 1950), and Teehan v. United States, 25 F.2d 884 (D. Mass. 1928). In the instant case, the dividend declared was for the sole purpose of capitalizing the profits of Z and could not be taken out in cash at the option of X or Y. Thus, the capitalization of the profits of Z had the effect of a stock dividend.

Furthermore, the fact that X and Y could have initially directed Z to distribute its profits to them in cash or other property rather than have Z capitalize this amount is not an election within the meaning of section 305(b)(1) of the Code. This choice is not provided by corporate action but instead is a result of M law which provides that the shareholders of an M limited liability corporation declare dividends or otherwise direct the disposition of the profits of the corporation. Once the initial choice to capitalize was made, X and Y could not elect to receive cash or other property.

The distribution by Z to X and Y represents a distribution by Z of its common stock to its shareholders, X and Y, with respect to the Z common stock held by X and Y, and section 305(b)(1) is not applicable.

HOLDING

Under the facts described, section 305(a) of the Code is applicable to the distribution by Z to X and Y. Consequently, the distribution is not includible in X or Y's gross income.

Section 401.—Qualified Pension, Profit-Sharing, and Stock Bonus Plans

26 CFR 1.401-1: Qualified pension, profit-sharing, and stock bonus plans.

Valuation and allocation of trust assets. A defined contribution plan does not qualify where trust earnings are allocated to participants, and the valuation of trust investments are made, at infrequent or irregular intervals or different valuation methods are used for different participants. However, a plan provision allowing interim valuations at the trustee's discretion in addition to a constant annual valuation will not disqualify a plan, provided the use of the interim valuations does not result in prohibited discrimination. Rev. Ruls. 70-125 and 71-27 superseded.

The purpose of this revenue ruling is to restate the position in Rev. Rul. 70-125, 1970-1 C.B. 87, and Rev. Rul. 71-27, 1971-1 C.B. 121, in view of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, Pub. L. 93-406, 1974-3 C.B. 1 .

The issue in Rev. Rul. 70-125 is whether a defined contribution plan that contains a definite formula for crediting the employer's contributions to the participants' accounts but with no specific provision for allocation of trust earnings to participants' accounts or for the periodic valuation of trust investments is a qualified plan under section 401(a) of the Internal Revenue Code.

The issue in Rev. Rul. 71-27 is whether a plan provision allowing interim valuations in addition to an annual valuation will result in a plan's disqualification.

Section 414(i) of the Code states that a defined contribution plan is a plan that provides for an individual account for each participant and for benefits based solely on the amount contributed to the participant's account, and any income, expenses, gains and losses, and any forfeitures of acounts of other participants which may be allocated to such participant's account.

Section 1.401-1(b)(1)(ii) of the Income Tax Regulations states that a profit-sharing plan must provide a definite predetermined formula for allocating the contributions made to the plan among the participants and for distributing the funds accumulated under the plan. Section 1.401-1(b)(1)(iii) states that, for purposes of allocating and distributing the stock of the employer, a stock bonus plan is subject to the same requirements as a profit-sharing plan.

A pension plan of the money purchase type provides for fixed contributions that are not geared to profits. See section 1.401-1(b)(1)(i) of the regulations. Contributions under such a pension plan are accumulated under the plan and, along with the earnings thereon, distributed to participants in accordance with the terms of the plan.

Because profit-sharing, stock bonus and pension plans of the money purchase type (i.e., defined contribution plans) are required to provide for distributions in accordance with amounts stated or ascertainable and credited to participants, the funds under such a trust must be allocated to participants' accounts in accordance with a definite formula (although certain exceptions are allowed, such as the use of a suspense account in accordance with the requirements of section 415 of the Code).

Furthermore, if the amounts to be allocated or distributed to a particular participant are to be ascertainable, such plans must provide for a valuation of investments held by the trust, at least once a year, on a specified inventory date, in accordance with a method consistently followed and uniformly applied. The fair market value on the inventory date is to be used for this purpose. The respective accounts of participants are to be adjusted in accordance with the valuation.

In the case of a plan in which trust earnings, unrealized changes in the value of trust investments, and losses realized on the sale of trust assets may be valued and allocated to participants' accounts at infrequent or irregular intervals or different valuation methods may be used for different participants, the plan does not provide a definite formula for allocating and distributing the funds, as required by the regulations.

Accordingly, such a plan does not qualify under section 401(a) of the Code.

However, a plan provision allowing interim valuations at the trustee's discretion in addition to a consistent annual valuation does not disqualify the plan so long as the use of the interim valuations does not result in discrimination prohibited by section 401(a)(4) of the Code.

Rev. Ruls. 70-125 and 71-27 are superseded because the positions stated therein are restated under current law.

DISC; qualified export assets; PEFCO obligations. The Private Export Funding Corporation (PEFCO), which makes direct export loans guaranteed by the Export-Import Bank, notified a DISC that it was considering the implementation of a loan purchase program under a supplemental agreement with the Export-Import Bank to purchase outstanding loans that U.S. banks had made to finance sales of export property. The implementation of the program will not disqualify, as qualified export assets, PEFCO debt obligations owned or to be purchased by the DISC.

Rev. Rul. 80-156

ISSUE

Whether implementation by Private Export Funding Corporation (PEFCO) of a proposed loan purchase program will disqualify, as qualified export assets, the debt obligations (securities) of PEFCO that a Domestic International Sales Corporation (DISC) now owns, or which the DISC will purchase in the future.

FACTS

The taxpayer is a corporation that has elected to be taxable as a DISC. It currently owns 100*x* dollars in principal amount of debt obligations (securities) issued by PEFCO and expects to acquire additional debt obligations of PEFCO in the future. PEFCO is a domestic corporation organized as a medium for raising funds for the financing of United States exports from private business. It is designed to supplement the financing available for exports through commercial banks and the Export-Import Bank of the United States. To finance its activities, PEFCO issues its own debt obligations (securities).

PEFCO has notified the taxpayer that it is considering the implementation of a loan purchase program. Under the program, PEFCO will purchase outstanding loans that United States banks have made to finance the sales of export property. The Export-Import Bank will have guaranteed every loan that PEFCO buys.

The loan purchase program will not be implemented until PEFCO has made supplemental agreements with the Export-Import Bank. These supplemental agreements will require the Export-Import Bank's approval of all the loans that PEFCO purchases under the program. However, PEFCO will continue the making of export loans guaranteed by the Export-Import Bank as a significant activity.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 993(b)(8) of the Internal Revenue Code provides that qualified export assets include obligations issued by a domestic corporation organized solely for the purpose of financing sales of export property pursuant to an agreement with the Export-Import Bank of the United States under which such corporation makes export loans guaranteed by such bank.

Section 1.993-2(i)(1) of the Income Tax Regulations classifies the obligations described in section 993(b)(8) of the Code as financing obligations and uses identical language to describe the domestic corporation whose obligations qualify.

H.R. Rep. No. 92-533, 92d Cong., 1st Sess. 67 (1971), 1972-1 C.B. 498, 534 and S. Rep. No. 92-437, 92d Cong., 1st Sess. 100 (1971), 1972-1 C.B. 559, 614 both state that qualified export assets include the obligations of domestic corporations organized solely to finance sales of export property under an agreement with the Export-Import Bank, where the loans are guaranteed by that bank.

Rev. Rul. 75-564, 1975-2 C.B. 314, concludes that PEFCO obligations are qualified export assets within the meaning of section 993(b)(8) of the Code, provided the basis of those obligations satisfies certain requirements relating to accumulated DISC income, where the DISC acquired PEFCO obligations directly from PEFCO.

Rev. Rul. 79-153, 1979-1 C.B. 262, amplifying Rev. Rul. 75-564, concludes that PEFCO obligations are qualified export assets where the DISC acquired PEFCO obligations on the secondary market from parties other than PEFCO.

Section 993(b)(8) of the Code focuses on the type of corporation whose obligations will qualify as qualified export assets. It requires that the corporation: (1) be a domestic corporation; (2) be organized solely for the purpose of financing sales of export property pursuant to an agreement with the Export-Import Bank; and (3) under that agreement make export loans guaranteed by the Export-Import Bank.

Neither section 993(b)(8) of the Code nor the committee reports indicate that the domestic corporation is precluded under the Code from engaging in activities in addition to making direct loans as long as they are solely for the purpose of financing sales of export property under an agreement with the Export-Import Bank.

The above cited revenue rulings establish that PEFCO obligations were qualified export assets under section 993(b)(8) of the Code prior to PEFCO's implementation of its loan purchase program.

Since the loan purchase program will also be conducted under an agreement with the Export-Import Bank and will require approval of the Export-Import Bank, PEFCO will continue to satisfy the requirements of the domestic corporation under section 993(b)(8) of the Code, and thus its debt obligations (securities) will continue to qualify as qualified export assets.

HOLDING

PEFCO's implementation of the proposed loan purchase program will not disqualify, as qualified export assets, the PEFCO debt obligations (securities) that a DISC now holds or which the DISC will acquire in the future.

Interest; unmatured savings certificates. Rev. Rul. 79-72, which explains the treatment of interest that is not credited or made available for withdrawal before maturity without penalty on 6-month nonnegotiable time deposit certificates having a term that overlaps the end of a taxable year, is superseded effective December 31, 1978, for certain taxpayers, and for tax years beginning after September 18, 1979, for other taxpayers. The treatment of interest on other types of certificates on which the interest is credited monthly or quarterly and can be withdrawn without penalty is explained.

Rev. Rul. 79-72, 1979-1 C.B. 278, states that holders of 6-month nonnegotiable time deposit certificates constructively receive at the end of their taxable year the amount of interest that they would have received if the certificate had been redeemed at that time even though such redemption would have reduced the interest rate from 9 to 5 percent and also caused forfeiture of 3 months' interest. Rev. Rul. 79-72 also holds that the 6-month certificate is issued with original issue discount that is deductible ratably by the issuer under section 1.163-4 of the Income Tax Regulations over the term of the certificate.

Section 1.451-2(a)(2) of the regulations, adopted by T.D. 7663, 1980-6 I.R.B. 6, provides that the fact that the taxpayer, by withdrawing the earnings during the taxable year, would receive earnings that are substantially less in comparison with the earnings for the corresponding period to which the taxpayer would be entitled had the taxpayer left the account on deposit until a later date is a substantial limitation on the taxpayer's control over the receipt of such earnings and would preclude constructive receipt thereof.

Section 1.1232-3(b)(1)(iii) of the regulations, adopted by T.D. 7663, provides, in effect, that amounts earned on the 6-month certificates in Rev. Rul 79-72 will not generally be treated as original issue discount.

Therefore, in view of the amendments to the regulations set out above, interest income on the type of 6-month certificates described in Rev. Rul. 79-72 which is not credited or made available for the holder to withdraw before maturity of the certificate without penalty, is not includible in the gross income of holders who use the cash receipts and disbursements method of accounting before the certificates are redeemed or mature. Furthermore, issuers who use the cash receipts and disbursements method of accounting will not be allowed to deduct this interest until it is paid or credited to the holders.

However, in other types of certificates in which interest is credited monthly or quarterly and can be withdrawn immediately without penalty, even though the principal cannot be withdrawn without penalty until maturity of the certificates, the interest must be included in the holder's gross income for the taxable year credited to the account of the holder or made available for withdrawal by the holder.

EFFECT ON OTHER DOCUMENTS

Rev. Rul. 79-72 is superseded effective December 31, 1978, except for those taxpayers that used the ratable deduction rule pursuant to section 1.163-4 of the regulations with respect to the obligations described in Rev. Rul. 79-72 for their last taxable year beginning before September 19, 1978, as well as those taxpayers that properly applied for and received permission to change to this method of accounting with respect to such obligations for their last taxable year beginning before September 19, 1978. For those taxpayers Rev. Rul. 78-72 is superseded for taxable years beginning after September 18, 1979.

For those taxpayers who for the first time issued short-term obligations described in Rev. Rul. 79-72 and who use the ratable deduction rule in taxable years beginning after December 31, 1978, Rev. Rul. 79-72 is superseded as of December 31, 1978.

Any change in the taxpayer's present method of accounting to comply with the amendments made to the above cited regulations by T.D. 7663 is a change in the method of accounting to which the provisions of section 446 of the Code and the applicable regulations thereunder apply.

26 CFR 20.2039-2: Annuities under "qualified plans" and section 403(b) annuity contracts.

Profit-sharing plan; guaranteed payments received by designated beneficiary. The provisions of an annuity with a guaranteed period of payments that was purchased by the trustee of a noncontributory qualified profit-sharing plan gave the annuitant the right to receive the commuted value of the guaranteed payments, which would have been less than the amount required to purchase an annuity of comparable value. The value of the guaranteed payments received by the designated beneficiary had not been constructively received by the decedent and was excludable from the decedent's gross estate under section 2039 of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 80-158

ISSUE

Does the exclusion allowable under section 2039(c) of the Internal Revenue Code apply to the decedent's interest in a "qualified" profit sharing plan, under the circumstances described below?

FACTS

The decedent, prior to retirement, was an employee of X company and a participant in the company's noncontributory, profit-sharing plan that was qualified under section 401(a) of the Code. The plan provided for the purchase of ordinary paid up life insurance policies on the lives of all participating employees. If a participant terminated employment other than by death, the trustee of the plan was required at the request of the participant to convert the life insurance contracts of that participant into annuities payable for life with ten years certain or to surrender the contracts for their cash values and distribute the lump sum to the participant.

On the decedent's retirement date in 1975, two policies that had been purchased by the trustee of the plan on decedent's life were surrendered for two supplemental policies. Under the terms of the supplemental contracts, the decedent as primary payee was to receive monthly annuity payments for life with ten years of payments guaranteed in any event. In addition, although the supplemental policies were not distribtued to the decedent, the decedent had the right to designate a contingent beneficiary as payee of any proceeds payable at death and had the right to surrender the supplemental contracts and receive the commuted value of the guaranteed payments. Upon the decedent's death in 1977, the remaining guaranteed installments under the supplemental contracts were paid to the designated contingent beneficiary.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 2033 of the Code and the regulations thereunder provide that the gross estate of a decedent includes the value of all property beneficially owned by the decedent at the time of death.

Section 2039(a) and (b) of the Code provides that a decedent's gross estate includes the value of an annuity or other payment receivable by any beneficiary by reason of surviving the decedent, under certain contracts or agreements, to the extent that the value of the annuity or other payment is attributable to contributions made by the decedent or decedent's employer. Section 2039(c), however, provides an exclusion from the gross estate for an annuity or other payment receivable by any beneficiary (other than the executor) under a profit-sharing plan which, at the time of the decedent's separation from employment, met the requirements of section 401(a). Section 2039(c) further provides that, if the amounts payable after the death of the decedent are attributable to any extent to contributions made by the decedent, no exclusion is allowable for the proportionate value of such payments.

Section 20.2039-2(b), Example 4, of the Estate Tax Regulations indicates that if an employee is considered as having constructively received the amount credited to the employee's account under a qualified plan, such amount is not considered as receivable by the designated beneficiary under the plan and the exclusion under section 2039(c) of the Code is not applicable. See Northern Trust Co. v. United States, 389 F.2d 731 (7th Cir. 1968); First Trust Co. v. United States, 321 F. Supp. 1025 (D.C. Minn. 1970); Estate of Harold S. Brooks, 50 T.C. 585 (1968), acq., 1961-1 C.B. 20; Rev. Rul. 67-37, 1967-1 C.B. 271.

An amount that is otherwise excludable from the gross estate by virtue of section 2039(c) of the Code is nevertheless includible under section 2033, if the deceased constructively received all or a portion of the benefits under the plan. Under such circumstances, the amount receivable by the designated beneficiary is considered as passing from the deceased employee rather than under the plan. Constructive receipt, however, does not occur where the taxpayer's control of the benefits is subject to substantial limitations or restrictions not imposed by the taxpayer. See Rev. Rul. 77-34, 1977-1 C.B. 276.

In the present case, the decedent had the right during the ten year period of guaranteed payments to surrender the rights under the profit-sharing plan for the commuted value of the remaining guaranteed payments. If the decedent had exercised the right to receive the commuted value of the guaranteed payments, the decedent would have suffered a significant economic penalty, because the amount required to purchase a new annuity of comparable value would have been greater than the commuted value of the remainder of the ten year certain payments. See Rev. Rul. 68-482, 1968-2 C.B. 186. Thus, the decedent's control over the guaranteed payments was subject to a substantial limitation or restriction, and the decedent's interest in the profit-sharing trust was not constructively received by the decedent prior to death.

HOLDING

The designated beneficiary is considered to have received the remaining guaranteed payments from the noncontributory, qualified profit-sharing trust rather than from the decedent, and the value of these payments is excluded from the decedent's gross estate under section 2039(c) of the Code.

Section 2053.—Expenses, Indebtedness, and Taxes

26 CFR 20.2053-3: Deductions for expenses of administering estate.

Whether interest expense paid on federal estate taxes deferred under section 6166A of the Code and deductible under section 2053, is taken into account in determining the value of the property passing to the surviving spouse. See Rev. Rul. 80-159, below.

Section 2056.—Bequests, Etc., to Surviving Spouse

26 CFR 20.2056(b)-4: Marital deduction; valuation of interest passing to surviving spouse.

Marital deduction; installment payment of tax; interest. A decedent's will provided for a specific legacy to the decedent's parents with the balance of the estate to be divided equally between the decedent's spouse and child. The will stipulated that the parents' legacy was to be free of all death taxes. State law provides that property passing to the surviving spouse does not generate any death taxes and that interest payable with respect to death taxes must be apportioned in the same fashion as the taxes themselves. Interest paid on taxes deferred under section 6166A of the Code does not reduce the value of property passing to the surviving spouse for purposes of the marital deduction.

Rev. Rul. 80-159

ISSUE

For purposes of determining the amount of the marital deduction allowable under section 2056 of the Internal Revenue Code, is the value of property bequeathed and devised to the surviving spouse reduced by the payment of interest accrued on unpaid federal estate tax, under the circumstances described below?

FACTS

D, a resident of State X, died in 1977. The will provides for a legacy of $50,000 to D's parents and for the balance of the estate to be divided equally between D's child and surviving spouse. The will states that the parents' legacy is to be free of any federal or state taxes imposed as a result of D's death. Aside from this provision, the will does not direct how such taxes, debts, and funeral and administration expenses are to be paid.

Under the law of State X, in the absence of an express contrary direction in a decedent's will, all death taxes are to be equitably apportioned against those beneficial interests in the estate that give rise to such taxes. Any of such taxes that are payable with respect to beneficial interests from which the decedent has expressly removed the tax burden are payable pro rata by those beneficial interests which give rise to such taxes and which are not exonerated. Interest payable to government authorities with respect to death taxes is payable in the same fashion as the death taxes themselves. Such interest is allowable as a probate expense.

The law of State X provides that in the absence of a contrary expression by the testator, all debts of the decedent and all administration expenses are payable from the general assets of the probate estate.

Because ninety percent of D's gross estate consists of the value of a closely held business, the estate has elected, under section 6166A of the Code, to make 10 annual installment payments of that portion of the federal estate tax liability that is attributable to the closely held business. The estate has paid two installments of estate tax and has also paid interest on the deferred tax.

The provisions of the death tax statute in State X are identical to the federal estate tax provisions. Therefore, the property passing to the surviving spouse does not generate any death taxes.

The estate has claimed a deduction, under section 2053 of the Code, with respect to the interest paid with the federal tax installments. Although the interest is treated as an administration expense for estate tax deduction purposes, the interest expense has not been paid from the general probate assets, from which other administration expenses are payable. Instead, the interest payment has been apportioned among the taxable beneficial interests in the estate in the same manner as the underlying taxes.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 2056 of the Code provides for a deduction, with certain limitations, of the value of property that passes from the decedent to the surviving spouse. Section 2056(b)(4) requires that the value of property passing to the spouse shall be determined (A) by taking into account the effect that any estate or inheritance tax has on the net value of the interest passing to the surviving spouse, and (B) by taking into account any encumbrance or obligation with respect to such interest.

In this case, the property passing to the surviving spouse does not generate any death taxes and therefore is not burdened with the payment of the taxes.

Under section 2053(a)(2) of the Code and the applicable regulations, the amount of administration expenses, that are allowable under local law and that are actually and necessarily incurred, is deductible in determining the value of the taxable estate. Accrued interest that is payable on estate tax deferred under section 6166A of the Code is a necessary administration expense and is deductible to the extent allowable under local law. See Estate of Bahr v. Commissioner, 68 T.C. 74 (1977), acq., 1978-1 C.B. 1; Rev. Rul. 78-125, 1978-1 C.B. 292, revoking Rev. Rul. 75-239, 1975-1 C.B. 304.

Although the interest payment is an administration expense for purposes of the federal estate tax deduction, local law governs the source from which the executor must make the interest payment. Under the law of State X, interest payable with respect to death taxes must be apportioned in the same fashion as the taxes themselves. Therefore, the interest paid on deferred federal estate tax in the present case is payable only from those assets that pass to the child.

HOLDING

Pursuant to the application of the law of State X, the interest paid on federal estate taxes deferred under section 6166A of the Code does not require a reduction to the net value of property passing to the surviving spouse, for purposes of determining the amount of the federal estate tax marital deduction allowable under section 2056.

Exemption certificates; international organizations; extension of period. Exemption certificates covering all tax-exempt sales by manufacturers and retailers to the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, the Inter-American Development Bank, the International Development Association, the International Finance Corporation, and the International Monetary Fund shall be acceptable for specified periods of up to 12 calendar quarters; Rev. Rul. 62-55 modified.

Rev. Rul. 62-55, 1962-1 C.B. 188, holds that the manufacturers and retailers excise taxes imposed by Chapters 31 and 32 of the Internal Revenue Code do not apply to otherwise taxable sales made to the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development and certain other designated international organizations established under substantially similar international agreements that provide immunity from taxation. Those organizations are: Inter-American Development Bank, International Development Association, International Finance Corporation, and International Monetary Fund.

Rev. Rul. 62-55 requires that to support an exempt sale to one of these organizations, a manufacturer or retailer must obtain an exemption certificate, and where sales to an organization are regularly or frequently made, a certificate covering all orders for a specified period not to exceed four calendar quarters will be acceptable.

The Manufacturers and Retailers Excise Tax Regulations, as recently amended, provide that where sales are regularly or frequently made to a purchaser for an exempt use described therein, an exemption certificate covering all orders for a specified period not to exceed 12 calendar quarters will be acceptable.

HOLDING

In order to achieve uniformity among manufacturers and retailers who make tax-exempt sales, the Internal Revenue Service has determined that where exempt sales are regularly or frequently made to one of the international organizations described above, an exemption certificate covering all orders for a specified period not to exceed 12 calendar quarters will be acceptable.

EFFECT ON OTHER REVENUE RULINGS

TITLE 26.—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER 1, SUBCHAPTER F, PROCEDURE AND ADMINISTRATION, PART 403.—DISPOSITION OF SEIZED PERSONAL PROPERTY

Compensation paid to appraisers

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Final regulations.

SUMMARY: This document provides final regulations relating to the rate of compensation that is paid to appraisers of property seized as subject to forfeiture. These regulations provide necessary guidance to the public for compliance with the law, and affect appraisers of such property.

DATE: The regulations are effective from April 25, 1980.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: Kyllikki Kusma of the Legislation and Regulations Division, Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224, Attention: CC:LR:T, LR-2-80, 202-566-3287, not a toll-free call.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

The regulations at § 403.50 currently set the rate of compensation that is paid to an appraiser of property seized as subject to forfeiture at $3.00 per hour or portion thereof. Because this rate is inadequate, these regulations change the rate of compensation that is paid from $3.00 per hour to "a reasonable fee not to exceed $15.00 per hour or a portion thereof." Because this regulation is nonsubstantive and essentially procedural, it is found unnecessary to issue this Treasury decision with notice and public procedure. For the same reasons, this regulation is not a significant regulation under paragraph 8 of the Treasury Directive appearing in the Federal Register for November 8, 1978 (43 FR 52120).

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of this regulation is Kyllikki Kusma of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulation, both on matters of substance and style.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Each appraiser selected under § 403.26(a)(2) shall receive as compensation a reasonable fee not to exceed $15.00 per hour or portion thereof for the performance of such appraiser's duties in appraising property seized as subject to forfeiture under the internal revenue laws and this part.

Because this regulation is nonsubstantive, liberalizing and essentially procedural, it is found unnecessary to issue it with notice and public procedure under subsection (b) of section 553 of Title 5 of the United States Code or subject to the effective date limitation of subsection (d) of that section.

Jerome Kurtz,
Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

Approved April 11, 1980.

Donald C. Lubick,
Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

An Act to authorize appropriations for certain insular areas of the United States, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

TITLE II—NORTHERN MARIANA ISLANDS

Sec. 204. (a) Section 3(d) of the Act entitled "An Act to authorize appropriations for certain insular areas of the United States and for other purposes" (Public Law 95-348; 92 Stat. 487) is amended by inserting "(1)" after "(d)" and by inserting "or upon receipt of a resolution adopted by both houses of the legislature of the Northern Mariana Islands accompanied by a letter of request from either the Governor or the Lieutenant Governor of the Northern Mariana Islands," after "Constitution of the Northern Mariana Islands," the first place it appears, and by adding at the end of "(d)" the following new paragraphs:

"(2) For purposes of carrying out any administration and enforcement required by this subsection, the Secretary of the Treasury (hereinafter in this subsection referred to as the 'Secretary'), or his delegate, at no cost to the Northern Marianas government, may (A) employ citizens of the Northern Mariana Islands (as defined by Article III of the Covenant to Establish a Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands in Political Union with the United States (approved, Public Law 94-241; 90 Stat. 265, 1976-1 C.B. 513)), or (B) use the services of employees of the government of the Northern Mariana Islands, upon agreement to pay such government for the use of such services. In addition, the Secretary, or his delegate, shall make every effort to assure that citizens of the Northern Mariana Islands (as so defined) are trained to ultimately assume the administration and enforcement duties required of the Secretary or his delegate under this section. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary or his delegate is authorized to the maximum extent feasible in administering and enforcing the requested sections of the Covenant, to employ and train Northern Mariana Islands' citizens without regard to United States Civil Service hiring or job classification laws or any employment ceilings imposed upon the Secretary. The preceding sentence shall not exempt such Northern Mariana Islands' citizens so hired from any other laws affecting Federal or Internal Revenue Service employees and shall remain in effect until the end of the third full fiscal year following the date of enactment.

"(3) As part of the administration of taxes required by this subsection, the Secretary or his delegate shall establish, at no cost to the Northern Marianas government, a taxpayers information service to provide such information and assistance to citizens of the Northern Mariana Islands (as so defined) as may be necessary for the filing of returns and the payment of such taxes.".

(b) The Secretary shall take such steps as are necessary to ensure that the proceeds of taxes collected under the provisions of sections 601, 602, 603, and 604 of the Covenant (Public Law 94-241) are covered directly upon collection into the treasury of the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands.

Sec. 205. (a) Except as provided in subsection (c), any person, including an individual, trust, estate, partnership, association, company, or corporation, which is a resident of or which is organized under the laws of the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands and which is subject to the provisions of section 601 of the Covenant to Establish the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands in Political Union with the United States (Public Law 94-241), shall be exempted from the requirements of such section with respect to income derived from sources within the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1978, and before January 1, 1981. Nothing in this section shall be construed as relieving such person from the obligation to comply with the requirements of section 601 with respect to income derived from sources outside of the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands.

(b) Except as provided in subsection (c), any person, including an individual, trust, estate, partnership, association, company, or corporation, which is a resident of or which is organized under the laws of the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands and which is subject to the provisions of section 601 of the Covenant to Establish the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands (Public Law 94-241), shall be exempt from the requirements of such section with respect to income from sources within the Northern Mariana Islands for its taxable year beginning after December 31, 1980, and before January 1, 1982: Provided, That the Secretary receives written notice from the Governor of the Northern Mariana Islands not later than September 30, 1980, that sections 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5 of chapter 2 of Public Law 1-30 of the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands or its successor, have been repealed in their entirety, effective December 31, 1981.

(c) It is the sense of Congress that the term "rebate" as used in section 602 of Public Law 94-241 does not permit the abatement of taxes.

SEC. 405. (a) Subsection 28(a) of the Revised Organic Act of the Virgin Islands, Pub. L. 517, 1954-2 C.B. 595, as amended by subsection 4(c)(3) of the Act of August 18, 1978 (92 Stat. 487, 491) is amended by inserting after the phrase "and naturalization fees collected in the Virgin Islands," the phrase "less the cost of collecting, except any costs for preclearance operations which shall not be deducted, of all of said duties, taxes, and fees from August 18, 1978, until January 1, 1982,".

(b) Section 4(c)(2) of the Act of August 18, 1978, is amended by inserting the phrase "less the cost of collecting all of said duties, taxes, and fees, occurring before January 1, 1982," after the phrase "the amount of duties, taxes, and fees."

PURPOSE

The purpose of H.R. 3756 is to amend the necessary appropriations, make certain amendments to existing laws, and to provide needed legislation relating to the insular areas of American Samoa, Guam, the Northern Mariana Islands, the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, and the Virgin Islands in their economic and political development.

BACKGROUND

The 1979 Insular Areas bill was unanimously approved by the Subcommittee on National Parks and Insular Affairs on Monday, April 30. On May 2, 1979, the House Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs reported out H.R. 3756, as amended, by unanimous voice vote.

Crude Oil Windfall Profit Tax Public Hearing on Proposed Regulations

Announcement 80-82 [1]

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Public hearing on proposed regulations.

SUMMARY: This document provides notice of a public hearing on proposed regulations relating to title I of the Crude Oil Windfall Profit Tax Act of 1980, Pub. L. 96-223.

DATES: The public hearing will be held on July 16, 1980, beginning at 10:00 a.m., and if necessary, on July 17, 1980. Outlines of oral comments must be delivered or mailed by July 2, 1980.

ADDRESS: The public hearing will be held in the I.R.S. Auditorium, Seventh Floor, 7400 Corridor, Internal Revenue Building, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. The outlines should be submitted to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Attn: CC:LR:T (LR-48-80), Washington, D.C. 20224.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: Charles Hayden of the Legislation and Regulations Division, Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224, 202-566-3935, not a toll-free call.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: The subject of the public hearing is proposed regulations published in two notices of proposed rulemaking appearing in the Federal Register for Friday, April 4, 1980 (45 FR 23384) and Friday, April 25, 1980 (45 FR 27929). These regulations were proposed under title 1 of the Crude Oil Windfall Profit Tax Act of 1980.

The rules of § 601.601(a)(3) of the "Statement of Procedural Rules" (26 CFR Part 601) shall apply with respect to the public hearing. Persons who have submitted written comments within the time prescribed in the notices of proposed rulemaking and also desire to present oral comments at the hearing on the proposed regulations should submit an outline of oral comments to be presented at the hearing and the time they wish to devote to each subject by July 2, 1980.

Each speaker will be limited to one 10 minute oral presentation, whether on one or both notices, exclusive of time consumed by questions from the panel for the Government and answers to these questions.

Because of controlled access restrictions, attendees cannot be admitted beyond the lobby of the Internal Revenue Building until 9:45 a.m.

An agenda showing the scheduling of the speakers will be made after outlines are received from the speakers. Copies of the agenda will be available free of charge at the hearing.

This document does not meet the criteria for significant regulations set forth in paragraph 8 of the Treasury Directive on improving government regulations appearing in the Federal Register for Wednesday, November 8, 1978.

[1] Based on News Release IR-80-68 dated June 6, 1980.

Announcement of the Disbarment, Suspension, or Consent to Voluntary Suspension of Attorneys, Certified Public Accountants, Enrolled Agents and Enrolled Actuaries from Practice before the Internal Revenue Service

Under Section 1026, Title 31 of the United States Code (1970 ed.), the Secretary of the Treasury, after due notice and opportunity for hearing, is authorized to suspend or disbar from practice before the Internal Revenue Service any person who has violated the rules and regulations governing the recognition of attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents or enrolled actuaries to practice before the Internal Revenue Service.

Attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries are prohibited in any Internal Revenue Service matter from directly or indirectly employing, accepting assistance from, being employed by or sharing fees with, any practitioner disbarred or under suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service.

To enable attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries to identify such disbarred or suspended practitioners, the Director of Practice will announce in the Internal Revenue Bulletin the names and addresses of practitioners who have been disbarred or suspended from such practice, their designation as attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, and the date of disbarment or period of suspension. This announcement will appear and will continue to appear in the weekly Bulletins for five successive weeks for each attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary so suspended or disbarred and will later be consolidated and published in the Cumulative Bulletin.

By decision on appeal from an initial decision in an administrative hearing, the following individuals have been suspended or disbarred from further practice before the Internal Revenue Service:

Name	Address	Designation	Effective Date
Sydney M. Eisenberg	Milwaukee, WI	Attorney	April 17, 1980 Disbarment
Leon Feldt	El Paso, TX	Certified Public Accountant	March 26, 1980 Disbarment
Angelos P. Romas	Endicott, NY	Attorney	April 9, 1980 Disbarment

After due notice and opportunity for hearing, the following individuals have been disbarred from further practice before the Internal Revenue Service:

Name	Address	Designation	Date of Disbarment
John E. DeSantis	Belmont, CA	Certified Public Accountant	May 12, 1980

Under 31 Code of Federal Regulations, Part 10, an attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, in order to avoid the institution or conclusion of a proceeding for his disbarment or suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, may offer his consent to suspension from such practice. The Director of Practice, in his discretion, may suspend an attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary in accordance with the consent offered.

Attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries are prohibited in any Internal Revenue Service matter from directly or indirectly employing, accepting assistance from, being employed by or sharing fees with, any practitioner disbarred or under suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service.

To enable attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries to identify practitioners under consent suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, the Director of Practice will announce in the Internal Revenue Bulletin the names and addresses of practitioners who have been suspended from such practice, their designation as attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, and the date or period of suspension. This announcement will appear in the weekly Bulletin at the earliest practicable date after such action and will continue to appear in the weekly Bulletins for five successive weeks or for as many weeks as is practicable for each attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary so suspended and will later be consolidated and published in the Cumulative Bulletin.

The following individuals have been placed under consent suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service:

Name	Address	Designation	Term of Suspension
Frank H. Abernathy	Richmond, VA	Certified Public Accountant	Indefinite effective April 9, 1980
Carl L. Harthun	Denver, CO	Attorney	Indefinite effective April 9, 1980
John T. Kelly, Jr.	Virginia Beach, VA	Certified Public Accountant	Indefinite effective April 15, 1980

Announcement Relating to Proposed Regulations Published With Notice of Proposed Rulemaking

Changes in regulations as announced below have been published in the Federal Register in tentative or proposed form to provide interested parties with an opportunity to file their objections or suggestions for consideration prior to final adoption of such regulations. These announcements will appear in the Bulletin during the period which has been prescribed for the submission and consideration of any views, arguments, or suggestions pertaining to the proposed regulations so published. Statement of such views, arguments or suggestions should be submitted in writing, preferably six copies, to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Attention: CC:LR:T, Washington, D.C. 20224.

Definition of Terms

Revenue Rulings and Revenue Procedures (hereinafter referred to as "rulings") that have an effect on previous rulings use the following defined terms to describe the effect:

Amplified describes a situation where no change is being made in a prior published position, but the prior position is being extended to apply to a variation of the fact situation set forth therein. Thus, if an earlier ruling held that a principle applied to A, and the new ruling holds that the same principle also applies to B, the earlier ruling is amplified. (Compare with modified, below).

Clarified is used in those instances where the language in a prior ruling is being made clear because the language has caused, or may cause, some confusion. It is not used where a position in a prior ruling is being changed.

Distinguished describes a situation where a ruling mentions a previously published ruling and points out an essential difference between them.

Modified is used where the substance of a previously published position is being changed. Thus, if a prior ruling held that a principle applied to A but not to B, and the new ruling holds that it applies to both A and B, the prior ruling is modified because it corrects a published position. (Compare with amplified and clarified, above).

Obsoleted describes a previously published ruling that is not considered determinative with respect to future transactions. This term is most commonly used in a ruling that lists previously published rulings that are obsoleted because of changes in law or regulations. A ruling may also be obsoleted because the substance has been included in regulations subsequently adopted.

Revoked describes situations where the position in the previously published ruling is not correct and the correct position is being stated in the new ruling.

Superseded describes a situation where the new ruling does nothing more than restate the substance and situation of a previously published ruling (or rulings). Thus, the term is used to republish under the 1954 Code and regulations the same position published under the 1939 Code and regulations. The term is also used when it is desired to republish in a single ruling a series of situations, names, etc., that were previously published over a period of time in separate rulings. If the new ruling does more than restate the substance of a prior ruling, a combination of terms is used. For example, modified and superseded describes a situation where the substance of a previously published ruling is being changed in part and is continued without change in part and it is desired to restate the valid portion of the previously published ruling in a new ruling that is self contained. In this case the previously published ruling is first modified and then, as modified, is superseded.

Supplemented is used in situations in which a list, such as a list of the names of countries, is published in a ruling and that list is expanded by adding further names in subsequent rulings. After the original ruling has been supplemented several times, a new ruling may be published that includes the list in the original ruling and the additions, and supersedes all prior rulings in the series.

Suspended is used in rare situations to show that the previous published rulings will not be applied pending some future action such as the issuance of new or amended regulations, the outcome of cases in litigation, or the outcome of a Service study.

INTERNAL REVENUE BULLETIN

The Introduction on page 3 describes the purpose and content of this publication. The weekly Internal Revenue Bulletin is sold on a yearly subscription basis by the Superintendent of Documents. Current subscribers are notified by the Superintendent of Documents when their subscriptions must be renewed.

CUMULATIVE BULLETINS

The contents of the weekly Bulletin are consolidated semiannually into a permanent, indexed, Cumulative Bulletin. These are sold on a single copy basis and are not included as part of the subscription to the Internal Revenue Bulletin. Subscribers to the weekly Bulletin are notified when copies of the Cumulative Bulletin are available. Certain issues of Cumulative Bulletins are out of print and are not available. Persons desiring available Cumulative Bulletins, which are listed on the reverse, may purchase them from the Superintendent of Documents.

BULLETIN INDEX-DIGEST SYSTEM

The Bulletin Index-Digest System (12-78) provides a fast and easy way to research Revenue Rulings, Revenue Procedures, Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and other matters of a permanent nature published in the weekly Internal Revenue Bulletin, or Cumulative Bulletin from 1953 on. It is a comprehensive and up-to-date research tool that requires no filing or other clerical maintenance. The current revision consists of four Services, available on a subscription basis, each including a basic volume that covers the period 1953-1978 and a cumulative supplement covering material published in subsequent Bulletins for the following two-year period. Cumulative supplements are issued quarterly for the Income Tax Service and semiannually for the Estate and Gift, Employment, and Excise Tax Services.

HOW TO ORDER

Check the publications and/or subscription(s) desired on the reverse, complete the order blank, enclose the proper remittance, detach entire page, and mail to the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. Please allow two to six weeks, plus mailing time, for delivery.

Statement of Principles of Internal Revenue Tax Administration

The function of the Internal Revenue Service is to administer the Internal Revenue Code. Tax policy for raising revenue is determined by Congress.

With this in mind, it is the duty of the Service to carry out that policy by correctly applying the laws enacted by Congress; to determine the reasonable meaning of various Code provisions in light of the Congressional purpose in enacting them; and to perform this work in a fair and impartial manner, with neither a government nor a taxpayer point of view.

At the heart of administration is interpretation of the Code. It is the responsibility of each person in the Service, charged with the duty of interpreting the law, to try to find the true meaning of the statutory provision and not to adopt a strained construction in the belief that he is "protecting the revenue." The revenue is properly protected only when we ascertain and apply the true meaning of the statute.

The Service also has the responsibility of applying and administering the law in a reasonable, practical manner. Issues should only be raised by examining officers when they have merit, never arbitrarily or for trading purposes. At the same time, the examining officer should never hesitate to raise a meritorious issue. It is also important that care be exercised not to raise an issue or to ask a court to adopt a position inconsistent with an established Service position.

Administration should be both reasonable and vigorous. It should be conducted with as little delay as possible and with great courtesy and considerateness. It should never try to overreach, and should be reasonable within the bounds of law and sound administration. It should, however, be vigorous in requiring compliance with law and it should be relentless in its attack on unreal tax devices and fraud.

Introduction

The Internal Revenue Bulletin is the authoritative instrument of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for announcing official rulings and procedures of the Internal Revenue Service and for publishing Treasury Decisions, Executive Orders, Tax Conventions, legislation, court decisions, and other items of general interest. It is published weekly and may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. Bulletin contents of a permanent nature are consolidated semiannually into Cumulative Bulletins, which are sold on a single-copy basis.

It is the policy of the Service to publish in the Bulletin all substantive rulings necessary to promote a uniform application of the tax laws, including all rulings that supersede, revoke, modify, or amend any of those previously published in the Bulletin. All published rulings apply retroactively unless otherwise indicated. Procedures relating solely to matters of internal management are not published; however, statements of internal practices and procedures that affect the rights and duties of taxpayers are published.

Revenue rulings represent the conclusions of the Service on the application of the law to the pivotal facts stated in the revenue ruling. In those based on positions taken in rulings to taxpayers or technical advice to Service field offices, identifying details and information of a confidential nature are deleted to prevent unwarranted invasions of privacy and to comply with statutory requirements.

Rulings and procedures reported in the Bulletin do not have the force and effect of Treasury Department Regulations, but they may be used as precedents. Unpublished rulings will not be relied on, used, or cited as precedents by Service personnel in the disposition of other cases. In applying published rulings and procedures, the effect of subsequent legislation, regulations, court decisions, rulings, and procedures must be considered, and Service personnel and others concerned are cautioned against reaching the same conclusions in other cases unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same.

The Bulletin is divided into four parts as follows:

Part I.—1954 Code.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

Part II.—Treaties and Tax Legislation.

This part is divided into two subparts as follows: Subpart A, Tax Conventions, and Subpart B, Legislation and Related Committee Reports.

Part III.—Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous.

To the extent practicable, pertinent cross references to these subjects are contained in the other Parts and Subparts.

Part IV.—Items of General Interest.

With the exception of the disbarment and suspension list included in this part, none of these announcements is consolidated in the Cumulative Bulletins.

The first Bulletin for each month includes an index for the matters published during the preceding month. These monthly indexes are cumulated on a quarterly and semiannual basis, and are published in the first Bulletin of the succeeding quarterly and semi-annual period, respectively.

The Bulletin Index-Digest System, a research and reference service supplementing the Bulletin, may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. It consists of four Services: Service No. 1, Income Tax; Service No. 2, Estate and Gift Taxes; Service No. 3, Employment Taxes; Service No. 4, Excise Taxes. Each Service consists of a basic volume and a cumulative supplement that provide (1) finding lists of items published in the Bulletin, (2) digests of revenue rulings, revenue procedures, and other published items, and (3) topical indexes of Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and Tax Conventions.

The contents of this publication are not copyrighted and may be reprinted freely. A citation of the Internal Revenue Bulletin as the source would be appropriate.

Rev. Rul. 80-162

ISSUE

Are certain downpayments and deposits on the purchase of equipment that were later refunded considered "capital expenditures" within the meaning of section 103(b)(6)(D)(ii) of the Internal Revenue Code for purposes of determining if the exempt small issue limitation of $10,000,000 has been exceeded?

FACTS

In January 1979, City M issued industrial development bonds as defined in section 103(b)(2) of the Code in the amount of $9,500,000. Substantially all of the bond proceeds were used to acquire an existing manufacturing facility located within M. The facility was leased to corporation X, a nonexempt person, for use in X's manufacturing operation. Prior to the issuance of the bonds, M made an election to have the bonds treated as a $10,000,000 exempt small issue under section 103(b)(6)(D). Neither M nor X had made any capital expenditures with respect to the facilities during the three years before the date of the issuance of the bonds. Prior to the issuance of the bonds, X did not own, lease, or operate any facilities in M. The bonds are not arbitrage bonds as described in section 103(c), and it was determined that the interest on the bonds was excludable from the gross incomes of the bondholders under the provisions of section 103(a)(1).

X decided to expand its operations at the facilities located in M by purchasing additional equipment. In February 1980, X ordered custom-made equipment and paid $600,000 to vendors from its own funds as downpayments and deposits. X discovered that the purchase of the equipment would be treated as a capital expenditure within the meaning of section 103(b)(6)(D)(ii) of the Code and would cause the aggregate face amount of the bonds to exceed the $10,000,000 limitation for exempt small issues. With the consent of the vendors, X immediately entered into an arrangement with corporation Y, an unrelated person, under which Y will purchase the custom-made equipment ordered by X from the vendors. Pursuant to a valid lease agreement between X and Y, Y will install the equipment in X's facility and lease it to X. The vendors terminated their contracts with X and refunded the downpayments and deposits to X. Y is in the business of leasing custom-made manufacturing equipment. The equipment to be leased by X is the type that is ordinarily the subject of a lease.

HOLDING

The downpayments and deposits made by X are not capital expenditures by X within the meaning of section 103(b)(6)(D)(ii) of the Code because X did not purchase, acquire, or take delivery of any of the equipment prior to the termination of the purchase contracts. The equipment purchased by Y is not treated as a capital expenditure attributable to X because section 1.103-10(b)(2)(iv) of the Income Tax Regulations specifically excludes expenditures for leased tangible personal property under the circumstances described above. Therefore, M's bonds will not exceed the exempt small issue limitation under section 103(b)(6)(D), and the interest on the bonds will continue to be excludable from the gross incomes of the bondholders under the provisions of section 103(a)(1).

EFFECT ON OTHER REVENUE RULINGS

The facts in Rev. Rul. 79-248, 1979-2 C.B. 41, are distinguishable from the facts in this revenue ruling. In Rev. Rul. 79-248 the completed purchase of equipment by a corporation is held to be a capital expenditure even though the corporation sold the equipment before placing it in service, while in this revenue ruling the corporation did not actually complete the purchase of the equipment.

Section 120.—Amounts Received Under Qualified Group Legal Services Plans

26 CFR 1.120-3: Notice of application for recognition of status of qualified group legal services plan.

TITLE 26.—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER I, SUBCHAPTER A, PART 1.—INCOME TAX; TAXABLE YEARS BEGINNING AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1953

Application for recognition as a qualified group legal services plan

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Final regulations.

SUMMARY: This document contains final regulations relating to notice of application for recognition of the status of a qualified group legal services plan. Provisions relating to group legal services plans were added to the tax law by the Tax Reform Act of 1976 [Pub. L. 94-455, 1976-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1]. The regulations provide guidance to administrators or sponsors of group legal services plans in applying to the Internal Revenue Service for recognition of a plan's status as a qualified plan.

EFFECTIVE DATE: The amendments are effective for notices of application for recognition of the status of a qualified group legal services plan filed after May 29, 1980.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

On July 14, 1978, the Federal Register published a proposed amendment to the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) under section 120(c)(4) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (43 FR 30306). This amendment was proposed to conform the regulations to section 2134 of the Tax Reform Act of 1976 (90 Stat. 1926). After consideration of all comments regarding the proposed amendments, those amendments are adopted as revised by this Treasury decision.

FORM 1024

Section 120(c)(4) provides that in order to be a qualified group legal services plan, the plan must give notice to the Secretary of the Treasury that it is applying for recognition of its status as a qualified plan. As described in the proposed regulations, the notice must be filed on Form 1024, Application for Recognition of Exemption under Section 501(a) or for Determination under Section 120, with the accompanying Schedule L. As a result of comments on the proposed regulations, certain revisions have been made to Form 1024 to identify those portions of the form that need not be completed when applying for recognition of the status as a qualified group legal services plan.

The final regulations also provide that if either the Form 1024 or Schedule L filed by or on behalf of an employer is incomplete, the Schedule will be considered filed with the Internal Revenue Service only when all required information is filed.

PLANS TO WHICH MORE THAN ONE EMPLOYER CONTRIBUTES

The proposed regulations have been revised to clarify the requirement for filing Form 1024 with the accompanying Schedule L where two or more employers contribute to the same plan. In general, the final regulations provide that the adoption of a plan by an employer will be treated as the adoption of a separate plan to which that employer alone contributes, notwithstanding that, in form, the employer purports to adopt a plan with respect to which the employer is one of two or more contributing employers. Those provisions in the proposed regulations that described an "abbreviated" filing with respect to additional adopting employers have been deleted in the final regulations, but continue to be reflected in the instructions accompanying Form 1024. Those instructions may be followed.

The "multiple filing" rules do not apply, however, to a plan to which more than one employer contributes, if the plan is maintained pursuant to a collective bargaining agreement. For these collectively-bargained plans, only one Form 1024 and accompanying Schedule L is required, regardless of the number of contributing employers.

PLANS IN EXISTENCE ON JUNE 4, 1976

As described in the proposed regulations, a written group legal services plan in existence on June 4, 1976, will be deemed a qualified plan until April 2, 1977, whether or not a notice of application is filed for the plan. If the plan is maintained pursuant to a collective bargaining agreement in effect on October 4, 1976, this period of deemed qualification will extend until the agreement terminates, but not beyond December 31, 1981. In order for a plan to be a qualified plan for any period after the period of deemed qualification, a notice of application must be filed pursuant to the regulations. The proposed regulations have been revised to provide that a plan will be a qualified plan for the period beginning on the day following the date on which the period of deemed qualification ends, if it otherwise satisfies the requirements for qualification and a Form 1024 with the accompanying Schedule L is filed for the plan no later than the end of the plan year following the plan year with or within which the period of deemed qualification ends.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of this regulation is Richard L. Johnson of the Employee Plans and Exempt Organizations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulation, both on matter of substance and style.

Adoption of amendment to the regulation

Accordingly, the following amendments to 26 CFR Part 1 are hereby adopted:

§ 1.120-3 Notice of application for recognition of status of qualified group legal services plan.

(a) In general. In order for a plan to be a qualified group legal services plan for purposes of the exclusion from gross income provided by section 120(a), the plan must give notice to the Internal Revenue Service that it is applying for recognition of its status as a qualified plan. Paragraph (b) of this section describes how the notice is to be filed for the plan. Paragraph (c) of this section describes the action that the Internal Revenue Service will take in response to the notice submitted for the plan. Paragraph (d) of this section describes the period of plan qualification.

(b) Filing of notice—(1) In general. A notice of application for recognition of the status of a qualified group legal services plan must be filed with the key district director of internal revenue as described in § 601.201(n). The notice must be filed on Form 1024, Application for Recognition of Exemption Under Section 501(a) or for Determination Under Section 120, with the accompanying Schedule L, and must contain the information required by the form and any accompanying instructions. The form may be filed by either the employer adopting the plan or the person administering the plan. No Form 1024 and Schedule L may be filed for a plan before an employer adopts the plan, or proposes to adopt the plan contingent only upon the recognition of the plan as a qualified plan.

(2) Plans to which more than one employer contributes. In general, for purposes of section 120 the adoption of a plan by an employer constitutes the adoption of a separate plan to which that employer alone contributes, notwithstanding that, in form, the employer purports to adopt a plan with respect to which the employer is one of two or more contributing employers. Accordingly, a separate Schedule L must be filed pursuant to the instruction accompanying Form 1024 for each employer adopting a plan.

(3) Certain collectively bargained plans. Notwithstanding subparagraph (2) of this paragraph, if a plan to which more than one employer contributes is a plan to which this subparagraph (3) applies, the plan is treated as a single plan for purposes of section 120. Accordingly, only one Form 1024 and Schedule L is required to be filed for the plan, regardless of the number of employers originally adopting the plan. In addition, once a Form 1024 and Schedule L is filed, no additional filing is required with respect to an employer who thereafter adopts the plan. In general, this subparagraph (3) applies to any plan that is maintained pursuant to a collective bargaining agreement between employee representatives and more than one employer who is required by the plan instrument or other agreement to contribute to the plan with respect to employees (or their spouses or dependents) participating in the plan. This subparagraph does not apply, however, if all employers required to contribute to the plan are corporations which are members of a controlled group of corporations within the meaning of section 1563(a), determined without regard to section 1563(e)(3)(C). If all employers required to contribute to the plan are corporations which are members of such a controlled group, the filing requirements described in subparagraph (2) of this paragraph apply, notwithstanding that the plan is maintained pursuant to a collective bargaining agreement.

(c) Internal Revenue Service action on notice of application for recognition. The Internal Revenue Service will issue to the person submitting Form 1024 and Schedule L a ruling or determination letter stating that the plan is or is not a qualified group legal services plan. For general procedural rules, see § 601.201(a) through (n), as that section relates to rulings and determination letters.

(d) Period of plan qualification—(1) In general. In the case of a favorable determination, the plan will be considered a qualified group legal services plan. If a Form 1024 and Schedule L required to be filed by or on behalf of an employer is filed before—

(i) The end of the first plan year (as determined under the plan),

(ii) The end of the plan year within which the employer adopts the plan, or

the period of plan qualification with respect to the employer will begin on the date the plan is adopted by the employer (or, if later, January 1, 1977). If the form and schedule are not filed before the latest of the dates described in subdivisions (i), (ii) and (iii), the period of plan qualification with respect to the employer will begin on the date of filing. In any case in which either the Form 1024 or Schedule L filed by or on behalf of an employer is incomplete, the date of filing is the date on which the incomplete form or schedule is filed, if the necessary additional information is provided at the request of the Commissioner within the additional time period allowed by the Commissioner. If the additional information is not provided within the additional time period allowed, the date of filing is the date on which the additional information is filed. If no separate Form 1024 and Schedule L are required to be filed by or on behalf of an employer (see paragraph (b)(3) of this section), the period of plan qualification with respect to the employer will begin on the date the plan is adopted by the employer (or, if later, January 1, 1977). In any case in which a plan is materially modified to conform to the requirements of section 120, either before or after a Form 1024 and Schedule L are filed, the period of plan qualification will not include any period before the effective date of the modification.

(2) Plans in existence on June 4, 1976. (i) Notwithstanding paragraph (d)(1) of this section, a written group legal services plan providing for employer contributions which was in existence on June 4, 1976, will be considered a qualified group legal services plan for the period January 1, 1977, through April 2, 1977. However, if the plan is maintained pursuant to one or more agreements which were in effect on October 4, 1976, and which the Secretary of Labor finds to be collective bargaining agreements, the period of deemed qualification will extend beyond April 2, 1977, and end on the date on which the last of the collective bargaining agreements relating to the plan terminates. Extensions of a bargaining agreement which are agreed to after October 4, 1976, are to be disregarded. The period of deemed qualification for a plan maintained pursuant to a collective bargaining agreement will not, however, extend beyond December 31, 1981.

(ii) A written group legal services plan will be considered to have been in existence on June 4, 1976, if on or before that date the plan was reduced to writing and adopted by one or more employers. No amounts need have been contributed under the plan as of June 4, 1976.

(iii) Notwithstanding that a plan is a qualified plan for the period of deemed qualification described in this paragraph (d)(2), the rules of paragraphs (c) and (d)(1) of this section still apply with respect to a Form 1024 and Schedule L filed for the plan. For example, if a Form 1024 and Schedule L filed by or on behalf of an employer are filed before the latest of the 3 dates described in paragraph (d)(1) of this section, in the case of a favorable determination the plan will be a qualified plan from the date the plan is adopted by the employer (or, if later, January 1, 1977), and any period of deemed qualification and the period of qualification based upon the favorable determination will overlap. However, in the case of a plan to which this paragraph (d)(2) applies, if a Form 1024 and Schedule L required to be filed by or on behalf of an employer is not filed before the latest of the 3 dates described in paragraph (d)(1) of this section, the following rules shall apply. In general, if Form 1024 and Schedule L are filed before the end of the plan year following the plan year with or within which the plan's period of deemed qualification expires, in the event of a favorable determination the plan will be a qualified plan with respect to the employer beginning on the earlier of the day following the date on which the period of deemed qualification expires or the date on which the Form 1024 and Schedule L are filed. The period of plan qualification with respect to an employer cannot, however, include any period before the employer adopts the plan. If the Form 1024 and Schedule L are not filed before the end of the plan year following the plan year with or within which the plan's period of deemed qualification expires, in the case of a favorable determination the plan will be a qualified plan with respect to an employer from the later of the date of filing or adoption of the plan by the employer. The rules described in paragraph (d)(1) of this section relating to incomplete filings and plan modifications apply with respect to a filing described in this paragraph (d)(2).

(e) Effective date. This section is effective for notices of application for recognition of the status of a qualified group legal services plan filed after May 29, 1980.

Section 162.—Trade or Business Expense

26 CFR 1.162-1: Business expense.

Whether an employer who reports income and deductions on the cash receipts and disbursements method of accounting is entitled to deduct, under section 162 of the Code, as wages paid, amounts withheld as federal income taxes and taxes withheld under the Federal Insurance Contributions Act (FICA) even though such amounts have not been paid to the United States. See Rev. Rul. 80-164, page 9.

Section 301.—Distributions of Property

26 CFR 1.301-1: Rules applicable with respect to distributions of money and other property.

Whether a distribution subject to section 301(c)(2) of the Code should be included in the formula for allocating expenses of a trust to tax-exempt income. See Rev. Rul. 80-165, page 10.

Section 367.—Foreign Corporations

26 CFR 1.367-1: Foreign corporations.

Transfers to avoid taxes; foreign corporation; branch with initial losses. The amount of ordinary foreign source income that a corporation must include in its income in accordance with Rev. Rul. 78-201 is not limited to the amount of gain that the corporation would have recognized if all of the transferred assets had been transferred in a taxable sale or exchange; Rev. Rul. 78-201 amplified.

Rev. Rul. 80-163

ISSUE

Is the amount of ordinary foreign source income that a domestic transferor (P) must include in its income in accordance with Rev. Rul. 78-201, 1978-1 C.B. 91, limited to the amount of gain that the transferor would have recognized if all of the transferred assets were transferred in a taxable sale or exchange?

FACTS

The facts are the same as those set forth in Rev. Rul. 78-201. In addition, each asset transferred had a fair market value in excess of its basis, and, if the transferred assets were sold in the aggregate, in a taxable sale or exchange, the amount of gain that P would have realized would have been less than the aggregate amount of the net losses that were incurred by the branch.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

The specific sections of the Code that are applicable are section 351(a), relating to the nonrecognition of gain or loss on the transfer of property to a corporation controlled by the transferor, and, section 367(a)(1), relating to the requirement that a ruling be obtained that an exchange described in section 351 is not in pursuance of a plan having as one of its principal purposes the avoidance of federal income taxes in order for a foreign corporation to be considered a corporation for purposes of determining gain on the transfer.

Rev. Rul. 78-201 required the United States transferor (P) to include in income an amount of ordinary foreign source income (the sum of the branch losses previously incurred) as a condition for obtaining a ruling that the exchange was not in pursuance of a plan having as one of its principal purposes the avoidance of federal income taxes within the meaning of section 367(a)(1) of the Code. In the instant situation, the amount of ordinary foreign source income that P must include in its income in accordance with Rev. Rul. 78-201 will not be limited to the gain that would have been recognized if the transferred assets were sold in the aggregate, in a taxable sale or exchange, since such a limitation would not take into consideration the full amount of the losses associated with the transferred assets that P used to reduce its income subject to federal income tax, and therefore would not prevent the potential mismatching of related income and losses, the tax avoidance at which Rev. Rul. 78-201 is directed.

HOLDING

The amount of ordinary foreign source income that P must include in its income in accordance with Rev. Rul. 78-201 is not limited to the amount of gain that P would have recognized if all of the transferred assets were transferred in a taxable sale or exchange.

EFFECT ON OTHER REVENUE RULINGS

Rev. Rul. 78-201 is amplified.

Section 381.—Carryovers in Certain Corporate Acquisitions

26 CFR 1.381(a)-1: General rule relating to carryovers in certain corporate acquisitions.

Whether a mere change in the place of incorporation, pursuant to section 368(a)(1)(F) of the Code, terminates a corporation's election to be treated as a possessions corporation under section 936. See Rev. Rul. 80-168, page 13.

Section 461.—General Rule for Taxable Year of Deduction

26 CFR 1.461-1: General rule for taxable year of deduction.
(Also Section 162; 1.162-1.)

Income tax withholding, FICA, and FUTA; when deductible. An employer who uses the cash receipts and disbursements method of accounting should deduct, under section 162 of the Code, as wages paid, federal taxes withheld from employees' wages in the year such taxes are withheld. FICA and FUTA taxes imposed on the employer are deductible in the year paid to the U.S.

Rev. Rul. 80-164

ISSUE

When is an employer who reports income and deductions on the cash receipts and disbursements method of accounting entitled to deduct under section 162 of the Internal Revenue Code, as wages paid, amounts withheld as federal income taxes and taxes withheld under the Federal Insurance Contributions Act (FICA)?

FACTS

The employer, X, is engaged in business in the United States. X uses the cash receipts and disbursements method of accounting and reports income on a calendar year basis. During 1978, X paid wages to its employees and withheld from those wages amounts representing federal income and FICA taxes. The amounts that X withheld on the wages paid during the last quarter of 1978 were timely paid to the United States in 1979.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 162 of the Code provides that there will be allowed as a deduction all the ordinary and necessary expenses paid or incurred during the taxable year in carrying on any trade or business including a reasonable allowance for salaries.

Section 461(a) of the Code provides general rules for the taxable year of deduction. Section 1.461-1(a) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that a taxpayer using the cash receipts and disbursements method of accounting shall, as a general rule, take amounts representing allowable deductions into account for the taxable year in which paid.

Section 3101 of the Code imposes a tax (FICA) on wages of an employee, and section 3102 provides that the tax imposed by section 3101 shall be collected by the employer by deducting the amount of the tax from the wages of the employee as and when paid.

Section 3402(a) of the Code provides that every employer making payment of wages shall deduct and withhold income tax from such wages.

Section 31.3401(a)-1(b)(5) of the regulations states that any amount deducted by an employer from the remuneration of an employee is considered to be a part of the employee's remuneration and is considered to be paid to the employee as remuneration at the time that the deduction is made.

In Rev. Rul. 74-75, 1974-1 C.B. 19, an employer, X, agreed to pay A, an individual, at a stated remuneration of $100 per week. In addition, X agreed to pay A's employee tax under section 3101 of the Code without deducting it from A's pay. For 1972, X paid A $5,000 and incurred liability for the taxes imposed on A by section 3101 in the amount of $260 without deducting those taxes from A's remuneration. Rev. Rul. 74-75 holds that the arrangement is properly treated as if A's wages paid were $5,260 and $260 thereof were withheld. Rev. Rul. 74-75 further holds that A's gross income for 1972 is $5,260.

X, as an employer, is required by sections 3402 and 3102 of the Code to withhold income and FICA taxes from wage payments to employees. Under section 31.3401(a)-1(b)(5) of the regulations and Rev. Rul. 74-75, the withheld taxes are considered paid as salary to the employees at the time they are withheld and are therefore included in a cash method employee's income for the year in which withheld. Therefore, for deduction purposes, X is viewed as actually paying withheld taxes at the time withheld, and is thus entitled to a deduction for the year in which they are withheld under section 1.461-1(a).

HOLDING

An employer who reports income on the cash receipts and disbursements method of accounting should deduct under the provisions of section 162 of the Code the withheld federal taxes (imposed on the employee and withheld from the employee's wages) as wages for the taxable year in which such taxes are withheld. However, the FICA and Federal Unemployment Tax Act taxes (section 3301) imposed upon the employer with respect to wages paid employees are deductible when paid to the United States.

Simple trust; distribution; formula for allocating expenses. A corporate distribution received by a simple trust that was not paid from earnings and profits, but was subject to section 301(c)(2) of the Code, and was used to reduce the basis of the stock cannot be used in the formula for allocating expenses of the trust to tax-exempt income under section 652.

Rev. Rul. 80-165

ISSUE

Whether a distribution to a trust from a corporation that is subject to section 301(c)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code should be included in the formula for allocating expenses of the trust to tax-exempt income under section 652.

FACTS

A simple trust owned shares of stock in a corporation and during the trust taxable year the corporation made a distribution to shareholders that was not paid from earnings and profits and was subject to section 301(c)(2) of the Code. The amount of the distribution did not exceed the trust's adjusted basis in the stock. The trust also received dividends and tax-exempt interest from other sources.

The fiduciary of the trust distributed the section 301(c)(2) distribution to the income beneficiary. The only expense of the trust was the fiduciary's compensation.

The fiduciary reduced the basis of the stock by the amount of the section 301(c)(2) distribution and also included the amount in the formula in section 1.652(b)-3 of the Income Tax Regulations for allocating deductible items among items of income, including nontaxable income, in computing distributable net income. The inclusion of the section 301(c)(2) distribution in the formula reduced the amount of fiduciary's compensation allocated to the tax-exempt interest.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 301(c)(1) of the Code provides that any portion of a distribution that is a dividend (as defined in section 316) is included in gross income and section 301(c)(2) provides that any distribution which is not a dividend reduces the adjusted basis of the stock. Any excess of distribution over such basis is treated as a gain from the sale or exchange of property.

Section 641(b) of the Code provides that the taxable income of an estate or trust will be computed in the same maner as in the case of an individual, except as otherwise provided.

Section 643(a) of the Code defines the term "distributable net income" to mean the taxable income of the estate or trust computed with seven modifications specified in section 643(a).

Section 652(b) of the Code provides that the items of deduction entering into the computation of distributable net income shall be allocated among the items of distributable net income in accordance with the Income Tax Regulations.

Section 1.652(b)-3(b) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that deductions that are not directly attributable to a specific class of income may be allocated to any item of income (including capital gains) included in computing distributable net income, but a portion must be allocated to nontaxable income. An example in that section provides that deductions that are not directly attributable to a specific class of income are not to be allocated to the capital gains that are allocated to corpus because these capital gains are not taken into account in the computation of distributable net income.

Rev. Rul. 77-355, 1977-2 C.B. 82, holds that, for purposes of computing distributable net income, a simple trust that does not distribute capital gains because they are allocated to corpus under the trust instrument or applicable local law, may not include capital gains in the formula for allocating indirect expenses to tax-exempt income.

The section 301(c)(2) distribution is, in effect, a "return of capital" because it reduces the basis of the stock. Amounts received as a "return of capital" do not constitute income subject to taxation and, therefore, these amounts are not within the definition of gross income under section 61 of the Code.

Because the section 301(c)(2) distribution is not considered taxable income under section 61 of the Code, the distribution cannot be included in the computation of distributable net income unless section 643(a) provides for its inclusion and section 643(a) does not provide for the inclusion of a section 301(c)(2) distribution as one of the modifications.

The fiduciary properly used the amount of the section 301(c)(2) distribution to reduce the basis of the stock, but the additional use of the section 301(c)(2) distribution in the formula under section 652 of the Code for allocating deductions to the tax-exempt interest was erroneous because the distribution cannot be included in the computation of distribution net income under section 643(a). Items not included in the computation of distributable net income cannot be used in the formula for allocating deduction to tax-exempt interest. See Rev. Rul. 77-355.

HOLDING

The corporate distribution to the trust paid from other than earnings and profits and subject to section 301(c)(2) of the Code cannot be used in the formula for allocating expenses of the trust to tax-exempt income under section 652 of the Code.

Section 815.—Distributions to Shareholders

26 CFR 1.815-2: Distributions to shareholders.

Life insurance companies; distributions; accumulated earnings and profits acquired in merger. Distributions to shareholders by a stock life insurance company should be treated as being first out of the shareholders surplus account, and then out of the policyholders surplus account, as provided by section 815(a) of the Code, without regard to accumulated earnings and profits acquired in a merger with a real estate company.

Rev. Rul. 80-166

ISSUE

Should distributions to its shareholders by a life insurance company be treated as being first out of the shareholders surplus account, and then out of the policyholders surplus account as provided in section 815(a) of the Internal Revenue Code, regardless of accumulated earnings and profits acquired as a result of a merger with a real estate company?

FACTS

The taxpayer is a stock life insurance company subject to the tax imposed by section 802 of the Code.

During 1976, the taxpayer was the surviving corporation in a section 368(a)(1)(A) merger with a real estate company. As part of the merger, the real estate company exchanged all of its assets for stock in the taxpayer. At the time of the merger, the real estate company had accumulated earnings and profits of $8500x$ dollars. At the end of 1979, the taxpayer had $3000x$ dollars in its shareholders surplus account and $2000x$ dollars in its policyholders surplus account. During 1979, the taxpayer made distributions to its shareholders of $4000x$ dollars.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 802(a) of the Code imposes a tax on the life insurance company taxable income of every life insurance company.

Section 802(b) of the Code defines "life insurance company taxable income" as the sum of—

(1) the taxable investment income (as defined in section 804) or, if smaller, the gain from operations (as defined in section 809),

(2) if the gain from operations exceeds the taxable investment income, an amount equal to 50 percent of such excess, plus

(3) the amount subtracted from the policyholders surplus account for the taxable year, as determined under section 815.

Section 815(a) of the Code provides that any distributions to shareholders after December 31, 1958, shall be treated as made—(1) first out of the shareholders surplus account, to the extent thereof, (2) then out of the policyholders surplus account, to the extent thereof, and (3) finally out of the other accounts.

Section 1.815-2(c)(1)(c) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that the term "distributions," as used in section 815(a) means any distribution of property made by a life insurance company to its shareholders. The term includes a distribution which is considered a dividend under section 316, but is not limited to the extent that such distribution must be made out of the accumulated or current earnings and profits of the company making the distribution.

The shareholders surplus account, as defined in section 815(b) of the Code, consists principally of life insurance company taxable income since January 1, 1958, less the tax imposed and distributions to shareholders. The policyholders surplus account, as defined in section 815(c), consists principally of the excess portion of gain from operations on which tax has been deferred. Additions to and subtractions from these accounts are limited to specific items set forth in section 815(b) and (c). These surplus accounts reflect the priority system for distributions to shareholders of the life insurance company.

The shareholders surplus account represents amounts that have been taxed to the life insurance company from its life insurance business and, therefore, distributions out of the account to shareholders of the life insurance company do not result in any further tax to the life insurance company.

The policyholder surplus account is a tax deferred account and distributions deemed to have been made out of this account are subject to tax pursuant to section 802(b)(3) of the Code. Distributions in excess of the amounts in these two accounts are deemed to be made out of other accounts and have no tax effect to the life insurance company.

When a life insurance company has distributed amounts to shareholders in excess of previously taxed income, it is assumed that the company itself has determined that these additional amounts constitute income that is not required to fulfill policyholders contracts. See S. Rep. No. 291, 86th Cong., 1st Sess. (1959), 1959-2 C.B. 788, 789.

Therefore, the cushion provided for by the deferred tax account, the policyholder surplus account, is no longer needed and becomes taxable when distributed or deemed to be distributed to shareholders notwithstanding that the taxpayer has other accounts such as the accumulated earnings and profits acquired in the merger with the real estate company. Such acquired earnings and profits is not an item that enters into either the shareholders surplus account or the policyholders surplus account. So long as there is any amount in the deferred tax account, distributions to shareholders cannot be considered as coming out of other accounts.

HOLDING

Distributions to shareholders by the taxpayer should be treated as being first out of the shareholders surplus account, and then out of the policyholders surplus account as provided in section 815(a) of the Code without regard to the accumulated earnings and profits acquired as a result of merger with a real estate company.

Ruls. 68-608, 70-193, 73-46, and 80-78 modified.

Rev. Rul. 80-167

PURPOSE

The purpose of this revenue ruling is to clarify the status of the Northern Mariana Islands for federal income tax purposes.

FACTS—LAW—ANALYSIS

Under the trusteeship agreement between the United States and the Security Council of the United Nations (61 Stat. 3301), the United States administers certain former Japanese mandated islands, now known as the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands. The Northern Mariana Islands (Marianas), together with the Marshall Islands and the Caroline Islands, make up such territory.

On February 15, 1975, the United States and the Marianas signed a Covenant to Establish a Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands in Political Union with the United States (Covenant). The Covenant was approved by a Joint Resolution of Congress on March 24, 1976 (Pub L. 94-241, 90 Stat. 263, 1976-1 C.B. 513), and by the Marianas. The effect of the Covenant is the administrative separation of the Marianas from the Government of the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, and the eventual Commonwealth status for the Marianas as a territory of the United States.

Pursuant to the Covenant, the Marianas adopted a constitution, which was approved by Presidential Proclamation 4534, dated October 24, 1977 (42 F.R. 56593). This proclamation stated that the constitution, as well as several sections of the Covenant, were to take effect on January 9, 1978.

Sections 601 and 602 of the Covenant, dealing with revenue and taxation, were among the sections that became effective on January 9, 1978, although, as indicated below, these two sections were not to be applied until January 1, 1979.

Under section 601(a) of the Covenant, the income tax laws of the United States will come into force in the Marianas as a local territorial income tax on January 1, 1979, in the same manner as those laws are in force in Guam. Thus, the words "Northern Mariana Islands" will be substituted for the words "United States" whereever they appear in the Code.

Under section 601(b) of the Covenant, any individual who is a citizen or resident of the United States, Guam, or the Marianas (including a national of the United States who is not a citizen), will file only one income tax return in a manner similar to the provisions of section 935 of the Internal Revenue Code, which concern Guam.

Under section 601(c) of the Covenant, references to Guam in the Code will be deemed to also refer to the Marianas, unless otherwise expressly provided or unless manifestly incompatible with the intent of the Code or the Covenant. Thus, the benefits available to Guam under the Code will also be available to the Marianas. See also the analysis of section 601(c) of the Covenant prepared by the Senate Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs which states, in part, as follows:

> Under (section 601(c)) the federal income tax laws will apply as a local territorial income tax in the same manner as those laws are in force in Guam. It is desirable that Guam and the Northern Mariana Islands have coordinated tax laws since they operate in the same economic and geographic sphere.
> (Section 601(c)) provides that references in the Internal Revenue Code to Guam will be deemd to also refer to the Northern Mariana Islands, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent of such sections or of the Covenant. This assures that the benefits which are available to Guam under the Internal Revenue Code will also be available to the Northern Mariana Islands. S. Rep. No. 94-433, 94th Cong., 1st Sess. 79-80 (1975).

Under section 602 of the Covenant, the Marianas may impose additional taxes and may rebate any tax it collects on income derived from sources within the Marianas.

The provision of sections 601 and 602 of the Covenant are presently in effect. Thus, references in the Code to Guam now generally apply to the Marianas as well.

Under the terms of the trusteeship agreement, the Service has held that the Marshall Islands (and therefore implicitly the Marianas), were not possessions of the United States for purposes of section 931 of the Code because the trusteeship agreement did not grant the United States such sovereignty over the islands as would justify the position that they constitute United States possessions. Rev. Rul. 70-193, 1970-1 C.B. 163.

Based on the terms of the Covenant, the Marianas retain this status and are not United States possessions for purposes of section 931 of the Code. The Covenant provides that the Marianas are to be treated in the same manner as Guam for federal income tax purposes. Section 931(c) specifies that Guam is not a United States possession for purposes of that section.

The Service has also held that the Government of the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands is a foreign government for purposes of section 892 of the Code and has characterized the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands as a foreign country for purposes of section 911 of the Code. Rev. Rul. 73-46, 1973-1 C.B. 342; and Rev. Rul. 68-608, 1968-2 C.B. 309 as modified by Rev. Rul. 80-78, 1980-12 I.R.B. 8.

The Government of Guam is not a foreign government for purposes of section 892 of the Code as it is under the sovereignty of the United States and is considered as part of the governmental jurisdiction of the United States. See Organic Act of Guam, Pub. L. 630, 1950-2 C.B. 214, which declared Guam to be an unincorporated territory of the United States. Nor is Guam a foreign country for purposes of sections 911 and 913 of the Code as section 5b.913-3(d) of the Temporary Income Tax Regulations provides, in part, that the term "foreign country" means territory under the sovereignty of a government other than that of the United States and does not include a possession or territory of the United States. See also section 935(c)(1) of the Code which provides that for United States income tax purposes the United States shall be treated as including Guam. Because the Marianas are to be treated in the same manner as Guam for federal income tax purposes pursuant to the Covenant, the Government of the Marianas is not a foreign government for purposes of section 892 of the Code; and the Marianas are not a foreign country for purposes of sections 911 and 913 of the Code.

HOLDING

Pursuant to the terms of the Covenant, the Marianas are not considered a possession of the United States for purposes of section 931 of the Code. Pursuant to the terms of the Covenant and for taxable years beginning on or after January 1, 1979, the Government of the Marianas is not a foreign government for purposes of section 892 of the Code and the Marianas are not a foreign country for purposes of sections 911 and 913 of the Code.

EFFECT ON OTHER REVENUE RULINGS

For taxable years beginning on or after January 1, 1979, Rev. Ruls. 68-608, 70-193, 73-46, and 80-78 are modified to exclude the Marianas from their application.

Section 936.—Puerto Rico and Possession Tax Credit

(Also Sections 368, 381; 26 CFR 1.368-1, 1.381(a)-1.)

Puerto Rico and possession tax credit election; "F" reorganization. A mere change in place of incorporation, qualifying under section 368(a)(1)(F) of the Code, does not terminate a corporation's election to be treated as a possessions corporation under section 936.

Rev. Rul. 80-168

ISSUE

Does a mere change in place of incorporation, qualifying as a reorganization under section 368(a)(1)(F) of the Internal Revenue Code, terminate the corporation's election to be treated as a possessions corporation under section 936 of the Code under the facts described below?

FACTS

M, a corporation formed under the laws of state X and manufacturing electronic equipment in Puerto Rico, has elected to be treated as a possessions corporation under section 936 of the Code, having qualified for such election under the requirements set forth in this section. For valid business reasons, M desires to change its place of incorporation to state Y by merging with and into N, a new corporation organized under the laws of state Y specifically for this transaction, pursuant to state law and qualifying as a reorganization under section 368(a)(1)(F). N will be the surviving corporation and will be engaged in the same business in Puerto Rico as M was engaged in. By operation of law, the properties, liabilities, business operations, and shareholders of M will become those of N and M's corporate existence will be terminated.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 936(a) of the Code generally provides that if a domestic corporation elects the application of this section and if certain conditions described therein are satisfied, there shall be allowed as a credit against the federal tax imposed an amount equal to the portion of the tax that is attributable to specified possession-source income.

Section 381 of the Code provides that in the case of the acquisition of the assets of a corporation by another corporation in connection with a reorganization described in section 368(a)(1)(F), that is, a mere change in identity, form, or place of organization, the acquiring corporation shall succeed to and take into account, as of the close of the day of transfer, the items described in section 381(c) of the transferor corporation.

Section 381(c) does not include in its description of items that the acquiring corporation succeeds to and takes into account an election to be treated as a possessions corporation under section 936 of the Code.

Section 1.381(a)-1(b)(3) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that section 381 of the Code does not apply to the carryover of an item or tax attribute not specified in section 381(c). This section of the regulations also provides, however, that in a case where section 381 does not apply to an item or tax attribute by reason of the preceding sentence, no inference is to be drawn from the provisions of section 381 as to whether any item or tax attribute shall be taken into account by the successor corporation.

In Rev. Rul. 64-250, 1964-2 C.B. 333, a corporation qualifying as a small business corporation under section 1371(a) of the Code that had elected not to be subject to tax under section 1372(a) was reorganized in another state under section 368(a)(1)(F). This reorganization was accomplished by the organization of a new corporation and the merger of the existing corporation into the new corporation. The surviving corporation also qualified as a small business corporation under section 1371(a). The revenue ruling holds that the reorganization qualifying under section 368(a)(1)(F) did not cause a termination of the election made under section 1372 by the existing corporation before its reorganization.

HOLDING

A mere change in place of incorporation, qualifying under section 368(a)(1)(F) of the Code, does not terminate the corporation's election to be treated as a possessions corporation under section 936 under the facts described above. N succeeds to M's section 936 election since N would also qualify for treatment as a possessions corporation.

Section 1372.—Termination of Election [Election of Certain Small Business Corporations as to Taxable Status]

26 CFR 1.1372-4: Termination of election. (Also Section 1502; 1.1502-76.)

Small business corporation; acquired in reorganization; election terminated. All of the stock of an electing small business corporation was acquired by a corporation before the start of business on October 16, 1978, in a reorganization qualifying under section 368(a)(1)(B) of the Code. They filed a consolidated return for the acquiring corporation's taxable year ended December 31, 1978. The small business corporation's election is not terminated for the separate taxable year ending October 15, 1978, but is terminated for taxable years beginning after that date. Rev. Rul. 72-201 revoked.

Rev. Rul. 80-169

ISSUE

Is the election of a small business corporation terminated for its separate return year under the circumstances described below?

FACTS

S, an electing small business corporation, timely filed its federal income tax return for the fiscal year ended August 31, 1978. Before the start of business on October 16, 1978, P, a corporation, acquired all the stock of S in an exchange solely for the voting stock of P in a transaction that qualified as a reorganization under section 368(a)(1)(B) of the Internal Revenue Code. P filed a consolidated return with S for P's taxable year ended December 31, 1978.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 1372(e)(3) of the Code provides, in part, that an election made by an electing small business corporation under section 1372(a) terminates if, at any time, the corporation ceases to be a small business corporation as defined in section 1371(a). The termination is effective for the taxable year of the corporation in which it ceases to be a small business corporation and for all succeeding taxable years of the corporation.

Section 1371(a) of the Code provides that the term "small business corporation" means, in part, a domestic corporation that does not have as a shareholder a person (other than an estate and other than a trust described in section 1371(e)) who is not an individual.

Section 1.1371-1(e) of the Income Tax Regulations provides, in part, that a corporation in which any shareholder is a corporation does not qualify as a small business corporation.

Section 1.1372-4(c) of the regulations provides, in part, that the termination of an election is effective for the taxable year of the corporation in which occurs the event causing the termination and for all succeeding taxable years of the corporation.

Section 1.1502-76(b)(1) of the regulations provides, in part, that the consolidated return of an affiliated group of corporations must include the income of each subsidiary for the portion of the parent's taxable year during which the subsidiary was a member of the group.

Section 1.1502-76(b)(2) of the regulations provides that, if the consolidated return of a group properly includes the income of a corporation for only a portion of the corporation's taxable year (determined without regard to a change of its taxable year under section 1.1502-76(a)), the income for the portion of the taxable year not included in the consolidated return must be included in a separate return.

Example (1) of section 1.1502-76(b)(3) of the regulations illustrates the preceding as follows:

> Corporations X and Y filed separate returns for the calendar year 1965. As of the close of June 30, 1966, X acquired all of the stock of Y. If X files a consolidated return for 1966, it must include in such return its income for the entire taxable year and the income of Y for the period July 1, 1966, through December 31, 1966. Y must include its income for the period January 1, 1966, through June 30, 1966, in a separate return.

Section 1.1502-76(d) of the regulations provides that any period of less than 12 months for which either a separate return or a consolidated return is filed is considered as a separate taxable year.

In Example (1) of section 1.1502-76(b)(3) of the regulations, X acquired all the stock of Y as of the close of June 30, 1966. Because the stock was not acquired until the close of June 30, July 1 is the first day for which the income of Y is included in the consolidated return for the year ending December 31, 1966.

In the instant case, P acquired all the stock of S before the start of business on October 16, 1978, but after the close of October 15. Because P acquired the S stock on October 16, S became a member of the affiliated group on that date. Under section 1.1502-76(b) of the regulations, the consolidated return for P's taxable year ended December 31, 1978, includes S's income for the portion of P's taxable year during which S was a member of the group. Thus, October 16, 1978, is the first day for which the income of S is included in the consolidated return for the year ended December 31, 1978. See also sections 1.1502-75(d)(1) and 1.1502-76(b)(5)(i).

Therefore, the consolidated return filed by P and S for the taxable year ended December 31, 1978, includes S's income for the period beginning October 16, 1978, and ending December 31, 1978. S must file a separate return for its separate return year beginning September 1, 1978, and ending October 15, 1978. Because S's separate return year ended prior to the date of acquisition, S's separate return year includes no time during which P was a shareholder of S.

HOLDING

S's election is not terminated for its taxable year ended October 15, 1978. S's election is terminated for the year beginning October 16, and ending December 31, 1978, and succeeding taxable years.

EFFECT ON OTHER REVENUE RULINGS

Nonresident alien; joint return; living expenses abroad; foreign earned income exclusion. A nonresident alien spouse of a U.S. citizen who joins with the citizen in making an election, under section 6013(g) of the Code, to be treated as a U.S. resident is eligible for the deduction provided in section 913(a)(2) for certain expenses of living abroad and for the foreign earned income exclusion for residents of camps located in hardship areas provided in section 911(a)(2).

Rev. Rul. 80-170

ISSUE

Is a nonresident alien spouse of a United States citizen, who joins with such citizen in making an election under section 6013(g) of the Internal Revenue Code to be treated as a United States resident, eligible for the deduction provided in section 913(a)(2) for certain expenses of living abroad, under the circumstances described below?

FACTS

A, a citizen and resident of foreign country X, is a nonresident alien spouse of a United States citizen. In 1979, A received compensation for personal services that would qualify as earned income within the meaning of section 913(j)(1)(A) of the Code for purposes of the deduction from gross income provided by section 913(a)(2), if A were a citizen or resident of the United States. A also had certain expenses of living abroad that are within the scope of section 913(b). A and A's spouse properly made an election under section 6013(g) for taxable year 1979.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 6013(g) of the Code provides an election whereby a United States citizen or resident married to a nonresident alien may file a joint return for taxable years ending on or after December 31, 1975. This election specifically provides that the nonresident alien be treated as a resident of the United States for purposes of federal income taxation (chapter 1 of the Code). Therefore, such alien is taxable on worldwide income. Section 6013(g)(1).

Section 913(a)(2) of the Code, which is effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1977, provides that in the case of an individual who is a citizen or resident of the United States, and who during any period of 18 consecutive months is present in a foreign country or countries during at least 510 full days in such period, there shall be allowed certain specified deductions for any taxable year which contains part of such period.

Section 6013(g)(1) of the Code expressly provides that an electing nonresident alien who is married to an electing United States citizen or resident alien "shall be treated as a resident of the United States for purposes of chapter . . . 1." Section 913(a)(2), which is expressly applicable to United States citizens or residents, is part of chapter 1.

A, as a result of making an election with A's spouse under section 6013(g) of the Code to be treated as a United States resident for purposes of chapter 1 of the Code, thus is eligible for the deduction provided by section 913(a)(2) to the extent A otherwise meets the requirements of that section.

HOLDING

A nonresident alien spouse of a United States citizen, who joins with such citizen in making an election under section 6013(g) of the Code to be treated as a United States resident, is eligible for the deduction provided in section 913(a)(2) for certain expenses of living abroad, under the circumstances described above.

The holding of this revenue ruling is equally applicable to such nonresident alien's eligibility for the earned income exclusion for residents of camps located in hardship areas provided in section 911(a)(2) of the Code, effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1977. This effective date is extended to December 31, 1978, if a timely election is made to use the provisions of section 911 as in effect prior to its amendment by the Foreign Earned Income Act of 1978 (the "FEIA"), Pub. L. 95-615, 92 Stat. 3109, 1978-2 C.B. 416, as provided in section 209(c) of the FEIA. For taxable years to which the provisions of section 911 apply, as in effect prior to its amendment by the FEIA, a nonresident alien spouse of a United States citizen or resident, who elects to be treated as a United States resident pursuant to 6013(g), is eligible for the section 911 exclusion, pursuant to Rev. Rul. 72-330, 1972-2 C.B. 444, as amplified by Rev. Rul. 72-598, 1972-2 C.B. 451, if the nonresident alien spouse is a citizen of one of the foreign countries listed in these revenue rulings with which the United States has an income tax treaty in effect.

TITLE 26.—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER I, SUBCHAPTER F, PART 301.—PROCEDURE AND ADMINISTRATION

Offshore Oil Pollution Compensation Fund

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Final regulations.

SUMMARY: This document contains final regulations relating to the collection of fees for the purpose of funding an Offshore Oil Pollution Compensation Fund. Changes to the applicable law were made by the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act Amendments of 1978. The regulation will provide the public with the guidance needed to comply with the portion of the Act that relates to the collection of fees and will affect all owners of oil obtained from the Outer Continental Shelf.

DATE: The regulations at §§ 301.9001-1, 301.9001-2, and 301.9001-3 are effective on July 25, 1979, at 7:00 a.m., local time. If, however, the established practice has been to gauge oil production at a time other than 7:00 a.m. the effective date is July 25, 1979, at the time production has been gauged.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

On July 20, 1979, the Federal Register published proposed amendments to the Regulations on Procedure and Administration (26 CFR Part 301). The amendments were proposed to conform the regulations to section 302(d) of the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act Amendments of 1978 (92 Stat. 672). After consideration of all comments regarding the proposed amendments, those amendments are adopted as revised by this Treasury decision.

EXPLANATION OF THE REGULATIONS

Section 302 of the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act Amendments of 1978 (Act) establishes an Offshore Oil Pollution Compensation Fund (Fund). Under section 302(d) of the Act, this fund consists of money generated by a fee of not more than 3 cents per barrel imposed on oil obtained from the Outer Continental Shelf (OCS), and is to be paid by the owner of the oil as defined in § 301.9001-1(a)(2) of these regulations. Failure to pay the fee subjects the owner of the oil to a civil penalty.

[1] This publication of the Treasury Decision contains the complete text of the amendments to the regulations. The instructions for modifying the notice of proposed rulemaking have been omitted.

These regulations describe the collection procedure which is to be used in collecting this fee.

OWNER OF OIL

The proposed regulations stated that the owner of oil is the person in whom is vested ownership of the oil as it is produced at the wellhead without regard to the existence of contractual arrangements for the sale or other disposition of the oil. Under this rule, the Federal government is not an owner of oil at the time of production with respect to its entitlement to royalty oil. Several commentators suggested that the final regulations be amended to treat the Federal government as part owner of the OCS oil when it is produced and to exclude the portion of the OCS production that is attributable to the Federal government entitlement to royalty oil from calculations determining the amount of the fee to be paid by the owner of the oil.

This suggestion is not adopted. Under the Act, the Coast Guard has the major responsibility for establishing policies, procedures, and administrative practices regarding the overall management and general operation of the Fund. Their final regulations, which were promulgated prior to publication of this notice of proposed rulemaking, specify that the per barrel fee applies at the time OCS oil is produced and state that the Federal Government is not the owner of the oil at the time of production. See 33 CFR 135.103. Similar questions were raised by commentators with respect to the Coast Guard's position on this issue but were not adopted. See 44 FR 16860 for the Coast Guard's discussion of the issue.

CONDENSATE

One commentator believed that the term "oil" should not include condensate. Once again 33 CFR 135.5 (b)(6) includes condensate in the definition of "oil". See 44 CFR 16861 for the Coast Guard's discussion of this question.

BARRELS SUBJECT TO THE FEE

Two commentators suggested that a sentence be added to the regulations which would clarify that the data found on Form 9-153 (Monthly Report of Sales and Royalty) is the information to be utilized in computing the number of barrels subject to the fee. The final regulations reflect this comment at § 301.9001-1(a)(1) with the addition of a new sentence between sentence 2 and sentence 3.

SEMI-MONTHLY DEPOSIT

Under the proposed regulations a semi-monthly deposit of fees was required if the owner of oil is liable for more than $2,000 of fees for any month of a calendar quarter. Many commentators stated that this proposal creates numerous accounting problems because reliable data normally is not available. This means that two reports must be prepared in which estimated production data must be utilized. Because the semi-monthly deposit requirement is consistent with Treasury policy in related collection areas, the final regulations are not changed to reflect these comments.

POWER OF ATTORNEY

The regulations at § 301.9001-1(d) state that the fee must be paid either by the owner of the oil or by a person authorized to act for the owner under an acceptable power of attorney. Several of the commentators stated that the requirement of obtaining and filing a power of attorney with the Internal Revenue Service would be duplicative since the provisions of operating agreements between operators and nonoperator owners of oil-producing properties authorize the operator to make payments on behalf of nonoperator owners of oil. In accordance with these comments, the final regulations permit an operating agreement to be considered an acceptable power of attorney if it authorizes the payment by the operator of the fee imposed by the Act.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of this regulation is Kyllikki Kusma of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service, Treasury Department, and Coast Guard participated in developing the regulation, both on matters of substance and style.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, the following amendments to 26 CFR Part 301 are hereby adopted:

Paragraph 1. The following new sections are inserted to follow § 301.9000-1:

Section 302 of the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act Amendments of 1978 (92 Stat. 629) provides as follows:

> Sec. 302. (a) There is hereby established in the Treasury of the United States an Offshore Oil Pollution Compensation Fund in an amount not to exceed $200,000,000, except that such limitation shall be increased to the extent necessary to permit any moneys recovered or collected which are referred to in subsection (b)(2) of this section to be paid into the Fund. The Fund shall be administered by the Secretary[1] and the Secretary of the Treasury as specified in this title. The Fund may sue and be sued in its own name.
> (b) The Fund shall be composed of—
> (1) all fees collected pursuant to subsection (d) of this section; and
> (2) all other moneys recovered or collected on behalf of the Fund under section 308 or any other provision of this title.
> (c) The Fund shall be immediately available for—
> (1) removal costs described in section 301(22);
> (2) the processing and settlement of claims under section 307 of this title (including the costs of assessing injury to, or destruction of, natural resources); and
> (3) subject to such amounts as are provided in appropriation Acts, all administrative and personnel costs of the Federal Government incident to the administration of this title, including, but not limited to, the claims settlement activities and adjudicatory and judicial proceedings, whether or not such costs are recoverable under section 308 of this title.
> The Secretary is authorized to promulgate regulations designating the person or persons who may obligate available money in the Fund for such purposes.

gate reasonable regulations relating to the collection of the fees authorized by paragraph (1) of this subsection and, from time to time, the modification thereof. Any modification shall become effective on the date specified in the regulation making such modification, but no earlier than the ninetieth day following the date such regulation is published in the Federal Register. Any modification of the fee shall be designed to insure that the Fund is maintained at a level of not less than $100,000,000 and not more than $200,000,000. No regulation that sets or modifies fees, whether or not in effect, may be stayed by any court pending completion of judicial review of such regulation.

(3)(A) Any person who fails to collect or pay any fee as required by any regulation promulgated under paragraph (2) of this subsection shall be liable for a civil penalty not to exceed $10,000, to be assessed by the Secretary of the Treasury, in addition to the fee required to be collected or paid and the interest on such fee at the rate such fee would have earned if collected or paid when due and invested in special obligations of the United States in accordance with subsection (e)(2) of this section. Upon the failure of any person so liable to pay any penalty, fee, or interest upon demand, the Attorney General may, at the request of the Secretary of the Treasury, bring an action in the name of the Fund against that person for such amount.

(B) Any person who falsifies records or documents required to be maintained under any regulation promulgated under this subsection shall be subject to prosecution for a violation of section 1001 of title 18, United States Code.

(4) The Secretary of the Treasury may, by regulation, designate the reasonably necessary records and documents to be kept by persons from whom fees are to be collected pursuant to paragraph (1) of this subsection, and the Secretary of the Treasury and the Comptroller General of the United States shall have access to such records and documents for the purpose of audit and examination.

(e)(1) The Secretary shall determine the level of funding required for immediate access in order to meet potential obligations of the Fund.

(2) The Secretary of the Treasury may invest any excess in the Fund, above the level determined under paragraph (1) of this subsection, in interest-bearing special obligations of the United States. Such special obligations may be redeemed at any time in accordance with the terms of the special issue and pursuant to regulations promulgated by the Secretary of the Treasury. The interest on, and the proceeds from the sale of, any obligations held in the Fund shall be deposited in and credited to the Fund.

(f) If at any time the moneys available in the Fund are insufficient to meet the obligations of the Fund, the Secretary shall issue to the Secretary of the Treasury notes or other obligations in the forms and denominations, bearing the interest rates and maturities, and subject to such terms and conditions as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury. Redemption of such notes or other obligations shall be made by the Secretary from moneys in the Fund. Such notes or other obligations shall bear interest at a rate determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, taking into consideration the average market yield on outstanding marketable obligations of comparable maturity. The Secretary of the Treasury shall purchase any notes or other obligations issued under this subsection and, for that purpose, he is authorized to use as a public debt transaction the proceeds from the sale of any securities issued under the Second Liberty Bond Act. The purpose for which securities may be issued under that Act are extended to include any purchase of such notes or other obligations. The Secretary of the Treasury may at any time sell any of the notes or other obligations acquired by him under this subsection. All redemptions, purchases, and sales by the Secretary of the Treasury of such notes or other obligations shall be treated as public debt transactions of the United States.

§ 301-9001-1 Collection of fee.

(a) Imposition of fee—(1) In general. Under section 302(d) of the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act Amendments of 1978 (Act), the Internal Revenue Service is authorized to collect a fee of not more than 3 cents per barrel on oil that is obtained from the Outer Continental Shelf. This fee is established by the Commandant, United States Coast Guard, and is imposed on the owner of the oil as defined in paragraph (a)(2) of this section. The barrels subject to the fee shall be those barrels reported by the owner of the oil (§ 301.9001-1(a)(2)), or a person authorized to act for the owner, on the monthly royalty reports, Form 9-153, filed with the U.S. Geological Survey as required by 30 CFR 250.94. For the purpose of computing this fee, the owner of the oil shall measure the Outer Continental Shelf oil production by employing the criteria of the U.S. Geological Survey contained in 30 CFR 250.60 and Outer Continental Shelf Gulf of Mexico Order 13. No reduction in the amount due will be permitted by reason of theoretical or actual oil lost in transit. To ensure that the Fund is maintained at a level of not less than $100,000,000 and not more than $200,000,000, the Commandant, United States Coast Guard, may modify the amount of this fee.

(2) Owner of oil. For the purposes of §§ 301.9001-1, 301.9001-2, 301.9001-3, the owner of oil is the person in whom is vested ownership of the oil as it is produced at the wellhead without regard to the existence of contractual arrangements for the sale or other disposition of the oil between such a person and third parties. Under this rule, the Federal government entitlement to royalty oil does not constitute ownership of oil by the Federal government at the time of production.

(3) Example. The provisions of paragraph (a)(2) of this section may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. X is the owner of oil produced on the Outer Continental Shelf. During one reporting period, 10,000 barrels of oil were obtained from this location. X will use a portion of this oil to make a royalty payment to the United States government. X also has a contract with Y to sell Y the remaining barrels of oil. For the purpose of the Act, X is the owner of the oil and must pay a fee of 3 cents per barrel on all 10,000 barrels of oil.

(4) Cross-references. See § 301.9001-2(a) for the definition of barrel, § 301.9001-2(b) for the definition of oil, and § 301.9001-2(c) for the definition of person.

(5) Effective date. The provisions of §§ 301.9001-1, 301.9001-2, and 301.9001-3 are effective on July 25, 1979, at 7:00 a.m., local time. If, however, the established practice has been to gauge oil production at a time other than 7:00 a.m., the effective date is July 25, 1979, at the time production has been gauged.

(b) Collection of fee. The Internal Revenue Service shall collect the fee imposed by section 302(d) of the Act. Administrative procedures for the collection of this fee shall be prescribed from time to time by the Commissioner. The Commissioner may designate the reasonably necessary records and documents to be kept by the person or persons from whom the fee is collected. See also the regulations under 33 CFR 135.103 for additional rules relating to the implementation of the Act.

(c) Time and place for payment of the fee—(1) In general. Payment of the fee shall be made in accordance with the rules established in paragraph (c)(2), (3) and (4) of this section. When a deposit is required by these rules, it must be filed with the Internal Revenue Service Center, Austin, Texas 73301 using Form 6008, Fee Deposit for Offshore Oil. Adjustments required in the amount paid during the calendar quarter to reflect the actual amount due for the quarter shall be made on Form 6009, Quarterly Report of Fees Due. Form 6009 must be filed on or before the last day of the month following the end of the calendar quarter with the Austin Service Center. The rules under section 7502, relating to the treatment of timely mailing as timely filing and paying, and section 7503, relating to the time for performance of acts where the last day falls on Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday are applicable to the filing of Form 6009.

(2) $100 or less of fees. If the owner of oil is liable in any calendar quarter for $100 or less of fees, the owner or a person authorized to act for the owner may either deposit this amount or pay the full amount of the fee when Form 6009 is filed.

(3) More than $100 of fees. If the owner of oil is liable in the first or second month of the calendar quarter for more than $100 of fees and is not required to make a semimonthly deposit (see paragraph (c)(4) of this section), the owner or a person authorized to act for the owner must deposit the amount on or before the last day of the following month following the month of production.

(4) More than $2000 of fees. The owner of oil who is liable for more than $2000 of fees for any month of a calendar quarter must deposit fees for the following quarter (regardless of amount) on a semimonthly basis. The deposit must be made on or before the ninth day following the semimonthly period for which it is reportable. The first deposit for a month may be reasonably estimated when an accounting of oil production is normally done by the month. Under these circumstances, the second for that month deposit should be adjusted to reflect the total barrels produced in that month.

(d) Responsibility for payment of fee—(1) In General. Form 6009, Quarterly Report of Fees Due, must be filed and the fee must be paid either by the owner of the oil (§ 301.9001-1(a)(2)) or by a person authorized to act for the owner of the oil under an acceptable power of attorney filed with the Austin Service Center. For the purposes of the regulations at §§ 301.9001-1, 301.9001-2, and 301.9001-3, an operating agreement between the operator of the oil-producing facility and the owner of the oil is considered an acceptable power of attorney if the operating agreement expressly states that the operator is authorized to pay the fee imposed by section 302(d) of the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act Amendments of 1978.

(2) Example. The provisions of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. W, X, Y, and Z are oil companies that own equal interests in oil produced on the Outer Continental Shelf. W was selected to be the operator of the offshore facility. Additionally, X, Y, and Z authorized W to file Form 6009 and to pay the fee imposed by section 302(d) of the Act on the oil produced at this facility. Pursuant to this authorization, W paid a fee of $16,600. Since the ownership of the oil is divided equally among W, X, Y, and Z, each company's share of the fee is $4,150.

(e) Penalty and Interest. Failure to collect or pay the fee shall result in a civil penalty assessed by the Secretary of the Treasury. The amount of the penalty is not to exceed $10,000 in addition to the fee and the interest on the unpaid fee that would have been earned if paid when due and invested in the special Treasury securities which are to be purchased by the fund. The computation of the rate of interest to be levied on underpayment of fees shall be based on the average interest rate earned by the interest-bearing special obligations of the United States in the fund for each calendar quarter for which there is underpayment. Unless it can be shown that the failure to collect or pay the fee is due to reasonable cause and not due to willful neglect, the amount of the penalty is the lesser of—

(1) $10,000 or

(2) The amount of the fee.

§ 301.9001-2 Definitions.

The terms enumerated in this section are to be defined for the purposes of §§ 301.9001-1, 301.9001-2, 301.9001-3 in the following manner:

(a) "Barrel" means 42 United States gallons at 60 degrees Fahrenheit.

(b) "Oil" means petroleum, including crude oil or any fraction or residue therefrom, and natural gas condensate, except that the term does not include natural gas.

(c) "Person" means an individual firm, corporation, association, partnership, consortium, joint venture, or governmental entity.

(d) "Outer Continental Shelf" means all submerged lands lying seaward and outside of the area of lands beneath navigable waters as defined in section 1301 of title 43 and of which the subsoil and seabed appertain to the United States and are subject to its jurisdiction and control.

§ 301.9001-3 Cross Reference

Part II. Treaties and Tax Legislation

Subpart A.—Tax Conventions

Republication of the Technical Explanation of the U.S.-U.K. Income Tax Convention

The Technical Explanation of the United States-United Kingdom Income Tax Convention, which was published in 1980-21 I.R.B. 62, does not reflect amendments submitted to the United States Senate prior to ratification of the Convention. The Technical Explanation reflecting the amendments follows:

TECHNICAL EXPLANATION[1] OF THE CONVENTION BETWEEN THE GOVERNMENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA AND THE GOVERNMENT OF THE UNITED KINGDOM OF GREAT BRITAIN AND NORTHERN IRELAND FOR THE AVOIDANCE OF DOUBLE TAXATION AND THE PREVENTION OF FISCAL EVASION WITH RESPECT TO TAXES ON INCOME AND CAPITAL GAINS SIGNED AT LONDON, ON DECEMBER 31, 1975, AS AMENDED BY THE NOTES EXCHANGED AT LONDON ON APRIL 13, 1976, THE PROTOCOL SIGNED AT LONDON ON AUGUST 26, 1976, AND THE SECOND PROTOCOL SIGNED AT LONDON ON MARCH 31, 1977[2]

ARTICLE 1. PERSONAL SCOPE

This Article delineates the persons who come within the scope of the Convention. Paragraph (1) states the general rule that the Convention is applicable to residents of one or both of the Contracting States. The term "resident" of a Contracting State is defined in Article 4 (Fiscal Residence). In several cases, the Convention is also applicable to residents of third states because of their relationship with a resident of a Contracting State. For example, Articles 9 (Associated Enterprises), 25 (Mutual Agreement Procedure) or 26 (Exchange of Information and Administrative Assistance), may apply with respect to persons who are residents of neither Contracting State, and paragraph 5 of Article 10 (Dividends) and paragraph 6 of Article 11 (Interest) apply to dividends and interest derived by residents of third countries.

This paragraph is similar to Article 1 of the Draft Double Taxation Convention on Income and Capital developed by the Fiscal Committee of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development as published in 1963 and as thereafter revised (hereinafter referred to as the "OECD Model Convention").

Paragraph (2) deals with the treatment of a corporation which is a resident of both the United Kingdom within the meaning of paragraph (1)(a)(ii) of Article 4 (Fiscal Residence) and the United States (under paragraph (1)(b)(ii) of Article 4). Under those paragraphs, a corporation which is a United States corporation as defined by paragraph (1)(b) of Article 3 (General Definitions) and is managed and controlled in the United Kingdom would be a resident of both states. This Article clarifies the status of such corporations (hereinafter referred to as "dual-resident" corporations) for purposes of the Convention by providing that dual-resident corporations may not claim the benefits of this Convention which are otherwise available to residents of a Contracting State, including the benefits of Articles 7 (Business Profits), 10 (Dividends), 11 (Interest,) 12 (Royalties), 22 (Other Income) or 23 (Elimination of Double Taxation). However, a dual-resident corporation may claim the benefits of paragraph (2) of Article 8 (Shipping and Air Transport) with respect to profits derived from operating ships or aircraft, and of Article 23 (Elimination of Double Taxation) with respect to paragraph 1(c) thereof and with respect to payments of the United Kingdom petroleum revenue tax. A dual-resident corporation may also claim the benefits of Articles 24 (Nondiscrimination), and 28 (Entry Into Force), and the provisions of paragraph (7) of Article 11 (Interest) relating to the character of certain interest payments will apply to it. Thus, for example, a dual-resident corporation may not claim the exemption from tax with respect to interest derived from the United States under Article 11 (Interest) or claim a refund of advance corporation tax with respect to dividend received from a corporation which is a resident of the United Kingdom. In these cases, the dual-resident corporation is treated as a resident of neither Contracting State for purposes of the Convention.

On the other hand, interest, royalties, and dividends derived by a resident of a Contracting State from a dual-resident corporation will qualify for the exemptions or reductions in tax allowed by the Convention. For example, dividends received by a resident of the United Kingdom from a dual-resident corporation will qualify for the reductions in United States tax withholding under paragraph (1) of Article 10 (Dividends) and, a United States resident receiving dividends from a dual-resident corporation which, under the internal law of the United Kingdom, is a resident of the United Kingdom, will qualify for the refunds or credits of advance corporation tax under paragraph (2) of that Article.

[1] It is the practice of the Treasury Department to prepare for the use of the Senate and other interested persons a Technical Explanation of the tax conventions and protocols, which are submitted to the Senate for its advice and consent to ratification. This Technical Explanation was submitted to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee at hearings held on July 19-20, 1977, and has been amended to reflect the testimony of the Treasury Department before the same Committee on June 6, 1979 (Treasury News Release M-145, dated October 25, 1979) and to make minor corrections.

An Income Tax Convention with the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland was signed December 31, 1975 and an Exchange of Notes was signed April 13, 1976, and submitted by the President to the Senate on June 24, 1976. Two Income Tax Protocols to the Convention were signed August 26, 1976 and March 31, 1977. The Senate voted its advice and consent on June 27, 1978 and instruments of ratification were exchanged on March 25, 1980.

[2] The Convention and the two Protocols were published in 1980-21 C.B. 5.

Paragraph (3) contains the traditional "saving clause" under which each Contracting States reserves the right to tax its nationals (as defined by paragraph (1)(k) of Article 3 (General Definitions)) and residents (as determined under Article 4 (Fiscal Residence)) as if the Convention had not come into effect. A similar provision exists in Article XIII of the Convention now in effect (hereinafter referred to as the "1945 Convention") [T.D. 5569, 1945-2 C.B. 100]. The saving clause is of principal importance to the United States because the United States taxes its citizens, residents, and corporations on a worldwide basis, regardless of where they reside or derive income.

Paragraph (4) sets forth certain exceptions to the application of the saving clause where other provisions of the Convention reflect overriding policies. Thus, the saving clause does not affect the provisions dealing with the determination of domicile for United Kingdom tax purposes (paragraph (4) of Article 4), the exemption from United Kingdom tax of profits derived by United States nationals and corporations from operating ships or aircraft (paragraph (2) of Article 8), associated enterprises (Article 9), the elimination of double taxation (Article 23), non-discrimination (Article 24) or the mutual agreement procedure (Article 25). Moreover, the saving clause does not affect benefits of the Convention which are extended to an individual performing functions as an employee of a government of a Contracting State, as a teacher, as a student or trainee, or as diplomatic and consular official, who is neither a national (as defined in Article 3) of, nor has immigrant status in, the Contracting State imposing the tax. See Articles 19 (Government Service), 20 (Teachers), 21 (Students and Trainees), and 27 (Effect on Diplomatic and Consular Officials and Domestic Laws). In the case of the United States, "immigrant status" means the individual has been admitted to the United States for permanent residence.

Although Article 1 is entitled "Personal Scope", the Convention is applicable to corporations and other persons as well as to individuals.

ARTICLE 2. TAXES COVERED

Paragraph (1) of this Article states the general rule that the Convention applies to taxes on income imposed by the governments of the Contracting States. The Convention also applies to taxes on income imposed by political subdivisions or local authorities of a Contracting State (as defined in paragraph (1)(i) of Article 3 (General Definitions)) where paragraph (4) of Article 9 (Associated Enterprises) applies. This Article is important because the relief from double taxation (i.e., tax credits) accorded by Article 23 (Elimination of Double Taxation) only extends to taxes covered by this Convention. Thus, credits for taxes paid to a Contracting State may be claimed under this Convention only with respect to the taxes specified in paragraphs (2) and (3) of this Article.

Paragraph (2) designates the existing taxes on income which are the subject of the Convention. In the case of the United States, the taxes on income included (referred to as "United States tax") are the Federal income taxes imposed by the Internal Revenue Code ("Code") and the tax under Code section 4371 on insurance company premiums paid to foreign insurers. The tax under Code section 4371 is not covered by the 1945 Convention. The Convention only applies to taxes on income contained in the Internal Revenue Code. Thus, the Convention does not, for example, apply to the excise tax under Code section 1491.

The Convention also does not apply to the taxes imposed under Code sections 531 (Accumulated Earnings Tax) or 541 (Personal Holding Company Tax), except as specified by paragraph (6) of Article 10 (Dividends). Under paragraph (6) of Article 10, a corporation which is a resident of the United Kingdom shall be exempt from the accumulated earnings or personal holding company tax if individuals (other than nationals of the United States) who are residents of the United Kingdom control, directly or indirectly, more than 50 percent of the voting power of such corporation.

In the case of the United Kingdom, paragraph (2) provides that the existing taxes on income covered by the Convention (referred to as "United Kingdom tax") are the income tax, the capital gains tax, the corporation tax, and the petroleum revenue tax.

For purposes of paragraph (4) of Article 9 (Associated Enterprises), this Convention also applies to taxes imposed on income by political subdivisions or local authorities of a Contracting State. For this purpose, the income taxes referred to include any franchise taxes measured by income which are imposed by a political subdivision or local authority of a Contracting State.

Under paragraph (3), the Convention will also apply to taxes substantially similar to those covered by paragraph (2), which are imposed in addition to, or in place of, the taxes referred to in paragraph (2) after the date of signature of the Convention (December 31, 1975).

The competent authorities of the Contracting States are to notify each other of any amendments of the laws imposing the existing taxes and of the adoption of any taxes which are imposed subsequent to the date of signature of the Convention.

For purposes of Article 24 (Nondiscrimination), the Convention will also apply to taxes of every kind and description (whether or not the taxes are on income) imposed by the Contracting States, political subdivisions or local authorities thereof.

ARTICLE 3. GENERAL DEFINITIONS

Paragraph (1) defines the principal terms used throughout the Convention. Unless the context otherwise requires, the terms defined in this paragraph shall have a uniform meaning throughout the Convention. It should be noted that a number of important terms are defined elsewhere in the Convention. For example, the term "resident" of a Contracting State and "permanent establishment" are defined in Articles 4 (Fiscal Residence) and 5 (Permanent Establishment), respectively. Moreover, certain terms which appear in Articles dealing with special categories of income, e.g., "Immovable Property" (Article 6), "Dividends" (Article 10), "Interest" (Article 11), and "Royalties" (Article 12), are defined within those Articles.

The Article defines the term "corporation" in subparagraph (a) as a United States corporation (defined in subparagraph (b)(i)) or a United Kingdom corporation (defined in subparagraph (b)(ii)), or any body corporate or entity of a third state which is treated as a body corporate for tax purposes by both Contracting States. Whether an entity is a corporation is relevant for purposes of paragraph (6) of Article 5 (Permanent Establishment), Article 10 (Dividends), Article 16 (Investment or holding companies), and Article 23 (Elimination of Double Taxation).

The term "United States corporation" means a corporation (or any unincorporated entity which is treated as a United States corporation for United States tax purposes) which is created or organized under the laws of the United States, any state thereof, or the District of Columbia.

A "United Kingdom corporation" is defined as any body corporate or unincorporated association created or organized under the laws of the United Kingdom, excluding for this purpose a partnership, a local authority, or a local authority association.

Whether a United States or United Kingdom corporation or any other corporation is a resident of a Contracting State for purposes of this Convention, or neither of them, or both of them, is to be determined in accordance with Article 4 (Fiscal Residence).

The term "person" includes an individual, a corporation, a partnership, an estate, a trust, or any other body of persons.

The term "enterprise of a Contracting State" means an industrial or commercial undertaking carried on by a resident of a Contracting State (as defined by Article 4).

The term "international traffic" is defined as any transport by a ship or aircraft operated by an enterprise of one of the Contracting States, except when the ship or aircraft is operated solely between places within a Contracting State. Thus, for example, coastal shipping along the Atlantic coast of the United States is not international traffic. However, if a ship operated by an enterprise of the United Kingdom transports goods from Canada to the United States, leaving some of the goods in New York and the remainder in Norfolk, the portion of the transport between New York and Norfolk is international traffic. The definition of this term is relevant for purposes of Article 8 (Shipping and Air Transport) which provides that profits derived by an enterprise of a Contracting State from the operation in international traffic of ships or aircraft shall be taxable only in that State.

With respect to the United States, the term "competent authority" means the Secretary of the Treasury or his delegate. With respect to the United Kingdom, the term "competent authority" refers to the Commissioners of Inland Revenue or their authorized representative.

The term "United States" means the United States of America. When used in the geographical sense, the term means the states thereof and the District of Columbia. Thus, the Convention does not apply to possessions of the United States or the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico. The term "United States" also includes the territorial sea and, in general accord with the principles of section 638 of the Code, the continental shelf of the United States.

The term "United Kingdom" means Great Britain and Northern Ireland, including the area of the continental shelf which has or may be designated by the United Kingdom, in accordance with international law, as an area within which the rights of the United Kingdom relating to the seabed and subsoil and their natural resources may be exercised. The Convention does not apply to the Channel Islands or the Isle of Man.

The 1945 Convention does not include the continental shelf areas in the definition of the terms United States or United Kingdom. It is understood that when compared to the 1945 Convention, the United Kingdom regards the reference to its continental shelf in this Convention as an expansion of the scope of the Convention with respect to operations in these areas.

The term "Contracting State" means the United States or the United Kingdom, as the context of the Convention requires.

The term "third State" means any State or territory other than the United States or the United Kingdom and the term "enterprise of a third State" is to be construed accordingly.

In relation to the United States, the term "national" means an individual who is a citizen of the United States. In relation to the United Kingdom, the term "national" means all citizens of the United Kingdom and colonies, British subjects under sections 2, 13(1) or 16 of the British Nationality Act of 1948, and British subjects by virtue of section 1 of the British Nationality Act of 1965, provided they are patrial within the meaning of the Immigration Act of 1971, so far as these provisions are in force on the date of entry into force of this Convention or have been modified in minor respects so as not to affect their general character.

Paragraph (2) provides that any term used in the Convention which is not defined therein shall, unless the context otherwise requires or unless the competent authorities agree to a definition of the term pursuant to Article 25 (Mutual Agreement Procedure), have the meaning which it has under the laws of the Contracting State where a tax is being determined. Under Article 25, where a term which is not defined in the Convention has a different meaning under the laws of the United Kingdom and the United States or where the meaning under the laws of one of the Contracting States is not readily determinable, the competent authorities may, for purposes of the Convention, establish a common meaning of the term in order to prevent double taxation or to further any other purpose of the Convention.

ARTICLE 4. FISCAL RESIDENCE

This Article sets forth rules for determining the residence of individuals, corporations, and other persons for purposes of the Convention. Residence is important because, except as otherwise provided in the Convention, only a resident may claim the benefits of the Convention.

The term "resident of the United Kingdom" is defined as a corporation (as defined in paragraph 1(a) of Article 3 (General Definitions)) whose business is managed and controlled in the United Kingdom, and any other person (except a corporation as defined in paragraph (1)(a) of Article 3), resident in the United Kingdom for purposes of its tax.

Similarly, the term "resident of the United States" is defined as a person (except a corporation as defined in paragraph (1)(a) of Article 3) who is resident in the United States for purposes of its tax. This includes a resident alien individual who is subject to tax in the United States on his worldwide income and a resident citizen. The term also includes a corporation (as defined in paragraph (1)(b)(i) of Article 3). A foreign corporation, regardless of the extent to which its income is effectively connected with the conduct of a United States trade or business, is not a resident of the United States.

It should especially be noted that an individual is not automatically a resident of the United States or the United Kingdom for the purposes of this Convention if he is a citizen of either country. To be a resident of a Contracting State, he must be subject to tax in that State on account of his residence therein. In the case of the United States, an individual will be considered to be a resident if, without regard to his citizenship, he would be taxable in the United States on his worldwide income as a resident. Residence for this purpose is to be determined in accordance with the principles of Treasury regulations under section 871 of the Internal Revenue Code.

The definition of a resident of a Contracting State in the Convention differs from the definition of a resident in the 1945 Convention. Under paragraph (1)(g) of Article II of the 1956 Convention a resident of the United Kingdom is defined, in pertinent part, as "any person (other than a citizen of the United States or a United States corporation) who is resident in the United Kingdom for purposes of United Kingdom tax . . ." and under paragraph (1)(h) of Article II a resident of the United States is defined, in pertinent part, as "any individual who is resident in the United States for the purposes of United States tax and not resident in the United Kingdom for the purposes of United Kingdom tax. . . ." In the case of Strathalmond (Lord) v. Inland Revenue (Ch. D. June 23, 1972), a British court interpreted this definition, in applying Article XV of the 1945 Convention, to prevent the United Kingdom from taxing the United States source dividend income of a United States citizen residing in the United Kingdom. This result is inconsistent with the principles of the OECD Model Convention. Accordingly, under this Article, a United States citizen who resides in the United Kingdom for purposes of its tax will be taxable therein as a resident and, subject to the provisions of United Kingdom law, the United Kingdom will be permitted to tax those citizens on their dividend and interest income regardless of the source of that income. However, where the income of the United States citizen has a source in the United States (as determined under the laws of the United Kingdom) the United Kingdom will allow a credit against the United Kingdom tax for any United States tax payable (on the basis of that person's United States citizenship) with respect to that income. See the discussion of paragraph (3) of Article 23 (Elimination of Double Taxation).

A corporation which is a resident of both Contracting States under this Article (i.e., a United States corporation whose business is managed or controlled in the United Kingdom), is dealt with by paragraph (2) of Article 1 (Personal Scope), and such a corporation may not claim any benefit under this Convention except as provided therein.

Paragraph (1) of this Article also provides that a partnership, estate, or trust is a resident of a Contracting State only to the extent that the income derived by such person is subject to tax in such Contracting State as the income of a resident. For example, under United States law, a partnership is never, and an estate or trust is often not, taxed as such. Under the Convention, income received by a partnership, estate, or trust will be treated for purposes of the Convention as income received by a resident of the United States only to the extent such income is subject to tax in the United States as the income of a resident. Thus, for United States tax purposes, the question of whether income received by a partnership is received by a resident will be determined by the residence of its partners rather than by whether the partnership is resident in the United States by reason of engaging in a trade or business here. To the extent the partners are subject to United States tax as residents of the United States, the income received by a partnership will be treated as income received by a resident of the United States. Similarly, the treatment of income received by a trust or estate will be determined by the residence and taxation of the person subject to tax on such income, which may be the grantor, the beneficiaries or the trust or estate itself, as the case may be.

The fact that a charitable organization or pension fund is exempt from tax in the country in which it is otherwise resident is not to be construed to deny such organization or fund resident status under this Convention.

Paragraph (2) provides that an individual who is a resident of both Contracting States under paragraph (1) will, for purposes of the Convention, be deemed to be a resident of the Contracting State in which he has a permanent home available to him (e.g., where an individual dwells with his family), his center of vital interests (e.g., close economic and personal relations), an habitual abode, or the State of which he is a national, in that order. If the issue cannot be settled by the application of these tests, the competent authorities shall decide by mutual agreement the one Contracting State of which he will be considered to be a resident. Thus, for purposes of the Convention, including paragraph 3 of Article 1 (Personal Scope) (the saving clause) an individual may be a resident of the United States or the United Kingdom, but not both.

Paragraph (3) provides that if an estate or trust (taxable as such) is a resident of both Contracting States under the provisions of paragraph (1), the competent authorities may settle the issue by mutual agreement.

Since the definitions of residence in this Article apply for purposes of the entire Convention, an individual who is deemed to be a resident of one Contracting State and not a resident of the other Contracting State by reason of paragraph (2) will be deemed to be a resident of the first-mentioned Contracting State for all purposes of the Convention. For example, if an individual is determined to be a resident of the United Kingdom under paragraph (2) but would apart from that paragraph also be considered a resident of the United States under the laws of the United States, such individual would continue to receive the exemptions and special benefits granted by the Convention to residents of the United Kingdom, unless the individual is a citizen of the United States (see the saving clause of paragraph (3) of Article 1 (Personal Scope)).

Paragraph (4) provides that for United Kingdom tax purposes the domicile, on or after April 6, 1976, of a woman who is a United States national and who was married before January 1, 1974 to a man domiciled in the United Kingdom will be determined as though such marriage had taken place on January 1, 1974. The foreign source income of a United Kingdom resident is subject to taxation in the United Kingdom to a different extent depending on the domicile of the resident. Thus, a United Kingdom resident domiciled in the United Kingdom is subject to full United Kingdom taxation on all income, whereas a United Kingdom resident domiciled outside the United Kingdom is generally subject to tax on foreign source income only to the extent that it is remitted to the United Kingdom.

Under United Kingdom law prior to January 1, 1974, the domicile of a woman was the same as the domicile of her husband. This rule has been repealed for future years. However, as a transitional rule, United Kingdom law treats a woman married before 1974 as retaining her husband's domicile unless and until she changes her domicile by acquisition or revival of another domicile after 1973.

As a consequence, under United Kingdom law a United States citizen woman married to a man domiciled in the United Kingdom prior to January 1, 1974 does not have the same opportunity to prove a domicile outside the United Kingdom as does a United States citizen man married to a woman domiciled in the United Kingdom. Paragraph (4) of the Convention puts the United States citizen woman in the same position as the United States citizen man.

Paragraph (5) provides a special rule for cases where income dealt with by this Convention (e.g., under Articles 7 (Business Profits), 8 (Shipping and Air Transport), 10 (Dividends), 11 (Interest), 12 (Royalties), and 22 (Other Income)), is taxable to a resident of a Contracting State only if, and to the extent, it is remitted to or received by that person. In certain cases, individuals who are residents of the United Kingdom are not taxable on foreign source investment income, unless it is remitted to or received by them in the United Kingdom. If such income is received outside of the United Kingdom, or accumulated by the payer, a United Kingdom resident may not be subject to tax on that income. If the reductions in rates or exemptions from tax were to apply to those items of income, the United States would be foregoing tax where double taxation does not in fact occur. Thus, this paragraph provides that if under the law in the other Contracting State income would only be taxed on a remittance basis, then any reduced rates of tax (e.g., as provided by Articles 10 (Dividends)), or relief from taxation (e.g., Articles 7 (Business Profits) and 8 (Shipping and Air Transport), 11 (Interest), or 12 (Royalties)) provided by this Convention shall apply only to the extent such income is remitted to or received by the person in the year in which it accrues to the benefit of that taxpayer. This rule applies to all persons, including individuals, corporations, partnerships and trusts or estates taxable as such.

This provision is similar to paragraph (4) of Article II of the 1945 Convention.

ARTICLE 5. PERMANENT ESTABLISHMENT

This Article defines the term "permanent establishment." The existence of a permanent establishment is relevant under Article 7 (Business Profits) where it is provided that the business profits of an enterprise of a Contracting State shall be taxable only in that State unless it carries on business in the other Contracting State through a permanent establishment situated therein.

Under paragraph (1), the term "permanent establishment" means a fixed place of business through which an enterprise of one of the Contracting States wholly or partly carries on business. Illustrations in paragraph (2) of a permanent establishment include a branch; an office; a factory; a workshop; a mine, oil or gas well, quarry or other place of extraction of natural resources; and a building site, or construction or installation project which exists for more than twelve months. Under the construction or installation project rule the twelve month period begins only when work physically commences in the other Contracting State. A series of contracts or projects which are interdependent both commercially and geographically is to be treated as a single project for the purpose of applying the twelve months test. As a general rule, any fixed facility or premises through which a resident carries on business for an indefinite or substantial period of time will be treated as a permanent establishment unless it is used only for one or more of the activities described in paragraph (3) of this Article.

Paragraph (3) specifically provides that a permanent establishment does not include a fixed place of business if it is used solely for one or more of the following activities:

"(a) the storage, display, or delivery of goods or merchandise belonging to the enterprise;

"(b) the maintenance of a stock of goods or merchandise belonging to the enterprise for the purpose of storage, display or delivery;

"(c) the maintenance of a stock of goods or merchandise belonging to the enterprise for the purpose of processing by another person;

"(d) the maintenance of a fixed place of business for the purpose of purchasing goods or merchandise, or for collecting information, for the enterprise;

"(e) the maintenance of a fixed place of business for the purpose of advertising, for the supply of information, for scientific research, or for similar activities which have a preparatory or auxiliary character, for the enterprise; or

"(f) a building or construction or installation project which does not exist for more than 12 months."

As noted, these exceptions are cumulative and a fixed place of business used only for one or more of these purposes will not be considered a permanent establishment under the Convention.

Under paragraph (4), a person acting in one Contracting State on behalf of a resident of the other Contracting State, other than an agent of an independent status to whom paragraph (5) applies, will be deemed to constitute a permanent establishment if such person has, and habitually exercises in that first-mentioned Contracting State, an authority to conclude contracts in the name of the resident, unless the contracts are limited to the activities described in paragraph (3) of this Article.

On the other hand, paragraph (5) provides that an enterprise of one Contracting State will not be deemed to have a permanent establishment in the other Contracting State merely because such enterprise carries on business in such other Contracting State through a broker, general commission agent, or any other agent of an independent status, where such broker or agent is acting in the ordinary course of his business.

Under paragraph (6), the fact that a corporation which is a resident of a Contracting State controls or is controlled by a corporation of the other Contracting State, or which carries on business in the other Contracting State, through a permanent establishment or otherwise shall not of itself constitute either corporation a permanent establishment of the other.

ARTICLE 6. INCOME FROM IMMOVABLE PROPERTY (REAL PROPERTY)

Paragraph (1) provides that income from immovable property including income from agriculture or forestry, may be taxed in the Contracting State where the property is situated. This rule does not confer an exclusive right of taxation to the State where the property is located, but only confirms that the situs State has the primary right to tax such income regardless of whether the income is derived through a permanent establishment in that State.

Paragraph (2) provides that the term "immovable property" is to be defined under the laws of the Contracting State where the property is located. Generally, the term "immovable property" refers to real property for purposes of United States and United Kingdom law. Moreover, paragraph (2) also defines the term "immovable property" to include usufruct of immovable property and rights to variable or fixed payments (e.g., royalties) as consideration for the working of, or the right to work, mineral deposits, sources, and other natural resources (e.g., oil or gas wells). Ships, boats and aircraft shall not be regarded as immovable property.

This Article shall apply to income derived from the use in any form of immovable property, including income from leases of immovable property, but it does not include interest on indebtedness secured by real property (e.g., mortgages).

Where income is derived from immovable property through a permanent establishment in a Contracting State, such income may be taxed in accordance with Article 7 (Business Profits).

Income from immovable property does not include gains from the sale of immovable property. Where those gains are capital gains within the meaning of Article 13 (Capital Gains), that Article shall apply.

This Article differs from the provisions of Article IX of the 1945 Convention. During the years since that Convention was ratified both the United States and the United Kingdom have enacted statutes permitting the taxpayer to elect to treat income in respect of real property, wells, mines and other natural resources, as income from a trade or business. In these cases, the taxpayer is taxed only on net income rather on the gross income derived from such operations. Thus, it was determined that this Convention need not continue the terms of the 1945 Convention.

ARTICLE 7. BUSINESS PROFITS

Paragraph (1) provides that business profits (as defined in paragraph (7) of this Article) of an enterprise of one Contracting State shall be taxable only in that State unless the enterprise carries on business in the other Contracting State through a permanent establishment situated therein, except where the enterprise is a national of that other Contracting State. (See the saving clause in paragraph (3) of Article 1 (Personal Scope)). The term "permanent establishment" is defined in Article 5 (Permanent Establishment). Where business is carried on through a permanent establishment in the other Contracting State, the business profits attributable to the permanent establishment can be taxed by that other Contracting State.

Business profits may be attributable to a permanent establishment which an enterprise of one Contracting State has in the other Contracting State, whether from sources within or without a Contracting State. Thus, items of income described in section 864 (c)(4)(B) of the Code which are attributable to a permanent establishment situated in the United States will be subject to tax by the United States.

In determining the proper attribution of business profits under the Convention to a permanent establishment, paragraph (2) provides that both Contracting States will attribute to the permanent establishment such profits as it would reasonably be expected to derive if it were an independent entity engaged in the same or similar activities under the same or similar conditions and dealing wholly independently with the enterprise of which it is a permanent establishment.

Under paragraph (3), expenses, wherever incurred, which are reasonably connected with profits attributable to the permanent establishment, including a reasonable allocation of executive and general administrative expenses, research and development expenses, interest, and other expenses incurred for the enterprise as a whole (or the part which includes the permanent establishment), will be allowed as deductions in determining the business profits of the permanent establishment. However, in determining the amount of the deduction under paragraph (3) for expenses incurred by the head office, the deduction generally will be limited to the expense incurred without including a profit element for the head office.

Under paragraph (4) profits shall not be attributed to a permanent establishment merely because of the purchase of goods or merchandise by that permanent establishment for the account of the enterprise. Paragraph (2) of the Article does not override paragraph (4). Thus, for example, where a permanent establishment purchases goods for its head office, the business profits attributed under paragraph (2) to the permanent establishment with respect to its other activities will not be increased by adding a national figure for profits from purchasing.

For purposes of this Article, paragraph (5) provides that the profits attributed to a permanent establishment shall be determined by the same method every year unless there is a good reason to change such method. The purpose of this provision is to give assurance of continuous and consistent tax treatment.

Paragraph (6) provides that, where the profits of a permanent establishment include items of income which are dealt with separately in other Articles of the Convention, the provisions of those Articles will not be affected by the provisions of this Article. Thus, for example, the taxation of interest income will be controlled by Article 11 (Interest) and not by this Article unless, as provided by paragraph (4) of Article 11, the interest is effectively connected with a permanent establishment which the recipient, being a resident of one of the Contracting States, has in the other State. This same exception applies with respect to items of income dealt with in Article 8 (Shipping and Air Transport), dividends under paragraph (4) of Article 10 (Dividends), royalties under paragraph (4) of Article 12 (Royalties) or other income under paragraph (2) of Article 22 (Other Income).

Under paragraph (7), the term "business profits" includes, but is not limited to, income derived from manufacturing, mercantile, banking, insurance (or reinsurance), agricultural, fishing or mining activities, the operation of ships or aircraft, the furnishing of services, the rental of tangible personal (movable) property, and the rental or licensing of motion picture films or films or tapes used for radio or television broadcasting or from copyrights thereof. Thus, for example, income derived by a resident of the United States from the rental of tangible personal property to a person in the United Kingdom shall not be subject to tax in the United Kingdom unless that lessor has a permanent establishment in the United Kingdom to which such income is attributable. The term "business profits" also includes any other income which is effectively connected with a permanent establishment which the recipient, being a resident of one of the Contracting States, has in the other Contracting State. The term "business profits" does not include income from the performance of personal services derived by an individual either as an employee or in an independent capacity. Income from such activities is dealt with under Articles 14 (Independent Personal Services), 15 (Dependent Personal Services) and 17 (Artistes and Athletes), as the case may be.

This Article is substantially similar to Article III of the 1945 Convention and is also based on Article 7 (Business Profits) of the OECD Model Convention.

ARTICLE 8. SHIPPING AND AIR TRANSPORT

Paragraph (1) provides that profits of an enterprise of a Contracting State from the operation of ships or aircraft in international traffic shall be taxable only in that Contracting State.

Paragraph (2) confirms that the United Kingdom grants to nationals of the United States and United States corporations the equivalent shipping and aircraft exemption required for application of Code sections 872(b) and 883. It should be noted that the exemption provided under this paragraph is available only with respect to the profits derived from operating ships documented or aircraft registered under the laws of the United States.

Under paragraph (3), this Article applies to profits derived from the rental of ships or aircraft under a bareboat charter if the lessor is engaged in the operation of ships or aircraft in international traffic and the rental income is incidental to operations of the lessor described in paragraph (1). In these cases the lessee of the property need not be a resident of a Contracting State. For example, if an airline which is a resident of one Contracting State has excess equipment in the winter months and leases several of its aircraft which are not required by it during that period to another airline, the rental profits of the lessor are not subject to tax by that other Contracting State, regardless of the state of residence of the lessee.

Paragraph (4) provides that profits derived by an enterprise of a Contracting State from the use, maintenance, or rental of containers (including trailers and related equipment for the transport of containers), used to transport goods or merchandise shall be taxable only in that State except to the extent that those goods or merchandise are transported solely between places within a Contracting State. The income covered by this provision need not be incidental to the operation of ships or aircraft. Thus, this Article applies to lessors of containers who do not own or operate the ships or aircraft upon which the containers are carried. This paragraph also applies to income derived by an enterprise from the use, maintenance, and lease of containers and other related equipment in connection with the operation of ships or aircraft described in paragraph (1).

Paragraph (5) provides that this Article shall also apply to profits derived by an enterprise of a Contracting State from participation in a pool, a joint business or an international operating agency.

Paragraph (6) provides that gains of an enterprise of a Contracting State from the alienation of ships, aircraft or containers owned and operated by the enterprise shall be taxable only in that State if the income from such ships, aircraft or containers is taxable only in that State.

Except for paragraph (2), this Article is subject to the saving clause of paragraph (3) of Article 1 (Personal Scope). Therefore, a Contracting State may tax income from shipping or air transport, or from the use or rental of containers, derived by a resident of the other Contracting State without regard to this Article if such resident is a national of the first-mentioned Contracting State.

ARTICLE 9. ASSOCIATED ENTERPRISES

Article 9 confirms the authority of the United States under section 482 of the Code. Thus, where an enterprise of a Contracting State is related to another enterprise and conditions are made or imposed between them in their commercial or financial relations which are different from those which would be made between independent enterprises, under paragraph (1) any income, deductions, receipts or outgoings which would, but for those conditions, have been attributed to one of the enterprises, but by reason of those conditions have not been so attributed, may be taken into account in computing the profits and losses of that enterprise and taxed accordingly.

Paragraph (2) sets forth an explicit formulation of the consequence of a redetermination made in accordance with paragraph (1) by a Contracting State. In such event, the other Contracting State shall make such corresponding adjustment as may be appropriate to the amount of tax charged to the related enterprise by the other Contracting State. In the case of the United States, assuming application within a reasonable time after notice of such adjustment, any refunds of tax in respect of such an adjustment shall be made notwithstanding the statute of limitations.

Under paragraph (3), if a Contracting State disagrees with a redetermination of tax by the other Contracting State, the two Contracting States will endeavor to resolve the matter in accordance with the mutual agreement procedure in Article 25 (Mutual Agreement Procedure).

Paragraph (4) deals with the methods by which a Contracting State or a political subdivision or local authority thereof may tax an enterprise which is controlled by an enterprise of the other Contracting State. Where an enterprise doing business in one Contracting State is a resident (as defined in Article 4 (Fiscal Residence)) of the other Contracting State, or is controlled, directly or indirectly, by an enterprise which is a resident of the other Contracting State, the first-mentioned Contracting State, or political subdivision or local authority thereof, in determining the tax liability of the enterprise doing business therein, may not take into account the income, deductions, receipts, or outgoings of a related enterprise which is a resident of the other Contracting State or of an enterprise of any third State which is related to the enterprise of the other Contracting State. (Because a corporation is considered a single enterprise regardless of how many branches it has, a State may take into account the income and assets of all branches of that corporation, wherever located.) The taxing jurisdiction may, however, attribute income to the enterprise under the arm's-length principles contained in the other paragraphs of this Article. In addition, where the enterprise which is a resident of the other Contracting State is a corporation, the provisions of paragraph (4) of this Article will apply only if such corporation: (1) is not a controlled foreign corporation within the meaning of Code section 957; (2) is not created or organized under the laws of the first-mentioned Contracting State or any third State; and (3) is not controlled, directly or indirectly, by a corporation which is a resident of any third State.

Finally, the prohibition contained in paragraph (4) will not apply where the enterprise doing business in a Contracting State is a resident of that State to the extent that it owns, directly or indirectly, the capital of a related enterprise. Thus, this provision does not affect the application of the United States "subpart F" rules of Code sections 951-964.

The following is an illustration of the operation of this paragraph: Corporation M, organized under the laws of the United Kingdom, is a resident of the United Kingdom, and all of its stock is owned by individuals residing in the United Kingdom who are not United States nationals. Corporation M controls subsidiaries A, B, and C, which are incorporated in, and do business in, respectively, France, Germany, and Belgium. Corporation M also controls a United States subsidiary, Z, which is incorporated in and conducts its business in X, a state of the United States. In determining the tax liability of Z, to X or to the United States, neither X nor the United States, are permitted to allocate to, apportion to, or otherwise include in Z's tax base income earned by M, A, B, or C, except to the extent the dealings between Z and those persons require the application of the arm's-length principles of the other paragraphs of this Article. Thus, in these circumstances, the United States or the states will be required to determine Z's tax liability solely on the basis of its income. The determination of Z's tax liability under any unitary or combined reporting basis is, therefore, prohibited by this Article.

The broad standard of tax jurisdiction embodied in United States tax treaties provides that one Contracting State will not tax the business profits of an enterprise of the other Contracting State unless that enterprise does business in the first-mentioned Contracting State through a permanent establishment located there. The purpose of this provision is to harmonize the tax jurisdiction under this Convention at the national, state and local levels by equating the tax base of an enterprise doing business in a state or political subdivision of the United States with the enterprise's Federal income tax base.

Paragraph (5) provides that for purposes of the Convention an enterprise is related to another enterprise if either owns or controls directly or indirectly the other, or if a third person or persons (related to each other or acting together) own or control, directly or indirectly, both. The term "control" is not limited to the ownership of the capital of an enterprise, and includes any kind of control, whether or not legally enforceable, and however exercised or exercisable.

ARTICLE 10. DIVIDENDS

Article 10 deals with the taxation of dividends derived from a corporation which is a resident of a Contracting State. Under Article VI of the 1945 Convention, the rate of tax on dividends derived by residents of one Contracting State from a corporation of the other Contracting State is limited to 15 percent of the gross amount of the dividends. In 1973 the United Kingdom introduced a system of integrating corporate and shareholder taxation. Under the system adopted by the United Kingdom, a special "Advance Corporation Tax" ("ACT" hereafter), is collected at the corporate level on a distribution of dividends by the corporation. This tax is treated both as an advance payment of a portion of the corporate income tax, and also as a payment by an individual United Kingdom resident shareholder in satisfaction of his personal tax liabilities on the dividend. The introduction of this system rendered inapplicable the current provisions of the Convention relating to United Kingdom dividends. Accordingly, the proposed Article provides a mechanism by which United States shareholders of a United Kingdom corporation will receive the benefits of the shareholder credits which have heretofore not been granted to United States residents.

This Article contains two alternatives for the taxation of dividends, depending on whether the United Kingdom continues to allow a tax credit to individual shareholders in respect of dividends derived from a corporation which is a resident of the United Kingdom. Paragraph (1) will apply only if the United Kingdom modifies its current system of shareholder credits. This paragraph limits the tax on dividends paid by a corporation which is a resident of one Contracting State to a resident (who derives and beneficially owns the dividend) of the other Contracting State to 15 percent of the gross amount of the dividends. As noted above, this is the rule contained in the 1945 Convention.

Paragraph (2) applies where, as at the present time, an individual resident in the United Kingdom is entitled to a credit in respect of dividends paid by a corporation which is a resident of the United Kingdom. So long as this system remains in force, only paragraph (2), and not paragraph (1), shall apply. With respect to dividends paid by a corporation resident in the United Kingdom to a United States corporation which either alone or together with one or more associated corporations (defined below) controls, directly or indirectly, at least 10 percent of the voting stock of the United Kingdom resident corporation which is paying the dividend, the shareholder will be entitled to payment from the United Kingdom of a tax credit (hereinafter referred to as a refund) equal to one-half of the tax credit to which an individual resident in the United Kingdom would be entitled, less 5 percent of the aggregate amount of the cash dividend and the United Kingdom refund.

For United States tax purposes, the gross amount of the refund (without reduction for the tax withheld) will be considered as a dividend (see discussion under Article 23 (Elimination of Double Taxation)) and the 5 percent tax withheld will be considered as a tax on the shareholder receiving the dividend (see paragraph (1)(b) of Article 23 (Elimination of Double Taxation)). The unrefunded portion of the ACT paid in respect of the dividend will be regarded as an income tax imposed on the distributing corporation (see paragraph (1)(c) of Article 23).

In the case of United States shareholders other than corporations which control at least 10 percent of the voting stock of the United Kingdom resident corporation, the United Kingdom refund will equal the full credit payable to an individual resident in the United Kingdom, less 15 percent of the aggregate amount of the dividend and the U.K. refund. For United States tax purposes, the U.K. refund shall be treated as additional gross income and the 15 percent withholding shall be considered as a tax on the shareholder. In the case of a $65 dividend, the result is as follows:

Dividend for U.S. Tax Purposes
Dividend	$ 65.00
U.K. refund	35.00
Gross Dividend	100.00
United Kingdom Withholding Tax		$15.00
Foreign Tax Credit		$15.00

With respect to dividends paid by a United States corporation to a corporation which is a resident of the United Kingdom, and which controls, directly or indirectly, at least 10 percent of the voting stock of the United States corporation paying the dividend, the United States tax shall not exceed 5 percent of the gross dividend.

In all other cases of dividends paid by a United States corporation to any other resident of the United Kingdom, the rate of tax imposed by the United States shall not exceed 15 percent.

For purposes of paragraph (2), two corporations are associated if one controls directly or indirectly more than 50 percent of the voting power in the other corporation, or a third corporation controls more than 50 percent of the voting power in both of them.

As noted above, a resident of a Contracting State may benefit from this Article only if he derives and beneficially owns the dividend paid by a corporation of one of the Contracting States. A nominee or agent which is a resident of a Contracting State may not claim the benefits of this Article if the dividend is received on behalf of a person who is not a resident of that Contracting State. Similarly, dividends received by a nominee for the benefit of a resident, as, for example, with respect to a depositary receipt, would qualify for the benefits of this Article. This is generally the case with respect to all income tax conventions of the United States.

Paragraph (3) defines the term "dividends" to include any item which is treated as a distribution under the laws of the United Kingdom for United Kingdom tax purposes or, as a distribution out of earnings and profits for United States tax purposes. Distributions which are not within this definition of "dividends," or covered by any other provision of this Convention, shall be treated as "other income" under Article 22 (Other Income) of this Convention.

Paragraph (4) provides that paragraphs (1) and (2) of this Article shall not apply if the person deriving the dividends, being a resident of a Contracting State, has a permanent establishment in the other Contracting State or performs personal services from a fixed base situated therein, and the holding in respect of which the dividends are paid is effectively connected with the permanent establishment or fixed base. In such a case, the diivdends will be treated as business profits subject to the provision of Article 7 (Business Profits) or taxable in accordance with Articles 14 (Independent Personal Services) or 17 (Artistes and Athletes), as the case may be.

Paragraph (5) provides that dividends paid by a corporation which is a resident of a Contracting State, regardless of where it derives its income, to a person other than a resident of the other Contracting State (and in the case of dividends paid by a corporation which is a resident of the United Kingdom, to a person other than a United States citizen), shall be exempt from tax by the other Contracting State unless the holding with respect to which such dividends are paid is effectively connected with a permanent establishment or a fixed base which the person deriving the dividends has in that other State. For example, if a corporation which is a resident of the United Kingdom and is doing business in the United States pays dividends to a resident of the United Kingdom, or to a resident of a third State, those dividends shall be exempt from United States tax unless they are paid to a citizen or resident of the United States, or unless the holding in respect of which the dividends are paid is effectively connected with a permanent establishment or fixed base which the United Kingdom resident or resident of a third State maintains in the United States. This rule is contained in Article XV of the 1945 Convention. A dual-resident corporation which derives dividends from a resident of a Contracting State may not claim the benefits of this provision, although dividends received from a dual-resident corporation will qualify for the benefits of this Article.

Paragraph (6) continues the provisions of Article XVI of the 1945 Convention, and provides that a corporation which is a resident of the United Kingdom shall be exempt from the United States tax on accumulated or undistributed earnings (as provided by Code sections 531 (the accumulated earnings tax) and 541 (the personal holding company tax)), if individuals, other than citizens of the United States, who are residents of the United Kingdom, control, directly or indirectly, more than 50 percent of the entire voting power in such corporation.

Paragraph (7) prevents the application of paragraphs (1) and (2) of this Article in two circumstances where tax avoidance may occur. First, under subparagraph (a), where a resident of a Contracting State owns 10 percent or more of the shares of a corporation with respect to which dividends are paid, paragraphs (1) or (2) of this Article shall not apply to the extent that the dividends are paid out of profits which the corporation earned or other income which it received in a period ending 12 months or more before the date on which the shareholder became the owner of 10 percent or more of the corporation's stock. This rule is designed to prevent transactions where a 10 percent stock interest is acquired in order to obtain a distribution of the past earnings of a corporation at reduced rates of tax.

A second rule contained in subparagraph (b) is designed to deny the benefits of the Convention to tax exempt organizations if the recipient of a dividend is exempt from tax in the United States and the dividends are received in circumstances where if received by an exempt organization of the United Kingdom such interest or dividends would not be so exempt. Under United Kingdom law, if a resident of the United Kingdom sells securities to an exempt organization immediately before the payment of dividends, the organization will be taxable on the dividends paid in respect of the securities if the transaction was designed to accord the initial seller a preferential rate of tax on his sale. This rule is contained in Article VII A of the 1945 Convention.

The rules of paragraph (7), stated above, shall not apply if the beneficial owner of the shares satisfies the competent authorities of the respective States that the shares were acquired for bona fide commercial purposes and not to secure the benefits of the Convention.

This Article is subject to the saving clause of paragraph (3) of Article 1 (Personal Scope). Thus, dividends derived by a citizen of a Contracting State may be taxed by that Contracting State without regard to this Article.

ARTICLE 11. INTEREST

Paragraphs (1) and (2) provide that interest derived and beneficially owned by a resident of one Contracting State shall be exempt from tax by the other Contracting State. In these cases, interest is taxable only in the taxpayer's State of residence. The exemption only applies where the person deriving the interest is a resident of a Contracting State (as defined in Article 4 (Fiscal Residence)) and is the beneficial owner of the interest. Thus, the exemption does not apply where an intermediary, which is a resident of a Contracting State, such as an agent or nominee, collects or receives the interest on behalf of a person who is not a resident of that Contracting State.

Paragraph (3) defines the term interest for purposes of this Article as income from Government securities, bonds or debentures, whether or not secured by mortgage or whether or not carrying a right to participate in profits, and debt claims of every kind, as well as all other income (such as original issue discount) which, under the taxation law of the Contracting State in which the income has its source, is assimilated to income from money lent. Paragraphs (1) and (2) apply to all "interest", from whatever source derived. Penalty charges and late payment penalties shall not be regarded as interest. Such payments shall be regarded as "other income" dealt with by Article 22 (Other Income).

Paragraph (4) provides that the exemption from tax provided by paragraphs (1) and (2) shall not apply if the person deriving the interest, being a resident of a Contracting State, has a permanent establishment in the other Contracting State or performs personal services from a fixed base situated therein, and the indebtedness giving rise to the interest is effectively connected with the permanent establishment or fixed base. In such a case, the interest will be treated as business profits subject to the provisions of Article 7 (Business Profits) or will be taxable in accordance with Article 14 (Independent Personal Services) or 17 (Artistes and Athletes), as the case may be.

If excessive interest is paid pursuant to a special relationship between the payer and the person deriving the interest or between both of them and a third person, under paragraph (5) the provisions of Article 11 shall not apply to the excess portion of the payment. For this purpose, those persons need not be "related" within the meaning of paragraph (5) of Article 9 (Related Enterprises). The excessive portion may be taxed by each Contracting State, in accordance with its own law, including the Convention where applicable. In the case of the United States, the excessive portion may, for example, be taxed as a dividend, in which case the provisions of Article 10 (Dividends) will apply.

Paragraph (6) provides that interest paid by a resident of a Contracting State, regardless of where it derives its income, to a person other than a resident of the other Contracting State (and in the case of interest paid by a resident of the United Kingdom, to a person other than a United States citizen), shall be exempt from tax by the other Contracting State unless the debt claim in respect of which such interest is paid is effectively connected with a permanent establishment or a fixed base which the person deriving the interest has in that other State. For example, if a corporation which is a resident of the United Kingdom and is doing business in the United States pays interest to a resident of the United Kingdom, or to a resident of a third State, that interest shall be exempt from United States tax unless it is paid to a citizen or resident of the United States, or unless the debt obligation is effectively connected with a permanent establishment or a fixed base which the United Kingdom resident or resident of a third State maintains in the United States. A dual-resident corporation may not claim the benefits of this provision. A debt obligation is effectively connected with a permanent establishment in the United States when interest on that obligation is effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States within the meaning of Code section 864(c)(2) or 864(c)(4)(B)(ii), depending on the source of the interest under United States law.

Paragraph (7) is carried over from paragraph (5) of Article VII of the 1945 Convention. Under United Kingdom domestic law, interest payments by United Kingdom corporations to non-United Kingdom corporations which have 75 percent or more control, directly or indirectly, of the United Kingdom corporation are treated as distributions (dividends) rather than as deductible interest. This paragraph provides, in reciprocal terms, that this rule shall not apply where the payment is to a resident of the other Contracting State. By virtue of paragraph (2) of Article 1 (Personal Scope), a dual-resident corporation may claim the benefits of this provision with respect to interest payments it makes. However, this paragraph also provides that where the interest is paid to a corporation which is a resident of a Contracting State of which more than 50 percent of the voting power is directly or indirectly controlled by persons who are residents of the other Contracting State, the exemption shall not apply.

Paragraph (8) provides that the exemption from United Kingdom tax under paragraph (2) of this Article will not apply if the recipient of the interest is exempt from tax on such income in the United States and the recipient sells or makes a contract to sell the holding from which such interest is derived within three months after the date the recipient acquired such holding.

The provisions of this Article are subject to the saving clause of paragraph (3) of Article 1 (Personal Scope). Thus, interest derived by a citizen of a Contracting State may be taxed by that Contracting State without regard to this Article.

ARTICLE 12. ROYALTIES

Paragraphs (1) and (2) provide that royalties derived and beneficially owned by a resident of a Contracting State shall be exempt from tax by the other Contracting State. Such income, therefore, is taxable only in the State of residence. As in Article 10 (Dividends) and 11 (Interest), this exemption applies only where the person deriving the royalties is a resident of a Contracting State and is the beneficial owner of the royalty. Thus, the exemption does not apply where an intermediary, such as an agent or nominee, who is a resident of a Contracting State collects or receives the royalties on behalf of a nonresident of that Contracting State. This Article deals with royalties from sources within a Contracting State or from sources within any third State, except as described below.

Paragraph (3) defines the term "royalties" as payment of any kind made as consideration for the use of, or the right to use, copyrights of literary, artistic, or scientific works (but not including copyrights of motion picture films or films or tapes used for radio or television broadcasting (which are treated as business profits under paragraph (7) of Article 7 (Business Profits)), patents, trade mark, design or model, plan, secret formula or process, or other like right or property, or for information concerning industrial, commercial or scientific experience. This term includes "know-how" and similar experience or skill, including the supply of assistance of an ancillary and subsidiary nature furnished as a means of enabling the application or enjoyment of any such right or property. The term also includes gains derived from the alienation (e.g.; the sale, exchange, or other disposition) of any such right or property to the extent the amounts realized on such alienation are contingent on the productivity, use, or disposition of the right or property. If the amounts realized are not so contingent, the provision of Article 13 (Capital Gains) may apply. The article does not apply to amounts which are characterized as interest pursuant to section 483 of the Code.

Paragraph (4) provides that paragraphs (1) and (2) will not apply if the royalty recipient, being a resident of one Contracting State, carries on business in the other Contracting State through a permanent establishment situated therein or performs in that other Contracting State personal services from a fixed base situated therein, and the right or property giving rise to the royalty is effectively connected with such permanent establishment or fixed base. In such a case, the royalty will be treated as business profits subject to Article 7 (Business Profits) or will be taxable in accordance with Articles 14 (Independent Personal Services) or 17 (Artistes and Athletes) as the case may be.

If excessive royalties are paid pursuant to a special relationship between the payer and the person deriving the royalty or between both of them and a third person, paragraph (5) provides that the provisions of this Article shall not apply to the excessive portion of the payment. For this purpose, the persons covered by this paragraph need not be "related" within the meaning of paragraph (5) of Article 9 (Related Enterprises). The excessive portion may be taxed in each Contracting State, in accordance with its own law, including the Convention where applicable. In the case of the United States, the execssive portion may, for example, be taxed as a dividend, in which case the provisions of Article 10 (Dividends) will apply.

This Article is subject to the saving clause of paragraph (3) of Article 1 (Personal Scope). Therefore, royalties derived by a citizen of a Contracting State may be taxed by the Contracting State without regard to this Article.

ARTICLE 13. CAPITAL GAINS

This Article provides that, except as provided in Article 8 (Shipping and Air Transport) capital gains are taxable in accordance with the domestic laws of the Contracting States. This rule applies to the existing laws of a Contracting State respecting the taxation of capital gains and revisions of those laws subsequent to the effective date of this Convention. Thus, for example, capital gains in respect of the sale of immovable property described by Article 6 (Immovable Property) or the sale of a right or property giving rise to royalties described by Article 12 (Royalties) (which are not contingent on productivity, etc.,) may be taxed in accordance with the respective domestic laws of the Contracting States. The provision of Article 7 (Business Profits) shall apply to gains attributable to a permanent establishment. Article 22 (Other Income) does not apply to capital gains.

Under current United States law, contained in Code sections 871 and 872, nonresident alien individuals are generally not taxable in the U.S. on their United States source capital gains unless they are present in the United States for 183 days or more during a taxable year, or if the gains are effectively connected with the conduct of a U.S. trade or business. Under Code sections 881 and 882 foreign corporations generally are taxable in the U.S. only on capital gains which are effectively connected with the conduct of a U.S. trade or business.

Notwithstanding the foregoing rules, under paragraph (6) of Article 8 (Shipping and Air Transport) gains which an enterprise of a Contracting State derives from the sale, exchange or other disposition of ships, aircraft or containers which the enterprise owns or operates (dealt with by Article 8 (Shipping and Air Transport)), shall be taxable only in the State in which the income from the ships, aircraft or containers was taxable.

Under paragraph (2) of Article 3 (General Definitions), whether an item of income constitutes capital gains shall be determined under the laws of the Contracting State seeking to tax those gains.

The representatives of the Contracting States will consult with each other upon the enactment or proposed enactment by either State of any laws which substantially change the manner in which capital gains derived by nonresidents are taxed by the respective States.

ARTICLE 14. INDEPENDENT PERSONAL SERVICES

In dealing with the taxation of income from personal services, the Convention distinguishes between "independent" and "dependent" personal services. The Convention also provides special treatment for individuals who are "artistes or athletes" and for amounts received in certain circumstances in respect of the services of an artiste or athlete.

Personal services performed in an independent capacity, that is, independent personal services, are services performed by an individual for his own account where he receives the income and bears the losses arising from such services. If an individual is an independent contractor he is considered as rendering independent personal services. Income from services in which capital is a material income-producing factor, however, will generally be governed by the provisions of Article 7 (Business Profits). Generally, services rendered as a director of a corporation, or rendered by physicians, lawyers, engineers, architects, dentists, consultants, and accountants, performing personal services as sole proprietors or partners, are independent personal services, whereas the income earned by the employees of such persons, or as an officer of a corporation, is considered to be income from dependent personal services.

Under this Article income derived by an individual who is a resident of one Contracting State from the performance of personal services in an independent capacity may be taxed by that Contracting State. Except as permitted by subparagraphs (a) and (b) of this Article, such income will be exempt from tax by the other Contracting State.

Subparagraph (a) provides that income derived from services performed in the other Contracting State may also be subject to tax in that other Contracting State if the individual is present therein for a period or periods exceeding 183 days in the tax year, but only to the extent such income is attributable to services performed in that State. In addition, subparagraph (b) provides that income from personal services may be taxed in the other Contracting State if the individual has a fixed base regularly available to him for the purpose of performing his activities, but only to the extent such income is attributable to services performed in that State. The term fixed base is synonymous with the term "permanent establishment" as described in Article 5 (Permanent Establishment).

ARTICLE 15. DEPENDENT PERSONAL SERVICES

This Article deals with the taxation of income in respect of dependent personal services. The Article is based on Article 15 (Dependent Personal Services) of the OECD Model Convention. Under paragraph (1), subject to Articles 18 (Pensions) and 19 (Government Service), salaries, wages and other similar remuneration derived by an individual who is a resident of one Contracting State from labor or personal services performed as an employee (of any person) shall be taxed only by that Contracting State unless that employment is exercised in the other Contracting State. Except as provided by paragraph (2), remuneration derived with respect to services performed within the other Contracting State may also be taxed by that other Contracting State. It is intended that for purposes of the Convention the term "salaries, wages and other similar remuneration" includes income from services performed as an officer of a corporation.

Under paragraph (2), remuneration derived by an individual who is a resident of one Contracting State in respect of an employment exercised in the other Contracting State will be exempt from tax by the other Contracting State if: (a) the individual is present in that other Contracting State for a period or periods aggregating less than 183 days in the taxable year; (b) the employee's remuneration is paid by or on behalf of an employer who is not a resident of that other Contracting State; and (c) the remuneration is not borne as such by a permanent establishment or fixed base which the employer has in that other Contracting State. Such income may nevertheless be taxed by that other Contracting State if the individual is a citizen or resident of that Contracting State, pursuant to the saving clause of paragraph (3) of Article 1 (Personal Scope).

In the United States, remuneration from the performance of dependent services will be viewed as not having been borne by the permanent establishment or fixed base maintained in the United States if the employee is performing stewardship or overseeing functions for the benefit of a resident of or a permanent establishment maintained in the United Kingdom. However, the remuneration will be considered to be borne by the permanent establishment or fixed base maintained in the United States if the remuneration is paid for activities other than stewardship or overseeing functions and the permanent establishment or fixed base is entitled to claim the employee's remuneration as a deduction in computing taxable income for United States purposes because the remuneration is definitely related and allocable to its gross income or a class of its gross income pursuant to Code section 861 and the regulations thereunder.

Paragraph (3) provides that, notwithstanding paragraphs (1) and (2) of this Article, remuneration derived by an individual employee in respect of an employment as a member of the regular complement of a ship or aircraft in international traffic may be taxed by the Contracting State of which the employer operating the ship or aircraft is a resident.

ARTICLE 16. INVESTMENT OR HOLDING COMPANIES

This Article provides that a corporation which is a resident of one Contracting State and which derives dividends, interest or royalties arising within the other Contracting State shall not be entitled to claim the benefits of Articles 10 (Dividends), 11 (Interest), or 12 (Royalties), if the tax imposed by the first-mentioned Contracting State with respect to such dividends, interest or royalties is substantially less than the tax generally imposed by that State on corporate profits; and 25 percent or more of the capital of such corporation is owned directly or indirectly by persons who are not individual residents of the first-mentioned Contracting State and are not nationals of the United States.

This Article also provides that a corporation which is a resident of the United States and which derives dividends, interest or royalties arising in the United Kingdom shall not be entitled to the benefits of Articles 10 (Dividends), 11 (Interest), or 12 (Royalties) where more than 80 percent of its gross income (including such dividends, interest, or royalties) is derived from sources outside of the United States as determined by and for the purposes of Code Sections 861 (a)(1)(B) and 861(a)(2)(A), and as they may be amended from time to time without changing their general principles. This limitation applies only if 25 percent or more of the capital of the corporation is owned directly or indirectly by persons who are not individual residents of the United States or nationals of the United States.

Paragraph (2) provides that nothing in this Article will prevent a claim under the provisions of Articles 10 (Dividends), 11 (Interest) or 12 (Royalties) by a United States corporation, if 75 percent or more of the capital of that corporation is directly or indirectly owned: (a) by another United States corporation which receives 20 percent or more of its gross income from sources within the United States as determined by and for the period described in sections 861(a)(1)(B) and (a)(2)(A) of the Code, as they may be amended from time to time so as not to affect their general principle; or (b) by a corporation other than a United States corporation which would not be treated as a close company under section 283 of the United Kingdom Income and Corporation Taxes Act of 1970 (as may be amended without changing the general principle thereof); or (c) by a corporation, resident in the United Kingdom, more than 50 percent of the voting power of which is controlled directly or indirectly by individuals who are residents of the United Kingdom.

The purposes of this Article are, first, to prevent the potential abuse of the Convention which would occur if residents of a third country could take advantage of the reduced rates of withholding provided by this treaty in situations where one of the Contracting States provided preferential rates of tax for investment or holding companies deriving foreign source income. In the absence of this Article, residents of a third country could organize a corporation in the Contracting State extending the preferential rates for the purpose of making investments in the other Contracting State. The combination of low tax rates in the first Contracting State and the reduced rates or exemptions in the other Contracting State would enable the third country residents to realize unintended benefits.

The Article is also intended to prevent the use of United States corporations by residents of third countries to take advantage of the reduced rates of tax or exemptions from tax granted by the United Kingdom on dividends, interest and royalties paid to residents (including corporations) of the United States). Generally, under sections 861 (a)(1)(B) and 861(a)(2)(A) of the Code, interest and dividends paid by U.S. corporations to nonresidents of the United States are not subject to tax by the United States if more than 80 percent of the corporation's gross income is from sources outside the United States. Accordingly, were it not for this provision, a resident of a third country could establish a United States corporation solely to derive interest or dividends from the United Kingdom subject to the reduced rates and refunds allowed by the Convention. While such income would be subject to normal corporate taxes in the United States, the corporation's dividends or interest to the third country residents would be exempt from U.S. withholding taxes if the conditions of Code sections 861(a)(1)(B) and (a)(2)(A) are met. The Article prevents this abuse where the above mentioned share-ownership requirements apply. Since the purpose of this provision is only to prevent the use of United States corporations in cases where their income would otherwise qualify for reduced withholding rates in the United Kingdom and their distributions to third country residents would not attract United States withholding taxes, exceptions to the rule are given where that corporation is owned by another United States corporation whose distributions would attract United States withholding taxes; where that corporation is owned by a corporation which is not a close company under United Kingdom law; and where that corporation is owned by a corporation resident in the United Kingdom 50 percent or more of the voting power of which is controlled by United Kingdom resident individuals.

ARTICLE 17. ARTISTES AND ATHLETES

This Article deals with the taxation of income derived by entertainers, musicians, and athletes (sometimes referred to hereinafter as "artistes and athletes") in respect of the performance of services in a Contracting State. The Article applies in cases where an artiste or athlete performs services on his own behalf and in cases where services are performed on behalf of another person, as an employee or pursuant to any other arrangement.

Paragraph (1) states the general rule that notwithstanding the provisions of Article 14 (Independent Personal Services) and Article 15 (Dependent Personal Services), income derived by entertainers such as theatre, motion picture, radio, or television artistes, and musicians or athletes, for their personal activities as such, may be taxed in the Contracting State where those services are exercised. Such income, however, is taxable under this Article only where the gross receipts derived by the artiste or athlete, including expenses reimbursed to him or borne on his behalf, in respect of such activities, exceed $15,000 or its equivalent in pounds sterling for the tax year concerned. In computing the $15,000 limitation, expenses borne on behalf of the entertainer include any expenditures for travel, meals and lodging, payments to persons such as band members or agents, and other amounts which are generally related to the activities of the artiste or athlete. This rule includes expenses borne by persons in the Contracting State where services are performed or borne by persons in the other or any third State if borne on behalf of the artiste or athlete. If the total of these expenses, including the amounts paid to the artiste or athlete, exceed $15,000, the entire amount is taxable in the State where the activities are performed. For example, where an entertainer's gross income, including reimbursed expenses and expenses borne on his behalf, totals $20,000, the full $20,000 is subject to tax in the State where the services are performed.

Also, in computing the $15,000 limitation, amounts paid in taxable years prior or subsequent to the year in which the services were performed shall be included in the determination of the amount of income attributable to the year in which the services were performed.

As noted above, this paragraph overrides the provisions of Articles 14 and 15, so that an artiste or athlete may be taxed in the State where his activities take place regardless of the period of time he is present in that State. Generally, however, income derived from services rendered by producers, directors, technicians and others who are not artistes and athletes is taxable in accordance with the provisions of Article 14 (Independent Personal Services), or Article 15 (Dependent Personal Services), as the case may be.

Paragraph (2) deals with cases where income in respect of the activities of an entertainer or athlete accrues to a person other than, or in addition to, the entertainer or athlete. A common method employed by foreign entertainers is to perform services in the United States as an employee of, or a contractor for, a corporation or other person. That person may act as the nominal recipient of the income in respect of the entertainer's services and the entertainer may act as its "employee" or "contractor." In such cases, the corporation may escape taxation in respect of those services under the provisions of Article 7 (Business Profits) because it does not have a permanent establishment in the United States described in Article 5 (Permanent Establishment). The entertainer may also escape taxation by being paid a small salary while in the United States and by receiving payment in a later year when the income is subject to reduced rates of tax or no tax at all, or by liquidating the corporation after the services are performed.

Paragraph (2) is designed to deal with these situations by providing that where income in respect of the personal activities of an artiste or athlete accrues to the benefit of another person (including a corporation, trust, or partnership of either Contracting State or any third State), that income may, notwithstanding the provisions of Article 7 (Business Profits), 14 (Independent Personal Services), and 15 (Dependent Personal Services), be taxed in the Contracting State in which the activities of the entertainer or athlete take place. Thus, for example, such other person could not claim the permanent establishment protection provided by Articles 5 (Permanent Establishment) and 7 (Business Profits).

For purposes of paragraph (2), income is considered to accrue to the benefit of another person where that other person has control over or the right to gross income derived in respect of an entertainer or athlete's services as such. This rule applies regardless of whether the other person is a "sham" corporation or conduit. Income will not, however, be deemed to accrue to the benefit of another person where it is established to the satisfaction of the competent authority of the Contracting State in which the services are performed that neither the entertainer or athlete, nor persons related thereto, participate directly or indirectly in the profits of such other person, in any manner, including the receipt of deferred compensation, bonuses, fees, dividends, partnership distributions or other distributions. Persons may be considered to be related to the artiste or athlete regardless of whether the persons are considered to be related under the provisions of paragraph (5) of Article 9 (Related Enterprises). For this purpose, a person may be considered to be related to the artiste or athlete if he is an employee or agent of the artiste or athlete, or if he is regularly employed by the artiste or athlete in an advisory capacity, such as his attorney, accountant, or investment advisor.

This section is similar to provisions in other recent Conventions of the United States with Japan, Trinidad and Tobago, and Iceland, and follows Article 17 (Artistes and Athletes) of the OECD Model Convention. It differs from the 1945 Convention, which under Article XI exempts an entertainer or athlete from United States tax where he: (a) is present in the United States for a period or periods not exceeding 183 days of a taxable year and (b) services are performed for or on behalf of a person who is a resident of the United Kingdom. The application of this section and Article III, regarding the industrial or commercial profits of an enterprise furnishing the services of an entertainer, was discussed in detail in Revenue Rulings 74-330 and 74-331. Both rulings considered cases where the services of foreign entertainers were "loaned" to United Kingdom corporations in order to benefit from the provisions of the 1945 Convention and to thereby avoid any taxation of the income derived in respect of their activities in the United States.

ARTICLE 18. PENSIONS

Paragraph (1) provides that, subject to the provisions of paragraph (2) of Article 19 (Government Service), pension payments received in consideration of past employment and annuity payments paid to an individual who is a resident of a Contracting State shall be taxable only in that State. The term "pension" includes payments from qualified retirement plans as well as other forms of retirement benefits paid for services rendered, or by way of compensation for injuries or sickness incurred in connection with past employment. A pension does not include payments in respect of the cancellation or premature termination of employment contracts (e.g., "golden handshakes" or severance pay). Such payments are taxable under the provisions of Articles 14 (Independent Personal Services), 15 (Dependent Personal Services), or 17 (Artistes and Athletes), as the case may be.

Payments which are not covered by any other Article of this Convention (e.g., Article 14 (Independent Personal Services), 15 (Dependent Personal Services), 17 (Artistes and Athletes), or 19 (Government Service)), are taxable in accordance with Article 22 (Other Income) in the recipient's State of residence.

For purposes of this Article, the term "pension" does not include social security payments and other public pensions, e.g., railroad retirement benefits. Such items are taxable pursuant to Article 22 (Other Income).

Paragraph (2) provides that alimony paid to an individual who is a resident of a Contracting State is taxable only in that State. The term "alimony" is not defined, but with respect to the United States, means periodic payments made pursuant to a decree of divorce, separate maintenance agreement, or support or separation agreement which is taxable to the recipient under the internal laws of the United States. Thus, for the United States, the term "alimony" would not include a payment which would not be taxable to the recipient even though such payment is made pursuant to a decree of divorce or of separate maintenance agreement. Payments for child support within the meaning of the Code are not covered by this Article and are, accordingly, taxable in the State where the recipient resides under Article 22 (Other Income). In the case of the United States, under present law, a recipient of child support is not taxable on such payments.

Paragraph (3) defines the term "annuity" to mean a stated sum payable periodically at stated times, during life or during a specified or ascertainable period of time, under an obligation to make the payments in return for adequate and full consideration in money or money's worth.

This Article is subject to the saving clause of paragraph (3) of Article 1 (Personal Scope). Thus, individuals who are nationals of a Contracting State may be taxed by that Contracting State without regard to this Article.

ARTICLE 19. GOVERNMENT SERVICE

This Article generally follows Article 19 (Government Service) of the OECD Model Convention and is similar to Article X of the 1945 Convention.

Paragraph (1)(a) provides that remuneration, other than a pension, paid by a Contracting State to an individual for services rendered to that State will be taxable only in that State. This paragraph only applies to individuals who are employees of a Contracting State, and not to employees of a political subdivision or local authority of a Contracting State. Under paragraph (1)(b), such remuneration will be taxable only in the State in which the services are being performed if the recipient is a resident of that State and either is a national of that State or did not become a resident of that State solely for the purpose of performing the services.

Under paragraph (2)(a), any pension paid by a Contracting State or a political subdivision or a local authority thereof to any individual in respect of services rendered to that State or subdivision or local authority thereof will be taxable only in that State. An exception similar to the one contained in paragraph (1)(b) is incorporated in paragraph (2)(b) with respect to pensions. That paragraph provides that a pension described in paragraph (2)(a) will be taxable only in the other Contracting State if the recipient is both a national of and a resident of that State.

Paragraphs (1) and (2) do not apply if the services are rendered in connection with any business carried on by or on behalf of one of the Contracting States or one of its political subdivisions, or local authorities paying the remuneration. In such cases, the provisions of Articles 14 (Independent Personal Services), 15 (Dependent Personal Services), 17 (Artistes and Athletes), and 18 (Pensions), as the case may be, shall apply.

If an individual acquires immigrant status in the State in which he performs the services or receives the pension, that Contracting State may tax the individual without regard to this Article. See paragraphs (3) and (4)(b) of Article 1 (Personal Scope).

ARTICLE 20. TEACHERS

Paragraph (1) provides that a professor or teacher who visits one of the Contracting States for a period not exceeding two years, for the purpose of teaching or engaging in research at a university, college, or other recognized educational institution in that Contracting State, and who was immediately before that visit a resident of that other Contracting State, will be exempted from tax by the first-mentioned Contracting State on any remuneration for such teaching or research for a period not exceeding two years from the date he first visits that State for the purpose of teaching or engaging in research. Since this two year period is determined from the date he first visits the Contracting State, periodic vacations outside the first-mentioned Contracting State, or a brief return to the other Contracting State will not toll the running of the two-year period. Unlike the existing Convention, if the two-year period beginning from the date of his arrival is exceeded, the exemption will be lost retroactively. Thus, if a person comes to a Contracting State for the purpose of teaching and stays for a period in excess of two years, the exemption will not apply for the first two years. A person who meets the qualifications of this provision may again claim its benefits if he first reestablishes his residence in the other Contracting State. In such case, the person claiming these benefits on a subsequent occasion must first satisfy the competent authority of the first-mentioned Contracting State that he had become a bona fide resident of the other State for a substantial period of time (normally at least one year).

Under paragraph (2), the Contracting State in which the teaching or research is performed may apply this exemption either to current payments to a professor or teacher in anticipation of fulfillment of the requirements of paragraph (1) or by way of withholding and refund. Thus, the recipient may be required to report and pay taxes on such income on a current basis and seek a refund of taxes paid upon fulfillment of the requirements of paragraph (1).

If an individual becomes a national of, or acquires immigrant status in, the State where he is visiting, that other Contracting State may tax the individual without regard to this Article. See paragraphs (3) and (4)(b) of Article 1 (Personal Scope).

Pursuant to paragraph (3), this Article only applies to income from research undertaken in the public interest which is not primarily for the benefit of a private person or persons. For example, research projects which are undertaken to discover or perfect product processes, designs, etc., which are expected to be commercially exploited by the researcher or his present (or former) employer do not qualify under this Article.

ARTICLE 21. STUDENTS AND TRAINEES

This Article corresponds generally to Article XIX of the 1945 Convention and Article 20 (Students) of the OECD Model Convention. Under this Article, payments which a student or business apprentice, who immediately before visiting a Contracting State was a resident of the other Contracting State receives for his maintenance, education or training, will not be taxed in the first-mentioned State if the recipient of the payments is engaged in a full-time education or training program and the payments are made from sources outside the State in which the education or training takes place. Payments will be considered to have been made from sources outside a State when they are borne by a person who is not a resident (as defined in Article 4 (Fiscal Residence)) of the Contracting State in which the education or training takes place. Like other articles referred to in paragraph 4(b) of Article 1, this Article will not apply to payments to students or business apprentices who are nationals of or residents with immigrant status in the first-mentioned Contracting State.

ARTICLE 22. OTHER INCOME

This Article follows Article 21 (Other Income) of the OECD Model Convention. It contains the general rule that income of a resident of a Contracting State, from any source, which is not dealt with by any specific Article in the Convention, shall be taxable only in that person's State of residence. This is the first United States tax convention to follow this rule. The scope of this Article is not confined to income having a source in the other Contracting State, but applies to a resident's income from sources in third countries. Moreover, this rule applies irrespective of whether the State of residence exercises its right to tax the income covered by this Article. Specific items of income not dealt with by other Articles of this Convention include child support payments, prizes or awards, and social security payments. These items are subject to the provisions of this Article and are taxable only in the State of residence.

This Article also makes it clear that the United Kingdom may continue to impose its tax on discretionary and accumulation trusts. United Kingdom law currently provides that discretionary and accumulation trusts are subject to the basic rate of income tax (35 percent) and to an additional tax of 15 percent. Trustees are eligible to claim double taxation relief in the respect of foreign tax paid on the income. Under United Kingdom law a distribution of income from a discretionary or accumulation trust is treated in the hands of the beneficiary as a payment from which tax has been deducted at the aggregate of the two rates (35 and 15) in force for the year of payment. That is, the distribution is grossed-up by 100 percent and the amount of the gross-up is treated as tax paid by, and creditable to, the distributee in the year of distribution.

Under paragraph (1) of Article 22 (Other Income) and paragraph (3) of Article 25 (Mutual Agreement Procedure), the United Kingdom will continue to impose its taxes on discretionary and accumulation trusts and will not be obligated to refund these taxes at the time of distributions to United States residents. However, to give double taxation relief, the United Kingdom will treat a United States person taxable on the income as if he were entitled to receive the income of the trust directly. Thus, the beneficiary will be given the benefit of relief provisions in United Kingdom domestic law (e.g., government securities held by non-residents). Additionally, any income covered by the Convention, such as dividends and interest, will receive the benefits of the Convention to the extent that the payments from the trust are made out of this income.

This Article is subject to the saving clause provisions of paragraph (3) of Article 1 (Personal Scope).

This Article does not apply if the resident deriving the income carries on business in the other Contracting State through a permanent establishment situated therein or performs independent personal services from a fixed base therein, and the right or property in respect of which the income is paid is effectively connected with such permanent establishment or fixed base. In such cases, the provisions of Articles 7 (Business Profits), 14 (Independent Personal Services), or 17 (Artistes and Athletes) as the case may be, apply. As in the case of paragraph (1), this paragraph applies to income from all sources.

It should be noted that the proposed Convention specifically covers most types of income.

ARTICLE 23. ELIMINATION OF DOUBLE TAXATION

In order to prevent the double taxation of income covered by this Convention, each Contracting State agrees in this Article to provide a credit against its taxes for taxes paid to the other Contracting State.

Under paragraph (1), the United States agrees to allow a United States citizen or resident as a credit against United States tax the appropriate amount of taxes paid or accrued to the United Kingdom in accordance with the provisions and subject to the limitations of the law of the United States (as it may be amended from time to time without changing the general principle of paragraph (1)). In addition, in the case of a United States corporation owning at least ten percent of the voting stock of a United Kingdom corporation from which it receives dividends in any taxable year, the United States will allow credit for the appropriate amount of taxes paid or accrued to the United Kingdom by the United Kingdom corporation paying such dividends with respect to the profits out of which such dividends are paid. The rules for calculating the appropriate amount of taxes creditable in such a case are set forth below. However, the amount of tax credit is not to exceed the limitations (for the purpose of limiting the credit to the United States tax on income from sources within the United Kingdom or on income from sources outside of the United States) provided by United States law for the taxable year. This provision does not require the United States to maintain a per-country or overall limitation in the future so long as the general principle of a foreign tax credit remains in effect.

For the purpose of applying the United States credit in relation to taxes paid to the United Kingdom, the taxes referred to in paragraphs (2)(b) and (3) of Article 2 (Taxes Covered) shall be considered to be income taxes. In the case of dual-resident corporations described by paragraph (2) of Article 1 (Personal Scope), the United Kingdom petroleum revenue tax and the unrefunded portion of the ACT referred to in paragraph (1)(c) of this Article shall be regarded as an income tax for purposes of this Article. (See paragraph (2) of Article 1 (Personal Scope)). Any other taxes imposed by the United Kingdom on such corporation shall be treated as income taxes for purposes of the United States tax credit only in accordance with the laws of the United States.

Under paragraphs (2)(a)(i) and (2)(a)(ii) of Article 10 (Dividends), the United Kingdom allows residents of the United States certain tax credits or refunds in respect of dividends paid by a corporation which is a resident of the United Kingdom, subject to taxes withheld of 5 or 15 percent on the aggregate amounts received as dividends and tax credits. Subparagraph (1)(b) of this Article provides that the amounts withheld (5 or 15 percent) by the United Kingdom pursuant to paragraph 2(a)(i) or (ii) of Article 10 (Dividends) from the refund paid to residents of the United States shall be regarded as an income tax imposed on the recipient of the dividend. Thus, the United States foreign tax credit with respect to those amounts shall be computed in accordance with Code section 901.

In the case of tax credits allowed to corporate shareholders of a corporation which is a resident of the United Kingdom pursuant to subparagraph (2)(a)(i) of Article 10, only one-half of the credit otherwise paid to individual shareholders is paid to those corporate shareholders. Subparagraph (1)(c) of this Article provides that the portion of the credit not paid to these corporate shareholders, i.e., one-half of the ACT paid in respect of the distribution, shall be treated as an income tax imposed on the corporation paying the dividend.

In the United Kingdom tax system, ACT serves a dual function. To the extent that it offsets the United Kingdom corporate income tax imposed without regard to distributions (hereinafter referred to as "mainstream tax"), it is analogous to a payment of regular corporate income tax. To the extent that it does not offset mainstream tax, it is more analogous to a tax imposed on distributions which are income to the shareholders.

To reflect this hybrid nature of ACT, ACT which offsets mainstream tax will be attributed to the earnings of the year in which it offsets such tax and treated as if it were regular corporate tax. ACT which does not offset mainstream tax will generally be attributed to the accumulated profits of the year of distribution.

In order that the derivative foreign tax credit be computed as intended under the Convention, corporate shareholders receiving the benefits of subparagraph 2(a)(i) of Article 10 (Dividends) must apply the following rules:

1. ACT paid with respect to a distribution shall be treated as attributable to the accumlated profits (determined under U.S. principles) of the year of distribution, except in two circumstances:

a) to the extent the ACT reduces mainstream tax for a prior or subsequent year (see Example 4 below); and

b) if, after attribution of ACT which does not reduce mainstream tax, accumulated profits would not exceed corporate taxes for the year (see Example 5 below).

ACT which reduces mainstream tax in any year or years shall be attributable to any accumulated profits of the year or years for which the mainstream tax is reduced. Where ACT is used to offset mainstream tax, the offset will be viewed as a refund of the ACT initially allowed as a credit and as a tax paid in respect of the year for which the ACT is applied as an offset. Consequently, a reduction in the foreign tax credit for the year from which the ACT is carried must be made in accordance with section 905(c) of the Code.

Mainstream tax will be considered offset first by ACT incurred with respect to the current distribution. Additional offset will be considered to be attributable to ACT incurred in the earliest year from which the ACT can be carried.

Where attribution to a year of ACT which does not offset mainstream tax leaves no accumulated profits for that year, the more exact attribution method set forth in Example 5 should be used.

2. A distribution in respect of which the ACT paid reduces mainstream tax for the current taxable year may be treated by the Internal Revenue Service as made first out of the entire profits of that year (computed as of the close of the year). This rule, which applies regardless of whether the distribution is made in the first 60 days of the taxable year, will be applied where necessary to prevent crediting of a prior year's mainstream tax unreduced by ACT, while at the same time using such ACT to reduce the current year's mainstream tax.

3. Where a United States corporation owns less than all the stock of a corporation resident in the United Kingdom, the derivative tax credit will be calculated with reference solely to the proportionate interest in accumulated profits attributable to the United States shareholder. Thus, for example, the ratio which the distribution to the United States shareholder bears to accumulated profits in excess of income taxes, as well as the amount of mainstream tax and ACT paid with respect thereto, will be calculated as if the United States shareholder's proportionate interest in the accumulated profits were the entire accumulated profits of a corporation of which it was the sole owner. The amount of foreign tax credit will not vary according to either (1) the status of any other shareholder; or (2) the imposition or refund of ACT with respect to a distribution to any other shareholder.

In the case of dividends paid by a United Kingdom corporation wholly owned by a United States parent corporation, the determination of the appropriate amount of creditable taxes is illustrated by the following examples:

Example 1. A United Kingdom resident corporation wholly owned by a United States parent corporation has $100 of pretax earnings in year 1 and pays a dividend equal to 50 percent of the amount available for distribution in year 1.

1.	Accumulated profits	$100.00
2.	British mainstream tax at 52% rate	52.00
3.	Available for distribution	48.00
4.	Distribution	24.00
5.	ACT with respect to distribution before refund	12.92
6.	Net mainstream tax, reduced by ACT *	39.08
7.	Refund of one-half ACT pursuant to paragraph (2)(a)(i) of Article 10	6.46
8.	Unrefunded one-half of ACT treated as corporate tax pursuant to paragraph (1)(c) of Article 23	6.46
9.	Total corporate tax (39.08 mainstream plus 6.46 unrefunded ACT)	45.54
10.	Total dividend received before withholding tax (24.00 declared plus 6.46 refund treated as dividend pursuant to paragraph (1)(a)(iii) of Article 10)	30.46
11.	Accumulated profits in excess of British corporate taxes (100 − 45.54)	54.46
12.	Derivative tax credit $\left(\frac{30.46}{54.46} \times 45.54\right)$	25.47
13.	British withholding tax (5 percent of total dividend of 30.46)	1.52
14.	Total foreign tax credit	26.99
15.	Taxable income (30.46 dividend plus 25.47 "gross-up" of derivative tax credit)	55.93
16.	United States tax before credit (48% of 55.93)	26.85
17.	Amount by which foreign tax credit exceeds U.S. tax	0.14

Example 2. Assume the same facts as in the previous example, except that in year two the British corporation makes a distribution out of what, under United States tax law principles, are the remaining $24.00 of earnings from year one. Assume further that there are no earnings in year two for United Kingdom purposes, and that the ACT with respect to the distribution is carried back and credited against mainstream tax of year one.

* It is assumed in this example, as is generally the case, that ACT is fully credited against mainstream tax.

1.	Distribution in year two	$ 24.00
2.	ACT	12.92
3.	Reduction in mainstream tax for year one	12.92
4.	Net mainstream tax for year one, reduced by ACT	26.16
5.	Refund of one-half ACT	6.46
6.	Unrefunded ACT	6.46
7.	Total corporate tax (26.16 mainstream + 6.46 unrefunded ACT in respect of distribution in year one + 6.46 unrefunded ACT in respect of distribution in year two)	39.08
8.	Total dividend received before withholding tax	30.46
9.	Accumulated profits in excess of British corporate taxes (100 − 39.08)	60.92
11.	Taxable income (30.46 dividend plus 19.54 "gross-up" of derivative tax credit)	50.00

It should be noted that the total taxable income in respect of the two distributions is $105.93 ($55.93 + $50), which is $5.93 more than the accumulated profits of $100; and the total derivative tax credit is $45.01, which is $5.93 more than the corporate tax of $39.08. The disparity occurs for two reasons: first, that the Convention treats refunded ACT as a dividend, but does not treat ACT that is potentially refundable as profits out of which future dividends can be paid [*]; and second, that $6.46 of the $45.54 mainstream tax considered paid in respect of the accumulated profits in Example 1 is subsequently refunded.

The above result is considered appropriate in order to ensure that, with reference to a 50 percent distribution, the British refund substantially benefits the United States shareholder. An adjustment is necessary, however, when tax which has been taken into account in computing derivative foreign tax credit in respect of a prior distribution—of whatever percentage of the accumulated profits—is refunded in the form of ACT. The refunded ACT must, with respect to such distribution, both a) increase accumulated profits in excess of income taxes, and

b) decrease taxes paid in respect of accumulated profits.

By reason of the $6.46 refund of ACT in Example 2, therefore, the derivative foreign tax credit in Example 1 must be recalculated as follows:

1. Calculation before adjustment (see (12) of Example 1)

$$\frac{30.46 \times 45.54}{54.46}$$

2. Addition of $6.46 to accumulated profits in excess of income taxes

$$\frac{30.46}{60.92}$$

3. Subtraction of $6.46 from taxes paid

$$$45.54 - 6.46 = $39.08$$

4. Derivative foreign tax credit

The adjusted result in Example 1 is the same as in Example 2. Both the taxable income and tax credit in respect of the prior distribution will therefore be decreased by $5.93, in accordance with section 905(c) of the Internal Revenue Code.

The determination of the appropriate amount of creditable taxes in the case of dividends paid by a less-than-wholly-owned United Kingdom corporation is illustrated by the following example:

Example 3. A United Kingdom resident corporation, W, is owned by U.S. corporation X (25%), U.K. corporation Y (60%), corporation Z (10%), and individual A (5%). W has $400 of pre-tax earnings in year 1 and pays a dividend of 50 percent of the amount available for distribution in year 1. Z is organized in country M and has no right to receive a refund of ACT from the United Kingdom. A, a United Kingdom resident, receives a tax credit equal to the entire ACT imposed, and Y makes an election under U.K. law to eliminate ACT with respect to distributions to itself.

1.	Accumulated profits	$400.00
2.	Mainstream tax imposed at a 52% rate	208.00
3.	Available for distribution	192.00
4.	Total distribution	96.00
5.	Portion of accumulated profits attributable to X's shareholding—25%	100.00
6.	Determination of X's United States foreign tax credit:
A.	Accumulated profits	$100.00
B.	British mainstream tax at 52% rate	52.00
C.	Available for distribution	48.00
D.	Distribution to U.S. corporation X	24.00
E.	For remainder of computation see Example 1

In the above examples it has been assumed that the earnings and profits used in calculating the indirect tax credit for United States tax purposes approximate the earnings and profits of the United Kingdom corporation as computed in the United Kingdom for United Kingdom tax purposes. This assumption, of course, is not always valid and there will be situations where the earnings and profits differ for United Kingdom and United States tax purposes. Accordingly, it will be necessary for United States shareholders to maintain separate records to reflect these differences. Such records must currently be maintained by United States shareholders of foreign corporations where the amount of earnings and profits of that corporation differ under the rules of the respective countries. Separate records will be especially important where United States shareholders do not own all of the shares of a United Kingdom corporation. Quite often the shares of a United Kingdom corporation are owned by both United States and foreign shareholders. In these cases, the payment of an ACT credit to the United States shareholders will require a separate computation of earnings and profits for United States tax purposes which reflects that shareholder's proportionate interest in the corporation.

Example 4. A United Kingdom resident corporation is wholly owned by a U.S. corporation. The accumulated profits (according to United States standards), taxable profits (according to United Kingdom standards), and distributions of the subsidiary are as follows:

		Year 1	Year 2	Year 3
1.	Accumulated profits	$120	$100	$100
2.	Taxable profits	0	50	50
3.	Distribution	0	26	130

With respect to year 1, the U.S. parent corporation has no taxable income for U.S. purposes, no U.S. tax, and no foreign tax credit.

As of the end of year 2, the year 2 taxes of the parent are calculated as follows:

1.	Accumulated profits	$100.00
2.	U.K. taxable profits	50.00
3.	British mainstream tax at 52% rate	26.00
4.	Distribution	26.00
5.	ACT with respect to distribution before refund	14.00
6.	Net mainstream tax, reduced by ACT	12.00
7.	Refund of one-half of ACT	7.00
8.	Unrefunded one-half of ACT	7.00
9.	Total corporate tax ($12.00 plus $7.00)	19.00
10.	Total dividend received before withholding tax ($26.00 plus $7.00)	33.00
11.	Accumulated profits in excess of British corporate taxes ($100 minus $19)	81.00
12.	Derivative tax credit $\left(\frac{33}{81} \times 19\right)$	7.74
13.	British withholding tax (5% of $33.00)	1.65
14.	Total foreign tax credit ($7.74 + $1.65)	9.39
15.	Taxable income ($33.00 + $7.74)	40.74
16.	United States tax before credit (48% of $40.74)	19.56
17.	United States tax after credit ($19.56 minus $9.39)	10.17

[*] If that were done, the fraction for computing the derivative tax credit in respect of the distribution in Example 1 would be or $\frac{30.46}{60.92} \times$ taxes paid.

As of the end of year 3, the year 3 taxes are calculated as follows:

	Year 1	Year 2	Year 3
1. Accumulated profits	$120.00	$100.00	$100.00
2. U.K. taxable profits	—0—	50.00	50.00
3. Year 2 U.K. corporate tax before year 3 ACT (line 9 above)	—	19.00	—
4. Year 3 British mainstream tax at 52% rate	—	—	26.00
5. Year 3 ACT before adjustments	—	—	70.00
6. Year 3 ACT offset to mainstream tax	—0—	(3.50)*	(17.50)*
7. Year 3 ACT carried back and deemed mainstream tax	—0—	3.50	(3.50)
8. Year 3 ACT refund before adjustment	—	—	(35.00)
9. Year 3 ACT refund carried back	—0—	(1.75)	1.75
10. U.K. corporate tax after year 3 ACT (sum of lines 3 through 9)	—0—	17.25	41.75
11. Accumulated profits in excess of British corporate taxes (line 1 minus line 10)	120.00	82.75	58.25
12. Year 2 dividend	—	33.00	—
13. Accumulated profits available for distribution in year 3 (line 11 minus line 12)	120.00	49.75	58.25
14. Year 3 dividend before § 78 gross-up (130 + 35 ACT refund)	—	—	165.00
a. From year 3 accumulated profits (line 13)	—	—	58.25
b. From year 2 accumulated profits (line 13)	—	—	49.75
c. From year 1 accumulated profits (balance)	—	—	57.00
15. Year 3 foreign tax credit
a. British withholding tax (5% of 165)	—	—	8.25
b. Year 3 derivative tax credit (from line 10)	—	—	41.75
c. Year 2 derivative tax credit $\left(\frac{49.75}{82.75} \times 17.25\right)$	—	—	10.37
16. Taxable income (165 + 41.75 + 10.37)	—	—	217.12
17. United States tax before credit (48% of 217.12)	—	—	104.22
18. Total foreign tax credit (8.25 + 41.75 + 10.37)	—	—	60.37
19. United States tax after credit (104.22 less 60.37)	—	—	43.85

As of the end of year 3, the year 2 taxes are recalculated as follows:

1. Total dividend received before withholding tax	$33.00
2. British withholding tax (5% of 33)	1.65
3. Derivative tax credit $\frac{33}{81 + 1.75} \times (19—1.75)$	6.88
4. Taxable income (33 + 6.88)	39.88
5. United States tax before credit (48% of 39.88)	19.14
6. Total foreign tax credit (1.65 + 6..88)	8.53
7. United states tax after credit (19.14 minus 8.53)	10.61
8. United States tax previously paid	10.17
9. Additional United States tax due (10.61 minus 10.17)	.44

Example 5. This example, showing a more exact attribution of non-offset ACT, is to be used only if, after attribution of non-offset ACT, there are no accumulated profits in excess of British corporate tax.

The facts are the same as in Example 4, except that the accumulated profits for year 3 are $30 rather than $100.

The calculation of the year 2 taxes as of the end of year 2 is the same as in Example 4. As of the end of year 3, the year 3 taxes are calculated as follows:

	Year 1	Year 2	Year 3
1. Accumulated profits	$120.00	$100.00	$ 30.00
2. U.K. taxable profits	—0—	50.00	50.00
3. Year 2 U.K. corporate tax before year 3 ACT (line 9 of Example 4 calculation of year 2 taxes as of the end of year 2)	—	19.00	—
4 Year 3 British mainstream tax at 52% rate	—	—	26.00
5. Year 3 ACT before adjustments	—	—	70.00
6. Year 3 ACT offset to mainstream tax	—0—	(3.50)	(17.50)
7. Year 3 ACT carried back and deemed mainstream	—0—	3.50	(3.50)
8. Year 3 ACT refund before adjustment	—	—	(35.00)
9. Year 3 ACT refund carried back	—0—	(1.75)	1.75
10. U.K. corporate tax after year 3 ACT (sum of lines 3 through 9)	—0—	17.25	41.75
11. Accumulated profits in excess of British corporate taxes (line 1 minus line 10)	120.00	82.75	(11.75)

Since attribution of the non-offset ACT to year 3 eliminates any excess of accumulated profits over British corporate tax, the calculation must be redone, taking into account only offset ACT, and then attributing non-offset unrefunded ACT only to the extent of $17.50* for every $82.50 of accumulated profits considered distributed (determined under U.S. rules before taking into account non-offset ACT).

In year 3, only $17.50 of ACT offsets mainstream tax. One-half of this is refunded. In year 3, therefore, U.K. corporate tax after the offset ACT is:

$$\begin{array}{r} 26.00 \\ (17.50) \\ 8.75 \\ \hline 17.25 \end{array}$$

Accumulated profits in excess of British corporate tax other than non-offset ACT is $30.00 minus $17.25, or $12.75. Non-offset unrefunded ACT is $24.50

$$\frac{(70 - 17.50 - 3.50)}{2}.$$

In determining the maximum amount of $24.50 non-offset unrefunded ACT to be attributed to year 3, no ACT should be attributed to deemed distributions, since they do not incur ACT. Thus, of the $12.75, the $8.75 of refunded ACT attributable to the $17.50 offset is excluded from the amount to which unrefunded non-offset ACT is attributable. The maximum amount of non-offset unrefunded ACT attributed to the remaining $4.00 of accumulated profits in year 3 is $0.85. The $0.85 is calculated as

$$\frac{17.5}{82.5} \times 4.00.$$

Thus, of the $12.75, $8.75 is deemed distributed as offset refunded ACT; $0.85 is non-offset unrefunded ACT; $0.85 is non-offset refunded ACT deemed distributed; and $2.30 is the remaining actual distribution considered to have been made from year 3.

In year 2, the accumulated profits available for distribution before adjustment for year three non-offset ACT are $49.75 (from line thirteen of Example 4 calculation of year 3 taxes). Of that amount, $1.75 is deemed distributed as offset refunded ACT. The non-offset unrefunded ACT attributable to the remaining $48.00 is $10.18 ($$48.00 \times \frac{17.5}{82.5}$). Thus, the accumulated profits available for actual distribution in year 2 are $27.64 ($49.75 less $1.75 (deemed distribution) less $10.18 (non-offset refunded ACT deemed distributed) less $10.18 (non-offset unrefunded ACT); and the U.K. corporate tax is $27.43 ($17.25 + $10.18).

* Under U.K. rules, the maximum amount of ACT that can be credited against mainstream tax is 35/52 of mainstream tax, and excess ACT is carried back two years, and then carried forward indefinitely. Thus, since $26 of mainstream tax was payable for each of years 2 and 3, the offset for ACT for each of years 2 and 3 cannot exceed $17.50 (26 × 35/52). For year 2, this means an increased offset of $3.50 (17.50 minus 14 previously offset).

* $17.50 represents the amount of unrefunded ACT which would result from an actual distribution of $65 (one-half of $65 $\times \frac{35}{65}$). With an actual distribution of $65, the $17.50 of refunded ACT would be deemed distributed, thus increasing the total distribution to $82.50.

The carryback of non-offset unrefunded ACT is limited to two years, and there is no carryforward.

Paragraph (2) of this Article parallels paragraph (1) with respect to the treatment of United States taxes paid by a resident of the United Kingdom. Under this paragraph, the United Kingdom will allow a resident of the United Kingdom as a credit against United Kingdom taxes paid to the United States in accordance with the provisions of the law of the United Kingdom for the allowance of credits for taxes to territories outside the United Kingdom (as it may be amended from time to time without changing the general principle of paragraph (2)). Such credit shall be allowed with respect to taxes payable in accordance with this Convention on profits or income from sources within the United States, as determined by subparagraph (3) of this Article (excluding, in the case of a dividend, tax payable in respect of the profits out of which the dividend is paid).

In the case of a dividend paid by a United States corporation to a corporation which is a resident of the United Kingdom which controls directly or indirectly 10 percent or more of the voting power of that paying corporation, the United Kingdom shall also allow a credit for the appropriate amount of taxes paid or accrued to the United States by the United States corporation paying such dividends with respect to the profits out of which such dividends are paid.

Paragraph (3) sets forth the source of income rules applicable for purposes of determining the allowance of tax credits under this Article. For purposes of the preceding paragraphs, income or profits derived by a resident of a Contracting State which are taxed in the other Contracting State in accordance with the Convention (other than by reason of the saving clause referred to below) shall be deemed to arise from sources within that other Contracting State. However, where a United States citizen is subject to tax in the United States by reason of his citizenship under the saving clause of paragraph (3) of Article 1 (Personal Scope), the United Kingdom will allow that person a tax credit for any United States tax paid with respect to income which under the internal laws of the United Kingdom has its source in the United States; and the United States will allow that person, subject to limitations of the Internal Revenue Code to claim a credit for taxes paid to the United Kingdom with respect to income which under the internal laws of the United States has its source in the United Kingdom. This paragraph has particular relevance with respect to a United States citizen who is a resident of the United Kingdom for purposes of this Convention (see Article 4 (Fiscal Residence)).

In the case of third country income earned by a United States citizen who is a resident of the United Kingdom, (e.g., dividends from Germany), the United Kingdom is not required to allow a credit for United States taxes on that income. Double taxation of income may be avoided, however, under the overall method for computing foreign tax credits. In such case, the United States will allow under its internal law a credit for both the United Kingdom and third country taxes.

Finally, paragraph (4) makes it clear that the credit allowed for taxes paid to the United Kingdom, especially the petroleum revenue tax, shall be subject to the tax credit limitations of the Tax Reduction Act of 1975 which apply to foreign oil and gas extraction income.

ARTICLE 24. NON-DISCRIMINATION

Paragraph (1) provides that individuals who are nationals of a Contracting State and who are residents of the other Contracting State will not be subjected in that other Contracting State to taxation or any other requirement connected therewith which is other or more burdensome than the taxation or requirements connected therewith to which nationals of that other Contracting State in the same circumstances are or may be subjected. Thus, for example, a national of the United Kingdom who is a resident of the United States and who meets the requirements specified in Code section 911 would, under this Article, be entitled to the benefits of that section even though he is not also a national of the United States. On the other hand, just as a United States citizen who becomes a non-resident alien at any time during a taxable year or whose spouse is a non-resident alien cannot in the absence of an election file a joint return for that year, a United Kingdom national would not be entitled to file a joint return with his spouse in the absence of such election if either is a non-resident alien at any time during the taxable year.

Paragraph (2) provides that a permanent establishment which an enterprise of one Contracting State has in the other Contracting State will not be subject in that other Contracting State to less favorable taxation than an enterprise of that other Contracting State carrying on the same activities.

Subject to the provisions of paragraph (4), discussed below, paragraph (3) provides that interest, royalties, and other disbursements paid by an enterprise of a Contracting State to an enterprise of the other Contracting State shall, if reasonable in amount, be deductible for purposes of determining the taxable profits of the enterprise in that Contracting State under the same conditions as if they had been paid to a resident of that Contracting State. This rule is not limited to payments to related parties.

For purposes of this paragraph, the term "other disbursements" includes charges for amounts expended by a resident of the other Contracting State for the benefit of the enterprise. The term "other disbursements" is to be broadly defined, to includes charges or allocations by such resident for the benefit of such enterprise, including reasonable allocations of executive and general administrative overhead (except to the extent such expenses are not for the benefit of the enterprise, but are for "stewardship" or "overseeing" functions for the resident's own benefit as an investor in the enterprise). The term also includes charges and allocations of research and development expenses where the enterprise has the benefits of such activities under a cost or risk sharing agreement and other expenditures by the resident of a group of enterprises which includes such enterprise.

Paragraph (4) states that paragraph (3), above, does not apply to interest, royalties, or other disbursements to which the provisions of Article 9 (Associated Enterprise), paragraphs (5) and (7) of Article 11 (Interest), or paragraph (5) of article 12 (Royalties) apply with respect to transactions between related parties.

Paragraph (5) prohibits one Contracting State from subjecting an enterprise of such Contracting State, the capital of which is wholly or partly owned or controlled, directly or indirectly, by one or more residents of the other Contracting State, to any taxation or any requirement connected with taxation which is other or more burdensome than is applicable to enterprises of the first-mentioned Contracting State carrying on the same activities, the capital of which is wholly or partly owned or controlled by one or more residents of the first-mentioned Contracting State.

Paragraph (6) provides that nothing in this Article obliges a Contracting State to grant to individual residents of the other Contracting State any personal allowances, reliefs, or deductions for taxation purposes on account of civil status or family responsibilities which it grants to its own residents.

This Article is similar to Article XXI of the 1945 Convention and Article 24 (Non-Discrimination) of the OECD Model Convention.

ARTICLE 25. MUTUAL AGREEMENT PROCEDURE

This Article generally extends the mutual agreement procedures found in Article XXA of the 1945 Convention and is similar to Article 25 (Mutual Agreement Procedure) of the OECD Model Convention.

Under paragraph (1), when a resident or national of a Contracting State considers that the actions of one or both Contracting States results or will result in taxation which is not in accordance with the Convention, he may, notwithstanding the remedies provided by the national laws of those States, present his case to the competent authority of the Contracting State of which he is a resident or national. A resident or national of a Contracting State need not, although it is anticipated that in the normal situation he will, exhaust his other administrative or judicial remedies prior to resorting to the use of the mutual agreement procedure.

Under paragraph (2), if the claim is considered to be justified by the competent authority and if it cannot alone arrive at an appropriate solution to the issue involved, that competent authority shall endeavor to resolve the case by agreement with the competent authority of the other Contracting State, with a view to the avoidance of taxation which is contrary to the Convention. In cases in which the competent authorities reach an agreement, taxes will be imposed, and refunds or credits of taxes will be allowed, as appropriate, by the Contracting States in accordance with such agreement. In the case of the United States, where an agreement is reached between the competent authorities which requires the United States to make a refund of tax or to extend any other similar credit, such refund or credit will be made, assuming presentation of his case to the competent authority within a reasonable period, notwithstanding any procedural barriers otherwise existing under United States law, including any statute of limitations. In cases where an agreement cannot be reached between the competent authorities, the United States will not be required to provide any relief for double taxation on a unilateral basis.

Paragraph (3) permits the competent authorities of the two Contracting States to endeavor to resolve by mutual agreement any difficulties or doubts arising as to the application of the Convention. In particular, the competent authorities may reach agreement on the attribution of income, deductions, credits, or allowances of an enterprise of a Contracting State to its permanent establishment situated in the other Contracting State; the allocation of income, deductions, credits, or allowances between persons; the nature of particular items of income; the meaning of terms not otherwise defined in this Convention; the place where a particular item of income has its source; and the elimination of double taxation in respect of income paid out of trusts. In the case of trust distributions, the competent authorities may conclude that elimination of double taxation requires that the character of the income giving rise to such distributions must be determined. In such a case, taxpayers will be expected to have the records necessary to demonstrate the character of income underlying a trust distribution.

Under paragraph (4), the competent authorities may communicate with each other directly and, when advisable, meet together for an oral exchange of opinions, for the purpose of reaching an agreement.

ARTICLE 26. EXCHANGE OF INFORMATION AND ADMINISTRATIVE ASSISTANCE

This Article extends without change the exchange of information Article (Article XX) and the assistance in collection Article (Article XIXA) of the 1945 Convention.

Paragraph (1) provides for a system of administrative cooperation between the competent authorities of the two Contracting States by requiring an exchange of information necessary for the carrying out of the Convention and of the domestic laws of the Contracting States concerning taxes covered by the Convention insofar as the taxation thereunder is in accordance with the Convention. The competent authorities may exchange information in connection with tax compliance generally, not merely illegal acts or crimes. Information need be exchanged, however, only if it is of a class that can be obtained under the laws and administrative practices of each Contracting State with respect to its own taxes.

The information exchanged must be treated as secret. However, such information may be disclosed to any persons or authorities (including a court or administrative body) concerned with the assessment, collection, or enforcement of, or prosecution with respect to, the taxes which are the subject of the Convention. No information may be exchanged which would disclose any trade, business, industrial or professional secret or any trade process.

Paragraph (2) provides that one Contracting State will give the other Contracting State limited assistance in collecting its taxes. Thus, each Contracting State is required to collect on behalf of the other Contracting State only those taxes imposed by such other Contracting State as will ensure that any exemption or reduced rate of tax granted under this Convention by such other Contracting State is not enjoyed by persons not entitled to such benefits.

Paragraph (3) makes clear that a Contracting State is not obligated to carry out measures which are at variance with its laws or the administrative practice with respect to the collection of its own taxes; or which would be contrary to its sovereignty, security or public policy. A Contracting State may also consider, in determining the administrative measures it will use, the administrative measures utilized by the other Contracting State in a comparable situation.

Paragraph (4) provides that the competent authorities will consult to cooperate and advise each other on the implementation of these provisions.

ARTICLE 27. EFFECT ON DIPLOMATIC AND CONSULAR OFFICIALS AND DOMESTIC LAWS

Paragraph (1) of this Article provides that nothing in the Convention will affect the fiscal privileges of diplomatic and consular officials under the general rules of international law or under the provisions of special agreements.

Paragraph (2) provides that the Convention will not restrict in any manner any exclusion, exemption, deduction, credit, or other allowance now or hereafter accorded by the laws of a Contracting State. This rule reflects the principle that a Convention should not increase the tax burden on residents of the Contracting States.

ARTICLE 28. ENTRY INTO FORCE

Paragraph (1) provides that the proposed Convention shall be ratified and that the instruments of ratification shall be exchanged at Washington, D.C. as soon as possible after both States have ratified the Convention.

Paragraph (2) provides that the Convention will enter into force on the thirty-first day following the date of exchange of the instruments of ratification. With respect to the United Kingdom, the proposed Convention will take effect in the following manner. In relation to any dividend to which subparagraph (2)(a)(ii) of Article 10 (Dividends) applies, the provisions of that Article shall apply to any year of assessment beginning on or after April 6, 1973. For this purpose, a dividend paid on or after April 1, 1973, and before April 6, 1973, shall be treated for tax credit purposes (i.e., for purposes of any refund of the ACT) as paid on April 6, 1973. United States shareholders who derived dividends from corporations which were residents of the United Kingdom during this period will be entitled to claim refunds from the United Kingdom in respect of those dividends and in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 2(a)(ii) of Article 10. It is anticipated that the United Kingdom will prescribe the procedures for claiming those refunds upon ratification of this Convention.

In the case of dividends to which subparagraph (2)(a)(i) of Article 10 (Dividends) applies (i.e., dividends received from a corporation which is a resident of the United Kingdom by a United States corporation owning 10 percent or more of the voting stock thereof), and any other provision of the Convention in respect of income tax and payments of tax credits (i.e., refunds of ACT), and in respect of the United Kingdom capital gains tax, those provisions shall be effective for any year of assessment beginning on or after April 6, 1975. Refunds of tax may be claimed in the manner to be prescribed by the United Kingdom.

The Convention will be effective in respect of the United Kingdom corporation tax, for any financial year beginning on or after April 1, 1975, in respect of the United Kingdom petroleum revenue tax, for any chargeable period beginning on or after January 1, 1975, and (in accord with Article V of the Protocol of [March 31], 1977) in respect of the special domicile rule of paragraph (4) of Article 4 (Fiscal Residence) for any year of assessment beginning on or after April 6, 1976.

For the United States, tax credits for taxes paid to the United Kingdom on or after April 1, 1973, shall be allowed for the period subsequent to that date in accordance with paragraph (1) of Article 23 (Elimination of Double Taxation). In the case of dividends received for any year of assessment beginning on or after April 6, 1973, and before any year of assessment beginning on or after April 6, 1975, by a United States corporation described by paragraph (2)(a)(i) of Article 10 (Dividends), the full amount of ACT paid in respect of such dividends shall be regarded as a tax imposed on the distributing corporation.

With respect to taxes withheld at source, this Convention shall become effective in the United States on January 1, 1975, for taxes withheld on or after that date and with respect to all other taxes, this Convention will be effective in the United States for taxable years beginning on or after January 1, 1975.

Subject to the provisions of paragraph (4) of this Article, the 1945 Convention, as amended by the Supplementary Protocol of June 6, 1946, by the Supplementary Protocol of May 25, 1954, by the Supplementary Protocol of August 19, 1957, and by the Supplementary Protocol of March 17, 1966, will cease to have effect in respect of taxes to which this Convention in accordance with the provisions of paragraph (2) of this Article applies.

Where any provision of the 1945 Convention would have afforded any greater relief from tax, any such provision will continue to have effect for any year of assessment or financial year in the United Kingdom and for any taxable year in the United States beginning, in either case, before January 1, 1976.

The 1945 Convention will terminate on the last date on which it has effect in accordance with the foregoing provisions of this Article. In addition, this Convention will not affect any Agreement in force extending the 1945 Convention in accordance with Article XXII thereof. In those cases, the 1945 Convention will continue to apply to those territories. The United States has requested the United Kingdom to advise territories to which the 1945 Convention has been extended that the United States desires to renegotiate the Convention as it affects those territories so as to reflect the principles of this Convention.

The amendments to this Convention effected by the Notes exchanged at London on April 13, 1976 shall enter into force on the same date as determined under paragraph (2) of this Article and, in accord with the provisions of Article V of the Protocol of August 26, 1976 and of Article VI of the Protocol of [March 31], 1977, the amendments to this Convention effected by those protocols shall, upon ratification, enter into force on the thirty-first day following the date of the exchange of the instruments of ratification of those Protocols. Once in force, the provisions of the Notes and the two protocols shall have effect in accordance with this Article.

ARTICLE 29. TERMINATION

This Article is drafted in substantially the same manner as the termination Article of the 1945 Convention.

Paragraph (1) provides that the Convention will remain in force indefinitely, but that either Contracting State may, on or before June 30 in any year after the year 1980, give to the other Contracting State through diplomatic channels notice of termination. When notice is properly given, the Convention ceases to be effective for taxable years beginning on or after January 1 of the following year for United States tax; for a year of assessment beginning on or after April 6 of the following year for United Kingdom income tax and capital gains tax; for a financial year beginning on or after April 1 of the following year for United Kingdom corporation tax; and for a chargeable period beginning on or after January 1 of the following year for United Kingdom petroleum revenue tax.

Under paragraph (2), the termination of the proposed Convention will not have the effect of reviving any treaty or arangement abrogated by the present Convention or by treaties previously concluded between the Contracting States.

Part III. Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous

ERISA Non-Compliance Enforcement Program

Notice 80-7 [1]

The Service has established a new relief procedure for certain employee plans that were not timely amended to comply with Title II of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA), Pub. L. 93-406, 1974-3 C.B. 1, 67. The procedure will apply both with respect to plans that had favorable pre-ERISA determination letters but that failed to comply with ERISA by the end of their remedial amendment periods and to plans that received favorable post-ERISA determination letters (including those which were not timely amended to comply with final regulations in accordance with Announcement 78-175, 1978-47 I.R.B. 19).

Under the procedure, authority to grant the relief is delegated to the Director, Employee Plans Division and the Director, Actuarial Division of the Internal Revenue Service National Office, and to all Directors of EP/EO Key Districts. However, after December 31, 1982, relief with respect to plans described in this release may be granted only through the National Office.

Requirements for Relief

Except for a plan that satisfies Section 601.201(l) of the Statement of Procedural Rules, in order to be eligible for relief, plan sponsors must execute necessary plan amendments to conform to ERISA retroactively and take necessary action to restore employees' rights and/or benefits (which may require additional plan contributions). The sponsors must make amendments to bring the plan into complete compliance with ERISA no later than 91 days after the issuance of either a final determination letter or notice of amendments needed to effect compliance (which notice shall be issued at least 91 days prior to the issuance of a final Employee Plans examination report). In addition, the employers must take appropriate action to restore all former and present employee benefits to levels they would have attained had ERISA amendments been made timely. If the plan sponsors take these actions, relief generally will be granted to certain of the parties who otherwise would be adversely affected by the plan's earlier non-compliance.

Limitations on Relief

Relief will not be granted under this procedure if, (1) the plan was found to violate the exclusive benefit rule, or (2) after September 30, 1982, amendments required for complete compliance have not been executed or a request for a determination letter with proposed ERISA amendments has not been filed.

Where relief is available, however, the nature of the relief will differ depending on whether in the case of a plan with a favorable pre-ERISA determination letter, the plan was in substantial compliance with ERISA on June 4, 1980 and, in the case of a plan with a favorable post-ERISA determination letter, the extent to which the plan complied with certain operational requirements.

Plans With Pre-ERISA Determination Letters

If the employee plan with only a favorable pre-ERISA determination letter was in substantial compliance with ERISA on June 4, 1980 the relief will be granted to the trust, the employer and all participants. Proposed plan amendments that have been received by the Service on June 4, 1980 will be taken into consideration in determining whether a plan is in substantial compliance.

Employee plans will be considered in substantial compliance if, on June 4, 1980 they meet certain form and operational requirements.

As to form, the plan (i) must meet the eligibility and vesting requirements of sections 410(a) and 411(a) of the Internal Revenue Code, respectively (except to the extent that the rules for computing service for purposes of eligibility and vesting are not satisfied), and (ii) must, where applicable, provide for a joint and survivor annuity. In addition, the plan, (iii) must not have discriminated in operation in favor of officers, shareholders or highly compensated employees, and (iv) must not in operation have violated either the requirements of section 414(l) dealing with mergers and consolidations or the requirements of section 415(c) by providing excess allocations to officers, shareholders or highly compensated individuals.

For those plans which are not in substantial compliance on June 4, 1980, only limited relief may be granted under this procedure. As to the employer, the disqualification will be retroactive so that plan contributions will not be deductible under the rules for qualified plans. Further, if the plan discriminates in operation, no relief will be provided to individuals who are officers, shareholders or highly compensated. If the plan violates section 415(c) of the Code by providing excess allocations to officers, shareholders or highly compensated individuals, no relief will be granted to any of the above individuals who receive such excess allocations. The accounts of these individuals would then be subject to tax in accordance with the rules applicable to participants in nonqualified plans.

Plans With Post-ERISA Determination Letters

Plans with post-ERISA determination letters will, absent certain operational defects, be granted complete relief with respect to the trust, the employer and all participants.

However, if the plan, in operation (i) discriminated in favor of officers, shareholders, or highly compensated employees, (ii) violated the requirements of section 414(l) of the Code dealing with mergers or consolidations, or (iii) violated the requirements of section 415(c) by providing excess allocations to officers, shareholders, or highly compensated employees, then the relief, as described above, may be limited.

Period of Relief

The period for which the appropriate Service official grants the relief will commence with the ERISA effective date for the minimum participation standards determined with regard to each plan and will end with the applicable compliance deadline. The compliance deadline is 91 days after the issuance of a (i) final determination letter or (ii) notice of amendments needed to effect compliance.

[1] Also released as New Release IR-80-66, dated June 4, 1980.

Plans Without Determination Letters

Generally, this relief procedure does not apply to any individual retirement plan or any plan without a determination letter. However, for purposes of this procedure, a favorable opinion letter issued with respect to an HR-10 master or prototype plan will be considered as a determination letter for each employer who had adopted the plan or amendments with respect to which the favorable opinion letter was issued if the plan has been deemed qualified under Rev. Proc. 75-51, 1975-2 C.B. 590.

Rev. Proc. 80-19

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

The purpose of this Revenue Procedure is to modify and supersede Rev. Proc. 79-9, 1979-1 C.B. 488, which specifies the method under which tire manufacturers, producers, and importers may determine tire and tube weights on an average weight basis for the purpose of computing the manufacturers excise tax imposed by section 4071(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

In attempting to comply with Rev. Proc. 79-9, manufacturers and importers encountered difficulties not previously anticipated. Therefore, the procedure is being restated with modifications.

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND

.01 Section 4071(a) of the Code imposes an excise tax on tires, tubes, and tread rubber sold by the manufacturer, producer, or importer. The tax is based on the weight of the article at a rate computed on each pound including any fraction thereof.

.02 Section 4071(c) of the Code provides that the weight shall be based on total weight except that the metal rims or rim bases are excluded in the case of tires. Total weight shall be determined under regulations prescribed by the Secretary.

.03 Section 48.4071-2(b) of the Manufacturers and Retailers Excise Tax Regulations provides that a manufacturer who has received permission from the Commissioner, subject to conditions prescribed by the Commissioner, may determine total weight of tires and inner tubes manufactured and sold by the manufacturer on the basis of the average weight of each type, size, grade, and classification shown in schedules published by the tire industry. The average weights shall be established in accordance with the method approved by the Commissioner and shall apply for such periods as the Commissioner may prescribe. The Commissioner may terminate the approval granted any manufacturer. In the case of the termination of the approval granted any manufacturer, the termination shall become effective 10 days from the date of the receipt by the manufacturer of the notice of termination. A manufacturer may terminate its use of the average weight schedule by giving no less than 10 days written notice to the Commissioner. The termination shall not affect the manufacturer's liability for tires and tubes sold prior to the effective date of termination. The authority of the Commissioner under section 48.4071-2(b) and 301.7701-9 in these matters has been delegated to the Director, Examination Division.

.04 In accordance with the above, the Rubber Manufacturers Association has published schedules of average weights that have been used for some time.

.05 The regulations under section 48.4071-2(b) do not specify how the average weight is to be computed. Therefore, in order to specify the method of computing average weights, this revenue procedure prescribes the use of an industry-wide weighted average, the size of the sample to be used by manufacturers, producers, and importers, and the conditions under which a manufacturer, producer, or importer may use the industry schedule of average weights for each type, size, grade, and classification of tire and inner tube.

.06 For the purpose of this revenue procedure, the term "manufacturer" includes a producer and "tire" includes an inner tube. The term "fiscal year" means the period July 1 to June 30. The term "category" means a particular type, size, grade, and classification of tire or inner tube. The term "specification weight" means the weight of the tire determined by composition formula. A category will often include tires of differing specification weights but alike as to type, size, grade, and classification. The term "ordinary production" means the regular production of the tire as against, for example, a small test run. The term "industry group" means the Rubber Manufacturers Association or any other organization that establishes to the satisfaction of the Commissioner schedules of average tire weights for determining the tax under section 4071.

SEC. 3. APPLICATION

.01 A manufacturer or importer wishing to determine total weight of tires and inner tubes manufactured or imported and sold by it on the basis of the average weight for each category must request permission to do so by submitting an application with three copies to the Director, Examination Division, CP:E, Internal Revenue Service, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224, in substantially the form shown in section 8 of this procedure. At the same time the applicant must send a copy to the industry group responsible for compiling the average weight schedules. The application must be signed by the applicant.

.02 Upon approval, the Service will furnish copies to the industry group, the appropriate district director, and the applicant.

.03 Manufacturers, Annual information to be supplied.

The manufacturer must furnish the industry group annually by August 10th the following information from each plant's ordinary production for the prior fiscal year for use in compiling the industry group's table of average weights to be used for the next calendar year for each category.

1 The specification weight of the tires in each category of tires produced in the plant, rounded off to two decimal places,

2 The quantity of tires produced for domestic consumption in each such category,

3 If in one of its plants a manufacturer produces two or more tires differing in specification weight in a single category, the single specification weight figure submitted to the industry group for that category by the manufacturer shall be weighted by volume of production for domestic consumption. For example, manufacturer N produces two tires differing in specification weight but falling within the same category, X. In the prior fiscal year N produced for domestic consumption 50,000 category X tires with a specification weight of 30 pounds and 100,000 category X tires with a specification weight of 30.50 pounds. The specification weight figure that N furnishes the industry group for category X is computed as follows.

30.00	50,000	1,500,000
30.50	100,000	3,050,000
	150,000	4,550,000

$$\frac{\text{Total Col. 3}}{\textit{Total Col. 2}} = \frac{4{,}550{,}000}{\textit{150{,}000}} = 30.33 = \text{Specification weight}$$

N submits a specification weight of 30.33 pounds for category X.

1 If a manufacturer reported (or is to report) the specification weight for a category of tire produced in a plant in the prior fiscal year, and within that category only one tire by specification weight was produced in the plant, then in the first month of ordinary production of the same tire (by specification weight) during the period beginning with the last month of the prior fiscal year and ending with the last month of the current fiscal year, the manufacturer must select and weigh a random sample of at least 10 of those tires from that month's production or, if less, the entire ordinary production for the month. The manufacturer will divide the sum of the actual weights of the tires by the number of tires in the sample to compute an average actual weight of the sampled tires. This average actual weight shall be rounded off to two decimal places. The average weight so obtained for that month will be submitted to the industry group by the 10th of the second succeeding month. The manufacturer must correlate the average actual weight to the specification weight reported to the industry group.

2 Where a plant produced in the prior fiscal year tires falling within the same category but differing in specification weight, the manufacturer must also select and weigh a random sample of tires in the category. However, in computing an average actual weight for a category in which a manufacturer had multiple specification weights in the prior fiscal year, it necessarily follows that the manufacturer would only select and weigh samples of those tires (by each specification weight) considered in arriving at the prior year's specification weight figure. New tires being produced in the current fiscal year in the category by the manufacturer would be disregarded. By way of example, if a plant in the prior fiscal year produced within category X tires A, B, and C, differing only in specification weight, the manufacturer would provide the industry group a specification weight figure computed in accordance with 3.033. When during the current fiscal year the manufacturer computes an average actual weight figure for that category, it would only consider tires A, B, and C, and not new tire D, which although falling within category

X, was not produced in the prior fiscal year.

The average actual weight for a multiple specification weight category shall, as in 3.033, be weighted by the prior year's volume for domestic production, and be determined in the same manner as the specification weight reported (or to be reported) to the industry group. Using the example in 3.033, assume that in the current fiscal year N begins production in one of its plants of category X tires in August. Although the specification weight figure for the category that was furnished to the industry group was 30.33 pounds, a production-weighted figure, in reality N is manufacturing in category X tires with specification weights of either 30 or 30.5 pounds. N must select and weigh a random sample of at least ten tires of each specification weight to be sampled or, if less, the entire ordinary production for the month of tires of a specification weight to be sampled. N will then compute the average actual weight for the sampled tires of each specification weight and multiply each resultant figure by the prior year's volume of production of tires of that specification weight for domestic consumption. N must then add the two totals and divide by the total of the prior year's production of that category of tires in that plant to arrive at an average actual weight figure, production-weighted, to be submitted to the industry group by October 10.

The following is illustrative of the procedure to be followed:

(1) Specification Weights for Prior Fiscal Year	(2) Total Weight of 10-tire Sample	(3) Average Actual Weight	×	(4) Prior Fiscal Year's Production	(5) Col. 3 × Col. 4
30.00	301	30.10		50,000	1,505,000
30.50	304	30.40		100,000	3,040,000
					4,545,000

$$\frac{\text{Total Col. 5}}{\text{Total Col. 4}} = \frac{4{,}545{,}000}{150{,}000} = 30.30 =$$ Average actual weight for category submitted to industry group

The manufacturer must correlate the average actual weight to the category for which the specification weight figure, 30.33, was originally submitted.

3 Where a manufacturer in one of its plants begins production in a particular month of tires of one or more specification weights in a category but not of tires of all of the specification weights in the category which were reported (or are to be reported) in the category for the prior fiscal year, the manufacturer shall proceed as follows. By the 10th day of the second succeeding month after the manufacturer begins production of the tires in the plant it must submit to the industry group a partial report. The manufacturer shall indicate that it is not a final report and will furnish to the industry group the average actual sample weight of each tire (by specification weight) in the category put into production in the plant, and must correlate the actual weights to the category for which a specification weight was originally submitted. The manufacturer will submit revised reports as tires of other specification weights in the category that were reported the prior fiscal year are placed into production at the plant. By the 10th day of the second succeeding month after all tires (by specification weight) to be sampled in the category have been placed in production, the manufacturer must furnish the industry group the average actual weight for the category, determined following the procedure in 3.042 above.

4 In those instances where a manufacturer will not, during the period beginning with the last month of the prior fiscal year and ending with the last month of the current fiscal year, produce in a plant tires of all of the specification weights in a category which it reported (or is to report) in that category for the prior fiscal year, it should so inform the industry group within a reasonable period of time after it has determined that this will be the case and, in no event, later than August 10th of the following fiscal year. The manufacturer will indicate that as a result it cannot provide for that category an average actual weight.

.05 Manufacturers, Exceptions.

Where there was no ordinary production in that plant by that manufacturer of tires in a category in the prior fiscal year, or, that manufacturer had no specification weight for tires in the category in the prior fiscal year, the manufacturer may use the industry group's average weight schedule for such category during the current fiscal year notwithstanding section 3.13. During the first month of production in the plant of tires in that category in the current fiscal year, the manufacturer will submit to the industry group the specification weight of tires in such category if available. By the 10th of the next month a random sample average actual weight of each of the tires (by specification weight) in that category will be submitted to the industry group.

Where there is no category in the industry group's average weight schedule for a tire, the manufacturer will submit to the industry group a complete description of the tire with its uses and specification weight.

Importers must furnish the industry group annually, by August 10th, the following information obtained from tires imported for domestic consumption in the prior fiscal year for use in compiling the industry group's table of average weights to be used for the next calendar year for each category.

1. (a) If in the prior fiscal year the importer imported within a category tires of a single specification weight, the importer may furnish the industry group with the average actual weight of a random sample of tires in the category. The sample shall have consisted of at least 10 tires or, if less, the entire ordinary importation for the prior fiscal year. The importer may, at its option, furnish the information described in 3.061(b) below. If the importer is importing tires falling within the same category but differing in specification weight, the importer must provide the information described in 3.061(b) below.

(b) An importer importing within a category tires of a single specification weight may, in the alternative, furnish the industry group with the specification weight for that category. An importer importing tires within a category differing in specification weight must provide the specification weights for that category. The specification weights may be obtained from sources within or outside the United States, and there shall be maintained within the United States at least one copy of the composition formula for each specification weight at one stated location in the United States. Thus, if there are, for example, 10 importers of the identical tire, only one need maintain the specification formula. As in the case of manufacturers, where an importer imports into the United States tires that differ in specification weight but that fall in the same category, the importer shall furnish to the industry group an average specification weight figure which is weighted by volume of importation into the United States and computed as described in 3.033.

2 The importer must also furnish the industry the quantity of tires imported for domestic consumption by category.

3 In the case of an importer who in the prior fiscal year imported within a category tires of a single specification weight, in the first month of the importation of the same tires in such category during the period beginning with the last month of the prior fiscal year and ending with the last month of the current fiscal year, the importer must select and weigh a random sample of at least 10 tires from that month's importation, or, if less, the entire importation for the month of those tires in that category. The importer shall determine the average actual weight and furnish this figure to the industry group by the 10th of the second succeeding month. The importer must correlate the average weight to the category for which an average actual weight or specification weight figure is submitted in accordance with 3.061. In the case of an importer who imported tires of differing specification weights within a category in the prior fiscal year, such importer shall follow the procedures set forth for manufacturers in 3.04 in reporting average actual weight. As in the case of manufacturers, the importer, in determining average actual weight for a particular category, shall disregard tires in that category being imported by it in the current fiscal year but not imported by it in the prior fiscal year.

.07 Importers of tires. Exceptions.

Where any of the following circumstances are present:

1 Tires in a category are first being imported by that importer in the current fiscal year, or

2 There is not a copy of the specification formula available in the United States, the importer may use the industry group's average weight schedule for such category during the current fiscal year, notwithstanding section 3.13. During the first month's importation of tires in such category during the current fiscal year the importer will weigh or have weighed a random sample of at least 10 tires in the category or, if less, the entire ordinary importation for the month. The importer will compute the average actual weight for the tires in the category and provide such figure to the industry group by the 10th of the second succeeding month.

Where there is no category in the industry group's average weight schedule for a tire, the importer will in addition submit to the industry group a complete description of the tire and its uses.

.08 Importers of articles equipped with imported tires subject to tax who do not import tires separately.

Importers must furnish the industry group annually, by August 10th, the following information with respect to articles imported for domestic consumption in the prior fiscal year for use in compiling the industry group's table of average weights to be used for the next calendar year for each category.

1. The quantity of tires imported for domestic use by category.

2 If notified by the industry group that weight data is needed for a particular category of tires the importer of such tires will supply the specification weight or, where it is importing within a category tires of a single specification weight, the average weight of a random sample.

.09 Importers of articles equipped with tires who do not import tires separately. Exceptions.

Where the importer had no importation of articles equipped with tires in a category for domestic consumption in the prior fiscal year, and the importer is now importing articles with tires in that category, the importer may use the industry group's average weight schedule for such category during the current fiscal year, notwithstanding section 3.13.

If notified by the industry group that weight data is needed for a particular tire, the importer of such tires will furnish the industry group the specification weight or, where it is importing within a category tires of a single specification weight, the average weight of a random sample.

Where there is no category in the average weight schedule for a tire, the importer will in addition submit to the industry group a complete description of the tire and its uses.

.10 If a participant receives a request from the industry group for weight data on a particular tire, or verification of other data submitted, the information will be submitted to the industry group within 15 days of the post office marked date of the request.

.11 Where the Service finds that the data submitted by a participant to the industry group is inaccurate, the participant's tax liability may be redetermined by the Service on the basis of actual weights, and consideration will be given to terminating the approval for that participant to determine total weight on the basis of average weight, as provided in section 48.4071-2(b) of the regulations.

.12 Failure to comply with any of the provisions of this procedure applicable to the participant will result in assessment of the tax as determined by the Service for the particular period in question.

.13 This revenue procedure and the average weights published by the industry group may not be used by a manufacturer or importer to determine tax liability unless such taxpayer has complied with the requirements in this procedure.

.14 This procedure and the average weight schedule may not be used to determine the tax liability for imported used tires.

.15 The information required by this revenue procedure is for use in determining excise tax and the preparation and filing of excise tax returns. Therefore, as provided for in section 7206 of the Code, any person who willfully makes and subscribes, aids or assists in, procures, counsels, or advises in fraudulent or false statements, returns, affidavits, claims, or other documents in connection with the application of this revenue procedure, will be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction, will be fined not more than $5,000, or imprisoned not more than 3 years, or both, together with the costs of prosecution.

SEC. 4. INDUSTRY GROUP

.01 The industry group will publish by November 1 of each year, effective for the next calendar year, a schedule of weighted average weights as to each category. The schedule will be based on the data submitted by manufacturers or importers who have obtained approval to determine total weight of their tires on the basis of the average weights. The industry group will furnish copies of the schedule, and any additions and corrections, to each participant and to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

.02 The industry group will add the number of tires imported on other articles, by category, to the number received from importers of tires. Where the weight for a category of tires imported on other articles is not available from other importers, as provided in section 3.061, the industry group will notify the importer to provide the specification weight, or the average weight of a random sample, at the importer's option, in accordance with section 3.061. The information on imported tires will be added, by category, to domestic production for the purpose of determining weighted averages.

.03 Any corrections will be made by supplement in the published schedule of weighted averages if the net tax liability of a tire category in the schedule is changed by one cent or more. The change will be effective beginning the month following issuance of notice of the change.

.04 Where the industry group has reason to believe that any part of the data submitted may be in error, the industry group will request written verification of that part of the data from the participant. See section 3.10.

.05 The Director, Examination Division, will be notified by the industry group of any noncompliance with the requirements of this revenue procedure.

.06 The industry group will not include in any category a tire whose weight is not reasonable for that category.

.07 The industry group will submit to the Service a list of the categories with the average weight and the weight spread found in each category one month prior to publication of the schedule. Copies of all schedule changes issued will be submitted to the Service.

SEC. 5. RECORDS

.01 The industry group will maintain a file, by participant, of all correspondence and average weight data. Each item in the file will be kept for four years, except agreements. Agreements will be kept for at least four years after they are terminated. Each item in section 5.04 and 5.06 will be kept for at least four years.

.02 The industry group will maintain all summary, subsidiary, and detailed records involving its computations used to arrive at the average weights in the schedule for four years after the effective year of that schedule.

.03 The above records will be made available to the Service for verification.

.04 Each participant will maintain all summary, subsidiary, and detailed records involving its computations used to arrive at the data submitted to the industry group. This includes tire component formulae where tire specification weight is submitted to the industry group.

.05 Upon request, the records in section 5.04 will be made available to the Internal Revenue Service.

.06 Each taxpayer participant will maintain a file of the data submitted, copies of agreements, correspondence, copies of weight data, and other material concerning this procedure.

.07 Where coded record systems are used, machine sensible records of the pertinent information will be maintained.

SEC. 6. EFFECT ON OTHER DOCUMENTS

Rev. Proc. 79-9 is modified and superseded. Taxpayers with agreements under prior rules who wish to continue to use average weights are required to apply for permission to use average weights under this revenue procedure. All prior agreements were revoked by Rev. Proc. 79-9 as of January 1, 1980.

SEC. 7. EFFECTIVE DATE

This revenue procedure is effective June 23, 1980.

SEC. 8. AGREEMENT AND APPLICATION FORM

APPLICATION AND AGREEMENT ON TIRES AND INNER TUBES

The undersigned has read Revenue Procedure 80-19 and applies for permission to use the average weight schedules prepared under that Revenue Procedure.

(a) In consideration of the permission granted by acceptance of this application by the Internal Revenue Service, the undersigned understands it is subject to and will comply with the provisions of Revenue Procedure 80-19, which is part of this agreement.

(b) That revenue procedure may subsequently be corrected, amended, revised, and superseded and this agreement includes all such changes unless the undersigned, by written notice, ends this agreement within sixty days of publication of such change in the Internal Revenue Bulletin.

(c) Ten days after the post office marked date of the undersigned's written notice to the Director, Examination Division, ending this agreement under (b), the permission to use average weights is revoked.

(d) In consideration of the permission to use the average weights the undersigned waives any rights to claim refund, credit, or abatement of any part of the tax it has paid under this agreement on the basis (1) that the actual weight of its particular tire or tube is less than that established in the schedule of average weights, (2) that the use of the schedules is not legal, or (3) that the Commissioner or his delegate has exceeded discretionary power in adopting such weights or in accepting this agreement.

Age Limit for Jobs Credit Raised to Age 20 for Youths Participating in a Qualified Cooperative Education Program

Announcement 80-83

Under present law, a jobs credit is provided for hiring individuals who are members of certain targeted groups. The credit, which is elective, equals 50 percent of qualified first-year wages and 25 percent of qualified second-year wages. Recently enacted Pub. L. 96-222, 1980-20 I.R.B. 5, amended the law for one of the targeted groups. This group consists of youths who actively participate in qualified cooperative education programs.

The new law provides that individuals in this group must be 16, 17, 18, or 19 years old. Before enactment of Pub. L. 96-222, these individuals had to be 16, 17, or 18 years old. The law is retroactive so that an individual reaching age 19 will qualify as a member of this targeted group for wages paid or incurred after November 26, 1979.

The change can affect users of two Internal Revenue Service forms: Form 6199, Certification of Youth Participating in a Qualified Cooperative Education Program, and Form 5884, Jobs Credit.

Instruction B(1)(i) for Form 6199 should be revised to read as follows:

"(i) having reached age 16 and not having attained age 20. (Note: An individual reaching 19 will be treated as a youth participating in a qualified cooperative education program only for wages paid or incurred after November 26, 1979.)"

Users of Form 5884 may find that the change increases their allowable jobs credit for 1979. For example, an employer hired a certified youth on July 1, 1979, and paid that person $5,000 in wages by the time the youth turned 19 on December 1, 1979. The employer paid this person $1,000 more in wages during December 1979, and filed Form 5884 to figure the jobs credit for the calendar year. Under the old law, the employer figured the jobs credit based only on the $5,000 paid before the youth turned 19. Under the new law the employer figures the jobs credit based on the full $6,000 paid in 1979 if the employee continues to meet all the other requirements for certification.

Employers should file amended returns if they have already filed their 1979 income tax returns without claiming the full jobs credit to which they are now entitled. They should attach a completed 1979 Form 5884 to show the computation.

Special Rule for the Deduction of Certain Charitable Contributions of Inventory and Other Property—Public Hearing

Announcement 80-84 [1]

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Public hearing on proposed regulations.

SUMMARY: This document provides notice of a public hearing on proposed regulations relating to a special rule for the deduction of certain charitable contributions of inventory and other property as added by the Tax Reform Act of 1976 [Pub. L. 94-455, 1976-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1].

DATES: The public hearing will be held on July 15, 1980, beginning at 10:00 a.m. Outlines of oral comments must be delivered or mailed by July 1, 1980.

ADDRESS: The public hearing will be held in the Chief Counsel's Conference Room, Room 4132, Internal Revenue Building, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. The outlines should be submitted to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Attn: CC:LR:T (LR-272-76), Washington, D.C. 20224.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: Charles Hayden of the Legislation and Regulations Division, Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224, 202-566-3935, not a toll-free call.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: The subject of the public hearing is proposed regulations under section 170(e)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. The proposed regulations appeared in the Federal Register for Thursday, March 20, 1980, at page 18030 (45 FR 18030).

The rules of § 601.601(a)(3) of the "Statement of Procedural Rules" (26 CFR Part 601) shall apply with respect to the public hearing. Persons who have submitted written comments within the time prescribed in the notice of proposed rulemaking and also desire to present oral comments at the hearing on the proposed regulations should submit an outline of the comments to be presented at the hearing and the time they wish to devote to each subject by July 1, 1980. Each speaker will be limited to 10 minutes for an oral presentation exclusive of time consumed by questions from the panel for the Government and answers to these questions.

Because of controlled access restrictions, attendees cannot be admitted beyond the lobby of the Internal Revenue Building until 9:45 a.m.

An agenda showing the scheduling of the speakers will be made after outlines are received from the speakers. Copies of the agenda will be available free of charge at the hearing.

This document does not meet the criteria for significant regulations set forth in paragraph 8 of the Treasury Directive on improving government regulations appearing in the Federal Register for Wednesday, November 8, 1978.

Announcement of the Disbarment, Suspension, or Consent to Voluntary Suspension of Attorneys, Certified Public Accountants, Enrolled Agents and Enrolled Actuaries from Practice before the Internal Revenue Service

Under Section 1026, Title 31 of the United States Code (1970 ed.), the Secretary of the Treasury, after due notice and opportunity for hearing, is authorized to suspend or disbar from practice before the Internal Revenue Service any person who has violated the rules and regulations governing the recognition of attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents or enrolled actuaries to practice before the Internal Revenue Service.

Attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries are prohibited in any Internal Revenue Service matter from directly or indirectly employing, accepting assistance from, being employed by or sharing fees with, any practitioner disbarred or under suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service.

To enable attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries to identify such disbarred or suspended practitioners, the Director of Practice will announce in the Internal Revenue Bulletin the names and addresses of practitioners who have been disbarred or suspended from such practice, their designation as attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, and the date of disbarment or period of suspension. This announcement will appear and will continue to appear in the weekly Bulletins for five successive weeks for each attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary so suspended or disbarred and will later be consolidated and published in the Cumulative Bulletin.

After due notice and opportunity for hearing, the following individuals have been disbarred from further practice before the Internal Revenue Service:

Name	Address	Designation	Effective Date
Robert B. Clarkson	Anderson, SC	Attorney	April 25, 1980
John E. DeSantis	Belmont, CA	Certified Public Accountant	May 12, 1980

Announcement Relating to Proposed Regulations Published With Notice of Proposed Rulemaking

Changes in regulations as announced below have been published in the Federal Register in tentative or proposed form to provide interested parties with an opportunity to file their objections or suggestions for consideration prior to final adoption of such regulations. These announcements will appear in the Bulletin during the period which has been prescribed for the submission and consideration of any views, arguments, or suggestions pertaining to the proposed regulations so published. Statement of such views, arguments or suggestions should be submitted in writing, preferably six copies, to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Attention: CC:LR:T, Washington, D.C. 20224.

Definition of Terms

Revenue Rulings and Revenue Procedures (hereinafter referred to as "rulings") that have an effect on previous rulings use the following defined terms to describe the effect:

Amplified describes a situation where no change is being made in a prior published position, but the prior position is being extended to apply to a variation of the fact situation set forth therein. Thus, if an earlier ruling held that a principle applied to A, and the new ruling holds that the same principle also applies to B, the earlier ruling is amplified. (Compare with modified, below).

Clarified is used in those instances where the language in a prior ruling is being made clear because the language has caused, or may cause, some confusion. It is not used where a position in a prior ruling is being changed.

Distinguished describes a situation where a ruling mentions a previously published ruling and points out an essential difference between them.

Modified is used where the substance of a previously published position is being changed. Thus, if a prior ruling held that a principle applied to A but not to B, and the new ruling holds that it applies to both A and B, the prior ruling is modified because it corrects a published position. (Compare with amplified and clarified, above).

Obsoleted describes a previously published ruling that is not considered determinative with respect to future transactions. This term is most commonly used in a ruling that lists previously published rulings that are obsoleted because of changes in law or regulations. A ruling may also be obsoleted because the substance has been included in regulations subsequently adopted.

Revoked describes situations where the position in the previously published ruling is not correct and the correct position is being stated in the new ruling.

Superseded describes a situation where the new ruling does nothing more than restate the substance and situation of a previously published ruling (or rulings). Thus, the term is used to republish under the 1954 Code and regulations the same position published under the 1939 Code and regulations. The term is also used when it is desired to republish in a single ruling a series of situations, names, etc., that were previously published over a period of time in separate rulings. If the new ruling does more than restate the substance of a prior ruling, a combination of terms is used. For example, modified and superseded describes a situation where the substance of a previously published ruling is being changed in part and is continued without change in part and it is desired to restate the valid portion of the previously published ruling in a new ruling that is self contained. In this case the previously published ruling is first modified and then, as modified, is superseded.

Supplemented is used in situations in which a list, such as a list of the names of countries, is published in a ruling and that list is expanded by adding further names in subsequent rulings. After the original ruling has been supplemented several times, a new ruling may be published that includes the list in the original ruling and the additions, and supersedes all prior rulings in the series.

Suspended is used in rare situations to show that the previous published rulings will not be applied pending some future action such as the issuance of new or amended regulations, the outcome of cases in litigation, or the outcome of a Service study.

INTERNAL REVENUE BULLETIN

The Introduction on page 3 describes the purpose and content of this publication. The weekly Internal Revenue Bulletin is sold on a yearly subscription basis by the Superintendent of Documents. Current subscribers are notified by the Superintendent of Documents when their subscriptions must be renewed.

CUMULATIVE BULLETINS

The contents of the weekly Bulletin are consolidated semiannually into a permanent, indexed, Cumulative Bulletin. These are sold on a single copy basis and are not included as part of the subscription to the Internal Revenue Bulletin. Subscribers to the weekly Bulletin are notified when copies of the Cumulative Bulletin are available. Certain issues of Cumulative Bulletins are out of print and are not available. Persons desiring available Cumulative Bulletins, which are listed on the reverse, may purchase them from the Superintendent of Documents.

BULLETIN INDEX-DIGEST SYSTEM

The Bulletin Index-Digest System (12-78) provides a fast and easy way to research Revenue Rulings, Revenue Procedures, Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and other matters of a permanent nature published in the weekly Internal Revenue Bulletin, or Cumulative Bulletin from 1953 on. It is a comprehensive and up-to-date research tool that requires no filing or other clerical maintenance. The current revision consists of four Services, available on a subscription basis, each including a basic volume that covers the period 1953-1978 and a cumulative supplement covering material published in subsequent Bulletins for the following two-year period. Cumulative supplements are issued quarterly for the Income Tax Service and semiannually for the Estate and Gift, Employment, and Excise Tax Services.

HOW TO ORDER

Check the publications and/or subscription(s) desired on the reverse, complete the order blank, enclose the proper remittance, detach entire page, and mail to the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. Please allow two to six weeks, plus mailing time, for delivery.

Department of the Treasury
Internal Revenue Service

Statement of Principles of Internal Revenue Tax Administration

The function of the Internal Revenue Service is to administer the Internal Revenue Code. Tax policy for raising revenue is determined by Congress.

With this in mind, it is the duty of the Service to carry out that policy by correctly applying the laws enacted by Congress; to determine the reasonable meaning of various Code provisions in light of the Congressional purpose in enacting them; and to perform this work in a fair and impartial manner, with neither a government nor a taxpayer point of view.

At the heart of administration is interpretation of the Code. It is the responsibility of each person in the Service, charged with the duty of interpreting the law, to try to find the true meaning of the statutory provision and not to adopt a strained construction in the belief that he is "protecting the revenue." The revenue is properly protected only when we ascertain and apply the true meaning of the statute.

The Service also has the responsibility of applying and administering the law in a reasonable, practical manner. Issues should only be raised by examining officers when they have merit, never arbitrarily or for trading purposes. At the same time, the examining officer should never hesitate to raise a meritorious issue. It is also important that care be exercised not to raise an issue or to ask a court to adopt a position inconsistent with an established Service position.

Administration should be both reasonable and vigorous. It should be conducted with as little delay as possible and with great courtesy and considerateness. It should never try to overreach, and should be reasonable within the bounds of law and sound administration. It should, however, be vigorous in requiring compliance with law and it should be relentless in its attack on unreal tax devices and fraud.

Introduction

The Internal Revenue Bulletin is the authoritative instrument of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for announcing official rulings and procedures of the Internal Revenue Service and for publishing Treasury Decisions, Executive Orders, Tax Conventions, legislation, court decisions, and other items of general interest. It is published weekly and may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. Bulletin contents of a permanent nature are consolidated semiannually into Cumulative Bulletins, which are sold on a single-copy basis.

It is the policy of the Service to publish in the Bulletin all substantive rulings necessary to promote a uniform application of the tax laws, including all rulings that supersede, revoke, modify, or amend any of those previously published in the Bulletin. All published rulings apply retroactively unless otherwise indicated. Procedures relating solely to matters of internal management are not published; however, statements of internal practices and procedures that affect the rights and duties of taxpayers are published.

Revenue rulings represent the conclusions of the Service on the application of the law to the pivotal facts stated in the revenue ruling. In those based on positions taken in rulings to taxpayers or technical advice to Service field offices, identifying details and information of a confidential nature are deleted to prevent unwarranted invasions of privacy and to comply with statutory requirements.

Rulings and procedures reported in the Bulletin do not have the force and effect of Treasury Department Regulations, but they may be used as precedents. Unpublished rulings will not be relied on, used, or cited as precedents by Service personnel in the disposition of other cases. In applying published rulings and procedures, the effect of subsequent legislation, regulations, court decisions, rulings, and procedures must be considered, and Service personnel and others concerned are cautioned against reaching the same conclusions in other cases unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same.

The Bulletin is divided into four parts as follows:

Part I.—1954 Code.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

Part II.—Treaties and Tax Legislation.

This part is divided into two subparts as follows: Subpart A, Tax Conventions, and Subpart B, Legislation and Related Committee Reports.

Part III.—Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous.

To the extent practicable, pertinent cross references to these subjects are contained in the other Parts and Subparts.

Part IV.—Items of General Interest.

With the exception of the disbarment and suspension list included in this part, none of these announcements is consolidated in the Cumulative Bulletins.

The first Bulletin for each month includes an index for the matters published during the preceding month. These monthly indexes are cumulated on a quarterly and semiannual basis, and are published in the first Bulletin of the succeeding quarterly and semi-annual period, respectively.

The Bulletin Index-Digest System, a research and reference service supplementing the Bulletin, may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. It consists of four Services: Service No. 1, Income Tax; Service No. 2, Estate and Gift Taxes; Service No. 3, Employment Taxes; Service No. 4, Excise Taxes. Each Service consists of a basic volume and a cumulative supplement that provide (1) finding lists of items published in the Bulletin, (2) digests of revenue rulings, revenue procedures, and other published items, and (3) topical indexes of Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and Tax Conventions.

The contents of this publication are not copyrighted and may be reprinted freely. A citation of the Internal Revenue Bulletin as the source would be appropriate.

For sale by the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. Prices: Domestic—$2.00 a single copy, $55.00 a year subscription; Foreign—$2.50 a single copy, $68.75 a year subscription.

Section 3221.—Rate of Tax [Railroad Retirement Tax Act]

RAILROAD RETIREMENT BOARD

Determination of Quarterly Rate of Excise Tax for Railroad Retirement Supplemental Annuity Program

In accordance with directions in section 3221(c) of the Railroad Retirement Tax Act (26 U.S.C. 3221 (c)), the Railroad Retirement Board has determined that the excise tax imposed by such section 3221(c) on every employer, with respect to having individuals in his employ, for each work-hour for which compensation is paid by such employer for services rendered to him during the quarter beginning July 1, 1980, shall be at the rate of twelve and one-half cents.

In accordance with directions in section 15(a) of the Railroad Retirement Act of 1974, the Railroad Retirement Board has determined that for the quarter beginning July 1, 1980, 20.3 percent of the taxes collected under sections 3211(b) and 3221(c) of the Railroad Retirement Tax Act shall be credited to the Railroad Retirement Account and 79.7 percent of the taxes collected under such sections 3211(b) and 3221(c) plus one hundred percent of the taxes collected under section 3221(d) of the Railroad Retirement Tax Act shall be credited to the Railroad Retirement Supplemental Account.

Dated May 15, 1980.

By Authority of the Board.

R. F. BUTLER,
Secretary of the Board.

(Filed by the Office of the Federal Register on May 23, 1980, 8:45 a.m., and published in the issue of the Federal Register for May 27, 1980, 45 F.R. 35457)

Part III. Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous

26 CFR 601.201: Rulings and determination letters.

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

The purpose of this revenue procedure is to supersede Rev. Proc. 79-45, 1979-2 C.B. 508, by providing revised procedures for issuing rulings and determination and information letters, and for entering into closing agreements on specific issues involving the interpretation or application of the federal tax laws. It also tells taxpayers and their representatives where to send requests for rulings and determination and information letters. It gives the steps to follow so that requests may be handled more efficiently.

SEC. 2. SCOPE

This revenue procedure applies only to ruling requests, information letters, and closing agreements under the jurisdiction of the Assistant Commissioner (Technical), and to requests for determination letters under the jurisdiction of field offices that relate to Code sections under the jurisdiction of the Assistant Commissioner (Technical). The Assistant Commissioner (Technical) acts as the principal assistant to the Commissioner in providing basic principles and rules for the uniform interpretation and application of the federal tax laws under the jurisdiction of the Assistant Commissioner (Technical). The procedures for obtaining rulings, etc., that apply specifically to federal firearms taxes under subtitle E of the Internal Revenue Code are under the jurisdiction of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. The procedures for obtaining rulings, determination letters, etc., on employee plans and exempt organizations are under the jurisdiction of the Assistant Commissioner (Employee Plans and Exempt Organizations). However, the jurisdiction of the Assistant Commissioner (Technical) includes section 521 of the Code, on exemption of farmers' cooperatives from tax; section 526, on shipowners' protection and indemnity associations; section 527(a), (b), (c), (d), (e), and (g), on political organizations, and section 528, on certain homeowners' associations.

SEC. 3. CHANGES

.01 Section 5.01 has been expanded to (1) incorporate the present practice that the National Office does not rule on the classification of an organization for which a return has been filed, and (2) to cross reference Rev. Proc. 79-63, 1979-2 C.B. 578, which concerns applications for extension of the time for making an election or application for relief pursuant to section 1.9100-1 of the regulations. In this connection section 5.01 now provides that if a request for an extension of time under section 1.9100-1 is submitted after the return is filed but before the return is examined, the procedures under Rev. Proc. 80-20 are applicable. However, if an examination of the return in such situation has begun, or is being considered by an Appeals office, the procedures of Rev. Proc. 80-21, page 19, this Bulletin, are applicable.

.02 Section 5.02 has been modified to permit issuance of rulings in estate tax matters after the estate tax return has been filed if the request for ruling is submitted before the return is filed.

.03 Section 5.02(c) has been clarified to state that the National Office will issue rulings regarding the application of the generation-skipping transfer tax effective date rules to wills, trusts, and trust equivalents in existence on June 11, 1976.

.04 Section 9.02 has been revised to cover specifically signatures on ruling requests from partnerships and trusts.

.05 Section 9.05 has been expanded to (1) explain additional procedures for extending the 21-day period for confirming additional material submitted, and (2) cite additional revenue procedures relating to specific Code or regulatory provisions.

.06 Section 9.06 has been expanded to (1) clarify by limiting the reference to issue pending in litigation to litigation involving an issue in a return of the taxpayer or a related taxpayer that is the same issue in the request for ruling, and (2) state the purpose of requiring the ruling request to be attached to a return filed before the ruling is received.

.07 Section 9.08 has been revised to encourage, rather than require, material on contrary authorities to be submitted.

.08 Section 9.09 has been expanded to make it clear that the disclosure procedures in section 9.09 are applicable to information submitted after the initial request.

.09 Section 11.1 has been clarified to point out that a conference must be held within 21 calendar days after the initial notification as to the time and place of the conference.

.10 Section 20 now provides the procedures for requesting application of 7805(b) of the Code to ruling letters and determination letters.

SEC. 4. GENERAL PRACTICE AND DEFINITIONS

.01 The Service answers inquiries of individuals and organizations, when appropriate in the interest of sound tax administration, about their status for tax purposes and the tax effects of their acts or transactions. The National Office issues rulings in such matters.

.02 District Directors of Internal Revenue apply the statutes and tax treaties, regulations, revenue rulings, and other precedents published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin in determining tax liability, collecting taxes, and issuing information letters and determination letters in answer to taxpayers' inquiries or requests. For purposes of this revenue procedure, any reference to District Director or district office includes, when appropriate, the director of an Internal Revenue Service Center and the Director of International Operations, or their respective offices.

.03 The word "taxpayer" includes all persons subject to any provision of the Internal Revenue Code and, when appropriate, their representatives. Any reference to National Office means only the Office of the Assistant Commissioner (Technical).

.04 A "ruling" is a written statement issued to a taxpayer by the National Office that interprets and applies the tax laws to the taxpayer's specific set of facts. Rulings are issued only by the National Office, under the general supervision of the Assistant Commissioner (Technical). Issuing rulings has been largely delegated to the Directors of the Corporation Tax Division and the Individual Tax Division.

.05 A "determination letter" is a written statement issued by a District Director in response to a written inquiry by a taxpayer which applies the principles and precedents previously announced by the National Office to a specific set of facts. A determination letter is issued only when a determination can be made on the basis of clearly established rules in the statute or regulations, or by a position in a ruling, opinion, or court decision published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin that specifically answers the question presented. A determination letter will not be issued if a determination cannot be made, for example, when the question presents a novel issue, or if the matter is excluded from the jurisdiction of a District Director under section 7 of this revenue procedure.

.06 An "information letter" is a statement issued either by the National Office or by a District Director that calls attention to a well-established interpretation or principle of tax law, without applying it to a specific set of facts. It may be issued if the request indicates that the taxpayer is seeking general information. If the request does not meet the requirements of section 9 of this revenue procedure, but the Service thinks that the general information may help the individual or organization, it may issue an information letter.

.07 A "revenue ruling" is an interpretation by the Service that has been published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin. It is the conclusion of the Service on how the law is applied to an entire set of facts. Revenue rulings are issued only by the National Office and are published for the information and guidance of taxpayers, Internal Revenue Service officials, and other interested parties.

.08 A "closing agreement" is an agreement between the Commissioner of Internal Revenue or the Commissioner's delegate and a taxpayer on a specific issue or issues or liability that is entered into under the authority in section 7121 of the Code. A closing agreement prepared in an office under the responsibility of the Assistant Commissioner (Technical) is based on a ruling that has been signed by the Commissioner, or the Commissioner's delegate, which says that a closing agreement will be entered into on the basis of the holding of the ruling letter. Closing agreements are final, unless fraud, malfeasance, or misrepresentation of a material fact can be shown. Closing agreements may be entered into when it is advantageous to have the matter permanently and conclusively closed, or when a taxpayer can show good and sufficient reasons for an agreement and the government will sustain no disadvantage by its consummation. In appropriate cases, taxpayers may be asked to enter into a closing agreement as a condition to the issuing of a ruling. If, in a single case, closing agreements are requested for each of a number of taxpayers, such agreements are entered into only if the number of taxpayers is 25 or less. However, if the issue and holding are identical for all the taxpayers and they number more than 25, a "mass closing agreement" will be entered into with the taxpayer who is authorized by the others to represent the entire group.

SEC. 5. RULINGS ISSUED BY THE NATIONAL OFFICE

.01 In income and gift tax matters, the National Office issues rulings on prospective transactions and on completed transactions before the return is filed for them. However, the National Office will issue rulings after the return is filed if a ruling is required by section 367 of the Code and the ruling request is filed on time under that section. Further, see Rev. Proc. 79-63, 1979-2 C.B. 578, which concerns applications for extension of the time for making an election or application for relief pursuant to section 1.9100-1 of the regulations. If a request for an extension of time under section 1.9100-1 is submitted after the return is filed but before the return is examined the procedures under Rev. Proc. 80-20 are applicable. If an examination of the return has begun, or is being considered by an Appeals office, the procedures of Rev. Proc. 80-21 are applicable. The National Office issues rulings on the exempt status of organizations under section 521. See Rev. Proc. 80-25, page 39, this Bulletin. The National Office ordinarily does not issue rulings if at the time the ruling is requested, the identical issue is involved in the taxpayer's return for an earlier period, and (1) that issue is being examined by a District Director or is being considered by an Appeals office, or (2) that issue has been examined by a District Director or considered by an Appeals office and the statutory period of limitation on assessment or refund of tax has not expired, or (3) a closing agreement covering the issue or liability has not been entered into by a District Director or by an Appeals office. If a return dealing with an issue for a particular year is filed while a request for ruling on that issue is pending, the National Office will issue the ruling unless it is notified by the taxpayer that an examination of that issue or the identical issue on an earlier year's return has been started by a District Director. See section 9.06. However, even if an examination has begun, the National Office ordinarily will issue the ruling if the District Director agrees, by memorandum, to permit the ruling to be issued. The National Office does not issue rulings for the replacement of involuntarily converted property, even though replacement has not been made, if the taxpayer has filed a return for the tax year in which the property was converted. See section 7.05 on the District Directors' authority to issue determination letters in this connection. In addition, the National Office does not issue rulings on the classification of an organization if a return has been filed for the organization for an earlier period. The National Office also does not issue rulings on only part of an integrated transaction.

.02 In estate tax matters, the National Office issues rulings with respect to transactions affecting the estate tax of a decedent before the estate tax return is filed. If the estate tax return is due to be filed before the ruling is issued, the taxpayer should secure an extension of time for filing the return for the maximum period of six months, and notify the National Office Branch considering the request for ruling that an extension has been secured. If the return is filed before the ruling is issued, the taxpayer must disclose on the return that a ruling has been requested, attach a copy of the pending ruling request to the return, and notify the National Office that the return has been filed. The National Office will make every effort to issue the ruling within three months of the day on which the return was filed. If the ruling cannot be issued within that three-month period, the National Office will notify the District Director having jurisdiction of the return who may, by memorandum to the National Office, grant an additional period for the issuance of the ruling. The National Office will not rule on matters relating to the application of the estate tax to property or the estate of a living person.

1 In generation-skipping transfer tax matters, the National Office issues rulings on transactions that affect the generation-skipping transfer tax before the return is filed. Rulings are not issued until after the generation-skipping trust, or trust equivalent, has been established. Rulings are not issued on a generation-skipping transfer tax matter before the distribution or termination takes place. Notwithstanding the foregoing, the National Office will issue rulings regarding the application of the generation-skipping transfer tax effective date rules (section 2006(c) of the Tax Reform Act of 1976, Pub. L. 94-455, 1976-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1, 365, as amended by section 702(n)(1) of the Revenue Act of 1978, Pub. L. 95-600, 1978-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1, 169) to wills, trusts, and trust equivalents in existence on June 11, 1976.

2 In matters involving additional tax under section 2032A(c), the National Office issues rulings on prospective transactions and on completed transactions before the return is filed for those transactions.

.03 In employment and excise tax matters, the National Office issues rulings on prospective transactions and on completed transactions either before or after the return is filed for those transactions. In employment tax matters, generally the taxpayer is the person who employs the worker. However, if the worker asks for the ruling, both the worker and the person who employs the worker are considered to be the taxpayer and both are entitled to the ruling. The National Office usually will not issue rulings if at the time the ruling is requested, the identical issue is involved in the taxpayer's return for an earlier period and (1) that issue is under examination by a District Director or under consideration by an Appeals office, or (2) that issue has been examined by a District Director or considered by an Appeals office and the statutory period of limitation on assessment or refund of tax has not expired, or (3) a closing agreement covering the issue or liability has not been entered into by a District Director or by an Appeals office. However, if a District Director began an examination of the issue involved in the ruling request, the National Office usually will issue the ruling if the District Director agrees, by memorandum, to permit the ruling to be issued.

.04 In administrative provisions matters, the National Office issues rulings on issues arising under the Internal Revenue Code and related statutes, and the regulations thereunder, that relate primarily to the time, place, manner, and procedures, for reporting and paying taxes; assessing and collecting taxes (including interest and penalties); abating, crediting, or refunding overassessments or overpayments of tax; and filing information returns. Rulings ordinarily are not issued, if at the time the ruling is requested, the identical issue is involved in the taxpayer's return for an earlier period and (1) that issue is being considered by a District Director or the Director of a Service Center, or (2) that issue has been considered and the statutory period of limitation on assessment or refund of tax has not expired, or (3) a closing agreement covering the issue or liability has not been entered into. If a return involving an issue for a particular year is filed while a request for a ruling on that issue is pending, the National Office will issue the ruling unless an examination of that issue or an examination of the identical issue on an earlier year's return has been started by a District Director or a Director of a Service Center. But, even if consideration has begun, the National Office ordinarily will issue the ruling if the District Director or the Director of a Service Center agrees, by memorandum, to permit the ruling to be issued. Rulings ordinarily are not issued if at the time the ruling is requested, the identical issue is involved in the taxpayer's return for an earlier period and (1) that issue is being considered by an Appeals office, or (2) that issue has been considered by an Appeals office and the statutory period of limitation on assessment or refund of tax has not expired, or (3) a closing agreement covering the issue or liability has not been entered into.

.05 The National Office does not issue rulings to business, trade, or industrial associations, or to similar groups concerning the application of the tax laws to members of the group. It may, however, issue rulings to these groups or associations on their own tax status or liability, if the tax status or liability is not an issue that is being examined by any field office (including consideration by any Appeals office) for the same taxpayer for the same or an earlier period under the conditions stated in section 5.

.06 Pending the adoption of regulations (either temporary or final) that interpret the provisions of any act, the issuing of rulings will be considered under the following conditions:

1 If the ruling request presents an issue on which the answer seems clear by applying the statute to the facts, a ruling will be issued under the usual procedures.

2 If the ruling request presents an issue on which the answers seems reasonably certain but not entirely free from doubt, a ruling will be issued only if it is established that a business emergency requires a ruling or that unusual hardship will result from failure to obtain a ruling. If the taxpayer believes that a business emergency exists or that an unusual hardship will result from failure to obtain a ruling, the taxpayer should submit with the request a separate letter stating the facts necessary for the Service to make a determination. In this connection, the Service will not consider a "business emergency" to result from circumstances under the taxpayer's control, such as, scheduling within an inordinately short time the closing date for a transaction or a meeting of the board of directors or the shareholders of a corporation. However, if the ruling request presents an issue that cannot be reasonably resolved before regulations are issued, a ruling will not be issued.

SEC. 6. DETERMINATIONS UNDER SECTION 999(d) OF THE CODE

Under Rev. Proc. 77-9, 1977-1 C.B. 542, procedures, the National Office issues determinations under section 999(d) of the Code that may deny certain benefits of the foreign tax credit, deferral of earnings of foreign subsidiaries, and domestic international sales corporation (DISC) to a person, if that person, or a member of a controlled group (within the meaning of section 993(a)(3)) that includes that person, or a foreign corporation of which a member of the controlled group is a United States shareholder, agrees to participate in or cooperate with an international boycott.

SEC. 7. DETERMINATION LETTERS ISSUED BY DISTRICT DIRECTORS

.01 In income and gift tax matters, District Directors issue determination letters in response to taxpayers' written requests on completed transactions that affect returns over which they have examination jurisdiction. This applies only if the question presented is specifically answered by statute or regulation, or by the position stated in a ruling, opinion, or court decision published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin. A determination letter usually is not issued for a question concerning a return to be filed by the taxpayer if the same question is involved in a return already filed. District Directors do not issue determination letters on the tax consequences of prospective or proposed transactions, except as provided in section 7.05.

.02 In estate tax matters, District Directors issue determination letters in response to written requests affecting the estate tax returns of decedents that they will examine, but only if the question presented is specifically answered by statute or regulation, or by the position stated in a ruling, opinion, or court decision published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin. District Directors do not issue determination letters on matters concerning the application of the estate tax to property or the estate of a living person.

1 In generation-skipping transfer tax matters, District Directors issue determination letters in response to written requests affecting the generation-skipping transfer tax returns that they will examine, but only if the questions presented are specifically answered by statute or regulation, or by a position stated in a ruling, opinion, or court decision published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin. District Directors do not issue determination letters or matters concerning the application of the generation-skipping transfer tax before the distribution or termination takes place.

.03 In employment and excise tax matters, District Directors issue determination letters on completed transactions in response to written requests from taxpayers over which they have examination jurisdiction, but only if the question presented is specifically answered by statute or regulation, or by the position stated in a ruling, opinion, or court decision published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin.

.04 Notwithstanding the provisions of sections 7.01, 7.02, and 7.03, a District Director will not issue a determination letter in response to a request that presents a question specifically answered by statute or regulation, or by the position stated in rulings, etc., published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin, if (1) it appears that the taxpayer has directed a similar inquiry to the National Office, (2) the same issue involving the same taxpayer is pending in a case before an Appeals office, (3) the determination letter is requested by an industry, trade association, or similar group, or (4) the request involves an industry-wide problem. Under no circumstances will a District Director issue a determination letter unless it is clearly shown that the request concerns a return that has been filed or is required to be filed over which the District Director has or will have examination jurisdiction. Notwithstanding the provisions of section 7.03, a District Director will not issue a determination letter on an employment tax question if the specific question for the same taxpayer has been or is being considered by the Central Office of the Social Security Administration or the Railroad Retirement Board. Nor will District Directors issue determination letters for determination of a constructive sales price under section 4216(b) or 4218(e) of the Code. The National Office, however, will issue rulings in this area. See section 8.03.

.05 District Directors issue determination letters on the replacement of involuntarily converted property under section 1033 even though the replacement has not been made, if the taxpayer has filed an income tax return for the year in which the property was involuntarily converted.

.06 A request received by a District Director on a question concerning an income, estate, or gift tax return already filed will, in general, be considered in connection with the examination of the return. If a response is made to such a request before the return is examined, it will be considered a tentative finding in any later examination of that return.

SEC. 8. DISCRETIONARY AUTHORITY TO ISSUE RULINGS AND DETERMINATION LETTERS

.01 The Service ordinarily will not issue rulings or determination letters in certain areas because of the factual nature of the problem involved, or for other reasons. Rev. Proc. 80-22, page 26, this Bulletin, provides a list of these areas. This list is not all inclusive, since the Service may decline to issue a ruling or a determination letter on other questions, whenever warranted by the facts or circumstances of a particular case. The National Office and District Directors may, when it is considered appropriate and in the best interest of the Service, issue information letters calling attention to well-established principles of tax law.

.02 A ruling or a determination letter is not issued on alternative plans of proposed transactions or on hypothetical situations.

.03 The National Office will issue rulings in all cases on prospective or future transactions if the law or regulations require a determination of the effect of a proposed transaction for tax purposes, as in a transfer under sections 1491 and 1492 of the Code. The National Office will issue rulings on all transfers described in section 367(a)(1) if the request is filed within 183 days after the beginning of the transfer. The National Office also will issue rulings in all cases on the determination of a constructive sales price under section 4216(b) or 4218(e).

SEC. 9. INSTRUCTIONS TO TAXPAYER

.01 The taxpayer should submit a request for a ruling or a determination letter in duplicate if (1) more than one issue is presented in the request, or if (2) a closing agreement is requested on the issue presented. It is not necessary to submit requests in duplicate under other circumstances.

.02 A request for a ruling or determination letter and any factual information submitted at a later time must be accompanied by a declaration in the following form. "Under penalties of perjury, I declare that I have examined this request, including accompanying documents, and to the best of my knowledge and belief, the facts presented in support of the requested ruling or determination letter are true, correct, and complete." The declaration may not be made by the taxpayer's representative. It must be signed by the person or persons on whose behalf the request is made. The person who must sign for a corporate taxpayer must be an officer of the corporate taxpayer who has personal knowledge of the facts. The officer must be one whose duties are not limited to obtaining a ruling or determination letter from the Service. The person signing for a trust or partnership must be a trustee or partner who has personal knowledge of the facts.

.03 If more than one issue is presented in a request for a ruling, the Service generally will issue a single ruling letter. However, the taxpayer may request a separate ruling letter on any of the issues. Unless the Service determines that it is not feasible or not in the best interest of the Service to comply with such a request, it will issue separate ruling letters.

.04 When multiple issues are involved in a single factual situation and separate letters requesting rulings are submitted, a statement to this effect must be included in each ruling letter request. The Service in issuing each ruling will state that separate rulings have been issued or requests for rulings are pending.

.05 Each request for a ruling or a determination letter must contain a complete statement of all of the facts relating to the transaction. Such facts include: names, addresses, and taxpayer identification numbers of all interested parties; the location of the District Office that has or will have jurisdiction over the return; a full and precise statement of the business reasons for the transaction; and a carefully detailed description of the transaction. (The term "all interested parties" does not mean that a list is required of all shareholders of a widely-held corporation requesting a ruling relating to a reorganization, or a list of employees where a large number may be involved.) In addition, true copies of all contracts, wills, deeds, agreements, instruments, and other documents in the transaction must be submitted with the request. Original documents, such as contracts, wills, etc., should not be submitted because they become part of the Service's file and will not be returned. All material facts in documents must be included in the taxpayer's letter requesting a ruling or in supplemental letters, and not merely incorporated by reference, and must be accompanied by an analysis of their bearing on the issue or issues, specifying the provisions that apply. Material facts furnished to the Service by telephone or orally at a conference must be promptly confirmed by letter to the Service with a declaration in the form described in section 9.02. This confirmation must be furnished within 21 calendar days to be considered part of the request. An extension of the 21-day period will be granted only if justified in writing by the taxpayer and approved by the Chief or Assistant Chief of the Technical Branch to which the case is assigned. A request for extension should be submitted before the end of the 21-day period. If unusual circumstances close to the end of the 21-day period make a written request impractical, within the 21-day period the National Office should be told of the problem and that the written request for extension will be coming soon. Such a request must be sent promptly. The taxpayer or taxpayer's representative will be told promptly and later in writing of the approval or denial of the requested extension. There is no right of appeal to a denial of an extension request. Because the purpose of these procedures is to speed up the ruling process, the taxpayer is encouraged to submit the required relevant material promptly. Therefore, requests for extensions should be justified by compelling facts and circumstances. If the Service is not made aware, as provided above, of problems in meeting the 21-day period, or if the request is not sent promptly after the National Office is notified of problems in meeting the 21-day period, the Service will process the case on the assumption that no further submission will be received.

Specific guidelines for requesting rulings under certain code sections follow: Rev. Proc. 79-4, 1979-1 C.B. 483 (guidelines for submitting requests for rulings under sections 103 and 7478 on whether interest on certain governmental obligations can be excluded from the gross income of those who own them); Rev. Proc. 68-11, 1968-1 C.B. 761 (guidelines for a ruling request under section 117); Rev. Proc. 73-35, 1973-2 C.B. 490 (guidelines concerning a request for a ruling under section 302 or 311); Rev. Proc. 73-17, 1973-2 C.B. 465 (guidelines concerning a request for a ruling under section 332, 334(b)(1) or 334(b)(2)); Rev. Proc. 75-32, 1975-2 C.B. 555 (guidelines concerning a request for a ruling under section 337); Rev. Proc. 73-36, 1973-2 C.B. 496 (guidelines concerning a request for a ruling under section 331 or 346); Rev. Proc. 73-10, 1973-1 C.B. 760 (guidelines concerning a request for a ruling under section 351); Rev. Proc. 75-35, 1975-2 C.B. 561 (guidelines concerning a request for a ruling under section 355); Rev. Proc. 68-23, 1968-1 C.B. 821, Rev. Proc. 69-19, 1969-2 C.B. 301, Rev. Proc. 74-36, 1974-2 C.B. 491, Rev. Proc. 76-20, 1976-1 C.B. 560, Rev. Proc. 77-5, 1977-1 C.B. 536, and Rev. Proc. 77-17, 1977-1 C.B. 577 (guidelines concerning a request for a ruling under section 367). However, see section 7.367 of the Temporary Income Tax Regulations under the Tax Reform Act of 1976, which superseded the previously mentioned revenue procedures relating to section 367, to the extent of overlapping rules. Rev. Proc. 75-29, 1975-1 C.B. 754, Rev. Proc. 76-4, 1976-1 C.B. 543, Rev. Proc. 76-24, 1976-1 C.B. 563, Rev. Proc. 76-44, 1976-2 C.B. 668, and Rev. Proc. 77-4, 1977-1 C.B. 536 (guidelines for changes to closing agreements as a condition to issuing rulings under section 367); Rev. Proc. 78-33, 1978-2 C.B. 532 (guidelines concerning a request for a ruling under section 368(a)(1)(E)); Rev. Proc. 77-30, 1977-2 C.B. 539, and Rev. Proc. 77-37, 1977-2 C.B. 568 as amplified by Rev. Proc. 77-41, 1977-2 C.B. 574 (guidelines concerning requests for rulings handled by the Reorganization Branch of the Corporation Tax Division); Rev. Proc. 72-13, 1972-1 C.B. 735, Rev. Proc. 74-17, 1974-1 C.B. 438, and Rev. Proc. 75-16, 1975-1 C.B. 676 (guidelines on classification of limited partnerships); Rev. Proc. 79-1, 1979-1 C.B. 481 (guidelines on classification of organizations as liquidating trusts); Rev. Proc. 79-63, 1979-2 C.B. 578 (factors considered and information needed for granting extensions under section 1.9100-1 of the Income Tax Regulations). If the request concerns a corporate distribution, reorganization, or similar transaction, the corporate balance sheet and profit and loss statement closest to the date of the transaction should be submitted. (If the request relates to a prospective transaction, the most recent balance sheet and profit and loss statement should be submitted.)

.06 The request must contain a statement of whether, to the best of the knowledge of the taxpayer and the taxpayer's representative(s), if any, the identical issue is in a return of the taxpayer (or of a related taxpayer within the meaning of section 267 of the Code, or a member of an affiliated group of which the taxpayer is also a member within the meaning of section 1504) and, if so, whether the issue (1) is being examined by a District Director, (2) has been examined and the statutory period of limitation on assessment or refund of tax has not expired or a closing agreement covering the issue or liability has not been entered into by a District Director, (3) is being considered by an Appeals office in connection with the taxpayer's return for an earlier period, or that issue has been considered by an Appeals office and the statutory period of limitation on assessment or refund of tax has not expired or a closing agreement covering the issue or liability has not been entered into by an Appeals office, or (4) is pending in litigation in a case involving the taxpayer or a related taxpayer. The request must contain a statement whether, to the best of the knowledge of the taxpayer and the taxpayer's representative(s), the identical or similar issue has been ruled on by the Service to the taxpayer or to the taxpayer's predecessor and, if so, when and with what results. If after the request is filed but before a ruling is issued, the taxpayer knows that an examination of the issue by a District Director has been started, the taxpayer must notify the National Office of such action. If a return is filed before a ruling is received from the National Office concerning the return, a copy of the request must be attached to the return. This alerts the District Office and avoids premature District action on the issue.

If the request deals with only one step of a larger integrated transaction, the facts, circumstances, etc., relating to the entire transaction must be submitted.

.07 As an alternative procedure for the issuing of rulings on prospective transactions, the taxpayer may submit a summary of the facts considered to be controlling the issue, in addition to the complete statement required for ruling requests by section 9.05. If the National Office agrees with the summary, the National Office will use it as the basis for the ruling. To use this procedure, the taxpayer should submit the following with the request for a ruling:

1 A complete statement of facts about the transaction, together with related documents, as required by section 9.05; and

2 A summary statement of the facts believed to be controlling in reaching the requested conclusion. When the taxpayer's statement of controlling facts is accepted, the Service will base its ruling on these facts and only this statement will ordinarily be incorporated in the ruling letter. It is emphasized, however, that:

(a) The taxpayer may elect this procedure for a "two-part" ruling request. It is not to be considered a required substitute for the regular procedures provided by this revenue procedure;

(b) The taxpayer's rights and responsibilities are the same under the "two-part" ruling request procedure as those provided in this revenue procedure;

(c) The Service reserves the right to rule on the basis of a more complete statement of facts it considers controlling and to seek more information in developing facts and restating them; and

(d) The "two-part" ruling request procedure will not apply if it is inconsistent with other procedures, such as those dealing with: requests for permission to change accounting methods or periods; applications for recognition of exempt status under section 521 of the Code; or rulings on employment tax status.

.08 If the taxpayer asserts a particular determination, an explanation of the grounds for the assertion must be furnished, together with a statement of relevant authorities in support of the taxpayer's views. Even though the taxpayer is urging no particular determination of a proposed or prospective transaction, the taxpayer's views on the tax results of the proposed action and a statement of relevant authorities to support those views must be furnished. In addition, the taxpayer is encouraged to inform the Service of, and discuss the implications of, any legislation, or tax treaties, court decisions, regulations, revenue rulings or revenue procedures that the taxpayer determines to be contrary to the position advanced. If the taxpayer determines that there are no contrary authorities, a statement to this effect would be helpful in the ruling request. Identification and discussion of contrary authorities will generally enable Service personnel to arrive more quickly at a full understanding of the issue and the relevant authorities. There is a further advantage to the taxpayer. When Service personnel receive the request, they will have before them the taxpayer's thinking on the effect and applicability of contrary authorities. Such information should, therefore, make research easier and lead to earlier action by the Service. Conversely, failure to disclose and distinguish significant contrary authorities may result in requests for additional information memoranda which will delay action on the ruling request.

.09 To assist the National Office in making the deletions, required by section 6110(c) of the Code, from the text of rulings and determination letters, to be made open to public inspection under section 6110(a), a deletions statement must accompany requests. The statement must either state that no information other than names, addresses, and identifying numbers need be deleted, or if more information is proposed to be deleted, the statement must indicate the deletions proposed by the person requesting the ruling or determination letter. If the latter alternative is chosen, the statement must be made in a separate document, and it must be accompanied by a copy of the request for a ruling or determination letter and supporting documents, on which must be shown by the use of brackets, the material that the person making the request believes should be deleted pursuant to section 6110(c). The statement of proposed deletions must indicate the statutory basis, under section 6110(c), for each proposed deletion. The statement of proposed deletions must not appear or be referred to anywhere in the request for a ruling or determination letter. If the person making the request decides to ask for additional deletions before the ruling or determination letter is issued, additional statements may be submitted. The procedures in this paragraph also apply to additional information that is submitted after the initial request.

.10 A request by or for a taxpayer must be signed by the taxpayer or the taxpayer's authorized representative. If the request is signed by a representative, or if the representative is to appear before the Service in connection with the request, the representative must be:

1 an attorney who is a member in good standing of the bar of the highest court of any state, possession, territory, commonwealth, or the District of Columbia, and who files with the Service a written declaration that he or she is currently qualified as an attorney and is authorized to represent the taxpayer;

2 a certified public accountant who is qualified to practice in any state, possession, territory, commonwealth, or the District of Columbia, and who files with the Service a written declaration that he or she is currently qualified as a certified public accountant and is authorized to represent the taxpayer; or

3 a person, other than an attorney or certified public accountant who is currently enrolled to practice before the Service, and who files with the Service a written declaration that he or she is currently enrolled (including in the declaration either the enrollment number or the expiration date of the enrollment card) and is authorized to represent the taxpayer. (See Treasury Department Circular No. 230 (31 CFR Part 10), revised, 1966-2 C.B. 1171, amended 1967-1 C.B. 433, and 1970-2 C.B. 644, for the rules on who may practice before the Service.) These requirements do not apply to an individual representing his or her full-time employer, or to a bona fide officer, administrator, administratrix, trustee, etc., representing a corporation, trust, estate, association, or organized group. An unenrolled preparer of a return (other than an attorney or certified public accountant referred to in (1) and (2) above) who is not a full-time employee or a bona fide officer, administrator, administratrix, trustee, etc., may not represent a taxpayer in connection with a ruling or a determination letter. Any authorized representative, whether or not enrolled to practice, must also comply with the conference and practice requirements of the Statement of Procedural Rules (26 CFR 601). Form 2848, Power of Attorney, and Form 2848-D, Authorization and Declaration, may be used with regard to rulings, closing agreements, and determination letters requested under this revenue procedure.

.11 If a taxpayer has more than one representative, it is sufficient to send a copy of the ruling to any one of them. Copies of rulings will be sent to no more than two representatives, provided that they are located at different mailing addresses. If a taxpayer does not designate which representative is to receive a copy of the ruling, a copy of the ruling will be sent to the first representative named on the latest power of attorney. If the original of the ruling is to be sent to a representative, the power of attorney should contain a statement to that effect and designate the mailing address of the representative.

.12 A request for a ruling letter by the National Office should be sent to the Internal Revenue Service, Assistant Commissioner (Technical), Attention T:FP:T, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224. A request for a determination letter should be sent to the District Director of Internal Revenue whose office has or will have examination jurisdiction over the taxpayer's return.

.13 If a request for a ruling or determination letter does not comply with all the provisions of this revenue procedure, the request will be acknowledged, and the requirements that have not been met will be pointed out. If a request for a ruling lacks essential information, the taxpayer will be told that if the information is not received within 30 days, the request will be closed. If the information is received after the request is closed, it will be reopened and treated as a new request as of the date the essential information is received. A request for a ruling letter sent to the District Director that does not comply with the provisions of this revenue procedure will be returned by the District Director for corrections before it is sent directly to the National Office.

.14 A taxpayer who wants to have a conference on the issue or issues involved should indicate this in writing when, or soon after, filing the request.

.15 The Service processes requests for ruling and determination letters in regular order and as expeditiously as possible. Consideration of a request for processing ahead of its regular order, or by a specified time, delays the processing of other matters. Requests for processing ahead of the regular order must be made in writing, preferably in a separate letter sent with, or soon after, the request. If the request is not made in a separate letter, then the letter in which the request is made should say, at the top of the first page: "Expeditious Handling Is Requested. See page   of this letter." The request should give a compelling need for such treatment. The Service cannot give assurance that any letter will be processed by the time requested. For example, the scheduling of a closing date for a transaction or a meeting of the board of directors or shareholders of a corporation, without regard for the time it may take to obtain a ruling or determination letter, will not be considered sufficient reason for handling a request ahead of its regular order. Nor will the possible effect of fluctuation in the market price of stocks on a transaction be considered sufficient reason for handling a request out of order. Requests by telegram will be treated in the same manner as requests by letter. Ruling and determination letters ordinarily are not issued by telegram. A request for expeditious handling will not cause the Communications Branch to route the case to the Ruling Branch ahead of normal processing; and a request for expeditious handling will not be considered until the underlying ruling request has been found to satisfy the section 6110 requirements.

.16 The Director, Individual Tax Division, has primary responsibility for providing basic principles for uniform interpretation and application of the federal tax laws in those areas involving: income taxes of noncorporate taxpayers (including individuals, partnerships, estates, and trusts); political organizations under section 527 (except subsection (f)); employment taxes and taxes on self-employment income; estate, gift, generation-skipping transfer, and certain excise taxes; and procedure and administration provisions of the Internal Revenue Code, except those that apply specifically to employee plans, exempt organizations, and actuarial determinations.

.17 The Director, Corporation Tax Division, has primary responsibility for providing basic principles of and rules for uniform interpretation and application of the federal tax laws in those areas involving: income taxes and earnings and profits of corporate taxpayers; changes in methods and periods of accounting, depreciation, depletion, valuation and other engineering issues; the taxable status of exchanges and distributions in connection with corporate organizations, reorganizations, and liquidations; and the exemption of farmers' cooperatives (under section 521), shipowners' protection and indemnity associations (under section 526), and certain homeowners associations (under section 528).

.18 A taxpayer may obtain information regarding the status of a request by calling the person whose name and telephone number is shown on the acknowledgement of receipt of the request.

.19 If after receiving the notice under section 6110(f)(1) of the Code of intention to disclose the ruling or determination letter (including a copy of the version proposed to be open to public inspection and notations of third-party communications under section 6110(d)), the person requesting the ruling or determination letter wants to protest the disclosure of certain information in the ruling or determination letter, that person must within 20 days send a written statement to the Internal Revenue Service, Chief, Rulings Disclosure Section, Attention T:FP:T:D, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224, identifying those deletions that the Service has not made and that the person requesting the ruling or determination letter believes should have been made. That person must also submit a copy of the version of the ruling or determination letter proposed to be open to public inspection on which the person indicates, by use of brackets, the deletions proposed by the taxpayer that have not been made by the National Office. Generally, the Service will not consider the deletion under this subparagraph of any material that the taxpayer did not propose to be deleted before the ruling or determination letter was issued. Within 20 days after it receives the response to the notice under section 6110(f)(1), the National Office will mail to that person its final administrative conclusion regarding the deletions to be made. The taxpayer does not have the right to a conference to resolve any disagreements concerning material to be deleted from the text of the ruling. However, these matters may be taken up at any conference that is otherwise scheduled regarding the request.

.20 After receiving the notice under section 6110(f)(1) of the Code of intention to disclose (but no later than 60 days after the notice is mailed), the person requesting a ruling or determination letter may send a request for delay of public inspection under either section 6110(g)(3) or section 6110(g)(3) and (4). The request for delay must be sent to the Internal Revenue Service, Chief, Rulings Disclosure Section, Attention T:FP:T:D, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224. A request for delay must contain the date on which it is expected that the underlying transaction will be completed. The request for delay under section 6110(g)(4) must contain a statement from which the Commissioner may determine that there are good reasons for the delay.

.21 A taxpayer who receives a ruling or determination letter before filing a return about any transaction that has been consummated and that is relevant to the return being filed should attach a copy of the ruling or determination letter to the return when it is filed.

.22 Protests to adverse rulings under section 367 will be processed as follows:

Under Rev. Proc. 77-5, 1977-1 C.B. 536, a taxpayer may protest an adverse, or terms and conditions, ruling letter issued on or after January 31, 1977, under section 367(a)(1) of the Code. This includes a ruling on an exchange described in section 367(b) that began before January 1, 1978, or section 1042 (e) of the Tax Reform Act of 1976 (Pub. L. 94-455, 1976-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1, 115). The protest may not be made later than the close of the 45th day after the date of the ruling letter. A protest is considered made on the date of the postmark of a letter of protest sent to the Assistant Commissioner (Technical), or the date that the letter is hand delivered to the Service. The letter must include: (1) a copy of the ruling letter; (2) the reasons for the protest including, if applicable, (a) the grounds for asserting that none of the principal purposes for the exchange is the avoidance of federal income tax, (b) the grounds for asserting that the terms and conditions in the ruling letter pursuant to which an exchange to which section 367 applies will be considered not to be in pursuance of tax avoidance are not reasonable, and (c) the arguments supporting a protest of the validity of a ruling position published by the Service, such as a position in the guidelines announced in Rev. Proc. 68-23, 1968-1 C.B. 821 (factual material not previously submitted and considered by the Service should not be included in the protest); (3) a statement of whether a conference is desired; and (4) names of persons (including authorized representatives) expected to attend the conference, if a conference is granted. The Assistant Commissioner (Technical) will establish an ad hoc advisory board to consider each protest, whether or not a conference is requested. The taxpayer will be granted one conference upon request. Whether or not such a request is made the board may ask for one or more conferences or for written submissions. The taxpayer will be notified of the time, date, and place of the conference, and of the names of the members of the board. The board will consider all materials submitted in writing by the taxpayer and oral arguments presented at the conference. The board will make its recommendation to the Assistant Commissioner (Technical) who will make a decision in the matter. Any oral arguments made at a conference by the taxpayer, which have not previously been submitted to the Service in writing, may, if desired, be submitted to the Service in writing if postmarked no later than the end of the 7th day after the day of the conference. The taxpayer will be informed of the decision of the Assistant Commissioner by certified or registered mail.

.23 For appeal procedures with regard to adverse determination letters under section 521 of of the Code and revocation or modification of exemption rulings and determination letters under section 521, see Rev. Proc. 80-25.

Sec. 10. Handling of Ruling Requests

.01 Within 15 work days after a ruling request is received in the branch, Service personnel will contact the taxpayer to discuss informally the procedural and substantive issues in the ruling request.

.02 The following subject matters are included in the 15-day procedure:

1 Individual Income Tax Branch

(a) Partnerships and trusts

(b) Code section 103 (issues under its jurisdiction)

(c) Real estate investment trusts

(d) Stock options

(e) Charitable remainder trusts

(f) Pooled income funds

2 All matters within the jurisdiction of the Corporation Tax Branch, except cases

(a) involving a request for change in accounting methods or periods,

(b) relating to the last-in, first-out method of computing inventory,

(c) concerning insurance issues on contracts with reserves based on segregated asset accounts,

(d) concerning insurance issues requiring actuarial computations.

3 All matters within the jurisdiction of the Wage, Excise and Administrative Provisions Branch, except ruling requests from individuals for employment status submitted on Forms SS-8.

4 All matters within the jurisdiction of the Engineering and Valuation Branch (except cases involving a request for a change in accounting methods), Reorganization Branch, and Estate and Gift Tax Branch.

.03 Procedures to be followed regarding ruling requests are:

1 Within 15 work days after a ruling request has been received in the branch having jurisdiction, a representative of the branch will contact the taxpayer to discuss the procedural and substantive issues in the ruling requests covered by this procedure. As to each issue coming within the jurisdiction of the branch, the branch representative will tell the taxpayer:

(a) whether the branch representative will recommend the Service rule as the taxpayer requested, rule adversely on the matter, or not rule;

(b) whether the taxpayer should submit additional information or representations to enable the Service to rule on the matter; or

(c) whether because of the nature of the transaction, or the issue presented, a tentative conclusion on the issue cannot be reached.

2 When the rulings requested involve matters within the jurisdiction of more than one branch or more than one office in the same branch, a representative of the branch that received the original ruling request will tell the taxpayer within the initial 15 work day contract period: (1) that the rulings requested involving matters within the jurisdiction of another branch or another office in the same branch have been referred to the other branch or office for consideration; and (2) that a representative of the other branch or office will contact the taxpayer within 15 work days after receiving the referral to informally discuss the procedural and substantive issues if covered by this procedure.

3 If something less than a fully favorable ruling is indicated, the branch representative will tell the taxpayer if minor modifications of the transaction or adherence to certain published positions will warrant the issuing of a favorable ruling. In addition, the branch representative may tell the taxpayer what representations must be furnished in a document to comply with the requirements of the Service. See Rev. Proc. 75-21, 1975-1 C.B. 715, and Rev. Proc. 75-28, 1975-1 C.B. 752. However, the branch representative will not suggest precise changes that would materially alter the form of the proposed transaction. If, at the conclusion of the discussion, the branch representative determines that a meeting in the National Office would better serve the purpose of developing or exchanging information, a meeting will be offered and an early meeting date arranged. This meeting will not be the taxpayer's conference of right, as described in this revenue procedure.

4 The Service will not be bound by the informal opinion expressed by the branch representative or any other authorized Service representative under this procedure, and such an opinion cannot be relied upon as a basis for granting retroactive relief under the provisions of section 7805(b) of the Code.

5 The ruling request will then be processed under present procedures.

SEC. 11. CONFERENCES IN THE NATIONAL OFFICE

.01 A taxpayer may request a conference only in connection with a ruling request. Normally, a conference is scheduled only when the National Office considers it to be helpful in deciding the case or when an adverse decision is indicated. If conferences are being arranged for more than one request for a ruling involving the same taxpayer, they will be scheduled so as to cause the least inconvenience to the taxpayer. If a conference has been requested, the taxpayer will be notified by telephone, if possible, of the time and place of the conference. The conference must be held within 21 calendar days after such contact has been made. Procedures for requesting an extension of the 21-day period and notifying the taxpayer or the taxpayer's representative of the Service's decision are the same as those stated in section 9.05.

.02 A taxpayer is entitled, as a matter of right, to only one conference in the National Office unless one of the circumstances discussed in section 11.06 develops. This conference normally will be held at the branch level of the appropriate division in the office of the Assistant Commissioner (Technical) and will be attended by a person who, at the time of the conference, has authority to sign the ruling letter for the branch chief in the case being discussed. If more than one subject is to be discussed at the conference, the discussion will constitute a conference on each subject. In order to promote a free and open discussion of the issues, the conference usually will be held after the branch has had an opportunity to study the case. However, at the request of the taxpayer or representative, the conference of right may be held at an earlier stage in the consideration of the case than the Service ordinarily would designate. No taxpayer has a "right" to appeal the action of a branch to a division director or to any other official of the Service, nor is a taxpayer entitled, as a matter of right, to a separate conference in the Chief Counsel's office on a request for a ruling.

.03 In employment tax matters, only the party entitled to the ruling is entitled to a conference.

.04 Since conference procedures are informal, no tape, stenographic, or other verbatim recording of a conference will be made.

.05 The senior Service representative present at the conference insures that the taxpayer has full opportunity to present views on all of the issues that are in question. The Service representative explains the Service's tentative decision on the substantive issues and the reasons for that decision. If the taxpayer advances prospective application under section 7805(b) of the Code, the Service representative will discuss the tentative recommendation concerning the request for relief and the reasons for the tentative recommendation. No commitment will be made as to the conclusion that the Service will finally adopt.

.06 An invitation to an additional conference will be extended if after the conference of right an adverse holding is proposed but on a new issue or on the same issue but on different grounds from those discussed at the first conference. There is no right to another conference when a proposed holding is reversed at a higher level with a result less favorable to the taxpayer if the grounds or arguments on which the reversal is based were discussed at the conference of right. The provisions of this revenue procedure limiting the number of conferences a taxpayer is entitled to will not prevent a taxpayer from attending further conferences when, in the opinion of National Office personnel, such conferences are necessary. All additional conferences of the type discussed in this paragraph are held only at the invitation of the Service.

.07 It is the responsibility of the taxpayer to furnish in writing to the National Office any additional data, lines of reasoning, precedents, etc., that are proposed by the taxpayer and discussed at the conference but that were not previously or adequately presented in writing. The taxpayer must furnish the additional information within 21 calendar days. If the additional information is not received within that time, a ruling will be issued on the basis of the information on hand or, if appropriate, no ruling will be issued. Procedures for requesting an extension of the 21-day period and notifying the taxpayer or the taxpayer's representative of the Service's decision are the same as those stated in section 9.05.

SEC. 12. REFERRAL OF MATTERS TO THE NATIONAL OFFICE

.01 Requests for determination letters received by District Directors that, under the provisions of this revenue procedure, may not be acted upon by a district office, will be forwarded to the National Office for reply. The district office will let the taxpayer know that this action has been taken. District Directors also refer to the National Office any request for a determination letter that in their judgment should have the attention of the National Office.

.02 If the request involves an issue on which the Service will not issue a ruling or a determination letter, the request will not be forwarded to the National Office. The district office will let the taxpayer know that the Service will not issue a ruling or a determination letter on the issue. See section 8.01 of this revenue procedure.

SEC. 13. REFERRAL OF MATTERS TO DISTRICT OFFICES

Requests for rulings received by the National Office that, under section 5 of this revenue procedure, may not be acted upon by the National Office will be forwarded to the district office that has examination jurisdiction over the taxpayer's return. The taxpayer will be notified of this action. If the request is on an issue or in an area of the type discussed in section 8.01 and it is decided not to issue a ruling, the National Office will let the taxpayer know and the request will then be forwarded to the appropriate district office for association with the related return.

SEC. 14. REVIEW OF DETERMINATION LETTERS

Determination letters issued under sections 7.01, 7.02, and 7.03 are not reviewed by the National Office before they are issued. If a taxpayer believes that a determination letter of this type is in error, the taxpayer may ask the District Director to reconsider the matter. The taxpayer may also ask the District Director to request technical advice from the National Office. In such an event the procedure in Rev. Proc. 80-21 must be followed.

SEC. 15. WITHDRAWAL OF REQUESTS

A request for a ruling or determination letter may be withdrawn at any time before the signing of the letter of reply. If a request for a ruling is withdrawn, the National Office may give its views on the subject matter of the request to the District Director whose office will have examination jurisdiction over the taxpayer's return for consideration in connection with any later examination of the taxpayer's return. Even though a request is withdrawn, all correspondence and exhibits will be kept by the Service and will not be returned to the taxpayer. In appropriate cases, the Service may publish its findings in a revenue ruling or revenue procedure.

SEC. 16. ORAL ADVICE TO TAXPAYERS

.01 The Service does not issue rulings or determination letters on oral requests. National Office officials and employees ordinarily do not discuss a substantive tax issue with a taxpayer before a written request for a ruling is received, since oral opinions or advice are not binding on the Service. This does not prevent a taxpayer from asking whether the Service will rule on a particular issue. In such cases, however, the name of the taxpayer and identifying number must be disclosed. The Service also will discuss questions relating to procedural matters about submitting a request for a ruling, including the application of the provisions of section 9 to a particular case.

.02 A taxpayer may seek oral technical assistance from a Taxpayer Service Representative in a district office or service center when preparing a return or report, under other established procedures. Oral advice is advisory only and the Service is not bound to recognize it in the examination of the taxpayer's return.

.01 A taxpayer may not rely on a ruling issued to another taxpayer. A ruling, except to the extent incorporated in a closing agreement, may be revoked or modified at any time under appropriate circumstances. See section 4.08 for the effect of a closing agreement. If a ruling is revoked or modified, the revocation or modification applies to all years open under the statutes, unless the Commissioner or the Commissioner's delegate exercises the discretionary authority under section 7805(b) of the Code to limit the retroactive effect of the revocation or modification. The manner in which this authority generally is exercised is given later in this section. For information on rulings relating to the sale or lease of articles subject to the manufacturer's excise tax and the retailer's excise tax, see section 17.08.

.02 When determining a taxpayer's liability, the District Director must ascertain whether (1) any ruling previously issued to the taxpayer has been properly applied, (2) the representations upon which the ruling was based reflected an accurate statement of the material facts, and (3) the transaction actually was carried out substantially as proposed. If, in the course of determining the tax liability, the District Director finds that a ruling should be modified or revoked, the findings and recommendations of the District Director will be forwarded to the National Office for consideration before further action. Such a referral to the National Office will be treated as a request for technical advice and the procedures of Rev. Proc. 80-21 will be followed. Otherwise the ruling is to be applied by the district office in its determination of the taxpayer's liability.

.03 Appropriate coordination with the National Office will be undertaken if any field official having jurisdiction over a return or other matter proposes to reach a conclusion contrary to a ruling previously issued to the taxpayer.

.04 A ruling found to be in error or not in accord with the current views of the Service may be modified or revoked. Modification or revocation of a ruling may be made by (1) a notice to the taxpayer to whom the ruling was issued, (2) an enactment of legislation or ratification of a tax treaty, (3) a decision of the United States Supreme Court, (4) the issuing of temporary or final regulations, or (5) the issuing of a revenue ruling, a revenue procedure, or other statement published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin. Consistent with these provisions, if a ruling relates to a continuing action or a series of actions, the ruling will ordinarily be applied until any one of the actions described above has taken place, or until specifically withdrawn.

.05 Except in rare or unusual circumstances, the revocation or modification of a ruling will not be applied retroactively to the taxpayer for whom the ruling was issued or to a taxpayer whose tax liability was directly involved in the ruling if (1) there has been no misstatement or omission of material facts, (2) the facts developed later are not materially different from the facts on which the ruling was based, (3) there has been no change in the applicable law, (4) the ruling was originally issued with respect to a prospective or proposed transaction, and (5) the taxpayer directly involved in the ruling acted in good faith in reliance upon the ruling and the retroactive revocation would be to the taxpayer's detriment. For example, the tax liability of each shareholder is directly involved in a ruling on the reorganization of a corporation. However, the tax liability of members of an industry is not directly involved in a ruling issued to one of the members, and the holding in a revocation or modification of a ruling to one member of an industry may be retroactively applied to other members of that industry. By the same reasoning, a tax practitioner may not obtain the nonretroactive application to one client of a modification or revocation of a ruling previously issued to another client. If a ruling is revoked by letter with retroactive effect, the letter will, except in fraud cases, state the grounds upon which the revocation is being made and the reasons why the revocation is being applied retroactively.

.06 A ruling issued on a particular transaction represents a holding of the Service on that transaction only. However, the application of that ruling to the transaction will not be affected by the later issuing of regulations (either temporary or final), if the conditions specified in section 17.05 are met. If the ruling is later found to be in error or no longer in accord with the position of the Service, it will not give the taxpayer protection for a like transaction in the same or later year.

.07 However, if a ruling is issued covering a continuing action or a series of actions and it is determined that the ruling was in error, or no longer in accord with the position of the Service, the Assistant Commissioner (Technical) ordinarily will limit the retroactivity of the revocation or modification to a date that is not earlier than that on which the ruling is modified or revoked. To illustrate, if a taxpayer receives a ruling that certain payments are excludable from gross income for federal income tax purposes and it is later determined that the ruling is in error or no longer in accord with the position of the Service, the Assistant Commissioner (Technical) ordinarily will restrict the retroactive application of the revocation or modification of the ruling. If a taxpayer rendered service or provided a facility that is subject to the excise tax on services or facilities, and in reliance on a ruling issued to the same taxpayer did not pass the tax on to the user of the service or the facility, the Assistant Commissioner (Technical) ordinarily will restrict the retroactive application of the revocation or modification of the ruling. If an employer incurred liability under the Federal Insurance Contributions Act, but in reliance on a ruling made to the same employer, neither collected the employee tax nor paid the employee and employer taxes under the Act, the Assistant Commissioner (Technical) ordinarily will restrict the retroactive application of the revocation or modification of the ruling for both the employer tax and the employee tax. In the last situation, however, the restriction of retroactive application ordinarily will be conditioned on the furnishing by the employer of wage data, as may be required by section 31.6011(a)-1 of the Employment Tax Regulations. Publication of a notice of proposed rulemaking will not affect the application of any ruling issued under the procedures stated in this revenue procedure.

.08 A ruling holding that the sale or lease of a particular article is subject to the manufacturer's excise tax or the retailer's excise tax may not retroactively revoke or modify an earlier ruling holding that the sale or lease of such an article was not taxable, if the taxpayer to whom the ruling was issued, in reliance upon the earlier ruling, parted with possession or ownership of the article without passing the tax on to the customer. Section 1108 (b), Revenue Act of 1926.

.09 For rulings involving completed transactions, other than those described in sections 17.07 and 17.08, taxpayers will not be given the protection against retroactive revocation provided in section 17.05, since they will not have entered into the transactions in reliance on the ruling.

SEC. 18. EFFECT OF DETERMINATION LETTERS

A determination letter issued by a District Director has the same effect as a ruling issued to a taxpayer under section 17 of this revenue procedure. However, if the District Director is of the opinion that a conclusion contrary to that expressed in the determination letter is indicated, the matter need not be referred to the National Office. A District Director may not limit the modification or revocation of a determination letter but may refer the matter to the National Office for the possible exercise by the Commissioner or the Commissioner's delegate of the authority to limit the modification or revocation.

SEC. 19. EFFECT OF INFORMATION LETTERS

An information letter issued by the National Office or by a District Director is advisory only and the provisions of section 17 do not apply.

SEC. 20. PROCEDURE FOR REQUESTING APPLICATION OF SECTION 7805(b) IN THE CASE OF RULINGS AND DETERMINATION LETTERS

.01 Pursuant to section 7805(b) of the Code, it is within the discretion of the Commissioner or the Commissioner's delegate to prescribe the extent, if any, to which any ruling (including determination letters) will be applied without retroactive effect.

A taxpayer to whom a ruling or determination letter has been issued may request that the Assistant Commissioner (Technical), the Commissioner's delegate, exercise the discretionary authority under section 7805 (b) of the Code to limit the retroactive effect of any subsequent revocation or modification of the ruling or determination letter.

.02 In the case of a ruling, a request to limit the retroactive effect of the revocation or modification of a ruling must be in the form of, and meet the requirements for, a ruling request generally. These requirements are set forth in section 9 of this revenue procedure. Specifically, the request must state that it is being made pursuant to section 7805(b), contain a statement of the relief sought and an explanation of the reasons and arguments in support of the relief requested, and also be accompanied by any documents bearing on the request. The explanation in support of the application of section 7805(b) should include a discussion of the five items enumerated in section 17.05 of this revenue procedure as they relate to the taxpayer's particular situation.

A request for the application of section 7805(b) of the Code may take the form of a separate request for ruling when, for example, a revenue ruling has the effect of modifying or revoking a ruling previously issued to the taxpayer or when the Service notifies the taxpayer of a change in position that will have the effect of revoking or modifying such a ruling. However, when such notice is given by the District Director during the course of an examination of the taxpayer's return, or during consideration by the Chief, Appeals Office, a request to limit the retroactive effect of the modification or revocation of a ruling must be made in the form of a request for technical advice. See section 12.03 of Rev. Proc. 80-21. When germane to a pending ruling request, a request for the application of section 7805(b) may be made as part of the request, either initially or at any time before the ruling is issued. When a ruling that concerns a continuing transaction is modified or revoked by, for example, a subsequent revenue ruling, a request to limit the retroactive effect of the modification or revocation of the ruling must be made before a return is examined that contains the transaction that is the subject of the request for ruling.

.03 When a request for the application of section 7805(b) of the Code is made in a separate ruling request, the taxpayer has the right to a conference in the National Office in accordance with the provisions of section 11 of this revenue procedure. If the request is made initially as part of a pending ruling request or is made before the conference of right is held on the substantive issues, the section 7805(b) issue will be discussed at the taxpayer's one conference of right. (See section 11.05 of this revenue procedure.) If the request for the application of 7805(b) is made as part of a pending ruling request after a conference has been held on the substantive issue, and the Service determines that there is justification for having delayed the request, then the taxpayer will have the right to one conference of right concerning the application of section 7805(b) with the conference limited to discussion of this issue.

.04 In the case of a determination letter that the District Director proposes to modify or revoke, a request to limit the modification or revocation of the determination letter must be made by requesting the District Director who issued the determination letter to seek technical advice from the National Office, since a District Director has not been delegated authority under section 7805(b) of the Code to limit the modification or revocation of a determination letter. See section 12.03 of Rev. Proc. 80-21. The taxpayer's request must state that it is being made pursuant to section 7805(b), contain a statement of the relief sought and an explanation of the reasons and arguments in support of the relief requested, and also be accompanied by any documents bearing on the request. The explanation in support of the application of section 7805(b) should include a discussion of the five items enumerated in section 17.05 of this revenue procedure as they relate to the taxpayer's particular situation.

.05 When technical advice is requested with respect to the application of section 7805(b) of the Code under the circumstances set forth in .04 above, the taxpayer has a right to a conference in the National Office to the same extent as does any taxpayer who is the subject of a technical advice request. See section 8 of Rev. Proc. 80-21.

Sec. 21. Effect on Other Documents

Rev. Proc. 79-45 is superseded.

26 CFR 601.105: Examination of returns and claims for refund, credit or abatement; determination of correct tax liability.

Rev. Proc. 80-21

Section 1. Purpose

The purpose of this revenue procedure is to supersede Rev. Proc. 79-46, 1979-2 C.B. 521, by providing revised procedures for furnishing technical advice to District Directors and Chiefs, Appeals Offices, by the Assistant Commissioner (Technical). It also tells taxpayers about their rights when a District Director or a Chief, Appeals Office, requests such advice.

Sec. 2. Scope

.01 The Assistant Commissioner (Technical) acts as the primary assistant to the Commissioner in providing principles and rules for uniformly interpreting and applying the federal tax laws under the jurisdiction of the Assistant Commissioner (Technical). The procedures for obtaining technical advice specifically applicable to federal firearms taxes under subtitle E of the Internal Revenue Code are under the jurisdiction of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. The procedures for obtaining technical advice specifically on employee plans and exempt organizations are under the jurisdiction of the Assistant Commissioner (Employee Plans and Exempt Organizations). The procedures that apply to technical advice for employee plans and exempt organizations are followed in obtaining technical advice on exemption of farmers' cooperatives from tax under section 521 of the Code, even though the Assistant Commissioner (Technical) has jurisdiction for issuing technical advice under this section. The Assistant Commissioner (Technical) also has jurisdiction for issuing technical advice under section 526, on shipowners' protection and indemnity associations; section 527(a), (b), (c), (d), (e), and (g), on political organizations; and section 528, on certain homeowners' associations, under this revenue procedure.

.02 In the Office of the Assistant Commissioner (Technical), the authority to issue technical advice has been largely redelegated to the Branch Chiefs in the Individual Tax Division and the Corporation Tax Division.

Sec. 3. Changes

.01 Section 5.05 has been clarified to encourage taxpayers to comment on contrary authority.

.02 Section 5.09 has been expanded to make it clear that the disclosure procedures in section 5.09 are applicable to information submitted by taxpayers after submission of the technical advice request to the National Office.

.03 A new section 5.11 has been added to cross reference Rev. Proc. 79-63, 1979-2 C.B. 578, to state that the procedures under Rev. Proc. 80-21 are applicable when an extension of time is requested under section 1.9100-1 of the regulations after the return is under examination or is being considered by an Appeals office. In addition, section 5.03 of Rev. Proc. 79-63 has been modified to exclude such requests from the instruction that requests for extension of time under section 1.9100-1 of the regulations must be addressed to the National Office.

.04 Section 6.03 has been expanded to tell taxpayers that National Office officials who are considering denials of technical advice requests from taxpayers may consult with National Office Technical officials.

.05 Section 8.01 has been clarified to point out that a conference must be held within 21 calendar days after the initial notification as to the time and place of conference and expanded to explain additional procedures for extending the 21-day period for holding a National Office conference.

.06 Section 8.06 has been modified to point out that procedures for extending the 21-day period for furnishing additional material are the same as those in section 8.01.

.07 Section 12 now provides the procedure for requesting application of 7805(b) of the Code to technical advice memoranda.

SEC. 4. DEFINITION AND NATURE OF TECHNICAL ADVICE

.01 For purposes of this revenue procedure, the word "taxpayer" includes all persons subject to any provision of the Internal Revenue Code and their representatives and issuers of section 103 obligations.

.02 Unless otherwise indicated, any reference to the National Office means only the Office of the Assistant Commissioner (Technical).

.03 Any reference to District Director or district office includes the office of the Director of International Operations, where appropriate. Any reference to Chief, Appeals Office, includes Associate Chief, Appeals Office.

.04 "Technical advice" means advice or guidance furnished by the National Office upon request of a district or an Appeals office in response to any technical or procedural question that develops during any stage of any proceeding on the interpretation and proper application of tax law, tax treaties, regulations, revenue rulings, or other precedents published by the National Office to a specific set of facts. Such proceedings include (1) the examination of a taxpayer's return, (2) consideration of a taxpayer's claim for refund or credit, or (3) any other matter involving a specific taxpayer under the jurisdiction of the Chief, Examination Division, such as the consideration of a taxpayer's application to enter into an agreement about the useful life, method, and rate of depreciation of business property provided by section 167(d) of the Code. These proceedings include an examination to determine whether obligations issued are described in section 103(a). They also include processing and considering nondocketed cases in an Appeals office. Technical advice is furnished as a way of helping Service personnel close cases and establish and maintain consistent holdings throughout the Internal Revenue Service. A District Director or an Appeals office may raise an issue in any tax period, even though technical advice may have been asked for and furnished for the same or a similar issue for another tax period. Technical advice does not include memoranda on matters of general technical application furnished to district or Appeals offices when the issues are not raised in connection with a proceeding involving a specific taxpayer.

.05 If a District Director, Chief, Appeals Office, or a taxpayer requests technical advice on a determination letter under section 521 of the Code, the procedures under section 601.201 (n) of the Statement of Procedural Rules must be followed.

.06 Only the National Office can revoke a ruling letter. Therefore, if a District Director or a Chief, Appeals Office, thinks that a ruling letter previously issued to a taxpayer should be modified or revoked, the procedures in section 5 of this revenue procedure must be followed.

.07 The provisions of this revenue procedure apply only to a case under the jurisdiction of a District Director or Chief, Appeals Office. Technical advice may be requested on issues considered in a prior Appeals disposition, not based on mutual concessions for the same tax period of the same taxpayer, if the Appeals office that had the case concurs in the request. A District Director may not request technical advice on an issue if an Appeals office is currently considering an identical issue of the same taxpayer (or of a related taxpayer within the meaning of section 267 of the Code or a member of an affiliated group of which the taxpayer is also a member within the meaning of section 1504). A case remains under the jurisdiction of the District Director even though an Appeals office has the identical issue under consideration in the case of another taxpayer (not related within the meaning of sections 267 and 1504, respectively) in an entirely different transaction. With respect to the same taxpayer or the same transaction, when the issue is under the jurisdiction of an Appeals office, and the applicability of more than one kind of tax is dependent upon the resolution of that issue, a District Director may not request technical advice on the applicability of any of the taxes involved.

SEC. 5. REQUESTING TECHNICAL ADVICE

.01 The district or Appeals office is responsible for determining whether to request technical advice on any issue being considered. However, while the case is under the jurisdiction of the District Director or the Chief, Appeals Office, a taxpayer may request that an issue be referred to the National Office for technical advice. The grounds for a request are that a lack of uniformity exists on the disposition of the issue or that the issue is unusual or complex enough to warrant consideration by the National Office. Although taxpayers are encouraged to make written requests setting forth the facts, law, and argument on the issue, and reasons for requesting National Office technical advice, they may make the request orally. If, after considering the taxpayer's request, the examining officer or Appeals Officer thinks that the circumstances do not warrant referral of the case to the National Office, the examining officer or Appeals Officer will tell the taxpayer. (See section 6 for taxpayer's appeal rights when an examining officer or an Appeals Officer declines to request technical advice.)

.02 When technical advice is going to be requested, whether or not on the request of the taxpayer, the taxpayer will be told about it, except as noted in section 5.10. If the examining officer or the Appeals Officer initiates the action, the Service will give the taxpayer a copy of the statement of the pertinent facts and the questions proposed for submission to the National Office. The request for advice should be worded to avoid possible misunderstanding in the National Office of the facts or the specific points at issue.

.03 If the Service initiates the request for technical advice, the taxpayer has 10 calendar days after receiving the statement of facts and specific questions to indicate in writing any disagreement about them. The taxpayer must justify in writing an extension of time beyond the 10 calendar days. The justification must be approved by the Chief, Examination Division, or the Chief, Appeals Office. Every effort should be made to reach agreement on the facts and the specific points at issue. If agreement cannot be reached, the taxpayer may send, within 10 calendar days after receipt of notice, a statement of the taxpayer's understanding of the specific points at issue. This statement will be forwarded to the National Office with the request for technical advice. The taxpayer must justify in writing an extension of time beyond the 10 calendar days. The justification must be approved by the Chief, Examination Division, or the Chief, Appeals Office.

.04 If the taxpayer initiates the action to request technical advice and the taxpayer's statement of the facts and points at issue is not wholly acceptable to the district or Appeals office, the Service will tell the taxpayer in writing what the areas of disagreement are. The taxpayer has 10 calendar days after receiving the written notice to reply to it. The taxpayer must justify in writing an extension of time beyond the 10 calendar days. The justification must be approved by the Chief, Examination Division or the Chief, Appeals Office. If agreement cannot be reached, both the statements of the taxpayer and the district or Appeals office will be forwarded to the National Office with the request for technical advice.

.05 If it has not already been done, the taxpayer may submit a statement explaining the taxpayer's position on the issues and citing precedents that the taxpayer believes will bear on the case. This statement will be forwarded to the National Office with the request for technical advice. If the taxpayer's statement is received after the request for technical advice has been forwarded to the National Office, it will be forwarded there to be associated with the request for technical advice. The taxpayer is encouraged to comment on any legislation, tax treaties, regulations, revenue rulings, revenue procedures, or court decisions contrary to the taxpayer's position.

.06 At the time the taxpayer is told that the matter is being referred to the National Office, the taxpayer will also be told about the right to a conference in the National Office if an adverse decision is indicated and will be asked to say whether such a conference is desired.

.07 In connection with requests for technical advice, the taxpayer also has the same 10 days as in sections 5.03 and 5.04 to submit the statement described in section 5.09 of proposed deletions under section 6110(c) of the Code. If the taxpayer does not submit it, the District Director or the Chief, Appeals Office, will tell the taxpayer that such a statement is required. If the District Director or the Chief, Appeals Office, does not receive the statement within 10 days after such notification, the District Director or the Chief, Appeals Office, may decline to submit the request for technical advice. If the District Director or the Chief, Appeals Office, decides to request technical advice in a case in which the taxpayer has not submitted the statement of proposed deletions, the National Office will make those deletions that the Commissioner determines are required by section 6110(c).

.08 The requirements for submitting statements and other material for proposed deletions in technical advice memoranda before public inspection is allowed do not apply to requests made by a District Director before November 1, 1976, or to requests for any document to which section 6104 of the Code applies.

.09 To help the National Office make the deletions required by section 6110(c) of the Code in technical advice memoranda to be made open to public inspection under section 6110(a), a deletions statement must accompany requests. The statement must either state that no information other than names, addresses, and identifying numbers need be deleted, or if more information is proposed to be deleted, the statement must indicate the deletions proposed by the taxpayer. If the latter alternative is chosen, the statement must be made in a separate document, and it must be accompanied by a copy of all statements of facts and supporting documents that are submitted to the National Office under sections 5.03 and 5.04. The material that the taxpayer wants deleted must be shown in brackets. The statement of proposed deletions must show the statutory basis, under section 6110(c), for each proposed deletion. The statement of proposed deletions must not appear or be referred to anywhere in the request for technical advice. If the taxpayer decides to request additional deletions under section 6110(c) before the National Office replies to the request for technical advice, the taxpayer may submit additional statements. The procedures in this paragraph also apply to additional information submitted during consideration of the technical advice request.

.10 The provisions of this section (about referring issues upon the taxpayer's request, telling the taxpayer about the referral of issues, submitting proposed deletions, and granting conferences in the National Office) do not apply to technical advice memoranda, described in section 6110(g)(5)(A) of the Code, on cases involving criminal or civil fraud investigations and jeopardy or termination assessments. However, in these cases the taxpayer may provide the statement of proposed deletions to the National Office after all proceedings in the investigations or assessments are complete but before the Commissioner mails the notice, under section 6110(f)(1), of intention to disclose the technical advice memorandum.

.11 See Rev. Proc. 79-63, 1979-2 C.B. 578, which concerns applications for extension of the time for making an election or application for relief pursuant to section 1.9100-1 of the regulations. If a taxpayer requests an extension of time under section 1.9100-1 during an examination or when being considered by an Appeals office, the procedures of Rev. Proc. 80-21 are applicable.

.12 Form 4463, Request for Technical Advice, should be used for transmitting requests for technical advice to the National Office.

SEC. 6. APPEAL BY TAXPAYERS OF DISTRICT OR APPEALS OFFICE DETERMINATION NOT TO SEEK TECHNICAL ADVICE

.01 If the examining officer or Appeals Officer thinks that a taxpayer's request for referral of an issue to the National Office for technical advice does not warrant referral, the examining officer or Appeals Officer will tell the taxpayer.

.02 The taxpayer may appeal the decision of the examining officer or the Appeals Officer not to request technical advice by submitting to that official, within 10 calendar days after being told of the decision, a statement of the facts, law, and arguments on the issue, and the reasons why the taxpayer believes the matter should be referred to the National Office for technical advice. The taxpayer must justify in writing a request for an extension of time beyond the 10 calendar days. The justification must be approved by the Chief, Examination Division, or the Chief, Appeals Office.

.03 The examining officer or the Appeals Officer submits the taxpayer's statement through channels to the Chief, Examination Division, or the Chief, Appeals Office, along with the examining officer's or the Appeals Officer's statement of why the issue should not be referred to the National Office. The Chief determines, on the basis of the statement, whether technical advice will be requested. If the Chief determines that technical advice is not warranted and proposes to deny the request, the taxpayer is told in writing about the determination. In the letter to the taxpayer, the Chief states the reasons for the proposed denial (except in unusual situations when doing so would be prejudicial to the best interest of the Government). The taxpayer has 10 calendar days after receiving the letter to notify the Chief of agreement or disagreement with the proposed denial. The taxpayer may not appeal the decision of the Chief, Examination Division, or the Chief, Appeals Office, not to request technical advice from the National Office. However, if the taxpayer does not agree with the proposed denial, all data on the issue for which technical advice has been sought, including the taxpayer's written request and statements, will be submitted to the Director, Examination Division, or the Director, Appeals Division (Office of the Assistant Commissioner (Compliance)), for review. If the appropriate director thinks the circumstances warrant it, he or she may consult the Assistant Commissioner (Technical) or his or her representatives. After this review the district office or the Appeals office is notified whether the proposed denial is approved or disapproved.

.04 While the matter is being reviewed, the district office or the Appeals office suspends action on the issue (except when the delay would prejudice the Government's interests) until it is notified that the proposed denial is approved or disapproved. This notification is made within 30 calendar days after receipt of the data. The review is solely on the basis of the written record and no conference is held on the matter.

SEC. 7. WITHDRAWAL OF REQUESTS

.01 The District Director or Chief, Appeals Office, may withdraw a request for technical advice at any time before the responding transmittal memorandum is signed. The District Director or Chief, Appeals Office, must notify the taxpayer in writing of intent to withdraw the request for technical advice except (1) when the period of limitation on assessment is about to expire and the taxpayer has declined to sign a consent to extend the period, or (2) when such notification would be prejudicial to the best interests of the government. If the taxpayer does not agree that the request for technical advice should be withdrawn, the procedures in section 6 of this revenue procedure must be followed.

.02 When a request for technical advice is withdrawn, the National Office may send its views to the District Director or the Chief, Appeals Office, when acknowledging the withdrawal request. In appropriate cases, the subject matter may be published as a revenue ruling or revenue procedure.

SEC. 8. CONFERENCE IN THE NATIONAL OFFICE

.01 If after an analysis of the technical advice request it appears that advice adverse to the taxpayer will be given, and if a conference has been requested, the taxpayer will be told, by telephone if possible, the time and place of the conference. The conference must be held within 21 calendar days after such contact has been made. If conferences are being arranged for more than one request for technical advice for the same taxpayer, they will be scheduled to cause the least inconvenience to the taxpayer. An extension of the 21-day period will be granted only if the taxpayer justifies it in writing and the Chief or Assistant Chief of the technical branch to which the case is assigned approves it. Because the purpose of these procedures is to facilitate the technical advice process by encouraging prompt submission of the required relevant material, requests for extensions should be justified by compelling facts and circumstances. The request for extension should be submitted before the end of the 21-day period. If unusual circumstances near the end of the 21-day period make a written request impractical, within the 21-day period the National Office should be told orally about the problem and of the forthcoming written request for extension. These requests must be promptly submitted. The taxpayer or taxpayer's representative will be told promptly and later in writing of the approval or denial of the requested extension. There is no right of appeal to the denial of an extension request. If it is not advised of problems with meeting the 21-day period, or if the request is not sent promptly after the National Office is notified of problems with meeting the 21-day period, the Service will process the case on the assumption that no further submission will be received.

.02 A taxpayer is entitled by right to only one conference in the National Office unless one of the circumstances discussed in this section exists. This conference is normally held at the branch level in the appropriate division (Individual Tax Division or Corporation Tax Division) of the office of the Assistant Commissioner (Technical). It is attended by a person who has authority to sign the transmittal memorandum discussed in section 9.07 on behalf of the branch chief. In appropriate cases, the examining officer or the Appeals Officer may also attend the conference to clarify the facts in the case. If more than one subject is discussed at the conference, the discussion constitutes a conference for each subject. To promote a free and open discussion of the issues, the conference usually is held after the branch has had an opportunity to study the case. However, the taxpayer may request that the conference of right be held at a stage earlier in the consideration of the case than the Service would ordinarily designate. The taxpayer has no right to appeal the action of a branch to a division director or to any other official of the Service. The taxpayer is not entitled, as a matter of right, to a separate conference in the Chief Counsel's office on a technical advice request.

.03 Because conference procedures are informal, no tape, stenographic, or other verbatim recording of a conference is made.

.04 The senior Service representative at the conference ensures that the taxpayer has full opportunity to present views on all of the issues in question. The Service representatives explain the Service's tentative decision on the substantive issues and the reasons for it. If prospective application under section 7805(b) of the Code is advanced by the taxpayer, the Service representative will discuss the tentative recommendation concerning the request for relief and the reason for the tentative recommendation. No commitment will be made as to the conclusion that the Service will finally adopt.

.05 An invitation to an additional conference is made if, after the conference of right, an adverse holding is proposed either (1) on a new issue or (2) on the same issue but on grounds different from those discussed at the first conference. When a proposed holding is reversed at a higher level with a result less favorable to the taxpayer, the taxpayer has no right to another conference if the grounds or arguments on which the reversal is based were discussed at the conference of right. The limitation on the number of conferences to which a taxpayer is entitled does not prevent inviting a taxpayer to attend further conferences when National Office personnel think they are necessary. These additional conferences are held only at the invitation of the National Office.

.06 The taxpayer is responsible for furnishing in writing to the National Office within 21 calendar days after the conference any additional data, line of reasoning, precedents, etc., that the taxpayer proposed and that were discussed at the conference but not previously or adequately presented in writing. An extension of the 21-day period may be granted only if the taxpayer justifies it in writing and the Chief or the Assistant Chief of the Technical branch to which the case is assigned approves it. Procedures for requesting an extension of the 21-day period and notifying the taxpayer or the taxpayer's representative of the Service's decision are the same as those in section 8.01. Any additional material should be submitted in duplicate to the National Office. If the additional information would have a significant impact on the facts in the request for technical advice, the National Office sends a copy to the District Director or the Chief, Appeals Office, for comment on the facts contained in the additional information submitted. The District Director or the Chief, Appeals Office, gives the matter prompt attention.

.07 A taxpayer may get information on the status of the request for technical advice by contacting the district or Appeals office that requested the technical advice.

.08 A District Director or a Chief, Appeals Office, may get current information on the status of the request for technical advice by calling the person whose name and telephone number are shown on the acknowledgement of receipt of the request for technical advice.

SEC. 9. PREPARATION OF TECHNICAL ADVICE MEMORANDUM BY THE NATIONAL OFFICE

.01 As soon as the request for technical advice is assigned, the technical employee analyzes the file to see whether it meets all requirements of section 5. If it does not comply with the requirements of section 5.09 relating to the statement of proposed deletions, the National Office makes the deletions from the technical advice memorandum that the Commissioner determines are required by section 6110(c) of the Code.

.02 Usually, within 15 work days after the Branch Office receives the request for technical advice, a representative of the Branch telephones the district or Appeals office to discuss the procedural and substantive issues in the request that come within the Branch's jurisdiction. The Branch representative informs the district or Appeals office:

(a) that the case is being returned because substantial additional information is required to resolve an issue, because significant unresolved factual variances exist between the statements of facts submitted by the district or Appeals office and the taxpayer, or because major procedural problems cannot be resolved by phone; or

(b) that the case is not being returned but more information is needed or minor procedural deficiencies exist; or

(c) what the Branch representative's tentative conclusion is and the estimated date that the technical advice memorandum will be mailed; or

(d) that a tentative conclusion has not been reached because of the complexity of the issue and the estimated date the tentative conclusion will be made.

.03 Within 15 work days after the Branch receives the additional information requested in section 9.02(b), the Branch representative telephones the district or Appeals office to discuss the procedural and substantive issues in the request that come within the jurisdiction of the Branch. The representative indicates either (1) the tentative conclusion and the estimated date the technical advice memorandum will be mailed, or (2) the fact that a tentative conclusion has not been reached because of the complexity of the issue and the estimated date the tentative conclusion will be made.

.04 Because the Branch representative's tentative conclusion may change during the preparation and review of the technical advice memorandum, it is not, under any circumstances, considered final. The district or Appeals office may not tell the taxpayer what the tentative conclusion is.

.05 When the technical advice request concerns matters within the jurisdiction of more than one Branch or more than one office in the same Branch, a representative of the Branch that received the original technical advice request informs the district or Appeals office within the initial 15-work-day period: (1) that the matters within the jurisdiction of another Branch or another office in the same Branch have been referred to the other Branch or office for consideration, and (2) that a representative of the other Branch or office will contact the district or Appeals office about the referral of the technical advice request within 15 work days after receiving it in accordance with section 9.02.

.06 Generally, before replying to the request for technical advice, the National Office informs the taxpayer orally or in writing of the material likely to appear in the technical advice memorandum which the taxpayer proposed be deleted but which the Service determined should not be deleted. If so informed, the taxpayer may submit within 10 days any further information, arguments, or other material to support the position that the material should be deleted. The Service attempts, if possible, to resolve all disagreements about proposed deletions before the National Office replies to the request for technical advice. However, the taxpayer does not have the right to a conference to resolve any disagreements about material to be deleted from the text of the technical advice memorandum. These matters, however, may be considered at any conference otherwise scheduled for the request.

.07 Replies to requests for technical advice are addressed to the District Director or the Chief, Appeals Office, and are in two parts. Each part identifies the taxpayer by name, address, identification number, and year or years involved. The first part of the reply is a transmittal memorandum. In unusual cases it is a way of giving the district or Appeals office administrative information or other information that under the nondisclosure statutes or for other reasons, may not be discussed with the taxpayer. The second part (the "technical advice memorandum") contains (1) a statement of the issues; (2) a statement of the pertinent facts in the issues; (3) a statement of the pertinent law, tax treaties regulations, revenue rulings and other precedents published in the Bulletin, and court decisions; (4) a discussion of the rationale developed by the National Office; and (5) the conclusions of the National Office. The conclusions give direct answers, whenever possible, to the specific questions of the district or Appeals office. The discussion of the issues is in enough detail so the district or Appeals officials know the reasoning underlying the conclusion. Accompanying the technical advice memorandum is a notice, under section 6110(f)(1) of the Code, of intention to disclose a technical advice memorandum (including a copy of the version proposed to be open to public inspection and notations of third party communications under section 6110(d)). The District Director or the Chief, Appeals Office, forwards this notice to the taxpayer when the District Director or the Chief, Appeals Office, gives a copy of the technical advice memorandum to the taxpayer according to section 9.08.

.08 The general practice of the Service is to give a copy of the technical advice memorandum to the taxpayer after it has been adopted by the District Director or the Chief, Appeals Office. However, in the case of technical advice memoranda described in section 6110(g)(5)(A) of the Code, relating to cases involving criminal or civil fraud investigations and jeopardy or termination assessments, a copy of the technical advice memorandum is not given to the taxpayer until all proceedings in the investigations or assessments are completed.

.09 If after receiving the notice under section 6110(f)(1) of the Code of intention to disclose the technical advice memorandum the taxpayer wants to protest the disclosure of certain information in it, the taxpayer must submit a written statement within 20 days identifying those deletions not made by the Service that the taxpayer believes should have been made. The taxpayer must also submit a copy of the version of the technical advice memorandum proposed to be open to public inspection with brackets around deletions that are proposed by the taxpayer but that have not been made by the National Office. Generally, the National Office does not consider the deletion of any material that the taxpayer has not proposed be deleted before the National Office sent its reply to the request for technical advice to the District Director or the Chief, Appeals Office. Within 20 days after it receives the taxpayer's response to the notice under section 6110(f)(1), the National Office must mail the taxpayers its final administrative conclusion about the deletions to be made.

SEC. 10. ACTION ON TECHNICAL ADVICE IN DISTRICT AND APPEALS OFFICES

.01 The District Director or the Chief, Appeals Office, processes the taxpayer's case on the basis of the conclusions in the technical advice memorandum unless (1) the District Director or the Chief, Appeals Office, thinks that the conclusions reached by the National Office in a technical advice memorandum should be reconsidered, or (2) the Chief, Appeals Office, in the case of technical advice unfavorable to the taxpayer, decides to settle the issue in the usual manner under existing authority.

.02 The District Director or the Chief, Appeals Office, gives the taxpayer (1) a copy of the technical advice memorandum described in section 9.07, and (2) the notice under section 6110(f)(1) of the Code of intention to disclose the technical advice memorandum (including a copy of the version proposed to be open to public inspection and notations of third party communications under section 6110(d)). This requirement does not apply to technical advice memoranda involving civil fraud or criminal investigations; jeopardy or termination assessments, as described in section 5.10; or documents to which section 6104 applies.

.03 In those cases in which the National Office tells the District Director or the Chief, Appeals Office, that a copy of the technical advice memorandum should not be given to the taxpayer, the District Director or the Chief, Appeals Office, tells this to the taxpayer if the taxpayer requests a copy.

SEC. 11. EFFECT OF TECHNICAL ADVICE

.01 Except in rare or unusual circumstances, a holding in a technical advice memorandum that is favorable to the taxpayer is applied retroactively. Moreover, since technical advice, as described in section 4.04 of this revenue procedure, is issued only on closed transactions, a holding that is adverse to the taxpayer is also applied retroactively unless the Assistant Commissioner (Technical) exercises the discretionary authority under section 7805(b) of the Code to limit the retroactive effect of the holding.

.02 A holding that modifies or revokes a holding in a prior technical advice memorandum is applied retroactively, with one exception. If the new holding is less favorable to the taxpayer than the earlier one, it generally is not applied to the period in which the taxpayer relied on the prior holding in situations involving continuing transactions.

.03 If a technical advice memorandum relates to a continuing action or a series of actions, it is ordinarily applied until specifically withdrawn or until the conclusion is modified or revoked by enactment of legislation, ratification of a tax treaty, or issuance of a United States Supreme Court decision, regulations (temporary or final), a revenue ruling, or other statement published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin. Publication of a notice of proposed rulemaking does not affect the application of a technical advice memorandum.

.04 Generally, a technical advice memorandum that revokes or modifies a letter ruling or another technical advice memorandum is not applied retroactively for either the taxpayer to whom or for whom the ruling or memorandum was originally issued or for a taxpayer whose tax liability was directly involved in such ruling or memorandum if: (1) there has been no misstatement or omission of material facts; (2) the facts later developed are not materially different from the facts on which the ruling or memorandum was based; (3) there has been no change in the applicable law; (4) the ruling was originally issued for a prospective or proposed transaction; and (5) the taxpayer directly involved in the ruling or memorandum acted in good faith in relying on the ruling or memorandum and the retroactive revocation would be to the taxpayer's detriment. The tax liabilities of members of an industry are not directly involved in a ruling or in a memorandum issued to or for one of the members. The holding in a revocation or modification of a ruling or a memorandum to or for one member of an industry may be retroactively applied to other members of that industry. A tax practitioner may not obtain the nonretroactive application for one client of a modification or revocation of a ruling or a memorandum that was previously issued to or for another client. When a ruling to a taxpayer or a memorandum involving a taxpayer is revoked with retroactive effect, the notice to the taxpayer, except in fraud cases, sets forth the grounds on which the revocation is being made and the reasons why the revocation is being applied retroactively.

SEC. 12. PROCEDURE FOR REQUESTING APPLICATION OF SECTION 7805(b) IN THE CASE OF TECHNICAL ADVICE

.01 Pursuant to section 7805(b) of the Code, it is within the discretion of the Commissioner or the Commissioner's delegate to prescribe the extent, if any, to which any ruling (including technical advice) will be applied without retroactive effect.

A taxpayer to whom a technical advice memorandum has been addressed or with respect to whom a technical advice request is pending may request that the Assistant Commissioner (Technical), the Commissioner's delegate, exercise the discretionary authority under section 7805 (b) of the Code to limit the retroactive effect of any holding stated in the technical advice memorandum or to limit the retroactive effect of any subsequent modification or revocation of the technical advice memorandum.

.02 When a technical advice memorandum that concerns a continuing transaction is modified or revoked by, for example, a subsequent revenue ruling or final regulations, a request to limit the retroactive effect of the modification or revocation of the technical advice memorandum must be made in the form of a request for a ruling when the request is submitted before a return is examined that contains the transaction that is the subject of the request for ruling. See section 20.02 of Rev. Proc. 80-20, page 7, this Bulletin.

.03 When a taxpayer is informed of the modification or revocation of a technical advice memorandum, ruling letter, or determination letter during the course of an examination of the taxpayer's return by the District Director or during consideration by the Chief, Appeals Office, a request to limit the retroactive application of the modification or revocation of the technical advice memorandum, ruling letter, or determination letter must itself be made in the form of a request for technical advice. See section 5 of this revenue procedure. However, the taxpayer must also submit a statement, which will be forwarded to the National Office with the request for technical advice, that the request is being made pursuant to section 7805(b) of the Code. This statement must also set forth the relief sought and an explanation of the reasons and arguments in support of the relief requested, and it must be accompanied by any documents bearing on the request. The explanation in support of the application of section 7805(b) should include a discussion of the five items enumerated in section 11.04 of this revenue procedure as they relate to the taxpayer's particular situation.

.04 A request to limit the retroactive effect of a holding in a technical advice memorandum that does not modify or revoke a technical advice memorandum may be made as part of that technical advice request either initially or at any time before the technical advice memorandum is issued by the National Office. In such a case, the taxpayer must also submit a statement in support of the application of section 7805(b) of the Code, as described in .03 above.

.05 When a request for technical advice concerns only the application of section 7805(b) of the Code, the taxpayer has the right to a conference in the National Office in accordance with the provisions of section 8 of this revenue procedure. If the request for application of 7805(b) is included in the request for technical advice on the substantive issues or is made before the conference of right on the substantive issues, the section 7805(b) issue will be discussed at the taxpayer's one conference of right. If the request for the application of 7805(b) is made as part of a pending technical advice request after a conference has been held on the substantive issue, and the Service determines that there is justification for having delayed the request, then the taxpayer will have the right to one conference of right concerning the application of section 7805(b) with the conference limited to discussion of this issue.

SECTION 1. PURPOSE AND NATURE OF CHANGES

.01 The purpose of this revenue procedure is to supersede Rev. Proc. 79-14, 1979-1 C.B. 496, Rev. Proc. 79-52, 1979-2 C.B. 538, and Rev. Proc. 79-68, 1979-2 C.B. 600, by providing a revised list of those areas of the Internal Revenue Code under the jurisdiction of the Assistant Commissioner (Technical) in which the Internal Revenue Service will not issue advance rulings or determination letters.

.02 Changes.

1 New section 3.011 refers to section 79 of the Code.

2 New section 3.012 refers to section 83 of the Code.

3 New section 3.013 refers to section 105(h) of the Code.

4 New section 3.014 refers to sections 121 and 1034 of the Code.

5 New section 3.0113 refers to section 302 of the Code.

6 New Section 3.0119 refers to section 451 of the Code.

7 New section 3.0120 refers to sections 451 and 457 of the Code.

8 New section 3.027 refers to section 2031 of the Code.

9 New section 3.028 refers to section 2512 of the Code.

10 New sections 3.0129 through 3.0131 refer to section 7701 of the Code.

11 New section 3.026 refers to the tax consequences of proposed legislation.

12 New section 3.027 refers to determination of reasonable cause under Subtitle F (Procedure and Administration) of the Code.

13 New section 3.028 refers to the applicability of criminal penalties to proposed transactions.

14 New sections 4.10 and 4.11 refer to section 7701 of the Code.

15 Section 4.011 now refers to sections 61 and 163 of the Code.

16 New section 4.013 refers to section 170(c) of the Code.

17 New section 5 lists temporary "no ruling" areas.

18 New section 5.01 refers to sections 61, 72, 79, 83, 101, 162, 264, and 641 of the Code.

19 New section 5.02 refers to section 117 of the Code.

20 New section 5.04 refers to section 1001 of the Code.

21 New section 5.05 refers to section 1372 of the Code.

22 New section 6 lists areas for which the Service cannot rule because of statutory prohibition against doing so.

23 New section 6.01 refers to section 61 of the Code.

24 New section 6.02 refers to section 162 of the Code.

25 New section 6.03 refers to section 170 of the Code.

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND AND SCOPE OF APPLICATION

.01 Background.

Whenever appropriate in the interest of sound tax administration, it is the policy of the Service to answer inquiries of individuals and organizations regarding their status for tax purposes and the tax effects of their acts or transactions, prior to the filing of returns or reports that are required by the revenue laws.

There are, however, certain areas in which, because of the inherently factual nature of the problems involved, or for other reasons, the Service will not issue advance rulings or determination letters. These areas are set forth in four sections of this revenue procedure. Section 3 reflects those areas in which advance rulings and determinations will not be issued. Section 4 sets forth those areas in which they will not ordinarily be issued. "Not ordinarily" connotes that unique and compelling reasons must be demonstrated to justify a ruling or determination letter. Those sections reflect a number of specific questions and problems as well as general areas. Section 5 lists specific areas for which the Service is temporarily not issuing advance rulings and determinations because those matters are under extensive study. Section 6 lists areas for which the Service is prohibited by statute from issuing rulings or determination letters.

With respect to the items listed, revenue rulings or revenue procedures may be published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin from time to time to provide general guidelines regarding the position of the Service.

Additions or deletions to this revenue procedure as well as restatement of items listed will be made by modification of this revenue procedure. A new revenue procedure will be published annually in the first quarter of the calendar year and changes made thereafter will be published quarterly. These lists should not be considered all inclusive. Decisions not to rule on individual cases, as contrasted with those that present significant pattern issues, are not reported in this revenue procedure and will not be added to subsequent revisions.

The authority and general procedures of the Technical Function of the National Office of the Internal Revenue Service of the Offices of the District Directors of the Internal Revenue with respect to the issuance of advance rulings and determination letters with respect to Code sections under the jurisdiction of the Assistant Commissioner (Technical) are outlined in Rev. Proc. 80-20, page 7, this Bulletin.

.02 Scope of Application.

This revenue procedure is not to be considered as precluding the submission of requests for technical advice to the National Office from the Office of a District Director of Internal Revenue or a Chief, Appeals Office.

Sec. 3. Areas in Which Rulings or Determination Letters Will Not Be Issued

.01 Specific questions and problems.

1 Section 79.—Group Term Life Insurance Purchased for Employees.—Whether a group insurance plan for 10 or more employees qualifies as group term insurance if the amount of insurance is not computed under a formula that would meet the requirements of section 1.79-1(c)(2)(ii) if the group consisted of fewer than 10 employees.

2 Section 83.—Property Transferred in Connection with Performance of Services.—Whether a restriction constitutes a substantial risk of forfeiture if the employee is a controlling shareholder.

3 Section 105(h).—Amount Paid to Highly Compensated Individuals under a Discriminatory Self-Insured Medical Expense Reimbursement Plan.—Whether, following a determination that a self-insured medical expense reimbursement plan is discriminatory, that plan had previously made reasonable efforts to comply with tax discrimination rules.

4 Sections 121 and 1034.—One-Time Exclusion of Gain from Sale of Principal Residence by Individual Who Has Attained Age 55; Rollover of Gain on Sale of Principal Residence.—Whether at the time of its sale property qualifies as the taxpayer's principal residence.

5 Section 162.—Trade or Business Expenses.—Whether compensation is reasonable in amount.

6 Section 170.—Charitable Contributions and Gifts.—Whether a taxpayer who advances funds to a charitable organization and receives therefor a promissory note may deduct as contributions, in one taxable year or in each of several years, amounts forgiven by the taxpayer in each of several years by endorsements on the note.

7 Section 264(b). — Certain Amounts Paid in Connection with Insurance Contracts.—Whether "substantially all" the premiums of a contract of insurance are paid within a period of four years from the date on which the contract is purchased. Also, whether an amount deposited is in payment of a "substantial number" of future premiums on such a contract.

8 Section 264(c)(1).—Certain Indebtedness Incurred or Continued as Part of a Plan in Connection with Insurance Contracts.—Whether section 264(c)(1) of the Code applies.

9 Section 269.—Acquisition Made to Evade or Avoid Income Tax.—Whether an acquisition is within the meaning of section 269 of the Code.

10 Section 302.—Redemption of Stock.—Whether section 302(b) of the Code applies when the consideration given in redemption by a corporation consists entirely or partly of its notes payable, and the shareholder's stock is held in escrow or as security for payment of the notes with the possibility that the stock may or will be returned to the shareholder in the future, upon the happening of specified defaults by the corporation.

11 Section 302.—Redemption of Stock.—Whether section 302(b) of the Code applies when the consideration given in redemption by a corporation in exchange for a shareholder's stock consists entirely or partly of the corporation's promise to pay an amount that is based on, or contingent on, future earnings of the corporation, or when the promise to pay is contingent on working capital being maintained at a certain level, or any other similar contingency.

12 Section 302.—Redemption of Stock.—Whether section 302(b) of the Code applies to a redemption of stock if after the redemption the distributing corporation used property that is owned by the shareholder from whom the stock is redeemed and the payments by the corporation for the use of the property are dependent upon the corporation's future earnings or are subordinate to the claims of the corporation's general creditors. Payments for the use of property will not be considered to be dependent upon future earnings merely because they are based on a fixed percentage of receipts or sales.

13 Section 302.—Distributions in Redemption of Stock.—Whether the acquisition or disposition of stock described in section 302(c)(2)(B) of the Code has, or did not have, as one of its principal purposes the avoidance of federal income taxes within the meaning of that section, unless the facts and circumstances are materially identical to those set forth in Rev. Rul. 56-556, 1956-2 C.B. 177, Rev. Rul. 56-584, 1956-2 C.B. 179, Rev. Rul. 57-387, 1957-2 C.B. 225, Rev. Rul. 77-293, 1977-2 C.B. 91, or Rev. Rul. 79-67, 1979-1 C.B. 128.

14 Sections 311 and 336.—Taxability of Corporation on Distribution; General Rule.—Upon distribution of property in kind by a corporation to its shareholders, in complete liquidation under section 331 of the Code (when under the facts a sale of the property by the corporation would not qualify under section 337), in partial liquidation under section 346, or in redemption of stock under section 302(a), followed by a sale of the property, whether the sale can be deemed to have been made by the corporation under the doctrine of Commissioner v. Court Holding Company, 324 U.S. 331 (1945), Ct. D. 1636, 1945 C.B. 58.

15 Section 312.—Earnings and Profits.—The determination of the amount of earnings and profits of a corporation.

16 Sections 331, 332, and 333.—Effects on Recipients of Distributions in Corporate Liquidations.—The tax effect of the liquidation of a corporation preceded or followed by the reincorporation of all or a part of the business and assets when more than a nominal amount of the stock (that is, more than 20 percent in value) of both the liquidating corporation and the transferee corporation is owned by the same shareholders; or when a liquidation is followed by the sale of the corporate assets by the shareholders to another corporation in which such shareholders own more than a nominal amount of the stock (that is, more than 20 percent in value).

17 Section 337.—Gain or Loss; Certain Liquidations.—The application of this section to a corporation upon the sale of property, in connection with its liquidation, to another corporation, when more than a nominal amount of the stock (that is, more than 20 percent in value) of both the selling corporation and the purchasing corporation is owned by the same persons.

18 Section 346.—Partial Liquidation.—The amount of working capital attributable to a business or portion of a business terminated that may be distributed in partial liquidation.

19 Section 451.—General Rule for Taxable Year of Inclusion.—The tax consequences of a nonqualified unfunded deferred compensation arrangement with respect to a controlling shareholder employee eligible to participate in the arrangement.

20 Sections 451 and 457.—General Rule for Taxable Year of Inclusion; Deferred Compensation Plans With Respect to Service for State and Local Governments.—The tax consequences to unidentified independent contractors in nonqualified unfunded deferred compensation plans. This applies to plans established under section 451 of the Code by employers in the private sector and to eligible state plans under section 457. However, a ruling with respect to a specific independent contractor's participation in such a plan may be issued.

21 Section 453.—Revolving Credit Sales as Installment Sales.—Whether a proposed sampling procedure will be acceptable by the Service for the purpose of determining the portion of revolving credit balances to be treated as installment account balances. See Rev. Proc. 64-4, 1964-1 (Part 1) C.B. 644, and Rev. Proc. 65-5, 1965-1 C.B. 720.

22 Section 642(c).—Deduction for Amounts Paid or Permanently Set Aside for a Charitable Purpose.—Allowance of an unlimited deduction for amounts set aside by a trust or estate for charitable purposes when there is a possibility that the corpus of the trust or estate may be invaded.

23 Section 704(b)(2).—Partner's Distributive Share Determined.—Whether the allocation to a partner under the parnership agreement of income, gain, loss, deduction, or credit (or an item thereof) has substantial economic effect.

24 Section 704(e).—Family Partnerships.—Matters relating to the validity of a family partnership when capital is not a material income producing factor.

25 Section 1221.—Capital Asset Defined.—Whether specialty stock allocated to an investment account by a registered specialist on a national securities exchange is a capital asset.

26 Section 1551.—Disallowance of Surtax Exemption and Accumulated Earnings Credit.—Whether a transfer is within section 1551 of the Code.

27 Section 2031.—Definition of Gross Estate.—Actuarial factors for valuing interests in the prospective gross estate of a living person.

28 Section 2512.—Valuation of Gifts.—Actuarial factors for valuing prospective or hypothetical gifts of a donor.

29 Section 7701.—Definitions.—Whether a foreign arrangement that is a participant in a domestic arrangement classified as a partnership for U.S. tax purposes will itself be classified as a partnership.

30 Section 7701.—Definitions.—Whether a foreign limited liability company will be classified as a partnership if the taxpayer requests classification as a partnership and (1) the taxpayer is a corporation and less than 20 percent of the interests in the limited liability company are held by independent parties or (2) the taxpayer is not a corporation and independent parties hold only a nominal interest in the company.

31 Section 7701.—Definitions.—The classification of arrangements formed as partnerships under local law where the members of such partnerships are professional corporations.

.02 General Areas.

1 The results of transactions that lack bona fide business purpose or have as their principal purpose the reduction of federal taxes.

2 A matter upon which a court decision adverse to the government has been handed down and the question of following the decision or litigating further has not yet been resolved.

3 A matter involving the prospective application of the estate tax to the property or the estate of a living person.

4 A matter involving alternate plans of proposed transactions or involving hypothetical situations.

5 A matter involving the federal tax consequences of any proposed federal, state, local, or municipal legislation. The Service may provide general information in response to an inquiry.

6 Whether reasonable cause exists under Subtitle F (Procedure and Administration) of the Code.

7 Whether a proposed transaction would subject the taxpayer to a criminal penalty.

8 A request that does not comply with the provisions of Rev. Proc. 80-20.

SEC. 4. AREAS IN WHICH RULINGS OR DETERMINATION LETTERS WILL NOT ORDINARILY BE ISSUED

.01 Specific questions and problems.

1 Sections 61 and 163.—Gross Income Defined; Interest.—Determinations as to who is the true owner of property or the true borrower of money in cases in which the formal ownership of the property or liability for the indebtedness is in another party.

2 Section 167.—Depreciation.

(a) Useful lives of assets.

(b) Depreciation rates.

(c) Salvage value of assets.

3 Section 170(c).—Charitable, etc., Contributions and Gifts.—Whether a taxpayer who transfers property to a charitable organization and thereafter leases back all or a portion of the transferred property, may deduct the fair market value of the property transferred and leased back as a charitable contribution.

4 Section 302. — Redemption of Stock.—The tax effect of the redemption of stock for notes, when the payments on the notes are to be made over a period in excess of 15 years from the date of issuance of such notes.

5 Section 306.—Disposition of Certain Stock.—Whether the distribution or disposition or redemption of "section 306 stock" in a closely held corporation is in pursuance of a plan having as one of its principal purposes the avoidance of federal income taxes within the meaning of section 306(b)(4) of the Code.

6 Section 331.—Gain or Loss to Shareholders in Corporate Liquidations.—The tax effect of the liquidation of a corporation by a series of distributions, when the distributions in liquidation are to be made over a period in excess of three years from the adoption of the plan of liquidation.

7 Section 341.—Collapsible Corporations.—Whether a corporation will be considered to be a "collapsible corporation," that is, whether it was "formed or availed of" with the view of certain tax consequences. However, ruling requests will be considered on this matter when the enterprise (1) has been in existence for at least 20 years, (2) has had substantially the same owners during that period, and (3) has conducted substantially the same trade or business during that period.

8 Section 351.—Transfers to Controlled Corporation.—The tax effect of the transfer when part of the consideration received by the transferors consist of bonds, debentures, or any other evidences of indebtedness of the transferee.

9 Section 992.—Requirements of a Domestic International Sales Corporation.—The tax effects of a Domestic International Sales Corporation's stock being held by individuals who are also shareholders in a related supplier corporation.

10 Section 7701. — Definitions. — Whether what is generally known as a foreign corporation will be classified as a partnership for U.S. tax purposes if the taxpayer requests classification as a partnership.

11 Section 7701. — Definitions. — Whether a foreign partnership will be classified as an association for U.S. tax purposes if the taxpayer requests classification as an association.

.02 General areas.

1 Any matter in which the determination requested is primarily one of fact, e.g., market value of property, or whether an interest in a corporation is to be treated as stock or indebtedness.

2 The tax effect of any transaction to be consummated at some indefinite future time.

3 Any matter dealing with the question of whether property is held primarily for sale to customers in the ordinary course of trade or business.

SEC. 5. AREAS UNDER EXTENSIVE STUDY IN WHICH RULINGS OR DETERMINATION LETTERS WILL NOT BE ISSUED UNTIL THE SERVICE RESOLVES THE ISSUE THROUGH PUBLICATION OF A REVENUE RULING, REVENUE PROCEDURE, REGULATIONS OR OTHERWISE

.01 Section 79.—Group Term Life Insurance Purchased for Employees.—Whether life insurance provided for employees under a "retired lives reserve" plan will be considered group term insurance (also sections 61, 72, 83, 101, 162, 264, and 641).

.02 Section 117.—Scholarships and Fellowships Grants.—Whether an employer-related scholarship or fellowship grant is excludable from the employee's gross income if there is no intermediary private foundation distributing the grants, as there was in Rev. Proc. 76-47, 1976-2 C.B. 670.

.03 Section 368.—Definitions Relating to Corporate Reorganizations. Whether the continuity of business enterprise requirement of section 1.368-1(b) of the regulations is satisfied if the transferee corporation does not continue the historic business (the business conducted most recently) of the transferor corporation or, when such business is not continued, the transferee does not use a significant portion of the assets of the transferor's historic business in the transferee's business.

.04 Section 1001.—Determination of Amount of and Recognition of Gain or Loss.—Determination of amount of, and recognition of, gain or loss in divorce property settlements.

.05 Section 1372.—Election by Small Business Corporation.—Whether trailer or mobile home parks or aircraft rental businesses qualify as electing small business corporations.

Sec. 6. Areas for Which the Service Is Prohibited by Statute from Issuing Rulings or Determination Letters

.01 Section 61.—Gross Income Defined.—Employee fringe benefits. Pub. L. 96-167, 1980-5 I.R.B. 12.

.02 Section 162.—Trade or Business Expenses.—Expenses of commuting. Pub. L. 96-167.

.03 Section 170.—Charitable, etc., Contributions and Gifts.—Application of revenue ruling (Rev. Rul. 79-99, 1979-1 C.B. 108) to deny a charitable contribution deduction. Pub. L. 96-74, 1979-2 C.B. 473.

Sec. 7. Effect on Other Documents

Rev. Procs. 79-14, 79-52, and 79-68 are superseded.

26 CFR 601.402: Sales taxes collected by return.
(Also Part I, Sections 6071, 6076, 6651; 46.6071(a)-1, 48.6071(a)-1, 150.6076-1, 301.6651-1.)

Rev. Proc. 80-23 [1]

Section 1. Purpose

The purpose of this revenue procedure is to clarify the return filing procedures that are to be followed where Form 720, Quarterly Federal Excise Tax Return, reports liability for several excise taxes that are subject to different reporting times.

Sec. 2. Background

Under section 6076 of the Internal Revenue Code and section 150.6076-1 of the Temporary Excise Tax Regulations under the Crude Oil Windfall Profit Tax Act of 1980 windfall profits tax liability must be reported on Form 720 on or before the last day of the second month following the close of the calendar quarter. Section 48.6071(a)-1(a) of the Manufacturers and Retailers Excise Tax Regulations provides that liability for the manufacturers excise tax on gasoline, etc. must be reported on Form 720 on or before the last day of the first month following the calendar quarter. Other excise taxes reportable on Form 720 must also be reported by the last day of the first month following the quarter.

Sec. 3. Procedure

Where a Form 720 reports liability for federal excise taxes reportable on or before the last day of the first month following the calendar quarter (or 10 days after if timely deposits in full payment have been made) as well as taxes reportable on or before the last day of the second month following the calendar quarter, the return may be filed without penalty on or before the latter date, provided that the taxpayer has made timely deposits of the taxes reportable on the earlier date.

26 CFR 601.201: Rulings and determination letters.

Section 1. Purpose

The purpose of this revenue procedure is to update and restate the general procedures of the Internal Revenue Service in issuing rulings, determination, opinion, notification, and information letters to taxpayers and in entering into closing agreements on specific issues as to the interpretation or application of the federal tax laws in the employee plan and exempt organization areas. This revenue procedure also informs taxpayers and their representatives where they may direct requests for rulings, determination, notification, and opinion letters, and closing agreements; and outlines procedures to be followed in order to promote efficient handling of their inquiries.

Sec. 2. General Practice and Definitions

.01 It is the practice of the Service to answer inquiries of individuals and organizations, whenever appropriate in the interest of sound tax administration, as to their status for tax purposes, and as to the tax effects of their acts or transactions, or in the interest of proper design and administration of employee benefit plans. One of the functions of the National Office of the Service is to issue rulings in such matters. Key District Directors of Internal Revenue apply the statutes, regulations, revenue rulings, and other precedents published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin in the determination of tax liability, the collection of taxes, and the issuance of determination letters in answer to taxpayers' inquiries or requests. For a list of key District Directors, see Rev. Proc. 80-25, page 39, this Bulletin, or Rev. Proc. 80-30, page 56, this Bulletin.

.02 For purposes of this revenue procedure, the term "taxpayer" includes all persons subject to any provision of the Internal Revenue Code and, whenever appropriate, their authorized representative(s).

.03 A "ruling" is a written statement issued to a taxpayer by the National Office that interprets and applies the tax laws, or any non-tax laws applicable to employee benefit plans for which the Service has jurisdiction, to a specific set of facts. Rulings are issued only by the National Office. The issuance of rulings in employee plan and exempt organization matters is under the general supervision of the Assistant Commissioner (Employee Plans and Exempt Organizations) and has been largely redelegated to the directors of the Actuarial, Employee Plans, and Exempt Organizations Divisions.

.04 A "determination letter" is a written statement issued by a key District Director in response to a written inquiry by an individual or an organization that applies to the particular facts involved, and to the principles and precedents previously announced by the National Office. A determination letter is issued only where a determination can be made on the basis of clearly established rules as set forth in the statute or regulations, or in a ruling, opinion, or court decision published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin. Where such a determination cannot be made, such as where the question presented involves a novel issue or the matter is excluded from the jurisdiction of a key District Director by the provisions of section 4 of this revenue procedure, a determination letter will not be issued.

[1] Also released as News Release IR-80-70, dated June 12, 1980.

.05 A "notification letter" is a written statement furnished by a key district office, upon request, as to the acceptability (for purposes of sections 401 and 501(a) of the Internal Revenue Code) of the form of a pattern plan or a field prototype plan and any related trust or custodial account.

.06 An "opinion letter" is a written statement furnished by the National Office, upon request, as to the acceptability (for purposes of sections 401 and 501(a) of the Code) of the form of any master or prototype plan and any related trust or custodial account, or as to the conformance of a prototype trust, custodial account, individual annuity, or endowment contract with the requirements of section 408(a), (b), or (k), as applicable. See Rev. Proc. 75-6, 1975-1 C.B. 646, and Rev. Proc. 80-29, page 52, this Bulletin.

.07 An "information letter" is a statement issued either by the National Office or by a key District Director that does no more than call attention to a well-established interpretation or principle of tax law, without applying it to a specific set of facts. An information letter may be issued when the nature of the request from the individual or the organization suggests that it is seeking general information, or where the request does not meet all the requirements of section 6 of this revenue procedure, and it is believed that such general information will assist the individual or organization.

.08 A "revenue ruling" is an official interpretation of the Internal Revenue laws, related statutes, tax treaties, and regulations, by the Internal Revenue Service that has been published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin. Revenue rulings are issued only by the National Office and are published for the information and guidance of taxpayers, Service officials, and others concerned.

.09 A "closing agreement," as the term is used herein, is an agreement between the Commissioner of Internal Revenue or the Commissioner's delegate and a taxpayer with respect to a specific issue or issues entered into pursuant to the authority contained in section 7121 of the Code. Such a closing agreement is based on a ruling that has been signed by the Commissioner or the Commissioner's delegate and in which it is indicated that a closing agreement will be entered into on the basis of the holding of the ruling letter. Closing agreements are final and conclusive except upon a showing of fraud, malfeasance, or misrepresentation of material fact. They may be entered into where it is advantageous to have the matter permanently and conclusively closed, or where a taxpayer can show good and sufficient reasons for an agreement and the government will sustain no disadvantage by its consummation. In appropriate cases, taxpayers may be requested to enter into a closing agreement as a condition to the issuance of a ruling. Where in a single case, closing agreements are requested on behalf of each of a number of taxpayers, such agreements are not entered into if the number of such taxpayers exceeds twenty-five. However, in a case where the issue and holding are identical as to all of the taxpayers and the number of taxpayers is in excess of twenty-five, a "mass closing agreement" will be entered into with the taxpayer who is authorized by the others to represent the entire group.

SEC. 3. RULINGS AND OPINION LETTERS ISSUED BY THE NATIONAL OFFICE

.01 In employee plan and exempt organization matters, the National Office issues rulings on prospective transactions and on completed transactions before the appropriate return is filed. However, rulings will not ordinarily be issued if the identical issue is present in a return of the taxpayer for a prior year which is under active examination or audit by a key district office, is being considered on appeal within the Service, or is pending in litigation. If a return involving an issue for a particular year is filed while a request for a ruling on that issue is pending, the National Office will issue the ruling unless the taxpayer notifies the National Office as discussed in section 6.06 that an examination of the issue for which a ruling is requested or an examination of the identical issue on a prior year's return has been initiated by a key District Director. However, even in the event that an examination is initiated, the National Office ordinarily will issue the ruling if the key District Director agrees, by memorandum, to permit the issuance of the ruling. The National Office issues rulings involving the exempt status of organizations under section 501 or 521 of the Code, only to the extent provided in Rev. Proc. 72-5, 1972-1 C.B. 709, Rev. Proc. 80-25, and Rev. Proc. 80-27, page 49, this Bulletin. The National Office may issue rulings involving employee plans matters under sections 401 through 415, except as provided in section 3 of Rev. Proc. 80-30. The National Office issues rulings involving waiver of the minimum funding standard, changes in the funding method, and changes in the plan year under section 412. The National Office issues rulings involving section 219 except for issues relating to the deductibility of contributions that depend on whether a particular program meets the requirements of section 408. The National Office also issues rulings involving prohibited transactions under sections 503 and 4975. The National Office issues opinion letters as to the acceptability of the form of master or prototype plans and any related trusts or custodial accounts involving sections 401, 403(a), and 501(a), and of prototype trusts, custodial accounts, annuities, or endowment contracts under section 408(a), (b), or (k), only to the extent provided in Rev. Procs. 75-6 and 80-29. The National Office issues rulings as to whether individual retirement accounts established by employers or associations of employees meet the requirements of section 408(c). See Rev. Proc. 76-32, 1976-2 C.B. 654.

.02 With regard to applications for extension of the time for making an election or application for relief pursuant to section 1.9100 of the Income Tax Regulations, see Rev. Proc. 79-63, 1979-2 C.B. 578. If a request for an extension of time under section 1.9100-1 is submitted before or after the return is filed but before the return is examined, the procedures of this revenue procedure are applicable. If an examination of the return has begun, or is being considered by an Appeals office, the procedures of Rev. Proc. 80-26, page 43, this Bulletin, are applicable.

.03 The Service will not issue rulings to business, trade, or industrial associations, or to other similar groups relating to the application of the tax laws to individual taxpayers within the group. However, rulings may be issued to such groups or associations relating to their own tax status or liability or that of member organizations included under a group exemption letter, provided such tax status or liability is not an issue before any key district office, or on appeal within the Service, in connection with an examination or audit of the liability of the same taxpayer for the same or a prior period.

.04 Pending the adoption of regulations (either temporary or final) that reflect the provisions of any Act, consideration will be given to the issuance of rulings under the conditions set forth below.

1 If an inquiry presents an issue on which the answer seems to be clear from an application of the provisions of the statute to the facts described, a ruling will be issued in accordance with usual procedures.

2 If an inquiry presents an issue on which the answer seems reasonably certain but not entirely free from doubt, a ruling will be issued only if it is established that a business emergency requires a ruling or that unusual hardship will result from failure to obtain a ruling.

3 If an inquiry presents an issue that cannot be reasonably resolved prior to the issuance of regulations, a ruling will not be issued.

4 If any case in which the taxpayer believes that a business emergency exists or that an unusual hardship will result from failure to obtain a ruling, the taxpayer should submit with the request a separate letter setting forth the facts necessary for the Service to make a determination in this regard. In this connection, the Service will not deem a "business emergency" to result from circumstances within the control of the taxpayer such as, for example, scheduling within an inordinately short time the closing date for a transaction or a meeting of the board of directors or the shareholders of a corporation.

SEC. 4. DETERMINATION AND NOTIFICATION LETTERS ISSUED BY KEY DISTRICT DIRECTORS

.01 In employee plan and exempt organization matters, key District Directors issue determination letters in response to taxpayers' written requests submitted to their offices involving completed transactions affecting taxpayers that are under their audit jurisdiction, but only if the answers to the question presented is covered specifically by statute or regulations, or specifically by a ruling, opinion, or court decision published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin. A determination letter usually will not be issued with respect to a question that involves a return to be filed by the taxpayer if the identical question is involved in a return or returns already filed by the taxpayer. Key District Directors will not issue determination letters as to the tax consequences of prospective or proposed transactions, except as provided in sections 4.03, 4.04, and 4.05.

.02 Notwithstanding the provisions of section 4.01, a key District Director generally will not issue a determination letter in response to an inquiry, although presenting a question specifically covered by statute, regulations, or rulings, etc., published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin, where (1) it appears that the taxpayer has directed the same inquiry to the National Office, (2) the identical issue involving the same taxpayer is pending in litigation or on appeal within the Service, or (3) the determination letter is requested by an industry, trade association, or similar group on behalf of individual taxpayers within the group (other than subordinate organizations covered by a group exemption letter). Under no circumstances will a key District Director issue a determination letter unless the inquiry is made by a taxpayer or taxpayers that are or will be under the Director's audit jurisdiction.

.03 Key District Directors issue determination letters as to the qualification of plans involving sections 401, 403(a), and 405(a) of the Code, the exempt status of related trusts, if any, under section 501, and as to whether an individually designed defined contribution plan constitutes an employee stock ownership plan under section 301(d) and (e) of the Tax Reduction Act of 1975, Pub. L. 94-12, 1975-1 C.B. 545 (see Rev. Proc. 75-48, 1975-2 C.B. 581 and 80-30) or, for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1978, under sections 409A or 4975(e)(7) of the Code, as added or amended respectively, by the Revenue Act of 1978, Pub. L. 95-600, 1978-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1. Key District Directors also issue determination letters as to the qualification of certain organizations for exemption from federal income tax under sections 501 and 521 to the extent provided in Rev. Proc. 80-25, and as to private foundation status under Rev. Proc. 76-34, 1976-2 C.B. 656.

.04 Key district offices issue notification letters as to the acceptability of the form of pattern plans and any related trusts or custodial accounts involving sections 401 and 501(a) of the Code only to the extent provided in Rev. Proc. 76-15, 1976-1 C.B. 553. Key district offices also issue notification letters as to the acceptability of the form of field prototype plans and any related trusts or custodial accounts involving sections 401 and 501(a) only to the extent provided in Rev. Proc. 77-23, 1977-2 C.B. 530.

.05 A request received by a key District Director with respect to a question involved in a return already filed will, in general, be considered in connection with the examination or audit of the return. If response is made to such inquiry prior to an examination or audit, it will be considered a tentative finding subject to the conclusions of any subsequent examination or audit of the return.

SEC. 5. DISCRETIONARY AUTHORITY TO ISSUE RULINGS AND DETERMINATION LETTERS

.01 There are certain areas where, because of the inherently factual nature of the problem involved, or for other reasons, the Service will not issue, or ordinarily will not issue, rulings or determination letters. A ruling or a determination letter is not issued, for example, on alternative plans of proposed transactions or on hypothetical situations. A list of these areas for employee plans is set forth in Rev. Proc. 80-30. This list is not all inclusive since the Service may decline to issue rulings or determination letters on other questions whenever warranted by the facts or circumstances of a particular case. The National Office and key District Directors may, when it is deemed appropriate and in the best interest of the Service, issue information letters calling attention to well-established principles of tax law or to the proper interpretation of the laws pertaining to employee benefit plans.

.02 The National Office will issue rulings in all cases on prospective or future transactions when the law or regulations require a determination of the effect of a proposed transaction for tax purposes.

.03 In the case of employee plans, a ruling or determination letter relating to an issue that is being considered by the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation or the Department of Labor, and involves the same taxpayer, shall be issued at the discretion of the Service.

SEC. 6. INSTRUCTIONS TO TAXPAYER

.01 A request for a ruling or a determination letter is to be submitted in duplicate if (1) more than one issue is presented in the request or (2) a closing agreement is requested with respect to the issue presented. It is not necessary to present requests in duplicate under other circumstances.

.02 In cases in which more than one issue is presented in a request for a ruling, the Service generally will issue a single ruling letter. However, the taxpayer may request a separate ruling letter on any of the issues. Unless the Service determines that it is not feasible or not in the best interest of the Service to comply with the taxpayer's request, separate ruling letters will be issued.

.03 When multiple issues are involved in a single factual situation and separate letters requesting rulings are submitted, a statement to this effect must be included in each ruling letter request. The Service, in issuing each ruling, shall state that separate rulings have been issued or requests for rulings are pending.

.04 Each request for a ruling or a determination letter must contain a complete statement of all relevant facts relating to the transaction. Such facts include names, addresses, and taxpayer identifying numbers of all interested parties; the location of the key district office that has or will have audit jurisdiction over each party; a full and precise statement of the reasons for the transaction; and a carefully detailed description of the transaction. In addition, true copies of all contracts, wills, deeds, agreements, instruments, plan documents, trust agreements, and other documents involved in the transaction must be submitted with the request. However, relevant facts reflected in documents submitted must be included in the taxpayer's statement and not merely incorporated by reference, and must be accompanied by an analysis of their bearing on the issue or issues, specifying the pertinent provisions. (The term "all interested parties" is not to be construed as requiring a list of employees where a large number may be involved in a plan.) The request must contain a statement whether, to the best of the knowledge of the taxpayer, the identical issue is in a return of the taxpayer (or of a related taxpayer within the meaning of section 267 of the Code or a member of an affiliated group of which the taxpayer is also a member within the meaning of section 1504) and, if so, whether it is being considered by any key district office in connection with an active examination or audit, is being considered on appeal within the Service, or is pending in litigation, or, in the case of employee plans, is being considered by the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation or the Department of Labor. Where the request pertains to only one step of a larger integrated transaction, the facts, circumstances, etc., must be submitted with respect to the entire transaction. Original documents should not be submitted because documents and exhibits become a part of the Internal Revenue Service file which cannot be returned. If a return is filed prior to the receipt of a ruling from the National Office concerning the return, a copy of the request must be attached to such return.

.05 As an alternative procedure for the issuance of rulings on prospective transactions, the taxpayer may submit a summary statement of the facts the taxpayer considers controlling the issue, in addition to the complete statement required for ruling requests by section 6.04 above. Assuming agreement with the taxpayer's summary statement, the Service will use it as the basis for the ruling. Any taxpayer wishing to adopt this procedure should submit with the request for ruling:

1 A complete statement of facts relating to the transaction, together with related documents, as required by section 6.04 above; and

2 A summary statement of the facts which the taxpayer believes should be controlling in reaching the requested conclusion. Where the taxpayer's statement of controlling facts is accepted, the ruling will be based on these facts and only this statement will ordinarily be incorporated in the ruling letter. It is emphasized, however, that:

(a) This procedure for a "two-part" ruling request is elective with the taxpayer and is not to be considered a required substitute for the regular procedures contained in this revenue procedure;

(b) Taxpayers' rights and responsibilities are the same under the "two part" ruling request procedure as those provided in this revenue procedure;

(c) The Service reserves the right to rule on the basis of a more complete statement of facts it considers controlling and to seek further information in developing facts and restating them for ruling purposes; and

(d) The "two-part" ruling request procedure will not apply where it is inconsistent with other procedures applicable to specific situations.

.06 If the taxpayer asserts a particular determination, an explanation of the grounds for the assertion must be furnished, together with a statement of relevant authorities in support of the taxpayer's views. Even though the taxpayer is urging no particular determination of a proposed or prospective transaction, the taxpayer's views on the tax results of the proposed action and a statement of relevant authorities to support those views must be furnished. In addition, the taxpayer is encouraged to inform the Service of, and discuss the implications of, any legislation, or tax treaties, court decisions, regulations, revenue rulings, or revenue procedures that the taxpayer determines to be contrary to the position advanced. If the taxpayer determines that there are no contrary authorities, a statement to this effect would be helpful in the ruling request. Identification and discussion of contrary authorities will generally enable Service personnel to arrive more quickly at a full understanding of the issue and the relevant authorities. There is a further advantage to the taxpayer. When Service personnel receive the request, they will have before them the taxpayer's thinking on the effect and applicability of contrary authorities. Such information should, therefore, make research easier and lead to earlier action by the Service. Conversely, failure to disclose and distinguish significant contrary authorities may result in requests for additional information, which will delay action on the ruling request.

.07 If the request is with respect to the qualification of a plan involving section 401, 403(a), 405(a), or 408 of the Code, or conformance of an employee stock ownership plan to sections 301(d) and (e) of the Tax Reduction Act of 1975 (for taxable years beginning before December 31, 1978) or to section 409A or 4975(e)(7) of the Code (for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1978), see Rev. Procs. 75-6, 75-48, 76-15, 76-32, 77-23, 80-29, and 80-30. If the request is with respect to the qualification of an organization for exemption from Federal income tax under section 501 or 521, see Rev. Procs. 72-5, 80-25, and 80-27.

.08 Before making the text of a ruling or determination letter open or available to public inspection pursuant to section 6110(a) of the Code, certain information identifying the taxpayer is deleted pursuant to section 6110(c). In order to assist the Internal Revenue Service in making the required deletions, the taxpayer requesting the ruling or determination letter must accompany the request with either a statement of deletions and the statutory basis for each proposed deletion, or a statement that no information other than names, addresses, and taxpayer identifying numbers need be deleted. Such statements shall be made in a separate document. The statement of proposed deletions shall be accompanied by a copy of the request for a ruling or determination letter and supporting documents, on which shall be indicated, by the use of brackets, the material that the taxpayer indicates should be deleted pursuant to section 6110(c). The statement of proposed deletions shall indicate the statutory basis, under section 6110(c), for each proposed deletion. The statement of proposed deletions shall not appear or be referred to anywhere in the request for a ruling or determination letter. If the taxpayer decides to request additional deletions pursuant to section 6110(c) prior to the time the ruling or determination letter is issued, additional statements may be submitted.

.09 A request for a ruling or determination letter to which section 6110 of the Code applies should contain a declaration in the following form: "Under the penalties of perjury, I declare that I have examined this request, including accompanying documents, and to the best of my knowledge and belief, the facts presented in support of the request are true, correct, and complete." This declaration must be signed by the taxpayer (i.e., an authorized corporate officer of a corporation, a trustee of a trust, or an individual taxpayer seeking a ruling on the taxpayer's own behalf). The signature of an individual with a power of attorney will not suffice for the declaration.

.10 A request by or for a taxpayer must be signed by the taxpayer or the taxpayer's authorized representative. If the request is signed by a representative of the taxpayer, or if the representative is to appear before the Internal Revenue Service in connection with the request, he or she must be:

1 an attorney who is a member in good standing of the bar of the highest court of any state, possession, territory, Commonwealth, or the District of Columbia, and who files with the Service a written declaration that he or she is currently qualified as an attorney and he or she is authorized to represent the principal;

2 a certified public accountant who is duly qualified to practice in any state, possession, territory, Commonwealth, or the District of Columbia, and who files with the Service a written declaration that he or she is currently qualified as a certified public accountant and he or she is authorized to represent the principal; or

3 a person, other than an attorney or certified public accountant, enrolled to practice before the Service, and who files with the Service a written declaration that he or she is currently enrolled (including in the declaration either his or her enrollment number or the expiration date of his or her enrollment card) and that he or she is authorized to represent the principal. (See Treasury Department Circular No. 230. Revised, 1966-2 C.B. 1171, as amended, 1967-1 C.B. 433, and 1970-2 C.B. 644, for the rules on who may practice before the Service.) The above requirements do not apply to an individual representing his or her full-time employer, or to a bona fide officer, administrator, trustee, etc., representing a corporation, trust, estate, association, or organized group. An unenrolled preparer of a return (other than an attorney or certified public accountant referred to in clauses 1 and 2 above) who is not a full-time employee or a bona fide officer, administrator, trustee, etc., may not represent a taxpayer with respect to a ruling or a determination letter. Any authorized representative, whether or not he or she is enrolled to practice, must also comply with the conference and practice requirements of the Statement of Procedural Rules (26 CFR 601). Forms 2848, Power of Attorney, and 2848-D, Authorization and Declaration, may be used with regard to rulings, determination letters, notification letters, and opinion letters requested under this revenue procedure and Rev. Procs. 72-5, 75-6, 75-48, 76-15, 76-32, 76-34, 77-23, 80-25, 80-27, 80-29, and 80-30.

.11 If a taxpayer has more than one representative, sending a copy of the ruling to any one representative shall be sufficient. Copies of rulings will be sent to not more than two representatives provided that they are located at different mailing addresses. If a taxpayer does not designate which representative is to receive a copy of the ruling, a copy of the ruling will be sent to the first representative named on the latest power of attorney. If the original of the ruling is to be sent to a representative, the power of attorney should contain a statement to that effect and designate the mailing address of such representative.

.12 A request for a ruling or opinion letter by the National Office should be addressed to the Assistant Commissioner (Employee Plans and Exempt Organizations), 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224. A request for a determination or notification letter should be addressed to the key District Director, Internal Revenue Service, whose office has or will have audit jurisdiction over the organization. See also Rev. Procs. 72-5, 75-6, 75-48, 76-15, 76-32, 77-23, 80-25, 80-27, 80-29, and 80-30.

.13 A request for a notification letter by the key district office should be addressed in accordance with the procedures of Rev. Proc. 76-15 in the case of a pattern plan, and Rev. Proc. 77-23 in the case of a field prototype plan.

.14 Any request for a ruling or an opinion, notification, or determination letter that does not comply with all the provisions of this revenue procedure will be acknowledged, and the requirements that have not been met will be pointed out. When applicable, Employee Plans will return the request to the applicant. A request for a ruling or opinion letter addressed to the key District Director that does not comply with the provisions of this revenue procedure will be returned by the key District Director for completion prior to sending it to the National Office.

.15 A taxpayer who desires an oral discussion of the issue or issues involved should indicate such desire in writing when filing the request or soon thereafter in order that the conference may be arranged at that stage of the consideration when it will be most helpful.

.16 It is the practice of the Service to process requests for ruling, opinion, notification and determination letters in regular order and as expeditiously as possible. Compliance with a request for consideration of a particular matter ahead of its regular order, or by a specified time, tends to delay the disposition of other cases. However, requests for processing ahead of the regular order, made in writing in a separate letter submitted with the request or subseqent thereto and showing clear need for such treatment, will be given consideration as the particular circumstances warrant. No assurance can be given that any letter will be processed by the time requested. For example, the scheduling of a closing date for a transaction or a meeting of the Board of Directors or shareholders of a corporation without due regard to the time it may take to obtain a ruling, opinion, notification, or determination letter will not be deemed sufficient reason for handling a request ahead of its regular order. Neither will the possible effect of fluctuation in the market price of stocks on a transaction be deemed sufficient reason for handling a request out of order. Requests by telegram will be treated as though made by letter. Ruling, opinion, notification, and determination letters ordinarily will not be issued by telegram.

.17 The Director, Exempt Organizations Division, has primary responsibility for issuing rulings with respect to organizations exempt from income tax. The Director, Employee Plans Division, has primary responsibility for matters involving the qualification of pension, annuity, profit-sharing, stock bonus, and bond purchase plans; the tax treatment of employees and their beneficiaries and deduction for employer contributions under such plans; and the applicability of the prohibited transactions provisions of section 4975 of the Code. The Director, Actuarial Division, has primary responsibility for matters requiring actuarial determinations.

.18 A taxpayer desiring to obtain information as to the status of the taxpayer's case may do so by contacting the person indicated on the letter acknowledging receipt of the case.

.19 When a taxpayer receives a ruling or determination letter prior to the filing of a return with respect to any transaction that has been consummated and that is relevant to the return being filed, a copy of the ruling or determination letter should be attached to the return.

.20 If after receiving the notice pursant to section 6110(f)(1) of the Code of intention to disclose the ruling or determination letter (including a copy of the version proposed to be open to public inspection and notations of third party communications pursant to section 6110(d)), the taxpayer requesting the ruling or determination letter desires to protest the disclosure of certain information in the ruling or determination letter, the taxpayer must submit to the office indicated in the notice a written statement within 20 calendar days after the notice is mailed. The statement must identify those deletions not made by the Service that the taxpayer believes should have been made. The taxpayer must also submit a copy of the version of the ruling or determination letter proposed to be open to public inspection on which the taxpayer indicates, by the use of brackets, the deletions proposed by the taxpayer that have not been made by the Service. Generally, the Service will not consider the deletion of any material that the taxpayer did not propose be deleted prior to the issuance of the ruling or determination letter. The Service shall, within 20 days after receipt of the response by the taxpayer to the notice, mail to the taxpayer its final administrative conclusion regarding the deletions to be made.

.21 After receiving the notice pursant to section 6110(f)(1) of the Code of intention to disclose (but no later than 60 days after such notice is mailed), the taxpayer may submit a request for delay of public inspection pursant to either section 6110(g)(3) or sections 6110(g)(3) and (4). The request for delay shall be submitted to the office indicated in the notice and shall contain the date on which it is expected that the underlying transaction will be completed. The request for delay pursuant to section 6110(g)(4) must contain a statement from which the Commissioner may determine that good cause exists to warrant such delay.

SEC. 7. CONFERENCES IN THE NATIONAL OFFICE

.01 If a conference has been requested, the taxpayer will be notified of the time and place of the conference. A conference is normally scheduled only when the Service deems it will be helpful in deciding the case or an adverse decision is indicated. If conferences are being arranged with respect to more than one request for a ruling involving the same taxpayer, they will be so scheduled as to cause the least inconvenience to the taxpayer.

.02 A taxpayer is entitled, as a matter of right, to only one conference in the National Office unless one of the circumstances discussed in section 7.04 develops. This conference will usually be held at the branch level of the appropriate division in the office of the Assistant Commissioner (Employee Plans and Exempt Organizations) within 21 days of the date the taxpayer was notified that the National Office was ready to schedule a conference, and will usually be attended by a person who has authority to represent the branch chief. If more than one subject is to be discussed at the conference, the discussion will constitute a conference with respect to each subject. In order to promote a free and open discussion of the issues, the conference will usually be held after the branch has had an opportunity to study the case. However, at the request of the taxpayer, the conference may be held at an earlier stage in the consideration of the case than the Service would ordinarily designate. No taxpayer has a "right" to appeal the action of a branch to a division director or to any other official of the Service, nor is a taxpayer entitled, as a matter of right, to a separate conference in the Chief Counsel's office on a request for a ruling.

.03 Since conference procedures are informal, no tape, stenographic, or other verbatim recording of a conference will be made.

.04 In the process of consideration in the National Office of a position proposed by a branch, it may appear that the final answer will involve a reversal of the branch proposal with a result that will be less favorable to the taxpayer. Or it may appear that an adverse position proposed by a branch will be sustained, but on a new or different issue or on substantially different grounds than those on which the branch decided the case. Under either of these circumstances, the taxpayer will be invited to another conference. The provisions of this revenue procedure limiting the number of conferences a taxpayer is entitled to will not foreclose the invitation of a taxpayer to attend further conferences when, in the opinion of National Office personnel, such need arises. All additional conferences of the type discussed in this paragraph are held only at the invitation of the Service.

.05 It is the responsibility of the taxpayer to add to the case file within 21 days after the date of the conference a written record of any additional data, lines of reasoning, precedents, etc., which are proposed by the taxpayer and discussed at the conference but which were not previously or adequately presented in writing.

SEC. 8. REFERENCE OF MATTERS TO THE NATIONAL OFFICE

.01 Requests for determination letters, received by the key District Directors that, in accordance with the provisions of section 4 of this revenue procedure, may not be acted upon by a key district office, will be forwarded to the National Office for reply and the taxpayer advised accordingly. Key District Directors also refer to the National Office any request for a determination letter that in their judgment warrants the attention of the National Office. See also the provisions of Rev. Procs. 80-29 and 80-30 with respect to requests relating to qualification of a plan involving sections 401, 403(a), and 405(a) of the Code, and Rev. Procs. 72-5, 80-25, and 80-27 with respect to applications for recognition of exempt status under sections 501 and 521.

.02 If the request is with regard to an issue or an area with respect to which the Service will not issue a ruling or a determination letter, such request will not be forwarded to the National Office, but the key district office will advise the taxpayer that the Service will not issue a ruling or a determination letter on the issue. See section 5.01 of this revenue procedure.

SEC. 9. REFERENCE OF MATTERS TO KEY DISTRICT OFFICES

Requests for rulings received by the National Office that, in accordance with the provisions of section 3 of this revenue procedure, may not be acted upon by the National Office will be forwarded for appropriate action to the key district office that has or will have audit jurisdiction. The taxpayer will be advised accordingly. If the request is with respect to an issue or an area of the type discussed in section 5.01, the taxpayer will be so advised and the request may be forwarded to the appropriate key district office for association with the related return or report of the taxpayer.

SEC. 10. REVIEW OF DETERMINATION LETTERS

.01 Determination letters issued with respect to the types of inquiries authorized by section 4.01 are not generally reviewed by the National Office as they merely inform a taxpayer of a position of the Service which has been previously established either in the regulations or in a ruling, opinion, or court decision published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin. If a taxpayer believes that a determination letter of this type is in error, the taxpayer may ask the key District Director to reconsider the matter. The taxpayer may also ask the key District Director to request advice from the National Office. In such event the procedure in Rev. Proc. 80-26 will be followed.

.02 The procedures for review of determination letters relating to the qualification of employers' plans involving sections 401, 403(a), and 405 (a) of the Code are provided in Rev. Proc. 80-30.

.03 The procedures for review of determination letters relating to the exemption from federal income tax of certain organizations under sections 501 and 521 of the Code are provided in Rev. Proc. 80-25.

SEC. 11. WITHDRAWAL OF REQUESTS

The taxpayer's request for a ruling or a determination letter may be withdrawn at any time prior to the signing of the letter of reply. However, in such a case, the National Office may furnish its views to the key District Director whose office has or will have audit jurisdiction of the taxpayer's return. The key District Director will consider the information submitted in any subsequent audit or examination of the taxpayer's return. Even though a request is withdrawn, all correspondence and exhibits will be retained in the Service and will not be returned to the taxpayer.

SEC. 12. ORAL ADVICE TO TAXPAYERS

.01 The Service does not issue rulings or determination letters upon oral requests. Furthermore, National Office officials and employees ordinarily will not discuss a substantive tax issue with a taxpayer prior to the receipt of a written request for a ruling, since oral opinions or advice are not binding on the Service. Persons who phone the National Office for oral advice are provided with the telephone number (toll-free if long distance) of the nearest office with Taxpayer Service personnel.

.02 A taxpayer may, of course, seek oral technical assistance from a key district office in the preparation of his or her return or report, pursuant to other established procedures. Such oral advice is advisory only and the Service is not bound to recognize it in any examination or audit.

.03 Taxpayer Service personnel will provide the answers to questions on procedural matters such as the application of the provisions of section 6 above, and questions relating to filing requirements, to obtaining plan determinations or recognition of exempt status. Taxpayer Service will also answer substantive questions on individual retirement savings arrangements, self-employed retirement plans, rollovers, and the taxability of pension distributions.

.01 A taxpayer may not rely on an advance ruling issued to another taxpayer. A ruling, except to the extent incorporated in a closing agreement, may be revoked or modified at any time in the wise administration of the taxing statutes. See section 2.09 for the effect of a closing agreement. If a ruling is revoked or modified, the revocation or modification applies to all open years under the statutes, unless the Commissioner or the Assistant Commissioner or Deputy Assistant Commissioner (Employee Plans and Exempt Organizations) exercises the discretionary authority under section 7805(b) of the Code to limit the retroactive effect of the revocation or modification. The manner in which the Commissioner or the Assistant Commissioner or Deputy Assistant Commissioner (Employee Plans and Exempt Organizations) generally will exercise this authority is set forth in this section.

.02 As part of the determination of a taxpayer's liability, it is the responsibility of the key District Director to ascertain whether any ruling previously issued to the taxpayer has been properly applied. It should be determined whether the representations upon which the ruling was based reflected an accurate statement of the material facts and whether the transaction actually was carried out substantially as proposed. If, in the course of the determination of the tax liability, it is the view of the key District Director that a ruling previously issued to the taxpayer should be modified or revoked, the findings and recommendations of that office will be forwarded to the National Office for consideration prior to further action. Such reference to the National Office will be treated as a request for technical advice and the procedures of Rev. Proc. 80-26 will be followed. Otherwise, the ruling is to be applied by the key district office in its determination of the taxpayer's liability.

.03 Appropriate coordination with the National Office will be undertaken in the event that any other field official having jurisdiction of a return or other matter proposes to reach a conclusion contrary to a ruling previously issued to the taxpayer.

.04 A ruling found to be in error or not in accord with the current views of the Service may be modified or revoked. Modification or revocation may be effected by (1) a notice to the taxpayer to whom the ruling originally was issued, (2) enactment of legislation or ratification of a tax treaty, (3) a decision of the United States Supreme Court, (4) issuance of temporary or final regulations, or (5) issuance of a revenue ruling, a revenue procedure, or other statement published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin.

.05 Except in rare or unusual circumstances, the revocation or modification of a ruling will not be applied retroactively with respect to the taxpayer to whom the ruling was originally issued or to a taxpayer whose tax liability was directly involved in such ruling if (1) there has been no misstatement or omission of material facts, (2) the facts subsequently developed are not materially different from the facts on which the ruling was based, (3) there has been no change in the applicable law, (4) the ruling was originally issued with respect to a prospective or proposed transaction, and (5) the taxpayer directly involved in the ruling acted in good faith in reliance upon the ruling and the retroactive revocation would be to the taxpayer's detriment. To illustrate, the tax liability of each employee covered by a ruling relating to a pension plan of an employer is directly involved in such ruling. However, the tax liability of members of an industry is not directly involved in a ruling issued to one of the members, and the holding in a revocation or modification of a ruling to one member of an industry may be retroactively applied to other members of that industry. By the same reasoning, a tax practitioner may not obtain the nonretroactive application to one client of a modification or revocation of a ruling previously issued to another client. Where a ruling to a taxpayer is revoked with retroactive effect, the notice to such taxpayer will, except in fraud cases, set forth the grounds upon which the revocation is being made and the reasons why the revocation is being applied retroactively.

.06 A ruling issued to a taxpayer with respect to a particular transaction represents a holding of the Service on that transaction only. However, the application of that ruling to the transaction will not be affected by the subsequent issuance of regulations (either temporary or final), if the conditions specified in section 13.05 above are met. If the ruling is later found to be in error or no longer in accord with the holding of the Service, it will afford the taxpayer no protection with respect to a like transaction in the same or subsequent year, except to the extent provided in section 13.07.

.07 If a ruling is issued covering a continuing action or a series of actions and it is determined that the ruling was in error or no longer in accord with the holding of the Service, the Assistant Commissioner (Employee Plans and Exempt Organizations) ordinarily will limit the retroactivity of the revocation or modification to a date not earlier than that on which the original ruling is modified or revoked. Consistent with these provisions, if a ruling relates to a continuing aciton or a series of actions, the ruling will be applied until the date of issuance of applicable regulations or the publication of a revenue ruling holding otherwise, or until specifically withdrawn. Publication of a notice of proposed rulemaking will not affect the application of any ruling issued under the procedures set forth herein. (As to the effective date in cases involving revocation or modification of rulings or determination letters recognizing exemption, see section 13.01 of Rev. Proc. 80-25.)

.08 In the case of rulings involving completed transactions, other than those described in .07, above, taxpayers will not be afforded the protection against retroactive revocation provided in .05 above in the case of proposed transactions since they will not have entered into the transactions in reliance on the ruling.

.01 A determination letter issued by a key District Director in accordance with this revenue procedure will be given the same effect upon examination or audit as is described in section 13 except that reference to the National Office is not necessary where, upon examination or audit, it is the opinion of the key District Director that a conclusion contrary to that expressed in the determination letter is indicated. Except as provided in Delegation Order No. 96 (Rev. 4) with respect to certain employee plans determination letters, the key District Director may not limit the modification or revocation of a determination letter but must refer the matter to the National Office for exercise by the Commissioner or the Assistant Commissioner (Employee Plans and Exempt Organizations) of the authority to limit the modification or revocation.

.02 In this connection see also Rev. Procs. 80-25 and 80-30.

SEC. 15. EFFECT OF INFORMATION LETTERS

An information letter issued by the National Office or by a key District Director is advisory only and the provisions of section 13 of this revenue procedure do not apply.

SEC. 16. PROCEDURE FOR REQUESTING APPLICATION OF SECTION 7805(b) IN THE CASE OF RULINGS AND DETERMINATION LETTERS

.01 Pursuant to section 7805(b) of the Code, it is within the discretion of the Commissioner or the Commissioner's delegate to prescribe the extent, if any, to which any ruling (including determination letters) will be applied without retroactive effect. A taxpayer to whom a ruling or determination letter has been issued may request that the Assistant Commissioner (Employee Plans and Exempt Organizations), the Commissioner's delegate, exercise the discretionary authority under section 7805(b) to limit the retroactive effect of any subsequent revocation or modification of the ruling or determination letter.

.02 In the case of a ruling seeking section 7805(b) relief, a request to limit the retroactive effect of the revocation or modification must be in the form of, and meet the requirements for, a ruling request generally. These requirements are set forth in section 6. Specifically, the request must state that it is being made pursuant to section 7805(b) of the Code, contain a statement of the relief sought and an explanation of the reasons and arguments in support of the relief requested, and also be accompanied by any documents bearing on the request. The explanation in support of the application of section 7805(b) should include a discussion of the five items enumerated in section 13.05 as they relate to the taxpayer's particular situation. A request for the application of section 7805(b) may take the form of a separate request for a ruling when, for example, a revenue ruling has the effect of modifying or revoking a ruling previously issued to the taxpayer or when the Service notifies the taxpayer of a change in position that will have the effect of revoking or modifying such a ruling. When germane to a pending ruling request, a request for the application of section 7805(b) may be made as part of the request, either initially or at any time before the ruling is issued. When a ruling that concerns a continuing transaction is modified or revoked by, for example, a subsequent revenue ruling, a request to limit the retroactive effect of the modification or revocation of the ruling must be made before a return is examined that contains the transaction that is the subject of the request for a ruling.

.03 When a request for the application of section 7805(b) of the Code is made in a separate ruling request, the taxpayer has the right to a conference in the National Office in accordance with the provisions of section 7. If the request is made initially as part of a pending ruling request or is made before the conference of right is held on the substantive issues, the section 7805(b) issue will be discussed at the taxpayer's one conference of right (see section 7.02). If the request is made as part of a pending ruling request after a conference has been held on the substantive issue, and the Service determines that there is justification for having delayed the request, then the taxpayer will have the right to one conference of right concerning the application of section 7805(b) with the conference limited to discussion of this issue.

.04 In the case of a determination letter that the key District Director proposes to modify or revoke, a request to limit the modification or revocation of the determination letter must be made by requesting the key District Director who issued the determination letter to seek technical advice from the National Office, since a key District Director has not been delegated authority under section 7805(b) of the Code to limit the modification or revocation of a determination letter (except as provided in Delegation Order No. 96 (Rev. 4), regarding certain employee plans letters). The taxpayer's request must state that it is being made pursuant to section 7805 (b), contain a statement of the relief sought and an explanation of the reasons and arguments in support of the relief requested, and also be accompanied by any documents bearing on the request. The explanation in support of the application of section 7805(b) should include a discussion of the five items enumerated in section 13.05 as they relate to the taxpayer's particular situation.

.05 When technical advice is requested with respect to the application of section 7805(b) of the Code under the circumstances set forth in .04 above, the taxpayer has a right to a conference in the National Office to the same extent as does a taxpayer who is the subject of a technical advice request involving another section of the Code. See section 6 of Rev. Proc. 80-26.

Sec. 17. Effective Date

This revenue procedure is effective June 30, 1980, the date of its publication in the Internal Revenue Bulletin.

26 CFR 601.201: Rulings and determination letters.
(Also Part I, Sections 170, 501, 509, 521, 4942, 7428; 1.170A-1, 1.501(a)-1, 1.509 (a)-1, 1.521-1, 53.4942(b)-1.)

Rev. Proc. 80-25

Section 1. Purpose

This revenue procedure sets forth revised procedures with regard to applications for recognition of exemption from federal income tax under sections 501 and 521 of the Internal Revenue Code and with respect to revocation or modification of exemption rulings and determination letters, other than those subject to Rev. Proc. 80-30, page 56, this Bulletin (relating to pension, annuity, profit-sharing, and stock bonus plans). This revenue procedure also supplements Rev. Proc. 76-34, 1976-2 C.B. 656, with respect to the effects of section 7428 on the classification of organizations under sections 509(a) and 4942(j)(3). See Rev. Proc. 80-27, page 49, this Bulletin, for procedures under which exemption may be recognized on a group basis for subordinate organizations affiliated with and under the general supervision or control of a central organization. Also, see Rev. Proc. 72-5, 1972-1 C.B. 709, for information on applications for recognition of exemption filed by certain religious and apostolic organizations. Requests for rulings or determination letters generally are governed by the procedures outlined in Rev. Proc. 80-24, page 30, this Bulletin.

Sec. 2. Nature of Changes

This revenue procedure combines and updates the procedures previously set forth in Rev Proc. 72-4, 1972-1 C.B. 706, relating to processing requests for exemption, Rev. Proc. 76-33, 1976-2 C.B. 655, relating to the appeal procedures with regard to adverse determination letters and revocation or modification of exemption rulings and determination letters, and Rev. Proc. 77-21, 1977-1 C.B. 586, relating to the issuance of determinations and related matters to which section 7428 of the Code applies. This is due to the establishment of a single appeals function in each region, headed by a Regional Director of Appeals. The new Appeals office now has responsibility for the appeals function formerly performed by the office of the Assistant Regional Commissioner (Employee Plans and Exempt Organizations). In line with the new appeals procedures, the certiorari appeal to the National Office previously provided has been eliminated. The right to seek technical advice from the National Office, however, has been expanded to include requests from both district and Appeals offices and, in certain cases, has been made mandatory (see Rev. Proc. 80-26, page 43, this Bulletin). Rev. Proc. 77-31, 1977-2 C.B. 540, relating to the appeals procedures regarding the imposition of certain taxes on organizations exempt under section 501 or 521, is being revoked since the Regional Director of Appeals now handles all appeals of additional tax determinations. Since appeals from exempt organizations on such matters will be handled in the same manner as other taxes, a separate revenue procedure is unnecessary. Regarding the effective date of revocation or modification of exemption letters, the general rule previously set forth in Rev. Proc. 72-4 has been revised to conform to the general rules concerning effective date as currently set forth in Rev. Proc. 80-24. Austin and Jacksonville are eliminated from the list of key districts since their functions have been taken over by Dallas and Atlanta, respectively. A reference to discussion of contrary authorities has been added.

Sec. 3. General

.01 When used in this revenue procedure, the term "key District Director" means the District Director of one of the 17 key district offices for exempt organization matters.

.02 The term "determination letter" refers to a letter issued by a key District Director, or an Appeals office in the case of an exemption application, in response to a written inquiry by an individual or an organization that applies to the particular facts involved, and to the principles and precedents previously announced by the National Office. This includes a letter issued on the basis of advice secured from the National Office pursuant to the procedures prescribed herein and in Rev. Proc. 80-26. The term "ruling" refers to a letter issued by the National Office.

.03 The declaratory judgment provisions of section 7428 of the Code, with regard to this revenue procedure, apply to an actual controversy involving a determination by the Service or a failure by the Service to make a determination with respect to the initial or continuing qualification or classification of an organization under section 501(c)(3) (charitable, educational, etc.); 170(c)(2) (deductibility of contributions); 509(a) (private foundation status); or 4942(j)(3) (operating foundation status).

SEC. 4. FILING AND PROCESSING APPLICATIONS FOR RECOGNITION OF EXEMPTIONS

An organization seeking recognition of exempt status under section 501 or 521 of the Code is required to file an application with the key District Director for the Internal Revenue District in which is located the principal place of business or principal office of the organization. Following are the 17 key district offices that process the applications, the Internal Revenue districts covered by each, and the regional office designations:

Key District(s)	IRS Districts Covered
	Central Region
Cincinnati	Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Louisville.
Cleveland	Cleveland, Parkersburg.
Detroit	Detroit.
	Mit-Atlantic Region
Baltimore	Baltimore (which includes the District of Columbia and Office of International Operations), Pittsburgh, Richmond.
Philadelphia	Philadelphia, Wilmington.
Newark	Newark.
	Midwest Region
Chicago	Chicago.
St. Paul	Aberdeen, Fargo, Milwaukee, St. Paul.
St. Louis	Des Moines, Omaha, St. Louis, Springfield.
	North-Atlantic Region
Boston	Augusta, Boston, Burlington, Hartford, Portsmouth, Providence.
Manhattan	Manhattan.
Brooklyn	Albany, Brooklyn, Buffalo.
	Southeast Region
Atlanta	Atlanta, Birmingham, Columbia, Greensboro, Jackson, Jacksonville, Nashville.
	Southwest Region
Dallas	Albuquerque, Austin, Cheyenne, Dallas, Denver, Little Rock, New Orleans, Oklahoma City, Wichita.
	Western Region
Los Angeles	Honolulu, Los Angeles, Phoenix.
San Francisco	Reno, Salt Lake City, San Francisco.
Seattle	Anchorage, Boise, Helena, Portland, Seattle.

SEC. 5. STANDARDS FOR ISSUING RULINGS OR DETERMINATION LETTERS WITH RESPECT TO EXEMPT STATUS

.01 A ruling or determination letter will be issued to an organization, provided its application and supporting documents establish that it meets the particular requirements of the section under which exemption is claimed. Any oral representation of additional facts or modification of facts as represented or alleged in the application for a ruling or determination letter must be reduced to writing over the signature of the taxpayer or authorized representative.

.02 Exempt status will be recognized in advance of operations if proposed operations can be described in sufficient detail to permit a conclusion that the organization will clearly meet the particular requirements of the section under which exemption is claimed. A mere restatement of purposes or a statement that proposed activities will be in furtherance of such purposes will not satisfy this requirement. The organization must fully describe the activities in which it expects to engage, including the standards, criteria, procedures, or other means adopted or planned for carrying out the activities; the anticipated sources of receipts; and the nature of contemplated expenditures. Where the organization cannot demonstrate to the satisfaction of the Service that its proposed activities will be exempt, a record of actual operations may be required before a ruling or determination letter will be issued. In those cases where an organization is unable to describe fully its purposes and activities, a refusal to issue a ruling or determination letter will be considered an adverse determination from which administrative appeal rights will be afforded.

.03 Where an application for recognition of exemption does not contain the required information, the application may be returned to the applicant without being considered on its merits with an appropriate letter of explanation. In the case of an application under section 501(c)(3) of the Code that is returned, the applicant will also be informed of the time within which the completed application must be resubmitted in order for the application to be considered as a timely notice within the meaning of section 508(a).

.04 A ruling or determination letter recognizing exemption will not ordinarily be issued if an issue involving the organization's exempt status under section 501 or 521 of the Code is pending in litigation or is under consideration within the Service.

.05 In the case of an application under section 501(c)(3) of the Code, the 270-day period referred to in section 7428(b)(2) will be considered by the Service to begin on the date a substantially completed Form 1023, Application for Recognition of Exemption Under Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code, is filed with or mailed to the appropriate key District Director. A substantially completed Form 1023 is one that:

1 is signed by an authorized individual;

2 includes an Employer Identification Number (EIN) or a completed Form SS-4, Application for Employer Identification Number;

3 includes a statement of receipts and expenditures and a balance sheet for the current year and the three preceding years (or the years the organization was in existence, if less than four years). If the organization has not yet commenced operations, or has not completed one accounting period, a proposed budget for two full accounting periods and a current statement of assets and liabilities will be acceptable;

4 includes a statement of proposed activities and a description of anticipated receipts and contemplated expenditures;

5 includes a copy of the organizing or enabling document that is signed by a principal officer or is accompanied by a written declaration signed by an officer authorized to sign for the organization certifying that the document is a complete and accurate copy of the original; and

6 if the organization is a corporation or unincorporated association and it has adopted by-laws, includes a copy that is signed or otherwise verified as current by an authorized officer.

.06 If a Form 1023 does not contain all of the items set out in section 5.05, it will not be further processed and may be returned to the applicant for completion. The 270-day period will not be considered as starting until the date the Form 1023 is refiled with or remailed to the Service with the requested information, or, if remailed and a postmark is not evident, on the date the Service receives a substantially completed Form 1023.

.07 If the application for recognition of exemption involves an issue where contrary authorities exist, failure to disclose and distinguish significant contrary authorities may result in requests for additional information, which will delay action on the application (see section 6.06 of Rev. Proc. 80-24).

SEC. 6. ISSUING RULINGS OR KEY DISTRICT DETERMINATION LETTERS WITH RESPECT TO EXEMPT STATUS

.01 Under the general procedures outlined in Rev. Proc. 80-24, key District Directors are authorized to issue determination letters involving applications for recognition of exemption under sections 501 and 521 of the Code.

.02 A key District Director will refer to the National Office those applications that present questions the answers to which are not specifically covered by statute or regulations, or by a ruling, opinion, or court decision published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin. In addition, key District Directors will refer those applications that have been specifically reserved by revenue procedure and/or Internal Revenue Manual instructions for National Office handling for purposes of establishing uniformity or centralized control of designated categories of cases. The National Office will consider each such application, issue a ruling directly to the organization, and send a copy of the ruling to the key District Director. In the event of a conclusion unfavorable to the applicant, it will be informed of the basis for the conclusion and of its right to file a protest with and for a conference in the National Office. If a conference is requested, the conference procedures outlined in sections 7.02, 7.03, and 7.04 of Rev. Proc. 80-24 will be followed.

.03 If the key District Director proposes to recognize exemption of an organization to which the National Office had issued a previous contrary ruling or technical advice, the key District Director must seek technical advice from the National Office before issuing a determination letter. See Rev. Proc. 80-26.

.04 If at any time during the course of consideration of an exemption application the organization believes that its case involves an issue on which there is no published precedent or there is nonuniformity between districts, the organization should ask the key District Director to request technical advice from the National Office. See Rev. Proc. 80-26.

SEC. 7. WITHDRAWAL OF APPLICATIONS

.01 Applications for recognition of exemption under section 501 or 521 of the Code may be withdrawn, upon the written request of a principal officer or authorized representative of the organization, at any time prior to the issuance of the ruling or determination letter. Even though the application is withdrawn, however, the application and all supporting documents will be retained by the Service and will not be returned to the organization.

.02 In the case of an application under section 501(c)(3) of the Code, a withdrawal will not be considered by the Service as either a failure to make a determination within the meaning of section 7428(a)(2) or as an exhaustion of administrative remedies within the meaning of section 7428(b)(2).

SEC. 8. NATIONAL OFFICE POST REVIEW OF DETERMINATION LETTERS

.01 The Exempt Organizations Division, or the Corporate Tax Division for cases under section 521 of the Code, in the National Office will review key district determination letters after issuance to assure uniformity in application of the statutes or regulations, or rulings, opinions, or court decisions published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin.

.02 Where the National Office takes exception to a key district determination letter, the key District Director will be advised. If the organization protests the exception taken, the file and protest will be returned to the National Office. The referral will be treated as a request for technical advice and sections 6, 7, and 8 of Rev. Proc. 80-26 will be followed.

SEC. 9. PROTEST OF ADVERSE DETERMINATION LETTERS

.01 Upon the issuance of an adverse determination letter or a letter proposing revocation or modification of exempt status, the key District Director will advise the organization of its right to protest the determination by requesting Appeals office consideration. To do this, the organization must submit to the key District Director within 30 days from the date of the letter, a statement of the facts, law, and arguments in support of its position. The organization must also state whether it wishes an Appeals office conference.

.02 Any determination letter that is issued on the basis of National Office technical advice may not be appealed to the Appeals office regarding those issues that were the subject of the technical advice.

.03 Upon receipt of an organization's request for Appeals office consideration, the key district will, if it maintains its position, forward the request and the case file to the Chief of the appropriate Appeals office.

Sec. 10. Consideration at the Appeals Office

.01 The Appeals office, after considering the organization's protest and any additional information developed in conference, will advise the organization of its decision and issue the appropriate determination letter to the organization.

.02 Organizations should make full presentation of the facts, circumstances, and arguments at the initial level of consideration by the Appeals office, since submission of additional facts, circumstances, and arguments may result in suspension of appeal procedures and referral of the case back to the key district for additional consideration. Any oral representation of additional facts or modification of facts originally represented or alleged must be reduced to writing.

.03 If the Appeals office believes that an exemption or private foundation status issue is not covered by published precedent or that there is nonuniformity, the Appeals office must request technical advice from the National Office. Unless the Appeals office feels that the conclusions reached by the National Office should be reconsidered and promptly requests such consideration, the case will be disposed of by the Appeals office on the basis of the decision in the technical advice memorandum. See Rev. Proc. 80-26.

.04 If at any time during the course of Appeals office consideration the organization believes that its case involves an issue on which there is no published precedent or there is nonuniformity between districts, the organization should ask the Appeals office to request technical advice from the National Office. See Rev. Proc. 80-26.

.05 If the proposed disposition by the Appeals office is contrary to a prior National Office technical advice or ruling concerning tax exemption on the case, the proposed disposition will be submitted through the Office of the Regional Director of Appeals to the Assistant Commissioner (Employee Plans and Exempt Organizations), or, in a case under section 521 of the Code, to the Assistant Commissioner (Technical). Unless the Appeals office feels that the conclusions reached by the National Office should be reconsidered and promptly requests such consideration, the decision of the National Office will be followed by the Appeals office. In any event, the Assistant Commissioner will make the final decision.

Sec. 11. Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies for Declaratory Judgment Purposes

.01 Section 7428 of the Code, in part, requires that an organization seeking initial or continuing recognition of exemption under section 501 (c)(3) must exhaust its administrative remedies by taking timely, reasonable steps to secure a determination prior to filing for declaratory judgment. Those steps and administrative remedies required to be exhausted within the Service are:

1 the filing of a substantially completed application Form 1023 pursuant to section 5.05 or the filing of a request for a determination of foundation status pursuant to Rev. Proc. 76-34;

2 the timely submission of all additional information requested by the Service to perfect an exemption application or request for determination of private foundation status; and

3 exhaustion of all administrative appeals available within the Service pursuant to sections 9 and 10, or appeal of a proposed adverse ruling pursuant to section 6.02 in National Office original jurisdiction exemption application cases.

.02 An organization will in no event be deemed to have exhausted its administrative remedies prior to the earlier of:

1 the completion of the steps in section 11.01, and the sending by certified or registered mail of a notice of final determination; or

2 the expiration of the 270-day period described in section 7428(b)(2) of the Code in a case where the Service has not issued a notice of final determination and the organization has taken, in a timely manner, all reasonable steps to secure a ruling or determination.

.03 The steps described in section 11.01 will not be considered completed until the Service has had a reasonable time to act upon the appeal or request for consideration, as the case may be.

.04 A notice of final determination to which section 7428 of the Code applies is a ruling or determination letter, sent by certified or registered mail, which holds that the organization is not described in section 501(c)(3) or 170(c)(2), is a private foundation as defined in section 509(a), or is not a private operating foundation as defined in section 4942(j)(3).

Sec. 12. Effect of Rulings or Determination Letters Recognizing Exemption

.01 A ruling or determination letter recognizing exemption is usually effective as of the date of formation of an organization if its purposes and activities during the period prior to the date of the ruling or determination letter were consistent with the requirements for exemption. However, for special rules regarding organizations formed after October 9, 1969, applying for recognition of exemption under section 501(c)(3) of the Code, see section 508(a) and Rev. Rul 77-208, 1977-1 C.B. 153. If the organization is required to alter its activities or to make substantive amendments to its enabling instrument, the ruling or determination letter recognizing its exempt status will be effective as of the date specified therein.

.02 A ruling or determination letter recognizing exemption may not be relied upon if there is a material change, inconsistent with exemption, in the character, the purpose, or the method of operation of the organization.

Sec. 13. Revocation or Modification of Rulings or Determination Letters Recognizing Exemption

.01 A ruling or determination letter recognizing exemption may be revoked or modified by a subsequent ruling or determination letter addressed to the organization, or by a revenue ruling or other statement published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin. The revocation or modification may be retroactive if the organization omitted or misstated a material fact, operated in a manner materially different from that originally represented, or, in the case of organizations to which section 503 of the Code applies, engaged in a prohibited transaction with the purpose of diverting corpus or income of the organization from its exempt purpose and such transaction involved a substantial part of the corpus or income of such organization. Where there is a material change, inconsistent with exemption, in the character, the purpose, or the method of operation of an organization, revocation or modification will ordinarily take effect as of the date of such material change. In cases where a ruling or determination letter was issued in error or is no longer in accord with the holding of the Service, retroactivity of the revocation or modification ordinarily will be limited to a date not earlier than that on which the original ruling or determination letter is modified or revoked.

.02 In the case of a revocation or modification, the protest and conference procedures are the same as set out in sections 9 and 10, including the right of the organization to request that the key District Director or the Chief, Appeals Office, seek technical advice from the National Office. If the case involves a status issue on which the National Office had issued a previous contrary ruling or technical advice, the key District Director must seek technical advice from the National Office.

.03 The provisions of sections 9 and 10 relating to protest and conference rights before a final revocation notice is issued are not applicable to matters where delay would be prejudicial to the interests of the Internal Revenue Service (such as in cases involving fraud, jeopardy, the imminence of the expiration of the statute of limitations, or where imediate action is necessary to protect the interests of the Government).

SEC. 14. EFFECT ON OTHER DOCUMENTS

Rev. Procs. 72-4, 76-33, and 77-21, 1977-1 C.B. 586, are superseded. Sections 3.01, 3.04, 4.02, 6.02, 6.04, and 8.02 of Rev. Proc. 76-34 are modified to the extent that this revenue procedure supersedes Rev. Procs. 72-4 and 76-33. Rev. Proc. 77-31, is revoked.

SEC. 15. EFFECTIVE DATE

This revenue procedure is effective June 30, 1980, the date of its publication in the Internal Revenue Bulletin.

26 CFR 601.201: Rulings and determination letters.

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

.01 This revenue procedure sets forth revised procedures for furnishing technical advice from the National Office regarding employee plans (including actuarial matters) and exempt organizations. It is also intended to inform taxpayers of their rights when such advice is requested. Technical advice will be furnished only upon the request of key District Directors or Appeals offices, on their own behalf or on the behalf of the taxpayers, in connection with issues raised at either the district level (including the Office of International Operations) or at the Appeals level. Technical advice may be requested at any stage in the district or Appeals office proceedings, but should be made at the earliest possible stage.

.02 Technical advice procedures regarding excise taxes (other than the excise taxes imposed under Chapters 41, 42, and 43 of the Internal Revenue Code), and employment taxes that employee plans and exempt organizations may be subject to, are set forth in Rev. Proc. 80-21, page 19, this Bulletin.

.03 Requests for technical advice regarding farmers cooperative issues under section 521 of the Code should be submitted to the National Office, Attention: Assistant Commissioner (Technical), under the procedures in this revenue procedure.

.04 For purposes of this revenue procedure, any reference to EP/EO will mean Employee Plans and Exempt Organizations. When used in this revenue procedure, the term "key District Director" means the District Director of one of the key district offices as set out in Rev. Proc. 80-25, page 39, this Bulletin. The term "Appeals office" means the appeals organization established in each region headed by a Regional Director of Appeals. The term "taxpayer" includes all persons subject to any provision of the Internal Revenue Code and their authorized representative(s).

.05 With regard to requests for technical advice that are subject to the disclosure provisions of section 6110 of the Code, the taxpayer must follow the procedures in section 601.201(n)(9)(iii)(e) of the Statement of Procedural Rules (26 CFR Part 601). For guidance as to which technical advice requests are subject to section 6110, see section 301.6110-1(a) of the Regulations on Procedure and Administration (26 CFR Part 301).

SEC. 2. DEFINITION AND NATURE OF TECHNICAL ADVICE

.01 "Technical advice" as used in this revenue procedure means advice or guidance as to the interpretation and proper application of internal revenue laws, related statutes, tax treaties, regulations, revenue rulings, or other precedents published on employee plan and exempt organization matters by the National Office to a specific set of facts. Technical advice is furnished by the National Office upon request by a key district or Appeals office in connection with the examination of a taxpayer's return or consideration of a taxpayer's claim for refund or credit, or request for a determination letter. It is furnished as a means of assisting Service personnel in closing cases and establishing and maintaining consistent holdings in the several key districts. It does not include memoranda on matters of general technical application furnished to key district or Appeals offices where the issues are not raised in connection with the examination of a taxpayer's return or a request for a determination letter.

.02 The Assistant Commissioner (EP/EO), acting under a delegation of authority from the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, is exclusively responsible for providing technical advice in any issue involving interpretation and application of certain tax laws that apply to employee plans (including actuarial matters) and exempt organizations (other than technical advice issues arising out of section 521 of the Code). This authority has been largely redelegated to subordinate officials.

.03 The provisions of this revenue procedure apply to EP/EO cases under the jurisdiction of either a key district office or an Appeals office. A case remains under the jurisdiction of a key district office even though the Appeals office has the identical issue under consideration in the case of another taxpayer (not related within the meaning of section 267 of the Code) in an entirely different transaction.

.04 Any determination letter on exempt status or private foundation status issued by a key district office on the basis of National Office technical advice may not, thereafter, be appealed to the Appeals office with regard to those status issues that were the subject of technical advice.

.05 If technical advice has been issued by the National Office to a key district office, that issue with regard to that taxpayer may not be the subject of a request for technical advice from the Appeals office that may receive the case on other grounds.

SEC. 3. AREAS IN WHICH TECHNICAL ADVICE MAY OR MUST BE REQUESTED

.01 Technical advice may be requested on any technical or procedural question that develops during the examination of a taxpayer's return, consideration of a taxpayer's claim for refund or credit, or request for a determination letter that does not come within the requirements of section 6.02 of Rev. Proc. 80-25 regarding exemption applications. These procedures are applicable as provided in section 2.

.02 Requests for technical advice are encouraged on any technical or procedural questions arising in connection with any case of the type described in section 2.02 at any stage of the proceedings in the key district or Appeals office that cannot be resolved on the basis of law, regulations, or a clearly applicable revenue ruling or other published precedent.

.03 Aside from the exemption application cases covered by the requirements of Rev. Proc. 80-25, key district and Appeals offices are required to request technical advice on their exempt organization cases concerning qualification for exemption or foundation status for which there is no published precedent or for which there is reason to believe that nonuniformity exists. Regarding employee plans matters, a request for technical advice is required on cases concerning (1) proposed revocation of letters on collectively-bargained plans, (2) plans for which the Service is proposing to issue a revocation letter because of certain fiduciary actions that violate the exclusive benefit rule of section 401(a) of the Code and are subject to Part 4, subtitle B of Title I of ERISA, Pub. L. 93-406, 1974-3 C.B. 1, 43, or (3) amendments to defined contribution plans pursuant to Rev. Proc. 78-14, 1978-2 C.B. 486, in connection with a waiver of the minimum funding standards and a request for a determination letter.

SEC. 4. REQUESTING TECHNICAL ADVICE

.01 It is the responsibility of the key district or Appeals office to determine whether technical advice is to be requested on any issue before that office. However, while the case is under the jurisdiction of the key district office or the Appeals office, a taxpayer may request that an issue be referred to the National Office for technical advice on the grounds that a lack of uniformity exists as to the disposition of the issue, or that the issue is so unusual or complex as to warrant consideration by the National Office. Taxpayers should make written requests to the key district office or the Appeals office setting forth the facts, law, and argument with respect to the issue, and reasons for requesting technical advice. If, after considering the taxpayer's request, the key district examiner or Appeals Officer is of the opinion that the circumstances do not warrant referral of the case to the National Office, that person will so advise the taxpayer. (See section 5 for a taxpayer's appeal rights where the key district examiner or Appeals Officer declines to request advice.)

.02 When technical advice is to be requested, whether or not upon the request of the taxpayer, the taxpayer will be so advised, except as noted in section 4.09. If the Service initiates the action, the taxpayer will be furnished a copy of the statement of the pertinent facts and the question or questions proposed for submission to the National Office. The facts and issues presented should be clear and complete. When the request for advice is made by a key district office, it shall be submitted directly to the National Office.

.03 Where the technical advice request is initiated by the key district or the Appeals office, the taxpayer will be given 10 calendar days after the issuance of the statement of facts and specific questions by the key district or Appeals office in which to indicate in writing the extent, if any, to which the taxpayer may not be in complete agreement with the statement. Every effort should be made to reach agreement as to the facts and the specific point at issue. If agreement cannot be reached, the taxpayer may submit a statement of the taxpayer's understanding as to the specific point or points at issue within 10 calendar days after the date the key district or Appeals office notifies the taxpayer in writing of disagreement as to the facts and issues. This statement will be forwarded to the National Office with the request for advice. Extensions of time beyond 10 days will be granted only if justified by the taxpayer in writing, and approved by the Chief, EP/EO Division, or the Chief (or Associate Chief), Appeals Office.

.04 Where the technical advice request is initiated by the taxpayer and the statement of the facts and point or points at issue submitted by the taxpayer is not wholly acceptable to the key district or Appeals officials, the taxpayer will be advised in writing as to the areas of disagreement. The taxpayer will be given 10 calendar days after the date of issuance of the written notice to reply to the key district or Appeals official's letter. Extensions of time beyond 10 days will be granted only if justified by the taxpayer in writing and approved by the Chief, EP/EO Division, or the Chief (or Associate Chief), Appeals Office. Every effort should be made to reach agreement on the facts. However, if agreement cannot be reached, both the statements of the taxpayer and the key district or Appeals official will be forwarded to the National Office.

.05 In the case of a request for technical advice subject to the disclosure provisions of section 6110 of the Code, the taxpayer must also submit, within the 10 day period referred to in section 4.03 or 4.04, whichever is applicable, a statement of proposed deletions as described below. The Service is required by section 6110(c) to make certain deletions from the text of technical advice memoranda. The taxpayer's statement of proposed deletions must be made in a separate document and may be either a statement of the taxpayer's proposed deletions or a statement that no information other than names, addresses, and identifying numbers need be deleted. The statement of proposed deletions shall be accompanied by a copy of all statements of facts and supporting documents that are submitted to the National Office on which shall be indicated, by the use of brackets, the material that the taxpayer indicates should be deleted pursuant to section 6110(c). The statement shall indicate the statutory basis for each proposed deletion and must not appear or be referred to anywhere in the request for technical advice. If the taxpayer decides to request additional deletions prior to the time the National Office replies to the request for technical advice, additional statements may be submitted. If the statement is not submitted, the taxpayer will be informed by the key district office or the Appeals office that the statement is required. If the key district office or the Appeals office does not receive the statement within 10 calendar days after the taxpayer has been informed of the need for the statement, the key district office or the Appeals office may decline to submit the request for technical advice. If the key district office or the Appeals office decides to request technical advice in a case where the taxpayer has not submitted the statement of proposed deletions, the National Office will make those deletions that, in the judgment of the Commissioner, are required by section 6110(c).

.06 Taxpayers may submit statements explaining their positions on the issue(s) in the requests for technical advice, citing precedents that they believe will bear on the cases. In addition, taxpayers are encouraged to comment on any legislation, tax treaties, regulations, revenue rulings, revenue procedures, or court decisions contrary to their position. These statements will be forwarded to the National Office with the request for advice. If they are received by the key district or Appeals office after the case has been transferred to the National Office, they will be forwarded for association with the case files.

.07 At the time the taxpayers are informed that the matter is being referred to the National Office, they will also be informed of their right to a conference in the National Office in the event an adverse decision is indicated, and will be asked to state whether they desire such a conference.

.08 Generally, prior to replying to the request for technical advice, the National Office shall inform the taxpayer orally or in writing of the material likely to appear in the technical advice memorandum that the taxpayer proposed be deleted but which the Service determined should not be deleted. If so informed, the taxpayer may submit, within 10 calendar days, any further information, arguments, or other material in support of the position that such material be deleted. The Service will attempt, if feasible, to resolve all disagreement with respect to proposed deletions prior to the time the National Office replies to the request for technical advice. However, in no event shall the taxpayer have the right to a conference solely with respect to resolution of any disagreements concerning material to be deleted from the text of the technical advice memorandum, but such matters may be considered at any conference otherwise scheduled with respect to the request.

.09 The provisions of this section, relating to the referral of issues upon the request of a taxpayer, advising a taxpayer of the referral of issues, the submission of proposed deletions, and the granting of a conference in the National Office, are not applicable to matters primarily of internal administration or procedural concern or in instances that would be prejudicial to the interests of the government (as in cases involving fraud or jeopardy assessments). However, in cases involving criminal or civil fraud investigations and jeopardy or termination assessments, the taxpayer shall be allowed to provide the statement of proposed deletions to the National Office upon the completion of all proceedings with respect to the investigations or assessments, but prior to the date on which the Commissioner mails the notice pursuant to section 6110(f)(1) of the Code of intention to disclose the technical advice memorandum. See section 7.03.

.10 Form 5565, Request for Technical Advice—EP/EO, should be used for transmitting requests for technical advice to the National Office.

.11 See Rev. Proc. 79-63, 1979-2 C.B. 578, which concerns applications for extension of the time for making an election or application for relief pursuant to section 1.9100-1 of the regulations. If a taxpayer requests an extension of time under section 1.9100-1 during an examination or when an issue is being considered by an Appeals office, the procedures of Rev. Proc. 80-26 are applicable.

SEC. 5. APPEALS BY TAXPAYERS OF REFUSALS TO REQUEST TECHNICAL ADVICE

.01 If the taxpayer has requested referral of an issue before a key district or Appeals office to the National Office for technical advice, and after consideration of the request the key district examiner or the Appeals Officer is of the opinion that the circumstances do not warrant such referral, that person will so advise the taxpayer in writing.

.02 The taxpayer may appeal the decision of the key district examiner or the Appeals Officer not to request technical advice by submitting to that person, within 10 calendar days from the date of issuance of the notice of decision, a statement of the facts, law, and arguments that were not previously submitted with respect to the issue and the reasons why the taxpayer believes the matter should be referred to the National Office for advice. An extension of time will be granted only if it is justified by the taxpayer in writing and approved by the Chief, EP/EO Division, or the Chief (or Associate Chief), Appeals Office.

.03 The key district examiner or the Appeals Officer will submit the statement of the taxpayer, through channels, to the Chief, EP/EO Division, or to the Chief (or Associate Chief), Appeals Office, as appropriate, accompanied by a statement of the reason(s) why the issue should not be referred to the National Office. The Chief, EP/EO Division, or the Chief (or Associate Chief), Appeals Office, will determine, on the basis of the statements submitted, whether technical advice will be requested. If it is determined that technical advice is not warranted, the taxpayer will be informed of the proposal to deny the request in a letter that (except in unusual situations where such action would be prejudicial to the best interests of the government) will state specifically the reasons for the proposed denial to request technical advice. The taxpayer will be given 10 calendar days after receipt of the letter in which to notify the Chief, EP/EO Division, or the Chief (or Associate Chief), Appeals Office, of agreement or disagreement with the proposed denial. If there is disagreement, all data relating to the issue for which technical advice has been sought, including the taxpayer's written request and statements, will be submitted to the National Office, Attention: Director, Employee Plans, Exempt Organizations, or Actuarial Division, as appropriate, for review. After the National Office reviews the material, it will notify the key district or Appeals office whether technical advice should or should not be requested. The key district or Appeals office will then notify the taxpayer of the National Office decision.

.04 While the matter is being reviewed in the National Office, action on the issue will be suspended (except where the delay would prejudice the government's interests) until the appropriate office is notified of the National Office decision. This notification will be made within 30 calendar days after receipt of the data in the National Office. The review will be solely on the basis of the written record and no conference will be held in the National Office with respect to the question of whether technical advice should be requested.

Sec. 6. CONFERENCE IN THE NATIONAL OFFICE

.01 If, after the National Office considers the case file on a request for technical advice, it appears that advice adverse to the taxpayer should be given and a conference has been requested, the taxpayer will be notified of the time and place of the conference. (If a conference has not been requested, the case will be decided on the basis of the existing written record.) If conferences are being arranged with respect to more than one request for advice involving the same taxpayer, they will be scheduled so as to cause the least inconvenience to the taxpayer. The conference will be arranged by telephone, if possible, and normally will be held within 21 calendar days after contact has been made. Extensions of time will be granted only if justified in writing by the taxpayer and approved by the appropriate branch chief or delegate in the National Office.

.02 A taxpayer is entitled, as a matter of right, to only one conference in the National Office unless one of the circumstances discussed in this section exists. This conference will usually be held at the branch level in the appropriate division (Actuarial Division, Employee Plans, or Exempt Organizations) and will usually be attended by a person who has authority to represent the branch chief in that conference. In appropriate cases, the key district examiner or the Appeals Officer may also attend the conference to clarify the facts in the case. If more than one subject is discussed at the conference, the discussion constitutes a conference with respect to each subject. At the request of the taxpayer, the conference may be held at an earlier stage in the consideration of the case than the Service would ordinarily designate. A taxpayer has no "right" of appeal from an action of a branch to the director of a division or to any other National Office official.

.03 Since conference procedures are informal, no tape, stenographic, or other verbatim recording of a conference will be made.

.04 If prospective application under section 7805(b) of the Code is advanced by the taxpayer, the Service representative will discuss the tentative recommendation with respect to such relief and the reason for such tentative recommendation. No commitment will be made as to the holding that the Service will finally adopt.

.05 In the process of review in EP/EO of a holding proposed by a branch, it may appear that the final answer will involve a reversal of the branch proposal with a result less favorable to the taxpayer. Or it may appear that an adverse proposal by a branch will be approved, but on new or different grounds than those on which the branch decided the case. Under either of these circumstances, the taxpayer or the taxpayer's authorized representative will be invited to another conference. The provisions of this revenue procedure limiting the number of conferences to which a taxpayer is entitled will not foreclose inviting a taxpayer to attend further conferences when, in the opinion of National Office personnel, such need arises. All additional conferences of the type discussed in this paragraph are held only at the invitation of the Service.

.06 It is the responsibility of the taxpayer to furnish to the National Office, within 21 calendar days after the conference, a written record of any additional data, line of reasoning, precedents, etc., that were proposed by the taxpayer and discussed at the conference but were not previously or adequately presented in writing. Extensions of time will be granted only if justified in writing by the taxpayer and approved by the appropriate EP/EO Branch Chief. Any additional material and a copy thereof should be addressed to and sent to the National Office. If the National Office determines that the additional information would have a significant impact on the facts and data involved in a case, it will forward a copy to the appropriate key district office or Appeals office for comment. The National Office will request that office give the matter its prompt attention. That office may verify the additional facts and data and comment upon them to the extent it deems appropriate.

.07 A taxpayer desiring to obtain information as to the status of taxpayer's case may do so by contacting the following offices with respect to matters in the areas of their responsibility:

Official	Telephone Numbers (not toll free) (Area Code 202)
Director, Actuarial Division	566-4311
Chief, Employee Plans Technical Branch	566-3871
Chief, Exempt Organizations Technical Branch	566-3856 or 566-3593

Sec. 7. Preparation of Technical Advice Memorandum by the National Office

.01 Upon receipt of the case in the National Office, the technical employee to whom the case is assigned will analyze the file to ascertain whether it meets all the requirements of section 4. If the case is not complete, appropriate steps will be taken to complete the file. If the issues are not clearly presented or the facts are not sufficiently developed in the request to allow a determination of the issues presented, the case will be returned to the key District Director or the Chief, Appeals Office, for necessary clarification or development, as appropriate. If there is no statement of proposed deletions, the National Office will make those deletions from a technical advice memorandum subject to section 6110 of the Code that, in the judgment of the Service, are required by that section.

.02 If the taxpayer has requested a conference in the National Office, the procedures in section 6 will be followed.

.03 Replies to requests for technical advice will be addressed to the key District Director or to the Chief, Appeals Office, and will be drafted in two parts. Each part will identify the taxpayer by name, address, identification number, and year or years involved. The first part, called the technical advice memorandum, will contain (1) a recitation of the pertinent facts having a bearing on the issue, (2) a discussion of the facts, precedents, and reasoning of the National Office, and (3) the conclusions of the National Office. The conclusions will give direct answers, whenever possible, to the specific questions of the key district or Appeals office. The discussion of the issues will be in such detail that the receiving officials are apprised of the reasoning underlying the conclusion. There shall accompany the technical advice memorandum, where applicable, a notice of intention to disclose the technical advice memorandum pursuant to section 6110(f)(1) of the Code (including a copy of the version proposed to be open to public inspection and notations of third party communications pursuant to section 6110(d)) that the key district office or the Appeals office will forward to the taxpayer at such time that it furnishes a copy of the technical advice memorandum to the taxpayer pursuant to sections 7.05 and 8.04.

.04 The second part of the reply will consist of a transmittal memorandum. In unusual cases it will serve as a vehicle for providing administrative information or other information that, under the confidentiality statutes, or for other reasons, may not be discussed with the taxpayer.

.05 It is the general practice of the Service to furnish a copy of the technical advice memorandum to the taxpayer after it has been adopted by the receiving office. However, where no definitive answer is given to the specific question presented or where the factual submission is such as to indicate that the issue should be decided by the key district or Appeals office, a copy of the technical advice memorandum will not be furnished to the taxpayer. The National Office will specifically advise the key District Director or the Chief, Appeals Office in those cases where it is determined that a copy of the technical advice memorandum is not to be made available to the taxpayer.

.06 After receiving the notice of intention to disclose the technical advice memorandum, if applicable, the taxpayer, if desiring to protest the disclosure of certain information in the memorandum, must submit to the office indicated in the notice a written statement within 20 calendar days after the notice is mailed. The statement must identify those deletions not made by the Service that the taxpayer believes should have been made. The taxpayer must also submit a copy of the version of the technical advice memorandum proposed to be open to public inspection on which the taxpayer indicates, by the use of brackets, the deletions proposed by the taxpayer that have not been made by the Service. Generally, the Service will not consider the deletion of any material which the taxpayer did not propose be deleted prior to the time when the National Office sent its reply to the request for technical advice to the appropriate office. The Service shall, within 20 days after receipt of the response by the taxpayer to the notice, mail to the taxpayer its final administrative conclusion regarding the deletions to be made.

Sec. 8. Receipt of Technical Advice in Key District or Appeals Office

.01 Unless the key District Director, or the Chief (or Associate Chief), Appeals Office, feels that the conclusions reached by the National Office in a technical advice memorandum should be reconsidered and promptly requests such consideration, he or she will proceed to process the taxpayer's case on the basis of the conclusions expressed in the technical advice memorandum. In any event, with or without requesting reconsideration, the key District Director must follow the conclusions in a technical advice memorandum as to all issues, and the Chief (or Associate Chief), Appeals Office, must follow the conclusions in a technical advice memorandum on issues of an organization's/plan's status or qualification. Thus, if the technical advice memorandum received by a key District Director concerns an organization's/plan's status or qualification, the organization/plan has no appeal to the Appeals office on those specific issues. In the case of technical advice unfavorable to the organization/plan that does not concern status or qualification, the Chief (or Associate Chief), Appeals Office, may decide to settle the issue in the usual manner under existing authority.

.02 Unless otherwise stated, a holding in a technical advice memorandum will be applied retroactively. Moreover, where the taxpayer had previously been issued a favorable ruling or determination (whether or not it was based on a previous technical advice memorandum) concerning that transaction, purpose, or method of operation, the holding in a technical advice memorandum that is adverse to the taxpayer is also applied retroactively unless the Assistant Commissioner (EP/EO) exercises the discretionary authority under section 7805(b) of the Code to limit the retroactive effect of the holding. As to the effective date in cases involving rulings or determination letters regarding exempt organizations and employee plans (including actuarial matters) see section 13.05 of Rev. Proc. 80-24, page 30, this Bulletin, section 12.01 of Rev. Proc. 80-25, and sections 5.04 and .05 of Rev. Proc. 80-30, page 56, this Bulletin.

.03 Key district offices and Appeals offices may raise an issue in any taxable period, even though they may have asked for and been furnished technical advice with regard to the same or a similar issue in any other taxable period.

.04 Unless advised otherwise by the National Office as provided in section 7.05, the key district or Appeals office will furnish to the taxpayer a copy of the technical advice memorandum and, if applicable, the notice of intention to disclose described in section 7.03. However, this does not apply to technical advice memoranda involving civil fraud or criminal investigation, or jeopardy or termination assessments or to documents to which section 6104 of the Code applies.

.05 In those cases where the National Office advises the key District Director or the Chief, Appeals Office, not to furnish a copy of the technical advice memorandum to the taxpayer, he or she will so inform the taxpayer if the taxpayer requests a copy.

Sec. 9. Procedure for Requesting Application of Section 7805(b) in the Case of Technical Advice

.01 Pursuant to section 7805(b) of the Code, it is within the discretion of the Commissioner or the Commissioner's delegate to prescribe the extent, if any, to which any ruling (including technical advice) will be applied without retroactive effect. A taxpayer to whom a technical advice memorandum has been addressed or with respect to whom a technical advice request is pending may request that the Assistant Commissioner or Deputy Assistant Commissioner (Employee Plans and Exempt Organizations), the Commissioner's delegate, exercise the discretionary authority under section 7805 (b) to limit the retroactive effect of any holding stated in the technical advice memorandum or to limit the retroactive effect of any subsequent modification or revocation of the technical advice memorandum.

.02 When a technical advice memorandum that concerns a continuing transaction is modified or revoked by, for example, a subsequent revenue ruling, a request to limit the retroactive effect of the modification or revocation of the technical advice memorandum must be made in the form of a request for a ruling when the request is submitted before a return is examined that contains the transaction that is the subject of the request for ruling. See section 16.02 of Rev. Proc. 80-24.

.03 When a taxpayer is informed of the modification or revocation of a technical advice memorandum during the course of an examination of the taxpayer's return by a key District Director or during consideration by the Chief, Appeals office, a request to limit the retroactive application of the modification or revocation of the technical advice memorandum must itself be made in the form of a request for technical advice. See section 4 of this revenue procedure. However, the taxpayer must also submit a statement, which will be forwarded to the National Office with the request for technical advice, that the request is being made pursuant to section 7805(b) of the Code. This statement must also set forth the relief sought and an explanation of the reasons and arguments in support of the relief requested, and it must be accompanied by any documents bearing on the request. The explanation in support of the application of section 7805(b) should include a discussion of the five items enumerated in section 13.05 of Rev. Proc. 80-24 as they relate to the taxpayer's particular situation.

.04 A request to limit the retroactive effect of a holding in a technical advice memorandum that does not modify or revoke a technical advice memorandum may be made as part of that technical advice request either initially or at any time before the technical advice memorandum is issued by the National Office. In such a case, the taxpayer must also submit a statement in support of the application of section 7805(b) of the Code, as described in .03 above.

.05 When a request for technical advice concerns only the application of section 7805(b) of the Code, the taxpayer has the right to a conference in the National Office in accordance with the provisions of section 6 of this revenue procedure. If the request for application of section 7805(b) is included in the request for technical advice on the substantive issues or is made before the conference of right on the substantive issues, the section 7805 (b) issue will be discussed at the taxpayer's one conference of right. If the request for the application of section 7805(b) is made as part of a pending request for technical advice after a conference has been held on the substantive issue, and the Service determines that there is justification for having delayed the request, then the taxpayer will have the right to one conference of right concerning the application of section 7805(b) with the conference limited to a discussion of this issue.

Sec. 10. Effect on Other Documents

Except as provided in section 1.02, Rev. Proc. 80-21 will not apply to employee plans, including actuarial matters, and exempt organizations.

Sec. 11. Effective Date

This revenue procedure is effective June 30, 1980, the date of its publication in the Internal Revenue Bulletin.

Rev. Proc. 80-27

Section 1. Purpose

The purpose of this revenue procedure is to supersede Rev. Proc. 77-38, 1977-2 C.B. 571, by setting forth updated procedures under which recognition of exemption from federal income tax under section 501(c) of the Internal Revenue Code may be obtained on a group basis for subordinate organizations affiliated with and under the general supervision or control of a central organization. This procedure relieves each of the subordinates covered by a group exemption letter from filing its own application for recognition of exemption. This revenue procedure changes the time for filing the annual submission of information required to maintain a group exemption letter to 90 days before the close of the organization's accounting period. This revenue procedure also clarifies the requirements concerning subordinates' accounting periods and the 15-month rule of section 508 for section 501(c)(3) subordinates, and provides the addresses of three new Service Centers for filing purposes.

Sec. 2. Issuance of Group Exemption Letters

.01 Under this revenue procedure and Rev. Proc. 80-25, page 39, this Bulletin, the Internal Revenue Service will consider requests of central organizations for group exemption letters.

.02 A subordinate included in a group exemption letter should not apply separately for recognition of exempt status unless it no longer wants to be included in the group exemption letter.

.03 A subordinate that is organized and operated in a foreign country may not be included in a group exemption letter.

.04 A subordinate described in section 501(c)(3) of the Code may not be included in a group exemption letter if it is a private foundation defined in section 509(a). Such an organization should apply separately for recognition of exempt status under the procedures outlined in Rev. Proc. 76-34, 1976-2 C.B. 656, as supplemented by Rev. Proc. 80-25.

Sec. 3. Definitions

.01 A group exemption letter is a ruling or determination letter issued to a central organization recognizing on a group basis the exemption under section 501(c) of the Code of subordinate organizations on whose behalf the central organization has applied for recognition of exemption in accordance with this revenue procedure.

.02 A central organization is an organization that has one or more subordinates under its general supervision or control.

.03 A subordinate is a chapter, local, post, or unit of a central organization. It may or may not be incorporated, but it must have an organizing document. A central organization may be a subordinate itself, such as a state organization which has subordinate units and is itself affiliated with a national organization.

Sec. 4. Requirements for Inclusion in a Group Exemption Letter

.01 A central organization applying for a group exemption letter must obtain recognition of its own exempt status.

.02 It must also establish that the subordinates to be included in the group exemption letter are:

1 Affiliated with it;

2 Subject to its general supervision or control;

3 All exempt under the same paragraph of section 501(c) of the Code, though not necessarily the paragraph under which the central organization is exempt;

4 Not private foundations, if the application for a group exemption letter involves section 501(c)(3);

5 All on the same accounting period as the central organization if they are to be included in group returns; and

6 Organizations that have been formed within the 15-month period prior to the date of submission of the group exemption application, if they are claiming section 501(c)(3) status and are subject to the requirements of section 508(a), and wish to be recognized as exempt from their dates of creation. A group exemption letter may be issued covering subordinates, one or more of which have not been organized within the 15-month period prior to the date of submission, if all subordinates are willing to be recognized as exempt only from the date of application.

.03 Each subordinate must authorize the central organization to include it in the application for the group exemption letter. The authorization must be signed by a duly authorized officer of the subordinate and retained by the central organization while the group exemption letter is in effect. In the case of a new organization described in section 501(c)3 of the Code that wants to be included in a group exemption, it must submit its authorization before the end of the fifteenth month after it was formed in order to satisfy the requirement of section 508(a). The central organization must also include this subordinate in its next annual submission. See section 6.

Sec. 5. Filing Application for a Group Exemption Letter

.01 A central organization seeking a group exemption letter for its subordinates must obtain recognition of its own exemption by filing an application with the key District Director of Internal Revenue for the area in which is located the principal place of business or principal office of the organization. Any application received by the National Office or by a District Director other than as provided above will be forwarded, without action, to the appropriate key District Director.

.02 If the central organization is recognized as exempt, it must indicate its employer identification number (EIN), the date of the letter recognizing its exemption, and the Internal Revenue Office that issued it. It need not resubmit documents already submitted. However, if it has not already done so, it must submit a copy of any amendment to its governing instruments or internal regulations as well as any information regarding any change in its character, purposes, or method of operations.

.03 In addition to the information required to obtain recognition of its own exemption, the central organization must submit to the key District Director the following information on behalf of those subordinates to be included in the group exemption letter:

1 A letter signed by a principal officer of the central organization setting forth or including as attachments:

(a) information verifying the existence of the relationships required by section 4.02;

(b) a sample copy of a uniform governing instrument (charter, trust indenture, articles of association, etc.) adopted by the subordinates; or, in the absence of a uniform governing instrument, copies of representative instruments;

(c) a detailed description of the purposes and activities of the subordinates including the sources of receipts and the nature of expenditures;

(d) an affirmation that, to the best of the officer's knowledge, the purposes and activities of the subordinates are as set forth in (b) and (c) above;

(e) a statement that each subordinate to be included in the group exemption letter has furnished written authorization to the central organization as described in section 4.03;

(f) a list of subordinates to be included in the group exemption letter to which the Service has issued an outstanding ruling or determination letter relating to exemption;

(g) if the application for a group exemption letter involves section 501(c)(3) of the Code, and is subject to the provisions of section 508(b), an affirmation to the effect that, to the best of the officer's knowledge and belief, no subordinate to be included in the group exemption letter is a private foundation as defined in section 509(a); and

(h) for each subordinate that is a school claiming exemption under section 501(c)(3), the information required by Rev. Proc. 75-50, 1975-2 C.B. 834. Also, there must be included such other information necessary to establish that the school is complying with the requirements of Rev. Rul. 71-447, 1971-2 C.B. 230. This is the same information required by Schedule A, Form 1023, Application for Recognition of Exemption Under Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code.

2 A list of the names, mailing addresses (including Postal Zip Code), actual addresses if different, and employer identification numbers of subordinates to be included in the group exemption letter. A current directory of subordinates may be furnished in lieu of the list if it includes the required information and if the subordinates not to be included in the group exemption letter are identified.

.04 If the central organization does not have an employer identification number, it must submit a completed Form SS-4, Application for Employer Identification Number, with its exemption application. See Rev. Rul. 63-247, 1963-2 C.B. 612.

.05 Each subordinate must have its own employer identification number even if it has no employees. The central organization must submit with the exemption application a completed Form SS-4 on behalf of each subordinate not having a number.

SEC. 6. INFORMATION REQUIRED ANNUALLY TO MAINTAIN A GROUP EXEMPTION LETTER

.01 In order to maintain a group exemption letter, the central organization must submit annually, at least 90 days before the close of its annual accounting period, to the Internal Revenue Service Center indicated in .02 of this section, the following information:

1 Information regarding all changes in the purposes, character, or method of operation of subordinates included in the group exemption letter.

2 Lists of (a) subordinates that have changed their names or addresses during the year, (b) subordinates no longer to be included in the group exemption letter because they have ceased to exist, disaffiliated, or withdrawn their authorization to the central organization, and (c) subordinates to be added to the group exemption letter because they are newly organized or affiliated or they have newly authorized the central organization to include them. A separate list must be submitted for each of the three categories set out above. Each list must show the names, mailing address (including Postal ZIP Codes), actual address if different, and employer identification numbers of the affected subordinates. An annotated directory of subordinates will not be accepted for this purpose. If there were none of the above changes, the central organization must submit a statement to that effect.

3 The information required by section 5.031 a through h, with respect to subordinates to be added to the group exemption letter. However, if the information upon which the group exemption letter was based is applicable in all material respects to such subordinates, a statement to this effect may be submitted in lieu of the information required by items (a) through (d) of section 5.031.

.02 1 If the central organization is located in Indiana, Kentucky, Michigan, Ohio, or West Virginia, send the report to the Internal Revenue Service Center, Cincinnati, Ohio 45999.

2 If the central organization is located in Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Connecticut, Massachusetts, or Rhode Island, send the report to the Internal Revenue Service Center, Andover, Massachusetts 05501.

3 If the central organization is located in California, Hawaii, Arizona, Utah, or Nevada, send the report to the Internal Revenue Service Center, Fresno, California 93888.

4 If the central organization is located in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Tennessee, Alabama, or Mississippi, send the report to the Internal Revenue Service Center, Atlanta, Georgia 31101.

5 If the central organization is located in Arkansas, Colorado, Kansas, Louisiana, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Texas, or Wyoming, send the report to the Internal Revenue Service Center, Austin, Texas 73301.

6 If the central organization is located in Alaska, Idaho, Minnesota, Montana, North Dakota, Oregon, South Dakota, Washington, or Wisconsin, send the report to the Internal Revenue Service Center, Ogden, Utah 84201.

7 If the central organization is located in New Jersey or New York, send the report to the Internal Revenue Service Center, Holtsville, New York 00501.

8 If the central organization is located in Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, or Nebraska, send the report to the Internal Revenue Service Center, Kansas City, Missouri 64999.

9 If the central organization is located in Delaware, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Virginia, District of Columbia, any U.S. possession, or a foreign country, send the report to the Internal Revenue Service Center, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania 19255.

.03 Submission of the information required by this section does not relieve the central organization or any of its subordinates of the duty to submit such additional information as a District Director may require to determine whether the conditions for continued exemption are being met. See sections 6001 and 6033 of the Code, and regulations thereunder.

SEC. 7. CIRCUMSTANCES UNDER WHICH A GROUP EXEMPTION LETTER WILL CEASE TO HAVE EFFECT

.01 Continued effectiveness of a group exemption letter is based on the following conditions:

1 continued existence of the central organization;

2 continued qualification of the central organization for exemption under section 501(c) of the Code;

3 annual submission by the central organization of the information required by section 6; and

4 annual filing by the central organization of an information return if one is required of it under section 6033.

.02 Continued effectiveness of a group exemption letter as to a particular subordinate is based on the conditions set out in .01 of this section and the following conditions:

1 continued conformity by the subordinate to the requirements for group exemption set out in SEC. 4.02 and 4.03; and

2 annual filing of an information return for the subordinate if one is required of it under section 6033 of the Code.

.03 A group exemption letter shall cease to have effect either as to a particular subordinate or to the group as a whole when:

1 The central organization notifies the Service that it is going out of existence.

2 The central organization notifies the Service, by its annual submission described in section 6 or otherwise, that any of its subordinates will no longer fulfill the conditions set out in .02 of this section.

3 The Service notifies the central organization or the affected subordinate that the group exemption letter shall cease to have effect as to some or all of the group because the conditions set out in .01 or .02 of this section have not been fulfilled.

.04 When notice is given under .03 of this section, the Service will not thereafter recognize the exempt status of the affected subordinates unless and until they file separate applications on their own behalf, or the central organization files complete supporting information for their reinclusion in the group exemption at the time of its annual submission.

.05 When notice is given by the Service as described in .03 of this section, and withdrawal of recognition is based on a failure to come within the description of the particular subparagraph of section 501(c) of the Code, the effective date will be governed by section 12.01 of Rev. Proc. 80-25. Such notice will be given after completion of the appeal procedures set out in that revenue procedure.

SEC. 8. INSTRUMENTALITIES OR AGENCIES OF POLITICAL SUBDIVISIONS

An instrumentality or agency of a political subdivision that exercises control or supervision over a number of organizations similar in purposes and operations, each of which may qualify for exemption under the same paragraph of section 501(c) of the Code, may obtain a group exemption letter covering those organizations in the same manner as a central organization. However, the instrumentality or agency must evidence that it is a qualified governmental agency. Examples of organizations over which governmental agencies exercise control or supervision are federal credit unions, state chartered credit unions, and federal land bank associations.

SEC. 9. EFFECT ON OTHER DOCUMENTS

Rev. Proc. 77-38 is superseded.

SEC. 10. EFFECTIVE DATE

This revenue procedure is effective June 30, 1980, the date of its publication in the Internal Revenue Bulletin.

(Also Part I, Sections 501, 508, 521; 1.501(a)-1, 1.508-1, 1.521-1.)

Rev. Proc. 80-28

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

This revenue procedure sets forth procedures for the issuance of ruling or determination letters by the Internal Revenue Service to organizations that have established in court their qualification for exemption from federal income tax.

SEC. 2. GENERAL

.01 Under Rev. Proc. 80-25, page 39, this Bulletin, an organization seeking recognition of exempt status under section 501 or 521 of the Internal Revenue Code is required to file an application with the key District Director of Internal Revenue for the area in which the principal place of business or principal office of the organization is located.

.02 When an application for recognition of exempt status is denied, or when a ruling or determination letter recognizing exempt status is revoked or modified, an organization may avail itself of the administrative remedies prescribed by Rev. Proc. 80-25. In addition, if the statutory prerequisites are met, an organization may avail itself of certain judicial remedies. These remedies include a suit in a United States District Court or the United States Court of Claims for refund of taxes paid for one or more taxable periods; a suit in the United States Tax Court for redetermination of deficiencies for one or more taxable periods; and, with respect to the initial qualification or continuing qualificaton of an organization as one described in section 501(c)(3) of the Code which is exempt from tax under section 501(a), a suit for declaratory judgment in the United States Tax Court, the United States Court of Claims, or the United States District Court for the District of Columbia. Litigation in any of these forums may result in a decision that an organization was exempt for the period considered by the court.

.03 If an organization has secured a final judicial determination that it is exempt from tax under either section 501 or 521 of the Code, and if the underlying facts and applicable law have not changed since the period considered by the court, the Internal Revenue Service will issue a ruling or determination letter, pursuant to the procedures set forth in section 3, recognizing the organization as exempt. This ruling or determination letter will have the same force and effect, and be subject to the same limitations, as a ruling or determination letter issued pursuant to the procedures set forth in Rev. Proc. 80-25.

SEC. 3. PROCEDURES

.01 When an organization secures a final judicial determination that it is exempt after either having its application for recognition of exemption denied or having an outstanding ruling or determination letter revoked or modified, it need not submit a new application for recognition of exemption, but should submit a brief statement over the signature of a principal officer that its activities remain the same as during the period considered by the court if such is the fact. If there has not been a change in the controlling law, the Service will issue a favorable ruling upon receipt of this statement.

.02 When an organization secures a final judicial determination that it is exempt but has not previously filed an application for recognition of exempt status, it will be issued a ruling or determination letter only upon application in the manner described in Rev. Proc. 80-25. The application should contain a statement that the organization's activities remain the same as during the period considered by the court if such is the fact.

Rev. Proc. 80-25 is amplified.

Rev. Proc. 80-29

SECTION 1. PURPOSE

This revenue procedure sets forth the procedures of the Internal Revenue Service pertaining to the issuance of rulings and opinion letters relating to master or prototype pension, annuity, and profit-sharing plans involving sections 401 and 403(a) of the Internal Revenue Code and the status for exemption of related trusts or custodial accounts under section 501(a).

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND AND GENERAL INFORMATION

.01 The general procedures of the Service relating to the issuance of rulings, determination letters, and opinion letters on employee plans and exempt organization matters are set forth in Rev. Proc. 80-24, page 30, this Bulletin. Rev. Proc. 80-30, page 56, this Bulletin, provides procedures relating to the issuance of determination letters as to the qualification of employee plans or trusts under sections 401(a), 403(a), and 405(a) of the Code and to the exempt status of trusts under section 501(a).

.02 Rev. Proc. 72-7, 1972-1 C.B. 715, as modified by Rev. Proc. 75-51, 1975-2 C.B. 590, contains procedures for the issuance of opinion letters as to the acceptability of the form of master and prototype plans designed to include self-employed individuals. Rev. Proc. 72-8, 1972-1 C.B. 716, as modified by Rev. Proc. 75-52, 1975-2 C.B. 592, contains procedures for the issuance of opinion letters as to the acceptability of the form of master and prototype plans that do not include self-employed individuals.

.03 This revenue procedure contains procedures relating to both those master or prototype plans designed to include owner-employees and those designed to include only individuals who are not owner-employees, thereby consolidating procedures that were previously set forth independently. This revenue procedure also provides for the issuance of an opinion letter relating to a master or prototype plan designed for a partnership that does not include an owner-employee. See section 3.04, below.

SEC. 3. DEFINITIONS

.01 A "master plan" is a plan that is made available by a "sponsoring organization" (see section 3.06) for adoption by employers and for which a single funding medium (for example, a trust or custodial account) is established, as part of the plan, for the joint use of all adopting employers.

.02 A "prototype plan" is a plan which is made available by a sponsoring organization for adoption by employers and under which a separate funding medium is established for each adopting employer.

.03 An "H.R. 10 plan" is a master or prototype plan designed to include self-employed individuals, owner-employees and their employees.

.04 A "corporate-type plan" is a master or prototype plan designed to include only individuals who are not owner-employees. The term includes both a master or prototype plan designed to include only common-law employees and a plan designed for a partnership none of whose partners is an owner-employee.

.05 An "opinion letter" is a written statement issued by the National Office to a sponsoring organization pursuant to this revenue procedure as to the acceptability of the form of a master or prototype plan and any related trust or custodial account under sections 401, 403(a), and 501(a) of the Code.

.06 A "sponsoring organization" is a trade or professional organization having characteristics similar to those described in section 1.501(c)(6)-1 of the Income Tax Regulations, a bank (as defined in section 401(d)(1) of the Code), an insurance company, a regulated investment company (as defined in section 851), an investment advisor that has an advisory contract with one or more regulated investment companies, a principal underwriter that has a principal underwriting contract with one or more regulated investment companies, or, in the case of an H.R. 10 plan, a person who, under regulations, may act as a trustee or custodian.

.07 A "variable form" plan is a corporate-type plan that permits an employer to select various options relating to basic provisions such as employee coverage, contributions, benefits, and vesting.

.08 A "standardized form" plan is a corporate-type defined contribution plan (except for a target benefit plan) which meets the following requirements:

1 The provisions governing eligibility and participation are such that an adopting employer will always meet the percentage coverage requirements of section 410(b)(1)(A) of the Code. There are no requirements for participation in the plan other than a period of service not extending past the later of the date an employee reaches age 25 or completes three years of service.

2 Each employee's rights to or derived from all contributions under the plan are fully vested and nonforfeitable at the time the contributions are paid to or under the plan.

3 Contributions under the plan, if any, are allocated on the basis of total compensation.

4 Each participant who completes a year of service shares in any allocation of employer contributions for the year, regardless of the participant's employment status on the last day of the year or any other allocation date specified in the plan.

5 The eligibility requirements and contributions are not more favorable under the plan for officers, shareholders or highly compensated employees than for other employees.

6 The plan is not integrated with old-age, survivors, and disability insurance benefits provided under the Social Security Act.

SEC. 4. OPINION LETTERS—SCOPE

.01 Opinion letters will be issued only to sponsoring organizations as defined in section 3.06 and do not constitute rulings or determinations as to either the qualification of the plans as adopted by particular employers or, in the case of prototype plans, the exempt status of related trusts or custodial accounts.

.02 Opinion letters will not be issued under this revenue procedure for prototype plans intended to meet the requirements for individual savings programs under section 408(a) or 408(b) of the Code (see Rev. Proc. 75-6, 1975-1 C.B. 646).

.03 Opinion letters will not be issued for:

1 Collectively-bargained plans (section 413(b) of the Code);

2 Stock bonus plans;

3 Bond purchase plans;

4 Employee stock ownership plans (see Rev. Proc. 75-48, 1975-2 C.B. 583);

5 Pooled fund arrangements contemplated by Rev. Rul. 56-267, 1956-1 C.B. 206 or Rev. Rul. 75-530, 1975-2 C.B. 146;

6 Annuity contracts under section 403(b) of the Code;

7 Individual retirement accounts established by employers and associations of employees intended to meet the requirements of section 408(c) of the Code (see Rev. Proc. 76-32, 1976-2 C.B. 654);

8 Pattern plans (see Rev. Proc. 76-15, 1976-1 C.B. 553);

9 Field prototype plans (see Rev. Proc. 77-23, 1977-2 C.B. 530);

10 Defined contribution plans (except for target benefit plans) under which the test for prohibited discrimination under section 401(a)(4) of the Code is to be made by reference to benefits rather than contributions;

11 H.R. 10 plans that do not contain the requirements of section 401(d) of the Code applicable to owner-employees (as defined in section 401(c)(3));

12 Corporate-type plans that involve integration with Social Security benefits except for plans that define annual compensation to be all of each employee's compensation that would be subject to taxation under section 3101(a) of the Code without the dollar limitation of section 3121(a)(1).

13 Plans described in section 414(k) of the Code (relating to a defined benefit plan which provides a benefit derived from employer contributions which is based partly on the balance of the separate account of a participant).

.04 Master or prototype plans submitted pursuant to this procedure must provide a procedure for amendments so that changes in the Code, regulations, revenue rulings, or other rules or statements published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin may be complied with on a group basis. An employer that amends any provision of an approved master or prototype plan or its adoption agreement (other than to change his choice of options, if the plan permits or contemplates such a change) or an employer that chooses to discontinue participation in a plan as amended by its sponsoring organization and does not substitute another approved master or prototype plan is considered to have adopted an individually designed plan. The procedures stated in Rev. Proc. 80-30 relating to the issuance of determination letters for individually designed plans will then apply to the plan as adopted by the employer.

SEC. 5. OPINION LETTERS AND RULING LETTERS—INSTRUCTIONS TO SPONSORING ORGANIZATIONS

.01 The National Office will, upon the request of a sponsoring organization, issue an opinion letter as to the acceptability under section 401 of the Code of the form of a master or prototype plan and any related trust or custodial account. The National Office will also issue a ruling letter to the trustee or custodian as to the exempt status under section 501 of a trust or custodial account where such trust or custodial account forms part of a master plan.

.02 A request for an opinion letter relating to an H.R. 10 plan shall be submitted on Form 3672, Application for Approval of Master or Prototype Defined Contribution Plan for Self-Employed Individuals, on Form 3672-A, Application for Approval of Master or Prototype Defined Benefit Plan for Self-Employed Individuals, as applicable, to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Washington, D.C. 20224, Attention: E:EP:T. A sponsoring organization requesting an opinion letter shall also submit a copy of the plan document and trust instrument. If a request relates to a plan which combines a profit-sharing plan and a money purchase plan in a single plan document, a separate Form 3672 should be submitted for each type of plan. A defined contribution plan and a defined benefit H.R. 10 plan may not be combined in a single plan document. A separate plan document should be submitted with either Form 3672 or Form 3672-A, as applicable, for each type of plan. Where a plan provides for more than one funding medium (for example, a trust and a custodial account), a separate document should be submitted for each funding medium. Options (for example, elections specifying the level of contributions) offered to adopting employers may be either included in the plan document or incorporated in a separate document (the "adoption agreement"). Plan documents and trust instruments need not be submitted in duplicate.

.03 A request for an opinion letter relating to a corporate-type plan shall be submitted on Form 4461, Application for Approval of Master or Prototype Defined Contributions Plan, or on Form 4461-A, Application for Approval of Master or Prototype Defined Benefit Plan, as appropriate. The request is to be filed with the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Washington, D.C. 20224, Attention: E:EP:T. A sponsoring organization requesting an opinion letter shall submit a separate application and plan document for each type of plan submitted (for example, a defined benefit plan, a profit-sharing plan, a target benefit plan, or a money purchase plan). In addition, a sponsoring organization that offers both trusteed and nontrusteed versions of a particular type of plan must incorporate the nontrusteed plan in a separate plan document. Plan documents incorporating more than one type of plan are not acceptable under this procedure. Options (for example, elections to be made by the adopting employer concerning eligibility conditions, vesting rates, and contribution or benefit levels) must be set forth in a separate document (the "adoption agreement"). Options may not be interspersed throughout the plan document. Plan documents need not be submitted in duplicate.

.04 The National Office may, at its discretion, require any additional information that it deems necessary.

.05 A sponsoring organization must furnish each adopting employer with a copy of the approved plan, copies of any subsequent amendments, and the most recently issued Internal Revenue Service opinion letter.

.06 If the plan document submitted as part of an opinion letter request contains a provision that gives rise to an issue for which contrary authorities exist, failure to disclose and distinguish significant contrary authorities may result in requests for additional information, which will delay action on the request (see section 6.06 of Rev. Proc. 80-24).

SEC. 6. OPINION LETTERS—SPECIAL INSTRUCTIONS TO SPONSORING ORGANIZATION OF VARIABLE FORM CORPORATE-TYPE PLANS

.01 Where a corporate-type defined benefit plan contains one or more nonintegrated benefit formulas, the sponsoring organization must submit a separate adoption agreement containing all of the nonintegrated benefit formulas. Where such a plan contains one or more integrated benefit formulas, the sponsoring organization must submit a separate adoption agreement for each type of integrated formula (for example, excess benefit or offset benefit); each separate adoption agreement should contain all of the plan integrated benefit formulas of a particular type. For example, a corporate-type defined benefit plan with nonintegrated unit benefit and flat-benefit formulas, unit benefit excess formulas, flat-benefit excess formulas, unit benefit offset formulas, and flat-benefit offset formulas must submit at least three separate adoption agreements:

1 An adoption agreement containing all of the nonintegrated benefit formulas (unit benefit and flat-benefit);

2 An adoption agreement containing all of the excess benefit formulas (unit benefit and flat-benefit);

3 An adoption agreement containing all of the offset benefit formulas (unit benefit and flat-benefit).

.02 A copy of the approved master or prototype plan and the Internal Revenue Service opinion letter must be furnished by the the sponsoring organization to each Internal Revenue Service key district office in whose jurisdiction there are employers who adopt the plan. The sponsoring organization must also furnish key district offices with a copy of all amendments subsequently approved as to form by the National Office. Key district offices are listed in Rev. Proc. 80-30.

SEC. 7. AMENDMENTS

.01 A sponsoring organization may amend its previously approved plan (including any related trust or custodial account) and the National Office will entertain a request for a written opinion as to the acceptability, for purposes of sections 401, 403, and 501(a) of the Code, of the form of the plan as amended. Where a plan has been so amended, the sponsoring organization must submit to the National Office (1) Form 3672 or Form 3672-A, as applicable, for an H.R. 10 plan or (2) Form 4461 or Form 4461-A, as applicable, for a corporate-type plan. The sponsoring organization should also submit a copy of the amendment(s) and a cover letter summarizing the changes to the plan effected by such amendment(s).

.02 No opinion letter will be issued regarding the effect of the following amendments:

1 An amendment solely to conform a plan to the requirements of section 402(a) of Title I of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA), Pub. L. 93-406, 1974-3 C.B. 1, relating to named fiduciaries.

2 An amendment solely to conform a plan to the requirements of section 503 of ERISA, relating to claims procedures.

3 An amendment, described in section 8 of this revenue procedure, solely to conform a defined contribution H.R. 10 plan to sections of the Internal Revenue Code added on revised by the Tax Reform Act of 1976, Pub. L. 94-455, 1976-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1.

4 An amendment that merely adjusts the maximum limitations under section 415 of the Code to reflect annual cost-of-living increases, other than an amendment that adds an automatic cost-of-living adjustment provision to the plan.

Any amendment noted above will not affect the status of a favorable opinion letter previously issued with respect to a plan. The Service will not accept any requests for opinion letters regarding such amendments.

.03 A completely restated plan must be submitted when a plan is amended for the first time to meet the requirements of ERISA. After that time, no more than four consecutive amendments may be submitted without restating the plan. However, the Service may, at its discretion, require plan restatement at any time that it deems necessary.

Sec. 8. Amendments to Conform Certain Defined Contribution Plans to Sections of the Internal Revenue Code as Added or Revised by the Tax Reform Act of 1976

.01 The Tax Reform Act of 1976 added or revised the following provisions of the Code related to the limitation for contributions to defined contribution plans that include self-employed individuals:

1 Section 404(e)(4) of the Code was revised to limit the availability of the special deduction allowance for contributions of the lesser of $750 or 100% of earned income to those made on behalf of self-employed individuals whose adjusted gross incomes do not exceed $15,000 for the taxable year.

2 Section 415(c)(5) of the Code was added to remove the 25% limitation on contributions for certain participants and permit instead not less than $750 or 100% of earned income, whichever is the smaller amount.

3 Section 415(c)(7) of the Code was added to remove the 25% limitation for certain level premium payments for annuity contracts under plans benefitting owner-employees.

.02 For plans that already contain a minimum contribution formula, the present language should be revised to incorporate the new Code section 415(c)(5) limit by—

1 deleting the present formula and inserting the following:

"Minimum Contribution Provision—A minimum contribution shall be made on behalf of each eligible self-employed individual whose adjusted gross income (determined without regard to any deduction allowable under section 404(a) of the Code) is not in excess of $15,000 for the taxable year ending with or within the limitation year for which such contribution is made. The amount to be so contributed shall be the lesser of any stated percentage (not to exceed 100%) of the individual's earned income or a stated amount (not to exceed $750). In any taxable year in which an amount is contributed under this provision on behalf of at least one self-employed individual, each eligible common-law employee shall receive at least an equivalent amount determinable under these same limitations in the plan."

2 adding the following sentence to the definition now in the plan for the maximum permissible amount that may be contributed:

"If in any limitation year there is at least one self-employed individual whose adjusted gross income (determined without regard to any deduction allowable under section 404(a) of the Code) does not exceed $15,000 for the taxable year ending with or within such limitation year and a contribution is made on behalf of such self-employed individual under section _____ of the plan, the maximum permissible amount with respect to any other participant shall not be less than the contribution made with respect to such self-employed participant under section _____ of the Plan." (The section number to be inserted is the one assigned for the plan provision in (1) above.)

.03 For plans which do not contain a minimum contribution formula, insertion of the language of section .02-1 and .02-2 above is one method of incorporating the new Code section 415(c)(5) limit.

.04 In the case of defined contribution plans funded solely by level premium annuity, endowment, or life insurance contracts, the new limit of section 415(c)(7) of the Code may be incorporated by adding the following sentence to the plan provision which sets forth the limitation contained in section 415(c)(1):

"The 25% limitation shall not apply, however, to contributions for the benefit of an owner-employee for any limitation year in which:

(a) the owner-employee is not an active participant at any time during such year in a defined benefit plan maintained by the employer, and

(b) the annual addition with respect to such owner-employee for such year consists solely of contributions to pay level annual premiums on contracts as provided in this plan."

Sec. 9.—Approved Plans—Maintenance of Approved Status

.01 An opinion letter found to be in error or not in accord with the current views of the Service may be revoked. Revocation may be effected by a notice to the sponsoring organization to whom the letter was originally issued, or by a revenue ruling or other rule or statement published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin.

.02 An approved master or prototype plan must be amended to retain its approved status if any provisions therein fail to meet the requirements of law, regulations, or other rules and guidelines affecting qualification that become effective subsequent to the issuance of an opinion letter.

.03 An opinion letter will not be adversely affected by the publication of a revenue ruling if an amendment conforming the plan to the requirement of the revenue ruling is made by the sponsoring organization within one year after publication of the revenue ruling in the Internal Revenue Bulletin, to be effective for all adopting employers for their plan years beginning within such one year period.

Sec. 10. Withdrawal of Requests

.01 A sponsoring organization may withdraw its request for an opinion or ruling letter at any time prior to the issuance of such letter by notifying the National Office in writing of such withdrawal. The sponsoring organization must also notify any employer who adopted the plan that the request has been withdrawn. Such an employer will be deemed to have an individually designed plan to which Rev. Proc. 80-30 applies.

.02 Even though a request is withdrawn, the National Office will retain all correspondence and documents associated with that request and will not return them to the sponsoring organization. The National Office may furnish its views concerning the qualified status of the plan to District Directors who have or will have audit jurisdiction of the returns of any employers who have adopted the plan.

Sec. 11. Abandoned Plans

.01 A sponsoring organization should notify the National Office in writing of an approved master or prototype plan that is no longer used by any employer and that the sponsoring organization no longer intends to offer for adoption. Such written notification should be filed with the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Washington, D.C. 20224, Attention: E:EP:T, and should refer to the file folder number and letter serial number appearing on the latest opinion letter issued.

.02 A sponsoring organization that intends to abandon an approved master or prototype plan that is in use by any adopting employer must inform each adopting employer that the form of the plan has been terminated and that the employer may not continue to rely on the plan's opinion letter. After so informing all adopting employers, the sponsoring organization should notify the National Office in accordance with subsection .01 above.

SEC. 12. EFFECT ON OTHER DOCUMENTS

Rev. Proc. 72-7, Rev. Proc. 72-8, Rev. Proc. 75-51, and Rev. Proc. 75-52, as modified by Rev. Proc. 76-38, 1976-2 C.B. 661, are hereby superseded.

SEC. 13. EFFECTIVE DATE

This revenue procedure is effective June 30, 1980. Requests for opinion letters submitted prior to the effective date will be processed in accordance with Rev. Proc. 72-7 and Rev. Proc. 75-51 or Rev. Proc. 72-8 and Rev. Proc. 75-52, as applicable.

SECTION 1. PURPOSE AND SCOPE

.01 The purpose of this revenue procedure is to set forth the general procedures of the various offices of the Internal Revenue Service pertaining to the issuance of determination letters on the qualification of pension, profit-sharing, stock bonus, and bond purchase plans involving sections 401, 403(a), 405(a) 409A, and 4975(e)(7) of the Internal Revenue Code, as amended by the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA), Pub. L. 93-406, 1974-3 C.B. 1, and the status for exemption of any related trusts or custodial accounts under section 501(a). Specifically, this revenue procedure consolidates the determination letter procedures contained in Rev. Proc. 72-6, 1972-1 C.B. 710, Rev. Proc. 72-7, 1972-1 C.B. 715, Rev. Proc. 72-8, 1972-1 C.B. 716, Rev. Proc. 76-38, 1976-2 C.B. 661, and Rev. Proc. 77-22, 1977-2 C.B. 529, and the procedures for notification of interested parties contained in Rev. Proc. 75-31, 1975-2 C.B. 551.

.02 This revenue procedure applies only to determination letters issued in accordance with section 3.01 below and to plans approved in accordance with section 15 below. See section 3 below for the areas in which the Service will issue determination letters with respect to employee plans matters.

.03 This revenue procedure does not extend to the issuance of determination letters where the determination is only with respect to whether an individually designed defined contribution plan constitutes an employee stock ownership plan under sections 301(d) and (e) of the Tax Reduction Act of 1975, Pub. L. 94-12, 1975-1 C.B. 545, as amended by the Tax Reform Act of 1976, Pub. L. 94-455, 1976-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1 (see Rev. Proc. 75-48, 1975-2 C.B. 583) and the Revenue Act of 1978 (Pub. L. 95-600, 1978-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1). The reference in Rev. Proc. 75-48 to Rev. Proc. 75-47 should be read as a reference to this revenue procedure.

SEC. 2. BACKGROUND AND GENERAL INFORMATION

.01 The general procedures of the Service relating to the issuance of rulings, determination letters, and opinion letters are set forth in Rev. Proc. 80-24, page 30, this Bulletin.

.02 Prior to the issuance of the amendments to the Statement of Procedural Rules (26 CFR 601), 1975-2 C.B. 597, Rev. Proc. 72-6 provided detailed procedures relating to the issuance of determination letters as to the qualification of employee plans involving sections 401, 403(a), and 405(a) of the Code, and the exempt status of related trusts under section 501(a). The amendments to the Statement of Procedural Rules cited above set forth changes with respect to the issuance of determination letters which were necessary to reflect changes made by ERISA. Rev. Proc. 75-47, 1975-2

C.B. 581, modified Rev. Proc. 72-6 by providing supplemental and revised procedures for issuing determination letters relating to the qualification of individually designed plans.

.03 Rev. Proc. 80-29, page 52, this Bulletin, sets forth the procedures relating to the issuance of opinion letters by the National Office as to the acceptability of the form of master and prototype plans.

.04 Section 601.201(n)(9) of the Statement of Procedural Rules sets forth the technical advice procedures applicable to employee plans matters.

.05 Rev. Proc. 75-31 sets forth requirements with respect to notifying interested parties of requests for determination letters relating to the qualification of employee plans involving sections 401, 403(a) and 405(a) of the Code. These requirements are now set forth in section 7 of this revenue procedure.

.06 Rev. Proc. 76-15, 1976-1 C.B. 553, sets forth the procedures whereby law firms may submit pattern plans with requests for notification letters that will enable those pattern plans to be used on behalf of numerous employers represented by such practitioners. Rev. Proc. 76-15 also sets forth procedures for the issuance of determination letters to employers adopting pattern plans. The reference in section 4.04 of Rev. Proc. 76-15 to the provisions of Rev. Proc. 75-47 should be read as a reference to the provisions of this revenue procedure.

.07 Rev. Proc. 76-38, modified Rev. Proc. 75-47, Rev. Proc. 75-51, 1975-2 C.B. 590, and Rev. Proc. 75-52, 1975-2 C.B. 592, to permit the Service to issue determination and opinion letters with respect to target benefit plans.

.08 Rev. Proc. 77-15, 1977-1 C.B. 572, sets forth the procedures for the adoption of the Model Profit-Sharing Plan and the Model Money Purchase Pension Plan, designed for initial qualification under section 401 of the Code, and the Restated Model Profit-Sharing Plan and the Restated Model Money Purchase Pension Plan, designed to change existing plans to qualify under section 401. In this regard, see section 15.01 below.

.09 Rev. Proc. 77-22 sets forth guidelines under which determination letters with respect to certain types of defined contribution and defined benefit plans will be issued to employers adopting corporate-type master or prototype plans or certain other types of plans. These guidelines are now set forth in section 4 below.

.10 Rev. Proc. 77-23, 1977-2 C.B. 530, sets forth the procedures whereby certain sponsors may submit field prototype plans with requests for notification letters that will enable those field prototype plans to be used by the sponsor's clients (i.e. adopting employers). References in Rev. Proc. 77-23 to Rev. Proc. 77-22 should be read as references to this revenue procedure.

.11 Prior to the issuance of the amendments to the Statement of Procedural Rules (26 CFR 601), 43 F.R. 44484 (1978), Rev. Proc. 77-25, 1977-2 C.B. 534, which modified Rev. Proc. 72-6 by deleting subsections 7.02 through 7.05 thereof, set forth the general procedures of the various offices of the Service and the instructions to taxpayers pertaining to the appeal of proposed adverse determination letters issued by Key District Offices on the qualification of plans involving sections 401, 403(a) and 405(a) of the Code. The amendments to the Statement of Procedural Rules cited above set forth changes with respect to the appeal of proposed adverse determination letters to reflect a single level of appeal.

.12 Rev. Proc. 78-14, 1978-2 C.B. 486, sets forth special procedures to be followed in issuing a determination letter for a defined contribution plan if a waiver of the minimum funding standard has been requested. The reference in section 6 of Rev. Proc. 78-14 to Rev. Proc. 75-47 should be read as a reference to this revenue procedure.

.13 A trust created or organized in the United States and forming part of a pension, profit-sharing, or stock bonus plan of an employer for the exclusive benefit of its employees or their beneficiaries that meets the requirements of section 401 of the Code is a qualified trust and is exempt from federal income tax under section 501(a) unless the exemption is denied under section 502, relating to feeder organizations, or section 503, relating to prohibited transactions, if, in the latter case, the plan is one described in section 503(a)(1)(B).

.14 A nontrusteed annuity plan that meets the applicable requirements of sections 401(a)(3) through (20) and section 401(d) (other than paragraph (1)) of the Code qualifies for special tax treatment provided for under other sections of the Code, such as section 403(a(2) (relating to lump sum treatment) and section 404(a)(2) (relating to deductions for employer contributions for the purchase of retirement annuities), if the additional provisions of such other sections are also met.

.15 A favorable determination letter on the qualification of a pension, annuity, profit-sharing, stock bonus, or bond purchase plan, and the exempt status of a related trust, if any, is not required as a condition for obtaining the benefits pertaining to the plan or trust. However, Delegation Order No. 112 (Rev. 6), 45 F.R. 38200 (1980) authorizes District Directors of Key Districts, and the Appeals office, to issue determination letters on the qualification of plans and the exempt status of related trusts.

SEC. 3. DETERMINATION LETTERS

.01 District Directors of Key District Offices (described in section 5 below) or the Appeals office if appropriate (see paragraph 601.201(o)(6) of the Statement of Procedural Rules) shall issue determination letters involving the provisions of sections 401, 403(a), 405(a), 409A, and 4975(e)(7) of the Code. This includes completed and proposed transactions relating to the following:

1 Initial qualification of pension, annuity, profit-sharing, stock bonus, and bond purchase plans (including employee stock ownership plans and cash and deferred arrangements);

2 Initial exemption from federal income tax under section 501(a) of trusts forming a part of such plans, provided that the determination does not involve the application of section 502 (feeder organizations) or the question of whether a proposed transaction will be a prohibited transaction under section 503;

3 Compliance with the applicable requirements of foreign situs trusts as to taxability of beneficiaries (section 402(c)) and deductions for employer contributions (section 404(a)(4)); and

4 Amendments (including those relating to section 414(l) or terminations (including partial terminations) of plans and trusts.

.02 Determination letters issued in accordance with section 3.01 do not include determinations on other issues involving the application of other sections of the Code, such as sections 72, 402, 403 (other than 403(a)), 404, 412, 511 through 515, and 4975 (other than section 4975(e)(7)), unless such determination letters are otherwise authorized under the first sentence of section 4.01 of Rev. Proc. 80-24. Notwithstanding the foregoing, however, determination letters may be issued with respect to issues concerning the applicability of sections 402(c) and 404(a)(4) when such issues arise in connection with foreign situs trusts.

.03 Additionally, the Service will not issue determination letters with respect to the following:

1 Plans or plan amendments for which automatic approval is granted pursuant to section 15.01 or 15.02 below; however, determination letters will be issued on the sole question of whether the requirements of section 415 and, if applicable, section 401(j) of the Code are met in a case where an employer maintains two or more plans at least one of which is described in section 15.01-2 below, that are not all master or prototype defined contribution plans; and

2 Areas described in section 3.02 of Rev. Proc. 79-14, 1979-1 C.B. 496.

.04 Finally, the Service generally will not issue determination letters with respect to the following:

1 Areas described in section 4.02 of Rev. Proc. 79-14; and

2 Until regulations under section 415(b)(6) of the Code are issued, matters involving the computation of benefits under a defined contribution plan (other than a target benefit plan) or the computation of contributions under a defined benefit plan.

SEC. 4. INSTRUCTIONS TO APPLICANTS

.01 All of the provisions of section 6 of Rev. Proc. 80-24 are applicable to requests for determination letters submitted under this revenue procedure. However, the term "all interested parties" in section 6.02 of Rev. Proc. 80-24 does not mean interested parties within the meaning of section 1.7476-1(b) of the Income Tax Regulations.

.02 An applicant requesting a determination letter must file with the appropriate Key District Director, specified in section 4.16, the applicable materials required by sections 4.03 through 4.15. The filing of such application, when accompanied by all information and documents required by such sections, will generally serve to provide the Service with the information required to make the requested determination. However, in making the determination, the Service may require the submission of additional information. Information submitted to the Service in connection with an application for determination may be subject to public inspection to the extent provided by section 6104 of the Code. In addition, before filing an application, the applicant must satisfy the requirements of section 3001(a) of ERISA, and section 7476(b)(2) of the Code and the regulations thereunder, which provide that an applicant for a determination letter on the qualified status of certain retirement plans must notify interested parties of such application. Section 7 below sets forth the general rules of the Service with respect to notifying interested parties of requests for determination letters relating to the qualification of plans involving sections 401, 403(a) and 405(a). Section 8 below provides special rules for notifying interested parties with respect to the adoption of plans described in section 15.01 below.

If an applicant for a determination letter does not comply with all the provisions of this section, the Key District Director, in his discretion, may return the application and point out to the applicant those provisions which have not been met. If such a request is returned to the applicant, the 270 day period described in section 7476(b)(3) of the Code will not begin to run until such time as the provisions of this section have been satisfied.

.03 An applicant requesting a determination letter relating to the initial qualification or amendment of an individually designed defined benefit plan (other than a collectively-bargained plan, but including a plan designed to include self-employed individuals or shareholder-employees of electing small business corporations) shall file Form 5300, Application for Determination for Defined Benefit Plan (For Pension Plans Other than Money Purchase Plans), and Form 5302, Employee Census.

.04 An applicant requesting a determination letter relating to the initial qualication or amendment of an individually designed defined contribution plan (other than a collectively-bargained plan, but including a plan designed to include self-employed individuals, a target benefit plan, or an employee stock ownership plan intended to qualify under section 401(a) of the Code) or a pattern plan shall file Form 5301, Application for Determination for Defined Contribution Plan (For Profit-Sharing, Stock Bonus and Money Purchase Plans), and Form 5302, Employee Census. If the request relates to the qualification of an employee stock ownership plan which is a combination stock bonus plan and money purchase plan, a separate Form 5301 and Form 5302 shall be filed for each plan. If the request relates to an employee stock ownership plan, the applicant shall also file Form 5309, Application for Determination of Employee Stock Ownership Plan.

.05 An applicant requesting a determination letter relating to the initial qualification or amendment (i.e. a change from among the options offered by the sponsor under the plan) of:

1 An approved master or prototype plan;

2 A Service-approved field prototype plan; or

3 Any other plan, previously approved as to form by a Key District Director, and for which the Key District Director has approved the use of Form 5307;

as adopted by the applicant, shall, except as provided in this section, section 4.12 or section 4.13, file Form 5307, Short Form Application for Determination for Employee Benefit Plan (Other than Plans that Include Self-Employed Individuals), and Form 5302, Employee Census. Employers adopting a plan subsequent to the date of its amendment by the sponsoring organization must use the revised serial number assigned to such amendment by an opinion letter. The Form 5307 applies to both defined benefit plans and defined contribution plans but may not be used for plans that include a self-employed individual, or for collectively-bargained plans.

.06 An employer that amends any provision of an approved master or prototype plan or its adoption agreement, a field prototype plan or its adoption agreement, or any other plan the form of which has been previously approved by the Service (other than to change from among the choice of options offered by the sponsor if the plan permits or contemplates such a change), or an employer that chooses to discontinue participation in such a plan as amended by its sponsoring organization and does not substitute another approved plan referred to in this subsection is considered to have adopted an individually designed plan. The requirements stated in this revenue procedure relating to the issuance of determination letters for individually designed plans will then apply to such plan.

.07 An applicant requesting a determination letter relating to the initial qualification or amendment of a collectively-bargained plan, whether or not covering self-employed individuals, shall file Form 5303, Application for Collectively-Bargained Plan. The Form 5303 applies to both defined benefit plans and defined contribution plans.

.08 An applicant requesting a determination letter relating to the initial qualification or amendment of an individually designed bond purchase plan (i.e. other than a bond purchase plan described in section 15.01-4 below) shall file Form 5301 and Form 5302.

.09 An applicant (including the adopter of a master or prototype plan designed to include self-employed individuals or the adopter of a plan described in section 15.01 below) requesting a determination letter involving the complete termination of a plan shall file Form 5310, Application for Determination Upon Termination; Notice of Merger, Consolidation or Transfer of Plan Assets or Liabilities; Notice of Intent to Terminate. The Form 5310 applies to both defined benefit plans and defined contribution plans. In the case of a determination letter request involving the partial termination of a plan, whether or not by amendment of the plan, the applicant shall file Form 5300, 5301, or 5303, as applicable, and Form 5302.

.10 An applicant requesting a determination letter with respect to the termination of a plan subject to the jurisdiction of the Pension Guaranty Corporation (PBGC) under Title IV of ERISA shall attach to the Form 5310 a copy of the PBGC letter of sufficiency of assets under section 4041 (b) of ERISA. If such document is not attached to the application, the Service will not accept it for processing unless the applicant requests in writing that the application be processed without waiting for PBGC action. The request shall be addressed to the Key District Director for the district where the application is filed.

.11 For a controlled group of corporations, as defined in section 414 (b) of the Code, the coverage items of the application forms referred to in this section must be completed as though the controlled group constitutes a single entity.

.12 An applicant requesting a determination letter with respect to the establishment of a pooled fund arrangement described in Rev. Rul. 56-267, 1956-1 C.B. 206, or Rev. Rul. 75-530, 1975-2 C.B. 146, shall file a written statement in support of its application, together with the trust instrument and any related documents.

.13 An applicant requesting a determination letter described in section 3.03-1 above, relating to whether the requirements of section 415 and, if applicable, section 401(j) of the Code have been satisfied, need file no particular application form but must submit a written statement that identifies the plans to which the request relates and demonstrates how these requirements have been satisfied.

.14 The Key District Director will evaluate comments received from interested parties or from the Secretary of Labor with respect to an employer's adoption of a model, master, prototype, or bond purchase plan described in section 15.01 below. If the Key District Director determines that the matters mentioned cannot affect the qualification of the plan, the employer and the interested parties who commented will be so notified. If the Key District Director determines that the matters may affect the qualification of the plan, the Key District Director will inform the employer of the nature of such matters, and will notify the employer that the employer cannot rely on the provisions of section 15.01 below. The employer should then request a determination letter by submitting a written statement that discusses the matters raised and sets forth the reasons why he believes section 401(a) or 405(a) has been satisfied. However, an additional notice to interested parties will not be required. If a determination letter is requested and the determination is favorable with respect to the qualification of the plan, the employer's adoption of the plan will thereafter be treated as any other adoption of a model, master, prototype, or bond purchase plan described in section 15.01 below.

.15 When, in connection with an application for a determination on the qualification of the plan, it is necessary to determine whether an organization (including a professional service organization) is a corporation or an association classified as a corporation under section 301.7701-2 of the Regulations on Procedure and Administration, or whether an employer-employee relationship exists, the Key District Director will make such determinations. In such cases, the application with respect to the qualification of the plan should be filed in accordance with the provisions of this revenue procedure and should contain the information and documents specified in the instructions to the application. It should also be accompanied by any information and copies of documents the organization deems appropriate to establish its status. The Service may, in addition, require further information that it considers necessary to determine the status of the organization, the employment status of the individuals involved, or the qualification of the plan. After the taxable status of the organization and the employer-employee relationship have been determined, the Key District Director may issue a determination letter as to the qualification of the plan.

.16 Requests for determination letters on matters authorized by section 3 of this revenue procedure and the necessary supporting data are to be addressed to the Key District Director specified below (the entity requesting the determination letter shall be determined without regard to the application of sections 414(b) or (c) of the Code to the plan):

1 In the case of a plan of a single employer, the request shall be addressed to the Key District Director for the district in which the employer's principal place of business is located.

2 In the case of a plan of more than one employer, as described in sections 413(a) and (c) of the Code, the request shall be addressed to the Key District Director for the district in which the principal place of business of the employer or plan administrator (if one has been designated) is located.

3 In the case of an industry plan established or proposed by all subscribing employers with principal places of business located within the jurisdiction of more than one Key District Director, as an alternative to (2) above, the request may be addressed to the Key District Director for the district in which the trustee's principal place of business is located. If the plan has more than one trustee, the request may be addressed to the Key District Director for the district where the trustees usually meet.

4 In the case of a domestic employer adopting a foreign situs trust, the request shall be addressed to the Key District Director for the district in which the employer's principal place of business is located.

5 In the case of a foreign employer, the request shall be addressed to the Director of International Operations, Benjamin Franklin Station, P.O. Box 895, Washington, D.C. 20044.

6 In the case of a pooled fund arrangement, the request on behalf of the master trust shall be addressed to the Key District Director for the district where the principal place of business of the trustee is located. Requests on behalf of the participating trusts and related plans will be addressed as otherwise provided herein.

.17 If the application for determination involves an issue where contrary authorities exist, failure to disclose and distinguish such significant contrary authorities may result in requests for additional information, which will delay action on the application. (See Rev. Proc. 80-24.)

.18 The applicant's request for a determination letter may be withdrawn by a written request at any time prior to appealing a proposed adverse determination letter to the Appeals office as provided in paragraph 601.201(o)(6) of the Statement of Procedural Rules. In the case of such a withdrawal, the Service will not render a determination of any type. A failure to issue a determination letter as a result of a withdrawal will not be considered a failure of the Secretary or his delegate to make a determination within the meaning of section 7476 of the Code. However, the Service may consider the information submitted in connection with the withdrawn request in a subsequent audit or examination.

SEC. 6. RIGHTS OF NOTICE TO AND COMMENT BY INTERESTED PARTIES AND THE PENSION BENEFIT GUARANTY CORPORATION

.01 Persons who qualify as interested parties under section 1.7476-1(b) of the regulations, and the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation shall have the following rights:

1 To receive notice, in accordance with section 7 below, that there will be filed an application for an advance determination regarding the qualification of plans described in sections 401, 403(a), and 405(a) of the Code, or, with respect to plans described in section 15.01 below, to receive notice, in accordance with section 8 below, of the adoption or amendment of such plans;

2 To submit written comments with respect to the qualification of such plans to the Internal Revenue Service;

3 To request the Department of Labor to submit a comment to the Service on behalf of the interested parties; and

4 To submit written comments to the Service on matters with respect to which the Department of Labor was requested to comment but declined.

.02 Comments submitted by interested parties must be received by the Key District Dirctor by the 45th day after the date on which the application for determination is received by the Key District Director (see sections 6.03 and 6.04 for filing deadlines where the Department of Labor has been requested to comment). Such comments must be in writing, signed by the interested parties or by an authorized representative of such parties (as provided in section 601.201(e)(6) of the Statement of Procedural Rules), addressed to the Key District Director to whom the application for determination was submitted, and contain the following information:

1 The names of the interested parties making the comments;

2 The name and taxpayer identification number of the applicant for a determination;

3 The name of the plan, the plan identification number, and the name of the plan administrator;

4 Whether the parties submitting the comment are:

(a) Present employees eligible to participate under the plan,

(b) Present employees with accrued benefits under the plan, former employees with vested benefits under the plan, beneficiaries of deceased former employees currently receiving benefits under the plan, or

(c) Present employees not eligible to participate under the plan;

5 The specific matters raised by the interested parties on the question of whether the plan meets the requirements for qualification involving sections 401, 403(a), and 405(a) of the Code, and how such matters relate to the interests of the parties making the comment; and

6 The address of the interested party submitting the comment (or if a comment is submitted jointly by more than one party, the name and address of a designated representative) to which all correspondence, including a notice of the Service's final determination with respect to qualification, should be sent. (The address designated for notice by the Service will also be used by the Department of Labor in communicating with the parties submitting a request for comment.) The designated representative may be one of the interested parties submitting the comment or an authorized representative. If two or more interested parties submit a single comment and one person is not designated in the comment as the representative for receipt of correspondence, a notice of determination mailed to any interested party who submitted the comment shall be notice to all the interested parties who submitted the comment for purposes of section 7476(b)(5) of the Code.

.03 A request to the Department of Labor to submit to the Key District Director a comment pursuant to section 3001(b)(2) of the Act must be made in accordance with the following procedures.

1 The request must be received by the Department of Labor by the 25th day after the day the application is received by the Key District Director. However, if the parties requesting the Department to submit a comment wish to preserve the right to comment to the Key District Director in the event the Department declines to comment, the request must be received by the Department by the 15th day after the application is received by the Key District Director.

2 The request to the Department of Labor to submit a comment to the Key District Director must:

(a) Be in writing;

(b) Be signed as provided in section 6.02 above;

(c) Contain the names of the interested parties requesting the Department to comment and the address of the interested party or designated representative to whom all correspondence with respect to the request should be sent. See also section 6.02(6) above;

(d) Contain the information prescribed in section 6.02-2, 3, 4, above;

(e) Contain the address of the Key District Director to whom the application was or will be submitted;

(f) State the specific matters upon which the Department's comment is sought, as well as how such matters relate to the interested parties making the request; and

(g) Be addressed as follows:

Administrator of Pension and Welfare Benefit Programs,
U.S. Department of Labor,
200 Constitution Avenue,
N.W.,
Washington, D.C. 20216
Attention: 3001 Comment
Request

.04 If a request described in 6.03 is made and the Department of Labor notifies the interested parties making the request that it declines to comment on a matter concerning qualification of the plan which was raised in the request, the parties submitting the request may still submit a comment to the Key District Director on such matter. The comment must be received by the later of the 45th day after the day the application for determination is received by the Key District Director or the 15th day after the day on which notification is given by the Department that it declines to submit a comment on such matter. (See section 6.07 for the date of notification.) In no event may the request be received later than the 60th day after the application for determination was received. Such a comment must comply with the requirements of section 6.02 and include a statement that the comment is being submitted on matters raised in a request to the Department upon which the Department declined to comment.

.05 For rules regarding the confidentiality of contents of written comments submitted by interested parties to the Service pursuant to section 6.02 or 6.04, see section 601.201(o)(5) of the Statement of Procedural Rules.

.06 For rules regarding the availability to the applicant of copies of all comments on the application submitted pursuant to section 6.01-1, 2, or 3 of this revenue procedure, see section 601.201(o)(5) of the Statement of Procedural Rules.

.07 An application for an advance determination, a comment to the Key District Director, or a request to the Department of Labor shall be deemed made when it is received by the Key District Director, or the Department. Notification by the Department that it declines to comment shall be deemed given when it is received by the interested party or designated representative. The notice described in section 7.01 below shall be deemed given when it is given in person, posted as prescribed in the regulations under section 7476 of the Code, or received through the mail. In any case where such an application, comment, request, notification, or notice is sent by mail, it shall be deemed received as of the date of the postmark (or if sent by certified or registered mail, the date of certification or registration), if it is deposited in the mail in the United States in an envelope or other appropriate wrapper, first class postage prepaid, properly addressed. However, if such an application, comment, request, notification, or notice is not received within a reasonable period from the date of postmark, the immediately preceding sentence shall not apply.

SEC. 7. GENERAL RULES FOR NOTICE TO INTERESTED PARTIES

.01 Notice that an application for an advance determination regarding the qualification of a plan described in sections 401, 403(a), 405(a), 409A and 4975(e)(7) of the Code is to be made must be given to all interested parties in the manner set forth in section 1.7476-2(c) of the regulations and in accordance with the requirements of this section.

.02 When the notice referred to in section 7.01 is given by posting or in person, such notice must be given not less than 7 days nor more than 21 days prior to the date the application for a determination is made. When the notice is given by mailing, it should be given not less than 10 days nor more than 24 days prior to the date the application for a determination is made. If, however, an application is returned to the applicant for failure to adequately satisfy the notification requirements with respect to a particular group or class of interested parties, the applicant need not cause notice to be given to those groups or classes of interested parties with respect to which the notice requirement was already satisfied merely because, as a result of the resubmission of the application, the time limitations of this subsection would not be met.

.03 The notice referred to in section 7.01 shall be in writing and shall contain the following information:

1 A brief description identifying the class or classes of interested parties to whom the notice is addressed (e.g., all present employees of the employer, all present employees eligible to participate);

2 The name of the plan, the plan identification number, and the name of the plan administrator;

3 The name and taxpayer identification number of the applicant for a determination;

4 That an application for a determination as to the qualified status of the plan is to be made to the Service, stating whether the application relates to an initial qualification, a plan amendment, termination, a plan merger or consolidation, or a transfer of plan assets or liabilities, and the address of the Key District Director to whom the application will be submitted;

5 A description of the class of employees eligible to participate under the plan;

6 Whether or not the Service has issued a previous determination as to the qualified status of the plan;

7 A statement that any person to whom the notice is addressed is entitled to submit, or request the Department of Labor to submit, to the Key District Director described in section 7.03(4), a comment on the question of whether the plan meets the requirements of sections 401, 403(a), or 405(a) of the Code; that two or more such persons may join in a single comment or request; and that if such persons request the Department of Labor to submit a comment and that Department declines to do so with respect to one or more matters raised in the request, the persons may still submit a comment to the Key District Director with respect to the matters on which the Department declines to comment;

8 The specific dates by which a comment to the Key District Director or a request to the Department of Labor must be received in order to preserve the right of comment (see section 6 above);

9 The number of interested parties needed in order for the Department of Labor to comment; and

10 Except to the extent that the additional informational material required to be made available by sections 7.05 through 7.09 are included in the notice, a description of a reasonable procedure whereby such additional informational material will be available to interested parties (see section 7.04). (Examples of notices setting forth the above information, in a case in which the additional information required by sections 7.05 through 7.09 will be made available at places accessible to the interested parties, are set forth in Exhibits "I" and "II" of this Revenue Procedure.)

.04 The procedure referred to in section 7.03-10, whereby the additional informational material required by sections 7.05 through 7.09 will (to the extent not included in the notice) be made available to interested parties, may consist of making such material available for inspection and copying by interested parties at a place or places reasonably accessible to such parties, or supplying such material in person or by mail, or by a combination of the foregoing, provided such procedure is immediately available to all interested parties, is designed to supply them with such additional informational material in time for them to pursue their rights within the time period prescribed, and is available until the earlier of the filing of a pleading commencing a declaratory judgment action under section 7476 of the Code with respect to the qualification of the plan or the 92nd day after the day the notice of final determination is mailed to the applicant. Reasonable charges to interested parties for copying and/or mailing such additional informational material are permissible.

.05 Unless provided in the notice, or unless section 7.06 applies, there shall be made available to interested parties under a procedure described in section 7.04:

1 An updated copy of the plan and the related trust agreement (if any); and

2 The application for determination.

.06 If there would be less than 26 participants in the plan, as described in the application (including, as participants, former employees with vested benefits under the plan, beneficiaries of deceased former employees currently receiving benefits under the plan, and employees who would be eligible to participate upon making mandatory employee contributions, if any), then in lieu of making the materials described in section 7.05 available to interested parties who are not participants (as described above), there may be made available to such interested parties a document containing the following information:

1 A description of the plan's requirements respecting eligibility for participation and benefits;

2 A description of the provisions providing for nonforfeitable benefits;

3 A description of the circumstances which may result in ineligibility, or denial or loss of benefits;

4 A description of the source of financing of the plan and the identity of any organization through which benefits are provided; and,

5 Whether the applicant is claiming in the application that the plan meets the requirements of section 410 (b)(1)(A) of the Code, and, if not, the coverage schedule required by the application in the case of plans not meeting the requirements of such section. However, once an interested party or designated representative receives a notice of final determination, the applicant must, upon request, make available to such interested party (whether or not the plan has less than 26 participants) an updated copy of the plan and related trust agreement (if any) and the application for determination.

.07 Information of the type described in section 6104(a)(1)(D) of the Code should not be included in the application, plan, or related trust agreement submitted to the Service. Accordingly, such information should not be included in any of the material required by section 7.05 or 7.06 to be available to interested parties. There may be excluded from such material the information contained in Form 5302 (Employee Census). However, information showing the number of individuals covered and not covered in the plan, listed by compensation range, shall not be excluded.

.08 Unless provided in the notice, there shall be made available to interested parties under a procedure described in section 7.04, any additional document dealing with the application which is submitted by or for the applicant to the Service, or furnished by the Service to the applicant; provided, however, if there would be less than 26 participants in the plan as described in the application (including, as participants, former employees with vested benefits under the plan, beneficiaries of deceased former employees currently receiving benefits under the plan, and employees who would be eligible to participate upon making mandatory employee contributions, if any), such additional documents need not be made available to interested parties who are not participants (as described above) until they, or their designated representative, receive a notice of final determination. The applicant may also withhold from such inspection and copying information described in section 6104(a)(1)(C) and (D) of the Code which may be contained in such additional documents.

.09 Unless provided in the notice, there shall be made available to all interested parties under a procedure described in section 7.04 the material described in sections 6.02 through 6.07 above.

SEC. 8. SPECIAL NOTICE RULES FOR MODEL, CERTAIN MASTER, PROTOTYPE AND BOND PURCHASE PLANS

.01 An employer who adopts or amends a model, master, prototype, or bond purchase plan for which no determination will be issued (as described in section 15.01 below) must comply with the requirements for notification of interested parties described in section 7 above, except as otherwise provided by this section.

.02 Reference in section 7.02 above to the date an application for determination is made should be read as a reference to the date that is 30 days after the date a model, master, prototype or bond purchase plan described in section 15.01 below is adopted or amended.

.03 The notice referred to in section 7.01 above must be in writing and contain the following information:

1 The name of the plan sponsor, if any;

2 The name and taxpayer identification number of the plan adopter;

3 The information described in sections 7.03-1, 2, 5, 6, 7, 9, 10, and 11 above; and

4 The specific dates by which a comment to the Key District Director, or a request to the Department of Labor, must be received in order to preserve the right of comment. (See section 6 above. References in section 6 above to the date an application for determination is made will be read as a reference to the date that is 30 days after the date a plan described in section 15.01 below is adopted or amended.)

.03 The procedure described in section 7.04 above, whereby additional informational material as described in sections 7.05 through 7.09 above will be made available to interested parties need only be made available until such time as the Service notifies the adopter of the plan pursuant to section 4.14 above that no determination letter need be requested, or, if the plan's adopter receives no notice from the Service, 120 days from the date the plan was adopted.

.05 The reference to the application for determination in section 7.05-2 above is not applicable to plans described in section 15 below.

.06 In determining the number of plan participants for purposes of section 7.06 above, the number of plan participants is to be determined as though an application for determination were to be made. The provisions of section 7.06-5 above are not applicable to plans described in section 15 below.

.07 Information of the type described in section 6104(a)(1)(D) of the Code should not be included in the additional informational material made available pursuant to a procedure described in section 7.04 above.

.08 Unless provided in the notice, there shall be made available to interested parties under a procedure described in section 7.04 above any additional document dealing with the adoption of the plan described in section 15.01 below which is submitted by or for the plan's adopter to the Service, or furnished by the Service to the plan's adopter; provided however, if there would be less than 26 participants in the plan (as determined by sections 7.06 above and 8.06) such additional documents need not be made available to interested parties who are not participants (as described above) until the earlier of the date the Service notifies the plan's adopter, pursuant to section 4.14 above, that no determination letter request need be made, 120 days from the date the plan was adopted, or, if the Service notifies the plan's adopter that a determination letter should be requested, the date a final determination is made. The plan's adopter may also withhold from such inspection and copying information described in section 6104(a)(1)(C) and (D) of the Code which may be contained in such documents.

.09 Unless provided in the notice, there shall be made available to all interested parties under a procedure described in section 7.04 above the material described in sections 6.02, 6.03 and 6.04 above, except that interested parties must be informed that any references in such sections to the date an application for determination is made should be read as references to the date that is 30 days from the date a plan described in section 15.01 below is adopted or amended.

SEC. 9. ADMINISTRATIVE RECORD

.01 In the case of a request for a determination letter, the determination of the Key District Director or the Appeals office on the qualification or non-qualification of the retirement plan shall be based solely upon the facts contained in the administrative record. The administrative record shall consist of the following:

1 The request for determination, the retirement plan and any related trust instruments, and any written modifications or amendments made by the applicant during the proceedings within the Service;

2 All other documents submitted to the Service by, or on behalf of, the applicant with respect to the request for determination;

3 All written correspondence between the Service and the applicant with respect to the request for determination and any other documents issued to the applicant from the Service;

4 All written comments submitted to the Service pursuant to sections 6.01-1, 2, and 3 above, and all correspondence relating to comments submitted between the Service and persons (including the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation and the Department of Labor) submitting comments pursuant to sections 6.01-1, 2, and 3 above;

5 In any case in which the Service makes an investigation regarding the facts as represented or alleged by the applicant in the request for determination or in comments submitted pursuant to sections 6.01-1, 2, and 3 above, a copy of the official report of such investigation;

.02 The administrative record shall be closed upon the earlier of the following events:

1 The date of mailing of a notice of final determination by the Service with respect to the application for determination; or

2 The filing of a petition with the United States Tax Court seeking a declaratory judgment with respect to the retirement plan.

.03 Any oral representation or modification of the facts as represented or alleged in the application for determination or in a comment filed by an interested party, which is not reduced to writing shall not become a part of the administrative record and shall not be taken into account in the determination of the qualified status of the retirement plan by the Key District Director or the Appeals office.

SEC. 10. NOTICE OF FINAL DETERMINATION

The notice of final determination shall be:

.01 In the case of a final determination which is favorable to the applicant, the letter issued by the Key District Director or the Appeals office which states that the applicant's plan satisfies the qualification requirements of the Code. The favorable determination letter will be sent by certified or registered mail where either an interested party, the Department of Labor, or the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation has commented on the application for determination.

.02 In the case of a final determination which is adverse to the applicant, the letter issued by certified or registered mail by the Key District Director or the Appeals office subsequent to a letter of proposed determination, stating that the applicant's plan fails to satisfy the qualification requirements of the Code.

SEC. 11. ISSUANCE OF THE NOTICE OF FINAL DETERMINATION

The Key District Director or the Appeals office will send the notice of final determination to the applicant, to the interested parties who have previously submitted comments on the application to the Service (or to the persons designated by them to receive such notice), to the Department of Labor in the case of a comment submitted by the Department, and to the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation if it has filed a comment.

SEC. 12. EXHAUSTION OF ADMINISTRATIVE REMEDIES

.01 For purposes of section 7476(b)

(3) of the Code, a petitioner shall be deemed to have exhausted the administrative remedies available within the Service upon the completion of the steps described in sections 12.02, 12.03, or 12.04, subject, however, to section 12.05. If applicants, interested parties, or the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation do not complete the applicable steps described below, they will not have exhausted their respective available administrative remedies as required by section 7476(b)(3) and will, thus, be precluded from seeking declaratory judgment under section 7476 except to the extent that section 12.05-2 or 12.06 apply.

.02 In the case of an applicant, with respect to any matter relating to the qualification of a plan, the steps referred to in section 12.01 are:

1 Filing a completed application with the appropriate Key District Director pursuant to section 4 above;

2 Complying with the requirements pertaining to notice to interested parties as set forth in this Revenue Procedure, and section 1.7476-2 of the regulations; and,

3 Appealing to the Appeals office pursuant to paragraph 601.201(o)(6) of the Statement of Procedural Rules, in the event of a notice of proposed adverse determination issued by the Key District Director.

.03 In the case of an interested party or the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation, the steps referred to in section 12.01 are, with respect to any matter relating to the qualification of the plan, submitting to the Key District Director a comment raising such matter in accordance with section 6.01-1 above, or requesting the Department of Labor to submit to the Key District Director a comment with respect to such matter in accordance with section 6.01-2 and, if the Department of Labor declines to comment, submitting the comment in accordance with section 6.01-3 above, so that it may be considered by the Service through the administrative process.

.04 An applicant, an interested party, or the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation shall in no event be deemed to have exhausted administrative remedies prior to the earlier of:

1 The completion of those steps applicable to each as set forth in sections 12.01 or 12.03, which constitute their administrative remedies; or,

2 The expiration of the 270 day period described in section 7476(b)(3) of the Code, which period shall be extended in a case where there has not been a completion of all the steps referred to in section 12.01-1 and the Service has proceeded with due diligence in processing the application for determination.

.05 The step described in section 12.02(3) will not be considered completed until the Service has had a reasonable time to act upon the appeal.

.06 The step described in section 12.02-3 will not be available or necessary with respect to any issue on which technical advice has been obtained from the National Office.

SEC. 13. EFFECT OF EMPLOYEE PLAN DETERMINATION LETTERS

.01 A determination letter issued pursuant to this Revenue Procedure contains only the opinion of the Service as to the qualification of the particular plan involving the provisions of sections 401, 403(a), and 405(a) of the Code and the status of a related trust, if any, under section 501(a).

.02 Determination letters issued on amendments to plans and trusts within the purview of section 3.01-4 above will merely express an opinion whether the amendment, in and of itself, affects the existing status of the plan's qualification and the exempt status of the related trust. In no event should such a determination letter be construed as an opinion on the qualification of the plan as a whole and the exempt status of the related trust as a whole.

.03 Except as otherwise provided in this section, determination letters referred to in sections 13.01 and 13.02 are governed, generally, by the provisions of sections 13 and 14 of Rev. Proc. 80-24.

.04 The prior qualification of a plan as adopted by an employer will not be considered to be adversely affected by the publication of a revenue ruling where:

1 The plan was the subject of a favorable determination letter and the request for that letter contained no misstatement or omission of material facts;

2 The facts subsequently developed are not materially different from the facts on which the determination letter was based;

3 There has been no change in the applicable law; and

4 The employer that established the plan acted in good faith in reliance on the determination letter.

However, all such plans must be amended to comply with the published revenue ruling for subsequent years. The conformity amendment to an individually designed plan must be adopted before the end of the first plan year that begins after the revenue ruling is published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin and must be effective, for all purposes, not later than the first day of the first plan year beginning after the revenue ruling is published. For the rule as to the conforming amendment to a master or prototype plan, see section 8 of Rev. Proc. 80-29.

.05 While a favorable determination letter may serve as a basis for determining deductions for employer contributions thereunder, it is not to be taken as an indication that contributions are necessarily deductible as made. This latter determination can be made only upon an examination of the employer's tax return, in accordance with the limitations, and subject to the conditions of, section 404 of the Code.

SEC. 14. ORAL ADVICE TO TAXPAYERS

.01 In conformity with the general principle set forth in section 12 of Rev. Proc. 80-24, district officials will not ordinarily confer with taxpayers or their representatives on matters regarding the formation or qualification of plans, or related matters including amendments to or termination of approved plans, prior to the submission of the plan, amendment, or termination for a determination letter.

.02 A Key District Director may grant a conference upon written request from a taxpayer or his representative, provided the request shows that a substantive plan, amendment, etc., has been developed for submission to the Service, but that special problems or issues are involved, and the Key District Director concludes that a conference would be warranted in the interest of facilitating review and determination when the plan, etc., is formally submitted.

.03 The advice or assistance furnished, whether requested by personal appearance, telephone, or correspondence, except as otherwise provided in section 14.02, will be limited to general procedures, or will direct the inquirer to source material, such as pertinent Code provisions, regulations, revenue procedures, and revenue rulings that may aid the inquirer in resolving the question or problem.

Sec. 15. Areas in Which Automatic Approval as to the Qualified and Exempt Status of an Employee Plan Shall Be Granted

.01 Plans adopted or amended as described below will, to the extent provided, be deemed to satisfy the qualification requirements of section 401(a) or 405(a) and, if applicable, section 501(a) of the Code:

1 A Model Profit-Sharing Plan, a Restated Model Profit-Sharing Plan, a Model Money Purchase Pension Plan, or a Restated Model Money Purchase Pension Plan in accordance with Rev. Proc. 77-15, 1977-1 C.B. 572;

2 A master or prototype plan designed to include self-employed individuals where the sponsoring organization of such plan has been issued a favorable opinion letter by the National Office, provided that:

(a) The employer has followed the terms of the plan, has received a favorable determination letter described in section 3.03-1 above, if applicable, and the coverage and contributions or benefits under the plan are not more favorable for owner-employees than for other employees;

(b) The employer has properly notified all interested parties of the adoption of the plan in accordance with sections 7 and 8 above; and

(c) The employer has not received, within 120 days after the date the plan was adopted, notice from the Service that the plan will not be treated as qualified pursuant to this subsection (In this regard, see section 4.14 above);

3 A standardized form corporate master or prototype plan referred to in section 3.08 of Rev. Proc. 80-29 (that is the only plan of an employer intended to qualify) where the sponsoring organization of such plan has been issued a favorable opinion letter by the National Office, provided that:

(a) The employer has followed the terms of the plan, and the coverage and contributions under the plan are not more favorable for officers, shareholders, or highly compensated employees than for other employees;

(b) The employer has properly notified all interested parties of the adoption of the plan in accordance with sections 7 and 8 above; and

(c) The employer has not received, within 120 days after the date the plan was adopted, notice from the Service that the plan will not be treated as qualified pursuant to this subsection. (In this regard, see section 4.14 above); and

4 A bond purchase plan, provided that:

(a) The employer has completed Form 4578, Bond Purchase Plan for Self-Employed Individuals, or Form 6022, Bond Purchase Plan for Corporate Employers, as applicable, and has complied with the provisions thereof (When properly completed, Form 4578 or Form 6022 will constitute a bond purchase plan. These forms are not to be filed with the Service);

(b) The employer has properly notified all interested parties of the adoption of the plan in accordance with sections 7 and 8 above; and

(c) The employer has not received, within 120 days after the date the plan was adopted, notice from the Service that the plan will not be treated as qualified pursuant to this subsection (In this regard, see section 4.14 above);

.02 The plan amendments described below will, to the extent provided, not be deemed to alter the qualified status of a plan under section 401(a) of the Code:

1 An amendment solely to permit a trust forming part of a plan to participate in a pooled fund arrangement described in Rev. Rul. 56-267, or Rev. Rul. 75-530;

2 An amendment that merely adjusts the maximum limitations under section 415 of the Code to reflect annual cost-of-living increases, other than an amendment that adds on automatic cost-of-living adjustment provision to the plan;

3 An amendment solely to include language pursuant to section 403(c)(2) of Title I of ERISA concerning the reversion of employer contributions made as a result of mistake of fact; and

4 An amendment which conforms to the requirements of section 8 of Rev. Proc. 80-29.

Sec. 16. Effect on Other Documents

.01 The following revenue procedures are hereby obsoleted:

1 Rev. Proc. 56-22, 1956-2 C.B. 1380;

2 Rev. Proc. 56-42, 1956-2 C.B. 1409; and

3 Rev. Proc. 67-26, 1967-1 C.B. 629.

.02 The following revenue procedures are hereby modified:

1 Rev. Proc. 75-48, see section 1.03 of this revenue procedure;

2 Rev. Proc. 76-15, see section 2.06 of this revenue procedure;

3 Rev. Proc. 77-23, see section 2.10 of this revenue procedure; and

4 Rev. Proc. 78-14, see section 2.12 of this revenue procedure.

.03 The following revenue procedures are hereby superseded:

1 Rev. Proc. 72-6;
2 Rev. Proc. 75-31;
3 Rev. Proc. 75-47;
4 Rev. Proc. 76-38; and
5 Rev. Proc. 77-22.

.04 The general procedures of Rev. Proc. 80-24 are applicable to requests for rulings and determination letters except to the extent inconsistent with this procedure.

Sec. 17. Effective Date

This revenue procedure is effective June 30, 1980, the date of its publication in the Internal Revenue Bulletin.

If an organization listed above submits information that warrants the renewal of its classification as a public charity or as a private operating foundation, the Internal Revenue Service will issue a ruling or determination letter with the revised classification as to foundation status. Grantors and contributors may thereafter rely upon such ruling or determination letter as provided in section 1.509(a)-7 of the Income Tax Regulations. It is not the practice of the Service to announce such revised classification of foundation status in the Internal Revenue Bulletin.

Repeal of Tax on Coin-Operated Gaming Devices

Announcement 80-90 [1]

The $250 annual special tax on coin-operated gaming devices will no longer have to be paid after June 30, 1980. The tax is imposed on persons who permit coin-operated gaming devices to be located on property they own or operate.

The Revenue Act of 1978, Pub. L. 96-600, 1980-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1, repealed, effective June 30, 1980, the coin-operated gaming device tax. Therefore, it is not necessary to file Form 11-B, Special Tax Return—Gaming Devices or pay the tax after that date.

Announcement of the Disbarment, Suspension, or Consent to Voluntary Suspension of Attorneys, Certified Public Accountants, Enrolled Agents and Enrolled Actuaries from Practice before the Internal Revenue Service

Under Section 1026, Title 31 of the United States Code (1970 ed.), the Secretary of the Treasury, after due notice and opportunity for hearing, is authorized to suspend or disbar from practice before the Internal Revenue Service any person who has violated the rules and regulations governing the recognition of attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents or enrolled actuaries to practice before the Internal Revenue Service.

Attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries are prohibited in any Internal Revenue Service matter from directly or indirectly employing, accepting assistance from, being employed by or sharing fees with, any practitioner disbarred or under suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service.

To enable attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries to identify such disbarred or suspended practitioners, the Director of Practice will announce in the Internal Revenue Bulletin the names and addresses of practitioners who have been disbarred or suspended from such practice, their designation as attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, and the date of disbarment or period of suspension. This announcement will appear and will continue to appear in the weekly Bulletins for five successive weeks for each attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary so suspended or disbarred and will later be consolidated and published in the Cumulative Bulletin.

After due notice and opportunity for hearing, the following individuals have been disbarred from further practice before the Internal Revenue Service:

Name	Address	Designation	Effective Date
Robert B. Clarkson	Anderson, SC	Attorney	April 25, 1980
John E. DeSantis	Belmont, CA	Certified Public Accountant	May 12, 1980

Announcement Relating to Proposed Regulations Published With Notice of Proposed Rulemaking

Changes in regulations as announced below have been published in the Federal Register in tentative or proposed form to provide interested parties with an opportunity to file their objections or suggestions for consideration prior to final adoption of such regulations. These announcements will appear in the Bulletin during the period which has been prescribed for the submission and consideration of any views, arguments, or suggestions pertaining to the proposed regulations so published. Statement of such views, arguments or suggestions should be submitted in writing, preferably six copies, to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Attention: CC:LR:T, Washington, D.C. 20224.

Section affected	Subject	Published in Federal Register dated—	Expiration date for submission of views
26 CFR 1.6073-1 through 1.6073-3, amended.	Time for filing declarations of estimated tax by farmers, fishermen, and certain nonresident aliens.	May 21, 1980	July 21, 1980
27 CFR 1.217-2 revised.	Special rules for foreign moving expenses and the allowance of moving expense deductions in the case of retirees or dependents of decedents who were working abroad.	May 22, 1980	July 21, 1980

Definition of Terms

Revenue Rulings and Revenue Procedures (hereinafter referred to as "rulings") that have an effect on previous rulings use the following defined terms to describe the effect:

Amplified describes a situation where no change is being made in a prior published position, but the prior position is being extended to apply to a variation of the fact situation set forth therein. Thus, if an earlier ruling held that a principle applied to A, and the new ruling holds that the same principle also applies to B, the earlier ruling is amplified. (Compare with modified, below).

Clarified is used in those instances where the language in a prior ruling is being made clear because the language has caused, or may cause, some confusion. It is not used where a position in a prior ruling is being changed.

Distinguished describes a situation where a ruling mentions a previously published ruling and points out an essential difference between them.

Modified is used where the substance of a previously published position is being changed. Thus, if a prior ruling held that a principle applied to A but not to B, and the new ruling holds that it applies to both A and B, the prior ruling is modified because it corrects a published position. (Compare with amplified and clarified, above).

Obsoleted describes a previously published ruling that is not considered determinative with respect to future transactions. This term is most commonly used in a ruling that lists previously published rulings that are obsoleted because of changes in law or regulations. A ruling may also be obsoleted because the substance has been included in regulations subsequently adopted.

Revoked describes situations where the position in the previously published ruling is not correct and the correct position is being stated in the new ruling.

Superseded describes a situation where the new ruling does nothing more than restate the substance and situation of a previously published ruling (or rulings). Thus, the term is used to republish under the 1954 Code and regulations the same position published under the 1939 Code and regulations. The term is also used when it is desired to republish in a single ruling a series of situations, names, etc., that were previously published over a period of time in separate rulings. If the new ruling does more than restate the substance of a prior ruling, a combination of terms is used. For example, modified and superseded describes a situation where the substance of a previously published ruling is being changed in part and is continued without change in part and it is desired to restate the valid portion of the previously published ruling in a new ruling that is self contained. In this case the previously published ruling is first modified and then, as modified, is superseded.

Supplemented is used in situations in which a list, such as a list of the names of countries, is published in a ruling and that list is expanded by adding further names in subsequent rulings. After the original ruling has been supplemented several times, a new ruling may be published that includes the list in the original ruling and the additions, and supersedes all prior rulings in the series.

Suspended is used in rare situations to show that the previous published rulings will not be applied pending some future action such as the issuance of new or amended regulations, the outcome of cases in litigation, or the outcome of a Service study.

Educational expenses; veterans; flight training. An airplane pilot may not deduct any otherwise allowable flight training expenses to the extent the expenses are directly reimbursed by the Veterans' Administration pursuant to 38 U.S.C. section 1677; Rev. Rul. 62-213 distinguished and clarified.

Charitable contributions; depreciable property; multiple asset account. The method is provided for determining the amount of a charitable contribution for property retired from a multiple asset account for which the CLADR system had not been elected.

Rev. Rul. 80-175, page 18.
Nonrecognition of gain; timber damaged by storm; voluntary sale. The nonrecognition of gain provisions of section 1033(a) of the Code are applicable to proceeds received from the voluntary sale of timber downed by high winds, earthquake, or volcanic eruption when the proceeds are used to purchase other standing timber; Rev. Rul. 72-372 revoked.

Rev. Rul. 80-176, page 10.
Oil and gas leases; acquisition fees; option fees. The tax treatment of fees paid by taxpayers for assistance in participating in programs to acquire noncompetitive federal oil and gas leases in two situations is discussed. The transactions are incomplete in the year the programs are begun in each situation and the taxpayers do not recognize gain or loss in that year. Amounts allocable to the rights or options to sell fractional lease interests are not part of the basis of any lease acquired but are capital expenditures. Rev. Rul. 77-395 modified and clarified; Rev. Rul. 71-191 distinguished.

Statement of Principles of Internal Revenue Tax Administration

The function of the Internal Revenue Service is to administer the Internal Revenue Code. Tax policy for raising revenue is determined by Congress.

With this in mind, it is the duty of the Service to carry out that policy by correctly applying the laws enacted by Congress; to determine the reasonable meaning of various Code provisions in light of the Congressional purpose in enacting them; and to perform this work in a fair and impartial manner, with neither a government nor a taxpayer point of view.

At the heart of administration is interpretation of the Code. It is the responsibility of each person in the Service, charged with the duty of interpreting the law, to try to find the true meaning of the statutory provision and not to adopt a strained construction in the belief that he is "protecting the revenue." The revenue is properly protected only when we ascertain and apply the true meaning of the statute.

The Service also has the responsibility of applying and administering the law in a reasonable, practical manner. Issues should only be raised by examining officers when they have merit, never arbitrarily or for trading purposes. At the same time, the examining officer should never hesitate to raise a meritorious issue. It is also important that care be exercised not to raise an issue or to ask a court to adopt a position inconsistent with an established Service position.

Administration should be both reasonable and vigorous. It should be conducted with as little delay as possible and with great courtesy and considerateness. It should never try to overreach, and should be reasonable within the bounds of law and sound administration. It should, however, be vigorous in requiring compliance with law and it should be relentless in its attack on unreal tax devices and fraud.

Introduction

The Internal Revenue Bulletin is the authoritative instrument of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for announcing official rulings and procedures of the Internal Revenue Service and for publishing Treasury Decisions, Executive Orders, Tax Conventions, legislation, court decisions, and other items of general interest. It is published weekly and may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. Bulletin contents of a permanent nature are consolidated semiannually into Cumulative Bulletins, which are sold on a single-copy basis.

It is the policy of the Service to publish in the Bulletin all substantive rulings necessary to promote a uniform application of the tax laws, including all rulings that supersede, revoke, modify, or amend any of those previously published in the Bulletin. All published rulings apply retroactively unless otherwise indicated. Procedures relating solely to matters of internal management are not published; however, statements of internal practices and procedures that affect the rights and duties of taxpayers are published.

Revenue rulings represent the conclusions of the Service on the application of the law to the pivotal facts stated in the revenue ruling. In those based on positions taken in rulings to taxpayers or technical advice to Service field offices, identifying details and information of a confidential nature are deleted to prevent unwarranted invasions of privacy and to comply with statutory requirements.

Rulings and procedures reported in the Bulletin do not have the force and effect of Treasury Department Regulations, but they may be used as precedents. Unpublished rulings will not be relied on, used, or cited as precedents by Service personnel in the disposition of other cases. In applying published rulings and procedures, the effect of subsequent legislation, regulations, court decisions, rulings, and procedures must be considered, and Service personnel and others concerned are cautioned against reaching the same conclusions in other cases unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same.

The Bulletin is divided into four parts as follows:

Part I.—1954 Code.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

Part II.—Treaties and Tax Legislation.

This part is divided into two subparts as follows: Subpart A, Tax Conventions, and Subpart B, Legislation and Related Committee Reports.

Part III.—Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous.

To the extent practicable, pertinent cross references to these subjects are contained in the other Parts and Subparts.

Part IV.—Items of General Interest.

With the exception of the disbarment and suspension list included in this part, none of these announcements is consolidated in the Cumulative Bulletins.

The first Bulletin for each month includes an index for the matters published during the preceding month. These monthly indexes are cumulated on a quarterly and semiannual basis, and are published in the first Bulletin of the succeeding quarterly and semi-annual period, respectively.

The Bulletin Index-Digest System, a research and reference service supplementing the Bulletin, may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. It consists of four Services: Service No. 1, Income Tax; Service No. 2, Estate and Gift Taxes; Service No. 3, Employment Taxes; Service No. 4, Excise Taxes. Each Service consists of a basic volume and a cumulative supplement that provide (1) finding lists of items published in the Bulletin, (2) digests of revenue rulings, revenue procedures, and other published items, and (3) topical indexes of Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and Tax Conventions.

The contents of this publication are not copyrighted and may be reprinted freely. A citation of the Internal Revenue Bulletin as the source would be appropriate.

Cumulative List of Announcements Relating to Decisions of the Tax Court Published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin from January 1, 1980 thru June 30, 1980

It is the policy of the Internal Revenue Service to announce in the Internal Revenue Bulletin at the earliest practicable date the determination of the Commissioner to acquiesce or not acquiesce in a decision of the Tax Court which disallows a deficiency in tax determined by the Commissioner to be due.

Notice that the Commissioner has acquiesced or nonacquiesced in a decision of the Tax Court relates only to the issue or issues decided adversely to the Government.

Actions of acquiescences in adverse decisions shall be relied on by revenue officers and others concerned as conclusions of the Service only to the application of the law to the facts in the particular case. Caution should be exercised in extending the application of the decision to a similar case unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same, and consideration should be given to the effect of new legislation, regulations, and rulings as well as subsequent court decisions and actions thereon.

Acquiescence in a decision means acceptance by the Service of the conclusion reached, and does not necessarily mean acceptance and approval of any or all of the reasons assigned by the court for its conclusions.

No announcements are made in the Bulletin with respect to memorandum opinions of the tax court.

The announcements published in the weekly Internal Revenue Bulletins are consolidated semiannually and annually. The semiannual consolidation appears in the first Bulletin for July and in the Cumulative Bulletin for the first half of the year and the annual consolidation appears in the first Bulletin for the following January and in the Cumulative Bulletin for the last half of the year.

[1] Acquiescence in the issues relating to (1) whether payments made pursuant to a lease agreement in connection with a sale-leaseback with option to repurchase are deductible as rental expenses, and (2) whether a part of the understatement of tax is due to negligence or intentional disregard of rules and regulations.

[2] Acquiescence relating to whether an accrual basis taxpayer was entitled to a deduction for deficiency interest when it contested its liability for the underlying deficiency and interest in the following year.

[3] Acquiescence relating to whether petitioner received kickbacks which represented unreported income to him or whether he was merely acting as a conduit for the monies.

[4] Acquiescence in result relating to whether life insurance proceeds paid to a shareholder are taxable as a dividend where the corporation is the owner of the policy and pays all premiums. Acquiescence "in result" means acceptance of the decision of the Court but disagreement with some or all of the reasons assigned for the decision.

[5] Acquiescence in the issues relating to (1) whether the acquisition of property on December 1, 1967 through a quitclaim deed resulted in the realization of income, and (2) whether petitioner must recognize gain on the sale of certain stock in 1968.

[6] Acquiescence in the issues relating to (1) which of the petitioners, who are divorced, is entitled to a dependency exemption for their minor child, and (2) whether petitioner is entitled to a child care expense deduction.

[7] Acquiescence in result relating to whether payments made by the petitioner pursuant to the settlement of a suit are nondeductible "fines or similar penalties" within the meaning of section 162(f) of the Code. Acquiescence "in result" means acceptance of the decision of the Court but disagreement with some or all of the reasons assigned for the decision.

[8] Acquiesence relating to whether the premiums applicable to a "special reserve" provision of a twenty payment life insurance policy or all premiums paid under the policy as a whole should be an offset against the "special reserve" distribution in computing taxable income.

[9] Acquiescence relates to the fair market value approach in valuing reusable or relay rail and is limited to the deduction claimed for retirements and replacements for years ended prior to May 8, 1967, pursuant to Rev. Rul. 67-145, 1967-1 C.B. 54, and Rev. Proc. 68-46, 1968-2 C.B. 961.

[10] Nonacquiescence in the issues relating to (1) whether policy loan interest, not prepaid in cash, is includable in gross investment income under section 804(b)(1) of the Code, and (2) whether mortgage escrow funds, given to petitioner as mortgagee to pay taxes and insurance on realty, is includable in "assets" under section 805(b)(4) of the Code.

[11] Nonacquiescence relating to whether certain cable television franchises have determinable useful lives for the purpose of depreciating their costs of acquisition under section 167(a) of the Code.

[12] Nonacquiescence relating to whether petitioner's purported sale of a "future sell contract" for foreign currency shortly before the time set for performance but subsequent to the devaluation of the currency resulted in short-term or long-term capital gain.

[13] Nonacquiescence in the issue relating to whether a statutory redemption fee is deductible as interest.

[14] Nonacquiescence in the issues relating to (1) whether decedent's community property interest in a block of stock amounting to 80% of a corporation's common and 100% of its preferred stock should be included in the gross estate at one-half of the value of the entire block or whether it should be valued as a minority interest comprised of 40% of the common and 50% of the preferred stock, and (2) whether the court properly determined the fair market value of 50% of the preferred stock to be $1,973,494.80.

[15] Nonacquiescence published in 1967-1 C.B. 3 is withdrawn and acquiescence is substituted therefor in the issue relating to the taxation of gain upon the redemption, at full face value but prior to maturity, of debentures which had been issued to petitioners in 1953 at an original issue discount. Acquiescence also in the issue relating to the offset of a tax deficiency for the year 1954 to the extent of an alleged overpayment of taxpayer's 1954 income tax for which a refund was claimed in the tax return filed for that year. See Rev. Rul. 80-143, 1980-23 I.R.B. 6.

[16] Acquiescence in the issues relating to (1) whether the taxpayers held a contract right to cut for the required holding period thereby entitling them to elect section 631(a) treatment, and (2) what was the fair market value of the timber for section 631(a) purposes.

[17] Acquiescence in the issues relating to (1) whether payments made pursuant to "option agreements" were in substance interest payments, and (2) whether the option agreements provided for a series of options, each expiring at the end of a three-month period.

[18] Nonacquiescence in the issue relating to whether a real estate contract received by petitioner upon a sale of property not in the ordinary course of business, which contract provides for deferred payments to be made by the purchaser in an amount that is certain, constitutes "property (other than money)" under section 1001, so that, to the extent of its fair market value, it represents an amount realised by petitioners in the year of the sale.

[19] Acquiescence in result relating to whether construction-related depreciation of assets that are not "section 38 property" should be included in the basis of self-constructed "section 38 property" for purposes of determining the qualified investment in that property under section 46 of the Code. Acquiescence "in results" means acceptance of the decision of the Court but disagreement with some or all the reasons assigned for the decision.

[20] Acquiescence relating to whether petitioner, an automobile dealer who has properly elected the LIFO method of inventory valuation, must add to its cost of "base-year" units an additional charge for catalytic converters and electronic (solid state) ignition systems which were not present on base-year models.

[21] Acquiescence relating to whether petitioner's highway advertising signs are "inherently permanent" property which does not qualify for the investment credit under section 48 of the Code. See Rev. Rul. 80-151, 1980-24 I.R.B. 6.

Part I. Rulings and Decisions Under the Internal Revenue Code of 1954

Section 61.—Gross Income Defined

26 CFR 1.61-7: Interest.

Whether interest on obligations of a political subdivision of a state will be exempt from tax. See Rev. Rul. 80-171, page 7.

Section 103.—Interest on Certain Governmental Obligations

26 CFR 1.103-8: Interest on bonds to finance certain exempt facilities.
(Also Section 61; 1.61-7.)

Industrial development bonds; reserve fund. Bond proceeds are reduced by the amount of the issuance cost and the amount of a reasonable required debt reserve fund for purposes of determining if substantially all of the bond proceeds will be used for the purposes described in section 103(b)(4), (5), and (6) of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 80-171

ISSUE

Are bond proceeds reduced by the amount of a reserve fund for purposes of determining if substantially all of the bond proceeds will be used to provide exempt facilities described in section 103(b)(4) of the Internal Revenue Code?

FACTS

A political subdivision of a state proposes to issue 100*x* dollars of industrial development bonds to finance certain exempt facilities described in section 103(b)(4) of the Code for use by an industrial corporation. The cost of issuing the bonds will be 5*x* dollars and the political subdivision will use bond proceeds to establish a reserve fund of 15*x* dollars. This reserve fund will qualify as a reasonably required debt reserve fund. Of the remaining bond proceeds, 75*x* dollars will be used to construct the exempt facility and 5*x* dollars will be loaned to the corporation for working capital. Over the term of the bonds, the corporation will make periodic payments to the political subdivision that will equal total principal and interest payments on the bonds. The bonds will not be arbitrage bonds within the meaning of section 103(c).

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 103(a)(1) of the Code provides that gross income does not include interest on the obligations of a state or a political subdivision thereof.

Section 103(b)(1) of the Code provides that, with certain exceptions, the interest on "industrial development bonds" is not excludable from gross income.

Section 103(b)(4) of the Code provides that section 103(b)(1) shall not apply to industrial development bonds if substantially all of the bond proceeds are to be used to provide certain exempt facilities.

The "substantially all" test in section 103(b)(4) of the Code will be satisfied if 90 percent or more of the proceeds of an issue of governmental obligations are used to provide an exempt facility. For purposes of this test, proceeds are reduced by amounts properly allocable on a pro rata basis between providing the exempt facility and other uses of the proceeds ("neutral costs"). Section 1.103-8(a)(1)(i) of the Income Tax Regulations.

The example in section 1.103-8(a)(6) of the regulations demonstrates that proceeds are reduced by the costs of issuing the state bonds for purposes of arriving at the amount of bond proceeds to which the substantially all test will be applied.

In this case, the portion of the bond proceeds (75*x* dollars) that will be used to construct the exempt facility will be a qualifying use of such proceeds. The portion of the bond proceeds (5*x* dollars) to be used to furnish working capital to the corporation will be a nonqualifying use of such proceeds. The proceeds used for the cost of issuing the bonds and the amount of proceeds to be placed in the reserve fund will be considered neutral costs because they will be attributable to both the qualifying and nonqualifying uses of bond proceeds. The example in section 1.103-8(a)(6) of the regulations illustrates that the cost of issuing bonds are deducted in arriving at bond proceeds. The amount to be placed in the reserve fund will qualify for similar treatment. See section 1.103-8(a)(1)(i).

HOLDING

Bond proceeds will be reduced by the amount of the issuance cost (5*x* dollars) and by the amount of the reserve fund (15*x* dollars). Because substantially all (75*x* dollars/80*x* dollars equals 93.75 percent) of the bond proceeds will be used to provide exempt facilities, the bonds will qualify for the exception provisions of section 103(b)(4) of the Code and the interest on the bonds will be excludable from the gross incomes of the bondholders under section 103(a)(1).

The result would be the same if the bonds were issued to finance industrial parks described in section 103(b)(5) of the Code or were issued as an exempt small issue under section 103(b)(6).

Section 121.—One-Time Exclusion of Gain from Sale of Principal Residence by Individual Who Has Attained Age 55

26 CFR 1.121-1: Gain from sale or exchange of residence of individual who has attained age 55.

Sale of residence; exclusion of gain; ownership and use tests. A taxpayer who otherwise meets the requirements of section 121 of the Code may make the election to exclude gain on the sale of a personal residence if the ownership and use tests are met, even though the tests are not met simultaneously.

Rev. Rul. 80-172

ISSUE

May a taxpayer elect, under section 121 of the Internal Revenue Code, to exclude gain from the sale of the taxpayer's principal residence under the circumstances described below?

FACTS

In 1970, A, who was 60 years old, occupied a rental apartment as A's principal residence. The building in which the apartment is located was subsequently converted to condominium ownership, and on July 15, 1974, A purchased the apartment, which remained A's principal residence. In 1977, A became seriously ill and on April 15, 1977, was moved to a convalescent home. On February 15, 1980, while still at the convalescent home, A sold the apartment.

LAW

Section 121(a) of the Code provides that at the election of the taxpayer, gross income does not include gain from the sale or exchange of property if (1) the taxpayer has attained the age of 55 before the date of the sale or exchange and (2) during the 5-year period ending on the date of the sale or exchange, the property has been owned and used by the taxpayer as the taxpayer's principal residence for periods aggregating 3 years or more. Under section 121(b), the amount of gain excluded from gross income may not exceed $100,000.

Section 1.121-1(b) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that in the case of a sale or exchange of a residence before July 26, 1981, a taxpayer who has attained age 65 on the date of such sale or exchange may elect to have section 121 of the Code applied if during the 8-year period ending on the date of the sale or exchange, the property has been owned and used by the taxpayer as the taxpayer's principal residence for periods aggregating 5 years or more.

In this case, because the sale occurred before July 26, 1981, and because A had attained age 65 on the date of the sale, the 8- and 5-year periods set forth in section 1.121-1(b) of the regulations may be elected. A sold the apartment on February 15, 1980; therefore, the 8-year period began on February 16, 1972, and ended on February 15, 1980. A purchased the apartment in 1974 and, therefore, owned the apartment for more than 5 years during the 8-year period. A resided in the apartment from 1970 until April 15, 1977, and, therefore, resided in the apartment for more than 5 years during the 8-year period beginning February 16, 1972. Thus, A has met both the ownership and use tests required by section 121 of the Code.

HOLDING

A may elect, under section 121 of the Code, to exclude gain from the sale of A's principal residence.

Section 162.—Trade or Business Expenses

26 CFR 1.162-5: Expenses for education. (Also Section 262; 1.262-1.)

Educational expenses; veterans; flight training. An airplane pilot may not deduct any otherwise allowable flight training expenses to the extent the expenses are directly reimbursed by the Veterans' Administration pursuant to 38 U.S.C. section 1677; Rev. Rul. 62-213 distinguished and clarified.

Rev. Rul. 80-173

ISSUE

Are an airline pilot's expenditures on tuition and fees for an aviation program involving the flying of certain types of small aircraft, deductible as ordinary and necessary business expenses under section 162 of the Internal Revenue Code when such expenses are directly reimbursed by veterans' benefit payments paid pursuant to 38 U.S.C. section 1677 (1976), as amended by Act of Nov. 23, 1977, Pub. L. 95-202, section 102 (1), 91 Stat. 1433?

FACTS

The taxpayer, a captain-pilot with a major airline, enrolled in an aviation program in which licensed pilots receive training in certain types of small aircraft. The total cost of the course was 10*x* dollars.

The taxpayer is a veteran, and therefore was receiving reimbursement from the Veterans' Administration under 38 U.S.C. section 1677 (1976) to the extent of 90 percent of the training expenditure. Such reimbursement is exempted from taxation by 38 U.S.C. section 3101 (1976), as amended by Act of Oct. 18, 1978, Pub. L. 95-479, section 301, 1978-2 C.B. 377.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 262 of the Code provides that except as otherwise expressly provided, no deduction shall be allowed for personal, living, or family expenses.

Section 162 of the Code provides for the deduction of all the ordinary and necessary expenses paid or incurred during the taxable year in carrying on any trade or business.

Whether expenditures for education are deductible under section 162 of the Code and section 1.162-5 of the Income Tax Regulations is highly factual and cannot be determined on the basis of the facts described above. However, as a general rule, if the training is necessary to maintain or improve skills required in the taxpayer's employment, the expense would be deductible. If the expenditure is necessary to meet the minimal educational requirements of the employment, or if the education qualifies the taxpayer for a new trade or business, the expenditure is not deductible.

If under the facts of a particular case, it is determined that an expense is otherwise properly deductible under section 162 of the Code, a taxpayer is not allowed a deduction for an expense to the extent it is allocable to a payment for which the taxpayer has been reimbursed (or for which the taxpayer's right to reimbursement has become fixed or mature). See Rev. Rul. 78-388, 1978-2 C.B. 110. Rev. Rul. 78-388 holds that certain moving expenses and the loss attributable to abandoned leasehold improvements, to the extent they are reimbursable, are not deductible under either section 162 or 165 of the Code.

If an expense has been (or will be) reimbursed in whole or in part, any deduction otherwise allowable with respect to the expense is disallowed to the extent of the reimbursement. In such a case, the taxpayer suffers no economic detriment and incurs no expense in making the expenditure to the extent of the reimbursement.

HOLDING

Provided it is determined that a deduction is allowable to the taxpayer under section 162 of the Code and section 1.162-5 of the regulations, the taxpayer may not deduct the 9*x* dollars under section 162 of the Code, which is the amount of the reimbursement to the taxpayer by the Veterans' Administration under 38 U.S.C. section 1677. Whether 1*x* dollars is deductible will depend on all the facts and circumstances in each case.

This holding applies only to reimbursement payments made under 38 U.S.C. section 1677. For treatment of subsistence and educational allowance payments made under 38 U.S.C. section 1681 (1976), which are not reimbursement payments determined by reference to amounts actually expended for tuition and fees, but rather are in the nature of a living stipend determined without regard to amounts expended, see Rev. Rul. 62-213, 1962-2 C.B. 59.

Upon the exercise of the option to sell X a fractional interest in an acquired lease, the taxpayer will recognize gain or loss. Rev. Rul. 80-174

ISSUE

How is the amount of the charitable contribution determined when property is retired from a multiple asset account and donated to a charitable organization?

FACTS

The taxpayer has a multiple asset account of machinery that is used in a trade or business as defined in section 1231(b) of the Internal Revenue Code. The Class Life Asset Depreciation Range (CLADR) system provided for by section 1.167(a)-11 of the Income Tax Regulations was not elected for use with respect to eligible property. The depreciation rate is based on the average expected useful life of the items. The depreciation method being used is the straight line method and pursuant to section 1.167 (a)-1(c) salvage value has been determined to be zero.

The taxpayer donated two items of machinery, identical types of property, to a charitable organization in the taxable year 1977. The use of the contributed property by the charitable organization is unrelated to the purpose or function constituting the basis for its exemption under section 501. Item A cost $200 in taxable year 1971 when it was added to the account, had a fair market value (FMV) of $50 as of the date of the contribution, and had reached a condition at which the taxpayer customarily retires similar assets.

Item B cost $300 when it was added to the account in the taxable year 1975 and it had a FMV of $250 on the date of the contribution. An average useful life of 5 years was estimated for these items and others of their type in establishing the depreciation rate for the account. Normally, the taxpayer retires assets similar to items A and B when they are 4 to 6 years old.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 170(e)(1) of the Code provides that the amount of any charitable contribution of property otherwise taken into account under that section shall be reduced by the sum of (A) the amount of the gain that would not have been long-term capital gain if the property had been sold by the taxpayer at its FMV at the time of such contribution, and (B) in the case of a charitable contribution of tangible personal property, if the use by the donee is unrelated to the purpose or function constituting the basis for its exemption under section 501, 40 percent (28/46 percent in the case of a corporation) of the amount of gain which would have been long-term capital gain if the property contributed had been sold by the taxpayer at its FMV at the time of such contribution.

Under the facts of this ruling the taxpayer would not have realized any long-term capital gain if the property contributed had been sold at its FMV at the time of the contribution. Thus, the amount described in section 170 (e)(1)(B) of the Code is zero. As a result the amount of the charitable contribution otherwise allowed shall be reduced only by the amount described in section 170((e)(1)(A).

Section 1.170A-4(a)(1) of the regulations provides that in the case of a contribution of ordinary income property, as defined in paragraph (b)(1) of that section, the amount of charitable contribution which would be taken into account under section 170(a) of the Code without regard to section 170(e) shall be reduced by the amount of gain which would have been recognized as gain which is not long-term capital gain if the property had been sold by the donor at its FMV at the time of its contribution to the charitable organization.

Section 1.170A-4(b)(4) of the regulations provides that for purposes of applying subparagraphs (1) and (2) of that paragraph, property that is used in the trade or business, as defined in section 1231(b) of the Code, shall be treated as a capital asset except that any gain in respect of such property that would have been recognized if the property had been sold by the donor at its FMV at the time of its contribution to the charitable organization shall be treated as ordinary income to the extent that such gain would have constituted ordinary income by reason of the application of section 1245(a).

Section 1245(a) of the Code provides, in pertinent part, that for depreciable personal property sold during a taxable year beginning after December 31, 1962, the amount by which the lower of (1) the recomputed basis or (2) the amount realized exceeds the adjusted basis of the property shall be treated as ordinary income. "Recomputed basis" in the instant case means the original cost of the items since they were acquired after December 31, 1961 and all of the adjustments reflected in the adjusted basis of such property are on account of deductions allowed for depreciation. See section 1.1245-2(a) of the regulations.

Section 1.167(a)-8(c)(1) of the regulations provides that for normal retirements from multiple asset accounts for which the depreciation rate is based on average expected useful life, "adjusted basis" is the salvage value estimated in determining the depreciation deduction in accordance with section 1.167(a)-1(c).

Section 1.167(a)-8(c)(3) of the regulations provides that for an abnormal retirement from a multiple asset account, the adjustment for depreciation applicable to the retired asset shall be made at the rate that would have been proper had the asset been depreciated in a single asset account (under the method of depreciation used for the multiple asset account) and is based upon either the average expected useful life or the maximum expected useful life of the asset, depending upon the method of determining the date of depreciation used in connection with the multiple asset account.

Section 1.167(a)-8(b) of the regulations provides that a retirement is considered normal if made within the range of years taken into consideration in fixing the depreciation rate and the asset is in a condition at which the taxpayer customarily retires similar assets. If the retirement comes earlier it may be considered abnormal.

Since item A is 6 years old and the taxpayer ordinarily retires similar items when they are 4 to 6 years old, its withdrawal from the account is a normal retirement under section 1.167(a)-8(b) of the regulations. By the same measure, the removal of item B after 2 years is an abnormal retirement.

Based on the fact that item A has zero salvage value, its adjusted basis is also zero pursuant to section 1.167(a)-8(c)(1) of the regulations. For item B, the adjusted basis is the original cost of $300 less 2 years' allowable depreciation determined at the rate that would have been applicable if the item had been depreciated separately using the same method that was used for the multiple asset account. Therefore, 2 years' depreciation using a useful life of 5 years and a straight line method is $120 and the adjusted basis is $180.

The amount that would be recognized as ordinary income under section 1245(a) of the Code, if item A had been sold at its FMV at the time of its contribution, is the amount by which the lower of its recomputed basis ($200) or its FMV ($50) exceeds its adjusted basis ($0). Therefore, the amount of ordinary income gain is $50.

Similarly, if item B had been sold at its FMV at the time of its contribution, the amount that would have been recognized as ordinary income under section 1245(a) of the Code would be $70, the amount by which its FMV ($250) exceeds its adjusted basis ($180).

HOLDING

The amount of the contribution before applying the percentage limitations of section 170(b) of the Code would be, with respect to item A, $0 (the FMV of $50 reduced by the $50 ordinary income gain if sold). With respect to item B, it would be $180 (the FMV of $250 reduced by the $70 ordinary income gain if sold).

Oil and gas leases; acquisition fees; option fees. The tax treatment of fees paid by taxpayers for assistance in participating in programs to acquire noncompetitive federal oil and gas leases in two situations is discussed. The transactions are incomplete in the year the programs are begun in each situation and the taxpayers do not recognize gain or loss in that year. Amounts allocable to the rights or options to sell fractional lease interests are not part of the basis of any lease acquired but are capital expenditures. Rev. Rul. 77-395 modified and clarified; Rev. Rul. 71-191 distinguished.

Rev. Rul. 80-176

ISSUES

1. Under the circumstances described below, are the fees paid by the taxpayers, A and B, for assistance in participating in programs to acquire federal oil and gas leases capital expenditures?

2. Is the cost of an option to sell a fractional interest in all leases acquired as part of the program properly treated as a reduction of the amount realized from the subsequent sale of a fractional interest in any leases acquired?

FACTS

A and B are individual investors that use the cash receipts and disbursements method of accounting and file their federal income tax returns on a calendar year basis. A and B desired to participate in the federal program for the noncompetitive leasing of government lands for oil and gas exploration and development, administered by the Bureau of Land Management (BLM).

In awarding leases under the noncompetitive program, BLM utilizes its simultaneous filing procedure, which provides all applicants with an equal chance to obtain leases on federal lands available for re-leasing. Applications to lease designated parcels must be submitted, signed, completed, and accompanied by a nonrefundable $10 filing fee. An applicant may file only one application for each numbered parcel on the list, but the applicant may make as many filings as there are available parcels.

Rather than file applications directly with BLM, in October 1976, A and B elected to participate in separate federal oil and gas lease acquisition programs offered by corporation X. For both programs X provided expert geological advice on United States Government land available for noncompetitive leasing, timely and accurate filing of offers to lease approved lands on behalf of the applicants, and payment of the filing fees to BLM.

Situation 1: Upon entering the program A paid X a fee of $100*x*. In return X was required to file on A's behalf a monthly minimum of 10*y* lease applications for a 12-month period. A simultaneously purchased, for $10*x*, a 12-month option that required X, at A's request, to purchase, for $50*x*, a specified fractional interest in all leases awarded to A as a result of the drawings. In relation to the total cost of the program to A, X's allocation between the fee and option was reasonable. In January 1977 A was awarded its only lease under the program and exercised the option in October 1977.

Situation 2: For a 12-month period beginning in October 1976, B participated in a federal oil and gas lease acquisition program offered by X that was similar to the program A participated in. However, instead of paying a lump-sum fee of $100*x* and $10*x* for the put option, B elected to pay a monthly fee of $10*x*. This fee was due before the first day of each month in which B elected to participate in the program. X was required to file, on B's behalf, a minimum of 10*y* lease applications in each month that B elected to participate in the program.

X did not offer B an option in writing that required X to purchase a specified fractional interest in all leases awarded to B as a result of the drawings. However, B knew that each person who had participated in X's program for 12 consecutive months had received at least one lease and that X had made a practice of offering to purchase for $75*x* a specified fractional interest in all leases acquired by persons who participated in this monthly program for a minimum of 12 consecutive months. A reasonable allocation of the total cost ($120*x*) of the program to B would be $108*x* to the lease application filing service and $12*x* to X's practice of offering to purchase for $75*x* a specified fractional interest in all leases acquired by participants. In reliance on this practice, B participated in the program each month for 12 consecutive months. In February 1977, B was awarded its only lease. In October 1977, X offered to purchase, and B agreed to sell, for $75*x*, a specified fraction of this lease.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 263(a) of the Internal Revenue Code provides that deductions are not allowable for capital expenditures.

Section 165(a) of the Code provides that there shall be allowed as a deduction any loss sustained during the taxable year and not compensated for by insurance or otherwise. Section 165(c) provides that, in the case of an individual, the deduction under section 165(a) shall be limited to losses incurred in a trade or business; incurred in any transaction entered into for profit, though not connected with a trade or business; or arising from a casualty or theft.

Section 1.165-1(b) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that to be allowable as a deduction under section 165(a) of the Code, a loss must be evidenced by closed and completed transactions, fixed by identifiable events, and actually sustained during the taxable year.

Section 1.165-2 of the regulations provides that there shall be allowed as a deduction under section 165(a) of the Code, for the taxable year in which actually sustained, a loss incurred in a business or in a transaction entered into for profit and arising from the sudden termination of the usefulness in such business or transaction of any nondepreciable property, when such business or transaction is discontinued or such property is permanently discarded from use therein.

Rev. Rul. 67-141, 1967-1 C.B. 153, states that fees paid by an applicant rendered in connection with the acquisition of federal noncompetitive oil and gas leases are not deductible expenses and must be capitalized as part of the cost of the leases acquired and are recoverable through depletion.

Rev. Rul. 71-191, 1971-1 C.B. 77, provides that in cases in which a lease is not acquired, the fees paid for services rendered in connection with the attempted acquisition of noncompetitive government oil and gas leases are deductible under section 165(a) of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 77-395, 1977-2 C.B. 80, considers a program similar to that under consideration except that if no leases are acquired, the filing service company would assign a lease to the taxpayer and then buy it back for the option price. Rev. Rul. 77-395 concludes that because the services were rendered in connection with an integrated arrangement under which the investor was to acquire at least one lease on federal lands, all of the amounts expended, including the option fee, must be capitalized as part of the one assigned lease acquired by the taxpayer in that ruling. In that ruling, the taxpayer sustained a loss upon reassignment of the lease, which was recognized under section 1231(a) of the Code.

In Larsen v. Commissioner, 66 T.C. 478 (1976), acq., 1977-2 C.B. 1, taxpayers incurred various expenses in seeking to acquire oil and gas leases in two project areas. Taxpayers acquired some leases but were unsuccessful in attempts to acquire other leases. The tax court concluded that expenses incurred in unsuccessfully attempting to lease specific acreage from a specific landowner constituted losses deductible under section 165(a) and (c) of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 71-521, 1971-2 C.B. 313, discusses the treatment, for federal income tax purposes, of premiums paid by an individual taxpayer for the purchase of a "put" option contract for sales of stock. The purchase of a put is a transaction entered into without respect to any particular share of stock and its cost should be carried to a deferred account as a capital expenditure made in an incomplete transaction entered into for profit. If the taxpayer exercises the put, the cost of the put is offset against the sum received for the sale of stock. Although Rev. Rul. 71-521 is connected with an option involving stock, the transaction in the instant revenue ruling is of a similar nature because it involves the purchase of an option to sell an interest in an oil and gas lease property for a specified amount within a certain period of time.

Situation 1: A's participation in X's program is a single transaction because it was a contract for a specified number of filings during a 12-month period for a lump sum. The transaction remained open until completion of the last filing to which A was entitled under the program. Until all filings were completed, there was no closed and completed transaction; therefore, the treatment of the cost cannot be fixed until it is determined whether one or more leases are acquired.

Under the BLM simultaneous filing procedure, an individual can expect to have its application chosen at few, if any, public drawings. However, the multiple filings on A's behalf under X's program improved A's opportunity of acquiring a lease. A paid a lump sum for a specified number of filings during the 12-month period, and the cost of the program is a capital cost of the leases successfully acquired. Larsen v. Commissioner is distinguishable since there the overall success rate in acquiring leases depended on various factors peculiar to each negotiation and was not affected solely by the number of separate leasing opportunities.

In the instant case, a lease was acquired in 1977 as a result of the drawings. Therefore, the cost of the services rendered in connection with the acquisition must be capitalized as part of the cost of the lease. No loss under section 165(a) of a Code is allowable in 1976 because the transaction was not complete as of the end of 1976. Rev. Rul. 71-191 is distinguishable because there the facts do not specify that the transaction occurred in more than one year.

Situation 2: As in Situation 1, the multiple filings on B's behalf under X's program improved B's opportunity of acquiring a lease. In addition, the tacit agreement by X to buy a specified fractional interest in all leases acquired by B was conditioned on B's monthly participation for 12 consecutive months. If B participated for this period, B could substantially reduce the cost of participation because B would recover at least five-eighths of its payments to X when B sold the specified interest to X. This recovery feature combined with X's practice of awarding at least one lease to each person participating for 12 consecutive months and the effect of multiple filings shows that B's participation in the 12-month program is a single transaction under which monthly payments are made for X's services during the entire 12-month period. Thus, following the same rationale as in Situation 1, the transaction remained open until the completion of the last filing in which B was required to participate to be eligible for X's practice of offering to purchase the specified fraction of any leaseholds B acquired. Until the filings are completed, there is no closed and completed transaction. Therefore, the treatment of the costs cannot be fixed until it is determined whether one or more leases are acquired.

HOLDINGS

1. The fee paid by A in the taxable year 1976 to participate in a program to acquire federal oil and gas leases is a capital expenditure includable in the basis of the single lease acquired in 1977. Furthermore, no part of such fee is allowable as a deduction in taxable year 1976 because the transaction was incomplete since all the applications had not been filed.

2. Upon the exercise of the option to sell X a fractional interest in the lease acquired, A will recognize gain or loss measured by the difference between the amount received for the fractional interest reduced by the cost of the option and the portion of the basis in the lease allocable to such fractional interest.

1. Nine x dollars of each monthly fee paid by B in the taxable years 1976 and 1977 to participate in a program to acquire federal oil and gas leases are capital expenditures includable in the basis of the single lease acquired in 1977. Furthermore, no part of such fee is allowable as a deduction in taxable year 1976 because the transaction was incomplete since all applications had not been filed.

2. Upon the sale of the specified fractional interest in the lease acquired, B will recognize gain or loss measured by the difference between the amount received from the fractional interest reduced by the $12*x* allocable to X's practice of offering to purchase a specified fractional interest and that portion of the basis in the lease allocable to such fractional interest.

Whether such gain or loss, in both Situation 1 and Situation 2 is subject to the provisions of sections 1221 or 1231 of the Code requires a factual determination of the holding period, and whether, in the hands of the participant, such leases were properly regarded as property used in the trade or business or as investment property.

EFFECT ON OTHER REVENUE RULINGS

Consistent with Rev. Rul. 71-521, and this revenue ruling, Rev. Rul. 77-395 is modified to the extent that in the first situation, the option fee and, in the second situation, the amount allocated to the taxpayer's understood right to sell a fractional interest in any lease acquired, is not a part of the basis of the leasehold. Further, Rev. Rul. 77-395 is clarified with respect to the application of section 1231(a) of the Code to the loss incurred by A and B; specifically, to determine if section 1231(a) applies, a factual determination must be made as to the length of the holding period and the purpose for which the taxpayer held the lease. Also, Rev. Rul. 71-191 is distinguished.

PROSPECTIVE APPLICATION

Pursuant to the authority contained in section 7805(b) of the Code, the conclusion of this revenue ruling that the cost of the option is not to be added to the basis of the oil and gas properties when such properties are acquired will not be applied adversely to taxpayers who acquire oil and gas properties under written agreements of the type described in Rev. Rul. 77-395 that were entered into prior to July 7, 1980, the date of publication in the Internal Revenue Bulletin.

Section 331.—Gain or Loss to Shareholders in Corporate Liquidations

26 CFR 1.331-1: Corporate liquidations. (Also Section 451; 1.451-2.)

Liquidating distribution; constructive receipt; surrender of shares. A domestic corporation, pursuant to a plan of complete liquidation, notified its shareholders that they would be entitled to receive a distribution in liquidation upon surrender of their shares of stock after a given date. All the corporation's liabilities had been discharged, its assets had been reduced to cash, and there was no likelihood that the liquidation would not be consummated. A cash method individual shareholder is in constructive receipt of the liquidating distribution as of the date the distribution first becomes payable.

Rev. Rul. 80-177

ISSUE

Is a shareholder of a liquidating corporation under the circumstances described below in receipt of the liquidating distribution at the time the distribution first becomes payable rather than on the date it is actually received by the shareholder upon surrender of his stock?

FACTS

Pursuant to a plan of complete liquidation adopted by a domestic corporation, each shareholder was notified prior to February 15, 1978, that he would be entitled to receive a distribution in liquidation upon surrender of his shares of stock at any time after March 1, 1978. As of March 1, 1978, all of the corporation's liabilities had been discharged and its assets had been reduced to cash, and events had progressed to such a point that there was no likelihood that the liquidation would not be consummated. Under the circumstances, the shareholders' rights "as shareholders" were effectively terminated when the distribution first became payable, rather than upon the shareholders' actual receipt when they surrendered their stock. All that the shareholders had to do was turn in their shares and receive their money. Under local law the surrender of their stocks did not cause them to relinquish any rights which would constitute a "substantial limitation or restriction" on receipt of the money within the meaning of section 1.451-2(a) of the Income Tax Regulations.

The taxpayer, a United States person who had been a shareholder of the corporation for several years prior to 1978, used the cash receipts and disbursements method of accounting and filed federal income tax returns on the basis of a calendar year. In January 1979, the taxpayer surrendered all of the shares of stock to the corporation and received a single liquidating distribution in complete liquidation on that date.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 331 of the Code provides the general rule that amounts distributed in complete liquidation of a corporation will be treated as in full payment in exchange for the stock. Neither section 331 nor the regulations thereunder set forth rules for determining when a distribution is received by the shareholder. The legislative history of section 331 indicates that its purpose was to characterize a liquidating distribution as an exchange (before the enactment in 1924 of the predecessor of section 331 such a distribution had been treated as a dividend) and there is no indication that Congress was concerned with establishing rules as to when a liquidating distribution is received by a shareholder. S. Rep. No. 398, 68th Cong., 1st Sess. 11-12 (1924), 1939-1 (Part 2) C.B. 266, 274 and H.R. Rep. No. 179, 68th Cong., 1st Sess. 11 (1924), 1939-1 (Part 2) C.B. 241, 249. Thus, all rules applicable to the receipt of income, including the constructive receipt doctrine, are applicable in determining when a liquidating distribution is received by a shareholder under section 331. However, with regard to the requirement of section 337(a) that all of the assets of a corporation be distributed in complete liquidation (less assets retained to meet claims) within the 12-month period beginning on the date of adoption of a plan of complete liquidation, see Vern Realty, Inc. v. Commissioner, 58 T.C. 1005, 1012 (1972), aff'd., Civil No. 73-1030 (1st Cir. April 26, 1973), in which it was indicated that such requirement is not met unless the corporation actually distributes all of its assets within the 12-month period.

Section 451(a) of the Code provides that the amount of any item of gross income will be included in the gross income for the taxable year in which received by the taxpayer, unless, under the method of accounting used in computing taxable income, such amount is to be properly accounted for as of a different period.

Section 1.451-1(a) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that gains, profits, and income are to be included in gross income for the taxable year in which they are actually or constructively received by the taxpayer unless includible for a different year in accordance with the taxpayer's method of accounting. Section 1.451-1(a) also provides that under the cash receipts and disbursements method of accounting, the amount is includible in gross income when actually or constructively received.

Section 1.451-2(a) of the regulations provides that income, although not actually reduced to a taxpayer's possession, is constructively received by the taxpayer in the taxable year during which it is credited to the taxpayer's account, set apart for the taxpayer, or otherwise made available so that the taxpayer may draw upon it at any time, or so that the taxpayer could have drawn upon it during the taxable year if notice of intention to withdraw had been given. However, section 1.451-2(a) further provides that income is not constructively received if the taxpayer's control of its receipt is subject to substantial limitations or restrictions.

In the present case, the liquidating distribution was payable March 1, 1978. There was no doubt that the liquidation would be consummated and that the distribution would be made since all liabilities had been discharged, the assets had been reduced to cash, and events had advanced to such a point that there was no likelihood that the liquidation would not be consummated. Furthermore, under the circumstances, the shareholders' rights "as shareholders" were effectively terminated when the distribution first became payable, rather than upon the shareholders' actual receipt when they surrendered their stock, since all they had to do was present the certificates and receive their money. The requirement that the certificates had to be presented for payment of the distribution is indistinguishable from the presentation of a pass book for crediting of interest earned on a savings account, and it did not represent a substantial restriction on the shareholders' right to the money under section 1.451-2 of the regulations. Since the shareholder used the cash receipts and disbursements method of accounting, and filed federal income tax returns on the basis of a calendar year, this item of income should have been included in gross income in 1978, the year the distribution was constructively received and not in 1979 when it was actually received.

HOLDING

Under the facts and circumstances of this case, the shareholder was in constructive receipt of the liquidating distribution on March 1, 1978, the time the distribution first became payable.

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Final regulations.

SUMMARY: This document provides final regulations under sections 501(c)(2) and 501(c)(13) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, relating to exempt title holding companies and to exempt cemetery companies and crematoria, respectively. These regulations make clerical changes in the regulations under section 501(c)(2), so as to reflect the revision of section 514 by the Tax Reform Act of 1969 (Pub. L. 91-172, 83 Stat. 543) [1969-3 C.B. 10] and to reflect changes made in section 501(c)(13) by the Act of December 31, 1970 (Pub. L. 91-618, 84 Stat. 1855) [1971-1 C.B. 539], exempting certain crematoria from the corporate income tax. The regulations under section 501(c)(13) also clarify the standards for exemption from income tax and help identify when certain transfers to cemetery companies and crematoria are in exchange for equity interests rather than for debt obligations. Furthermore, the regulations correct two clerical errors contained in Treasury Decision 7229 [1973-1 C.B. 265], published December 21, 1972, relating to unrelated debt-financed income of certain tax-exempt organizations. These regulations provide necessary guidance to the public for compliance with these Acts, and affect certain title holding companies and certain cemetery companies and crematoria that are exempt from taxation.

DATE: The regulations are effective for various taxable years as specified in the regulations.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

On July 8, 1975, the Federal Register published proposed amendments to the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) under sections 501(c)(2) and 501(c)(13) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (40 FR 28613). The amendments were proposed to conform the regulations to the Tax Reform Act of 1969 (83 Stat. 543) and to the Act of December 31, 1970 (84 Stat. 1855). On November 29, 1978, the Federal Register published proposed amendments to the proposed regulations under section 501(c)(13) (43 FR 55797). A public hearing was held on March 29, 1979. After consideration of all comments regarding the proposed amendments, those amendments are adopted, as revised, by this Treasury decision.

The comments received with respect to the proposed amendments generally concerned three issues relating to exempt cemetery companies and crematoria. First, it was recommended that § 1.501(c)(13)-1(a) be revised to permit mutual cemeteries to be exempt even if operated for profit. As proposed on July 8, 1975, § 1.501(c)(13)-1(a) makes it clear that only nonprofit mutual cemetery companies would be exempt. It has been concluded that the phrase "or which are not operated for profit" was added to section 501(c)(13) not as a separate qualification for exemption, but to take care of mutual cemetery companies that would not be operating "exclusively" for the benefit of members because of additional charitable activities, such as the burial of paupers. Additional support for this position is contained in section 170(c)(5), the counterpart to section 501(c)(13) for purposes of charitable contributions. Section 170(c)(5) reflects the emphasis placed by Congress on the "quasi charitable" nature of the type of organizations intended to be exempt under section 501(c)(13) by providing that only contributions to nonprofit mutual cemetery companies and nonprofit cemetery corporations are deductible. Accordingly, no change has been made to § 1.501(c)(13)-1(a) in the final regulations.

Second, it was recommended that § 1.501(c)(13)-1(c)(1), relating to the issuance of preferred stock, be withdrawn or substantially modified so that the use of preferred stock could continue to be available to tax-exempt cemeteries and crematoria. As proposed on November 29, 1978, § 1.501(c)(13)-1(c)(1) provides that a cemetery company or crematorium which issues preferred stock on or after November 28, 1978, will not be exempt from income tax. It has been concluded that the rule which permitted the issuance of preferred stock was inconsistent with the requirement of section 501(c)(13) that no part of the net earnings of an organization otherwise described in that section may inure to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual. The amendments, however, recognize the continued exempt status of cemeteries and crematoria which, prior to November 28, 1978, issued preferred stock meeting certain restrictions. The general prohibition on the issuance of preferred stock has been retained.

The comments relating to preferred stock also suggested that, if the amendment barring the use of preferred stock is adopted, § 1.501(c)(13)-1(c)(2) (the transitional rule) should be modified to include a clause protecting those cemeteries and crematoria which, prior to November 28, 1978, were in the process of issuing such stock. This recommendation has been adopted in new § 1.501(c)(13)-1(c)(3) which provides that a cemetery company or crematorium shall not fail to be exempt solely because it issues preferred stock on or after November 28, 1978, if such stock meets certain restrictions and is issued pursuant to a plan which had been reduced to writing and adopted prior to November 28, 1978.

Third, it was recommended that § 1.501(c)(13)-1(d) be revised to indicate that where the vendor of property to a cemetery company does not control the cemetery, tax-exempt status should not be denied merely because the payments do not take the form of a traditional debt obligation. As proposed on July 8, 1975, § 1.501(c)(13)-1(d) provides that a cemetery company or crematorium is not exempt from income tax if property is transferred to such organization in exchange for an equity interest so long as the equity interest remains outstanding.

Section 1.501(c)(13)-1(d) previously listed several factors that would be considered in determining whether a bona fide debt obligation existed. The factors previously listed have been eliminated and paragraph (d) now simply provides that no person may have any interest in the net earnings of a tax-exempt cemetery company or crematorium, including any interest that constitutes equity under section 385 or the regulations thereunder.

Finally, minor technical clarifications have been made to reflect the fact that section 501(c)(13) does not grant exemption but merely describes organizations which are exempt under section 501(a).

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of these regulations is Harry Beker of the Employee Plans and Exempt Organizations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulations, both on matters of substance and style.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, 26 CFR Part 1 is amended as follows:

Paragraph 1. Section 1.501(c)(2)-1(a) is amended to read as follows:

§ 1.501(c)(2)-1 Corporations organized to hold title to property for exempt organizations.

(a) A corporation described in section 501(c)(2) and otherwise exempt from tax under section 501(a) is taxable upon its unrelated business taxable income. For taxable years beginning before January 1, 1970. see § 1.511-2(c)(4). Since a corporation described in section 501(c)(2) cannot be exempt under section 501(a) if it engages in any business other than that of holding title to property and collecting income therefrom, it cannot have unrelated business taxable income as defined in section 512 other than income which is treated as unrelated business taxable income solely because of the applicability of section 512(a)(3)(C); or debt financed income which is treated as unrelated business taxable income solely because of section 514; or certain interest, annuities, royalties, or rents which are treated as unrelated business taxable income solely because of section 512(b)(3)(B)(ii) or (13). Similarly, exempt status under section 501(c)(2) shall not be affected where certain rents from personal property leased with real property are treated as unrelated business taxable income under section 512(b)(3)(A)(ii) solely because such rents attributable to such personal property are more than incidental when compared to the total rents received or accrued under the lease, or under section 512(b)(3)(B)(i) solely because such rents attributable to such personal property exceed 50 percent of the total rents received or accrued under the lease.

* * * * *

Par. 2. Section 1.501(c)(13) is deleted.

Par. 3. Section 1.501(c)(13)-1 is amended to read as follows:

§ 1.501(c)(13)-1 Cemetery companies and crematoria.

(a) Nonprofit mutual cemetery companies. A nonprofit cemetery company may be entitled to exemption if it is owned by and operated exclusively for the benefit of its lot owners who hold such lots for bona fide burial purposes and not for the purpose of resale. A mutual cemetery company which also engages in charitable activities, such as the burial of paupers, will be regarded as operating in conformity with this standard. Further, the fact that a mutual cemetery company limits its membership to a particular class of individuals, such as members of a family, will not affect its status as mutual so long as all the other requirements of section 501(c)(13) are met.

(b) Nonprofit cemetery companies and crematoria. Any nonprofit corporation, chartered solely for the purpose of the burial, or (for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1970) the cremation of bodies, and not permitted by its charter to engage in any business not necessarily incident to that purpose, is exempt from income tax, provided that no part of its net earnings inures to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual.

(c) Preferred stock—(1) In general. Except as provided in subparagraph (3) of this paragraph, a cemetery company or crematorium is not described in section 501(c)(13) if it issues preferred stock on or after November 28, 1978.

(2) Transitional rule for preferred stock issued prior to November 28, 1978. In the case of preferred stock issued prior to November 28, 1978, a cemetery company or crematorium which issued such stock shall not fail to be exempt from income tax solely because it issued preferred stock which entitled the holders to dividends at a fixed rate, not exceeding the legal rate of interest in the State of incorporation or 8 percent per annum, whichever is greater, on the value of the consideration for which the stock was issued, if its articles of incorporation require:

(i) That the preferred stock be retired at par as rapidly as funds therefor become available from operations, and

(ii) That all funds not required for the payment of dividends upon or for the retirement of preferred stock be used by the company for the care and improvement of the cemetery property.

The term "legal rate of interest" shall mean the rate of interest prescribed by law in the State of incorporation which prevails in the absence of an agreement between contracting parties fixing a rate.

(3) Transitional rule for preferred stock issued on or after November 28, 1978. In the case of preferred stock issued on or after November 28, 1978, a cemetery company or crematorium shall not fail to be exempt from income tax if its articles of incorporation and the preferred stock meet the requirements of subparagraph (2) and if such stock is issued pursuant to a plan which has been reduced to writing and adopted prior to November 28, 1978. The adoption of the plan must be shown by the acts of the duly constituted responsible officers and appear upon the official records of the cemetery company or crematorium.

(d) Sales to exempt cemetery companies and crematoria. Except as provided in paragraph (c)(2) or (c)(3) of this section (relating to transitional rules for preferred stock), no person may have any interest in the net earnings of a tax-exempt cemetery company or crematorium. Thus, a cemetery company or crematorium is not exempt from tax if property is transferred to such organization in exchange for an interest in the net earnings of the organization so long as such interest remains outstanding. An interest in a cemetery or crematorium that constitutes an equity interest within the meaning of section 385 will be considered an interest in the net earnings of the cemetery. However, an interest in a cemetery company or crematorium that does not constitute an equity interest within the meaning of section 385 may nevertheless constitute an interest in the net earnings of the organization. Thus, for example, a bond or other evidence of indebtedness issued by a cemetery company or crematorium which provides for a fixed rate of interest but which, in addition, provides for additional interest payments contingent upon the revenues or income of the organization is considered an interest in the net earnings of the organization. Similarly, a convertible debt obligation issued by a cemetery company or crematorium after July 7, 1975, is considered an interest in the net earnings of the organization.

Par. 4. Section 1.514(c)-1 is amended by striking out from the second sentence of paragraph (f) "section 221(d)(3) (12 U.S.C. 1715(d)(3)) or section 236 (12 U.S.C. 1715x-1)" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 221(d)(3) (12 U.S.C. 1715(l)(d)(3)) or section 236 (12 U.S.C. 1715z-1)".

TER A, PART 1.—INCOME TAX; TAXABLE YEARS BEGINNING AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1953

Treatment of proceeds from bingo games

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Final regulations.

SUMMARY: This document contains final regulations relating to the treatment of proceeds from bingo games conducted by tax-exempt organizations. Changes in the applicable tax law were made by the Act of October 21, 1978 [Pub L. 95-502, 1978-2 C.B. 393, 395]. The regulations provide tax-exempt organizations with the guidance needed to comply with that Act and would affect tax-exempt organizations that conduct bingo games.

DATE: The regulations are effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1969.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

On August 28, 1979, the Federal Register published proposed amendments to the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) under sections 513 and 527 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1943 (44 F.R. 50361). The amendments were proposed to conform the regulations to sections 301 and 302 of the Act of October 21, 1978 (92 Stat. 1702). Three comments were received from the public. No hearing was held. After consideration of all comments, the proposed regulations under section 513 are adopted as revised by this Treasury decision. The proposed amendments to the regulations under section 527 remain as proposed regulations. It is intended that the proposed amendments will be adopted by the Treasury decision to be published with respect to the proposed regulation under section 527 that were published in the Federal Register on November 24, 1976 (41 F.R. 51840).

COMMENTS ON THE PROPOSED REGULATIONS

Two of the three comments received from the public objected to Example (1)(ii) of § 1.513-5(c)(3) of the proposed regulations. That example illustrates § 1.513-5(c)(1) of the proposed regulations and provides that where the laws of a State prohibit all forms of gambling activity, including bingo games, a bingo game conducted by a tax-exempt organization in the State constitutes unrelated trade or business regardless of whether, or to what degree, the State law is enforced. The commentators suggested that bingo should not be considered an illegal activity if State gambling statutes are not generally enforced against tax-exempt organizations that conduct bingo games.

To determine whether bingo is illegal in a given State, the Internal Revenue Service must necessarily look to State statutes and decisions of the State courts interpreting those statutes. It would not be appropriate for the Internal Revenue Service to independently determine that a statute proscribing gambling is, nevertheless, not the law of the State. In the legislative history of the Act of October 21, 1978, Congress specified that the requirement of section 513(f)(2) that an organization not conduct bingo games in violation of State or local law was "designed to ensure that no Federal tax benefit is provided for activities which are conducted illegally." H. Rep. No. 95-1608, 95th Cong., 2nd Sess. 6 (1978), 1978-2 C.B. 395, 397. Accordingly, the final regulations are not materially different from the proposed regulations on this point.

The other comment received from the public suggested that the regulations contain a clear, concise example of a bingo game that would be excluded from the term "unrelated trade or business" under section 513(f). The final regulations contain such an example. In addition, the examples in the final regulations have been clarified.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of this regulation is Charles Kerby of the Employee Plans and Exempt Organizations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in matters of substance and style.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, the following amendments to the regulations are hereby adopted:

§ 1.513-5 Certain bingo games not unrelated trade or business.

(a) In general. Under section 513(f), and subject to the limitations in paragraph (c) of this section, in the case of an organization subject to the tax imposed by section 511, the term "unrelated trade or business" does not include any trade or business that consists of conducting bingo games (as defined in paragraph (d) of this section).

(b) Exception. The provisions of this section shall not apply with respect to any bingo game otherwise excluded from the term "unrelated trade or business" by reason of section 513(a)(1) and § 1.513-1(e)(1) (relating to trades or businesses in which substantially all the work is performed without compensation).

(c) Limitations—(1) Bingo games must be legal. Paragraph (a) of this section shall not apply with respect to any bingo game conducted in violation of State or local law.

(2) No commercial competition. Paragraph (a) of this section shall not apply with respect to any bingo game conducted in a jurisdiction in which bingo games are ordinarily carried out on a commercial basis. Bingo games are "ordinarily carried out on a commercial basis" within a jurisdiction if they are regularly carried on (within the meaning of § 1.513-1(c)) by for-profit organizations in any part of that jurisdiction. Normally, the entire State will constitute the appropriate jurisdiction for determining whether bingo games are ordinarily carried out on a commercial basis. However, if State law permits local jurisdictions to determine whether bingo games may be conducted by for-profit organizations, or if State law limits or confines the conduct of bingo games by for-profit organizations to specific local jurisdictions, then the local jurisdiction will constitute the appropriate jurisdiction for determining whether bingo games are ordinarily carried out on a commercial basis.

(3) Examples. The application of this paragraph is illustrated by the examples that follow. In each example, it is assumed that the bingo games referred to are operated by individuals who are compensated for their services. Accordingly, none of the bingo games would be excluded from the term "unrelated trade or business" under section 513(a)(1).

Example (1). Church Z, a tax-exempt organization, conducts weekly bingo games in State O. State and local laws in State O expressly provide that bingo games may be conducted by tax-exempt organizations. Bingo games are not conducted in State O by any for-profit businesses. Since Z's bingo games are not conducted in violation of State or local law and are not the type of activity ordinarily carried out on a commercial basis in State O, Z's bingo games do not constitute unrelated trade or business.

Example (2). Rescue Squad X, a tax-exempt organization, conducts weekly bingo games in State M. State M has a statutory provision that prohibits all forms of gambling including bingo games. However, that law generally is not enforced by State officials against local charitable organizations such as X that conduct bingo games to raise funds. Since bingo games are illegal under State law, X's bingo games constitute unrelated trade or business regardless of the degree to which the State law is enforced.

Example (3). Veterans' organizations Y and X, both tax-exempt organizations, are organized under the laws of State N. State N has a statutory provision that permits bingo games to be conducted by tax-exempt organizations. In addition, State N permits bingo games to be conducted by for-profit organizations in city S, a resort community located in county R. Several for-profit organizations conduct nightly bingo games in city S. Y conducts weekly bingo games in city S. X conducts weekly bingo games in county R. Since State law confines the conduct of bingo games by for-profit organizations to city S, and since bingo games are regularly carried on there by those organizations, Y's bingo games conducted in city S constitute unrelated trade or business. However, X's bingo games conducted in county R outside of city S do not constitute unrelated trade or business.

(d) Bingo game defined. A bingo game is a game of chance played with cards that are generally printed with five rows of five squares each. Participants place markers over randomly called numbers on the cards in an attempt to form a preselected pattern such as a horizontal, vertical, or diagonal line, or all four corners. The first participant to form the preselected pattern wins the game. As used in this section, the term "bingo game" means any game of bingo of the type described above in which wagers are placed, winners are determined, and prizes or other property is distributed in the presence of all persons placing wagers in that game. The term "bingo game" does not refer to any game of chance (including, but not limited to, keno games, dice games, card games, and lotteries) other than the type of game described in this paragraph.

(e) Effective date. Section 513(f) and this section apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1969.

This Treasury decision is issued under the authority contained in section 7805 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (68A Stat. 917; 26 U.S.C. 7805).

Section 1033.—Involuntary Conversions

26 CFR 1.1033(a)-2: Involuntary conversion into similar property, into money or into dissimilar property.

Nonrecognition of gain; timber damaged by storm; voluntary sale. The nonrecognition of gain provisions of section 1033(a) of the Code are applicable to proceeds received from the voluntary sale of timber downed by high winds, earthquake, or volcanic eruption when the proceeds are used to purchase other standing timber; Rev. Rul. 72-372 revoked.

Rev. Rul. 80-175

ISSUE

Reconsideration has been given to Rev. Rul. 72-372, 1972-2 C.B. 471, which deals with the application of the nonrecognition of gain provisions of section 1033(a) of the Internal Revenue Code with respect to the proceeds received from a sale of timber downed by high winds.

FACTS

In Rev. Rul. 72-372 the taxpayer was the owner of timberland. As a result of a hurricane, a considerable number of trees were uprooted. The timber was not insured, and once downed, was subject to decay or being rendered totally worthless by insects within a relatively short period of time. The taxpayer was, however, able to sell the damaged timber and realized a gain from such sale. The proceeds of the sale were used to purchase other standing timber.

Rev. Rul. 72-372 holds that a gain from a voluntary sale of such timber under these circumstances does not qualify for nonrecognition of gain under section 1033(a) of the Code because there was no direct conversion into money nor was such sale precipitated by the threat or imminence of requisition or condemnation.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 1033(a)(1) of the Code provides rules under which no gain is to be recognized where property is compulsorily or involuntarily converted into property similar or related in service or use to the property so converted. Section 1.1033(a)-1(a) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that an involuntary conversion may be, among other things, the result of the destruction of property in whole or in part.

Section 1033(a)(2)(A) of the Code provides for the nonrecognition of gain if property is involuntarily converted into money and that money is invested within a specified period of time, in other property similar or related in service or use to the property so converted.

Section 1033(a)(2)(B) of the Code states the time period within which converted property must be replaced. That time period commences with the date of the disposition of the converted property. The term "disposition of the converted property" is defined by section 1033(a)(2)(E)(ii) to mean the destruction, theft, seizure, requisition, or condemnation of the converted property, or the sale or exchange of such property under threat or imminence of requisition or condemnation. Thus, the term "disposition of the converted property" is defined for the purpose of establishing the beginning of the replacement period and not for the purpose of defining the term "involuntary conversion." Section 1.1033(a)-1(a) of the regulations defines the latter term to include the destruction of property. In the present case, the taxpayer's property was destroyed by a hurricane.

In S. H. Kress and Co. v. Commissioner, 40 T.C. 142, 153 (1963), acq., 1965-1 C.B. 4 the Tax Court of the United States stated that the basic purpose of section 1033 of the Code is to allow the taxpayer to replace his property without realization of gain "where he is compelled to give up such property because of circumstances beyond his control." In S & B Realty Co. v. Commissioner, 54 T.C. 863, 871 (1970), acq., 1970-2 C.B. xxi the court stated that "When Congress enacted sections 214(a)(12) and 234(a)(14) of the Revenue Act of 1921 [the predecessors of section 1033] it obviously intended to grant a measure of tax relief to those who were compelled by the specified circumstances to convert their property into cash." The involuntary conversion provisions allow recognition of gain to be postponed on the theory that the taxpayer was compelled to dispose of property and had no economic choice in the matter. The taxpayer in the instant case was compelled by the destruction of the timber to sell it for whatever the taxpayer could or suffer a total loss. Consequently, the facts of this case place it within the ambit of those circumstances contemplated by the provisions of section 103

Both the Internal Revenue Service and the Tax Court have considered this application of section 1033(a) of the Code to sales of property not threatened by requisition or condemnation. Rev. Rul. 54-395, 1954-2 C.B 143, holds that any gain from the sale of poisoned cattle at salvage value or in settlement of damage claims against manufacturers of contaminated feed pellets was subject to the involuntary conversion relief provisions. In Masser v. Commissioner, 30 T.C. 741 (1958), acq., 1959-2 C.B. 5 the court considered this application of section 1033 to a sale of property that was part of an economic unit, a portion of which was sold under threat of condemnation. It found that the sale of both pieces of property constituted an involuntary conversion because it was no longer practical to use the remaining property for the purpose intended.

The present case and Masser share three common features. First, an event specified by the statute as one that may result in an involuntary conversion occurred. Second, that event rendered the property unfit or impractical for its intended use. Third, the property was sold and the proceeds invested in similar property. Furthermore, the argument for applying section 1033 of the Code to the instant case is stronger than in Masser. In the instant case, the property sold was the very property directly affected by the casualty while in Masser the property sold was only indirectly affected by the condemnation.

In C. G. Willis, Inc. v. Commissioner, 41 T.C. 468 (1964), the court considered the application of section 1033 of the Code to the proceeds from the sale of a partially damaged ship. The ship was repairable; however, the owners chose to sell the ship (at a gain) rather than make the necessary repairs. The proceeds from the sale, along with the insurance proceeds for the repair cost, were invested in a barge that would cover the same ports and carry the same kind of cargo as the damaged ship. The ship owners claimed nonrecognition treatment for this transaction under the provisions of section 1033(a).

In denying the claim for nonrecognition treatment, the court stated that "Involuntary conversion, within the meaning of section 1033(a) of the Code, means that the taxpayer's property, through some outside force or agency beyond his control, is no longer useful or available to him for his purposes." The court concluded that "It cannot be said that the sale of the unrepaired ship was a result of its partial destruction. The sale was the result of a business decision by the owner that the money equivalent of the unrepaired ship would serve its business interests better."

In the present case, the downed timber was not repairable and was generally no longer useful to the taxpayer in the context of its original objective. The destruction caused by the hurricane forced the taxpayer to sell the downed timber for whatever price it could get. Unlike the situation in Willis, the sale of the downed timber was dictated by the damage caused by the hurricane.

HOLDING

Upon reconsideration of Rev. Rul. 72-372, and in light of the court decisions cited above, it is now the Service's position that the nonrecognition of gain provisions of section 1033(a) of the Code are applicable with respect to the proceeds received from the sale of timber downed by high winds. The same treatment would be accorded if, for example, the timber in question was downed as a consequence of an earthquake or a volcanic eruption.

EFFECT ON OTHER DOCUMENTS

Rev. Rul .72-372 is revoked.

Section 1202.—Deduction for Capital Gains

26 CFR 1.1202-1: Deduction for capital gains.
(Also Section 1375; 1.1375-1.)

Capital gain deduction; small business corporation; taxable year including November 1, 1978. An example of the computation of the capital gain deduction is provided for an electing small business corporation that had a taxable year that included November 1, 1978 and that had net capital gains both before and after that date.

Rev. Rul. 80-178

ISSUE

How is the capital gain deduction provided by section 1202 of the Internal Revenue Code determined under the circumstances described below?

FACTS

X, an electing small business corporation within the meaning of section 1371 of the Code, files its returns on a calendar year basis. In 1978 X had a net capital gain of 100*x* dollars, 60*x* dollars of which resulted from sales or exchanges prior to November 1, 1978. X's taxable income (including capital gains) for 1978 was 80*x* dollars. X's election under section 1372(a) has been in effect for each of its taxable years, and X did not have any long-term capital gain in 1978 attributable to property with a substituted basis. Thus, section 1378 does not apply.

LAW

Section 1202(a) of the Code provides that if for any taxable year a taxpayer other than a corporation has a net capital gain, 60 percent of the amount of the net capital gain shall be a deduction from gross income.

Section 1202(c)(1) of the Code provides that if for any taxable year beginning before November 1, 1978, and ending after October 31, 1978, a taxpayer other than a corporation has a net capital gain, the deduction under section 1202(a) shall be the sum of 60 percent of the lesser of the net capital gain for the taxable year, or the net capital gain taking into account only sales and exchanges after October 31, 1978, plus an amount computed in accordance with section 1202(c)(2), that is, 50 percent of the excess of the net capital gain for the taxable year, over the amount of net capital gain taken into account under section 1202(c)(1).

Section 1375(a)(1) of the Code provides that the amount includible in the gross income of a shareholder as dividends (including amounts treated as dividends under section 1375(b)) from an electing small business corporation during any taxable year of the corporation, to the extent that such amount is a distribution of property out of earnings and profits of the taxable years as specified in section 316(a)(2), shall be treated as a long-term capital gain to the extent of the shareholder's pro rata share of the corporation's net capital gain for such taxable year. For purposes of this paragraph, such net capital gain shall be deemed not to exceed the corporation's taxable income (computed as provided in section 1373(d)) for the taxable year.

Section 104(a)(2)(C) of the Technical Corrections Act of 1979, Pub. L. 96-222, 1980-20 I.R.B. 5, 15, makes clear that for purposes of determining the proper period of the capital gain income taxable to a shareholder of an electing small business corporation, reference shall be made to when the gain was realized by the corporation.

HOLDING

In this case X's taxable income for 1978 (80*x* dollars) is less than X's net capital gain (100*x* dollars). Therefore pursuant to section 1375(a)(1) of the Code the amount of X's net capital gain includible in the income of the shareholders is limited to 80*x* dollars. The 80*x* dollars of capital gain represents a pro rata portion of pre-November 1, 1978 gain and post-October 31, 1978 gain. 48*x* dollars $\left(\frac{60x}{100x} \times 80x = 48x\right)$ is pre-November 1, 1978 gain and 32*x* dollars $\left(\frac{40x}{100x} \times 80x = 32x\right)$ is post-October 31, 1978 gain for puropses of computing the capital gain deduction allowable to the shareholders of X under section 1202 of the Code.

Section 2032A.—Valuation of Certain Farm, Etc., Real Property

Special use value; farms; interest rates. The interest rates to be used under section 2032A(e)(7)(A)(ii) of the Code in computing the special use value of farm real property for which an election is made under section 2032A are listed for estates of decedents dying in the period 1977-1980; Rev. Rul. 79-189 superseded.

Rev. Rul. 80-179

ISSUE

This revenue ruling contains a cumulative list of the average annual effective interest rates on new Federal Land Bank loans to be utilized under section 2032A(e)(7)(A)(ii) of the Internal Revenue Code in computing the special use value of real property used as a farm for which an election is made under the provisions of section 2032A. The interest rates listed are those applicable for the estates of decedents dying in 1977, 1978, 1979, and 1980. The rates applicable in the case of decedents dying in 1977, 1978 and 1979 were previously listed in Rev. Rul. 79-189, 1979-1 C.B. 293.

This revenue ruling also contains a list of the states within each land bank district.

Average annual effective interest rate to be utilized under section 2032A (e) (7) (A) (ii):

Section 4975.—Tax on Prohibited Transactions

Prohibited Transaction Exemption 80-26

Pension and Welfare Benefit Programs

Class Exemption for Certain Interest Free Loans to Employee Benefit Plans

AGENCY: Department of Labor.

ACTION: Grant of class exemption.

SUMMARY: This class exemption permits parties in interest with respect to employee benefit plans to make interest free loans to such plans. Such loans would be prohibited by the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 [Pub. L. 93-406, 1974-3 C.B. 1] (the Act) and the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (the Code). The exemption affects all employee benefit plans, their participants and beneficiaries, and parties in interest with respect to those plans.

EFFECTIVE DATE: January 1, 1975.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: Jane M. Kheel: Plan Benefits Security Division, Office of the Solicitor, U.S. Department of Labor (202) 523-9141. (This is not a toll-free number.)

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: On February 8, 1980, notice was published in the Federal Register (45 FR 8761) of the pendency before the Department of Labor (the Department) of a proposed class exemption from the restrictions of section 406(a) (1) (B) and (D) and section 406(b) (2) of the Act and from the taxes imposed by section 4975(a) and (b) of the Code by reason of section 4975 (c) (1) (B) and (D) of the Code[1] in connection with certain interest free loans to employee benefit plans. The class exemption was proposed in response to an application filed by the National Coordinating Committee for Multiemployer Plans. The notice set forth a summary of facts and representations contained in the application, and referred interested persons to the application for a complete statement of the facts and representations. The application has been available for public inspection at the Department in Washington, D.C. The notice invited interested parties to submit written comments or requests for a hearing on the proposed exemption to the Department. The exemption was proposed and comments received in accordance with the procedures set forth in ERISA Procedure 75-1 (40 FR 18471, April 28, 1975). No requests for a public hearing were received by the Department.

Discussion of Comments

All of the comments received by the Department in response to the notice favor the proposed exemption.

One comment concerns the second condition of the proposed exemption, which requires that the proceeds of a covered loan or other extension of credit be used only for ordinary operating expenses of the plan. The commentator requests that the exemption be expanded to cover certain transactions that might constitute interest free loans but which might not be considered to be made for the purpose of paying ordinary operating expenses.

[1] The authority of the Secretary of Labor to issue exemptions under section 4975(c) (2) of the Code is set forth in section 102 of Reorganization Plan No. 4 of 1978 (43 FR 47713, October 17, 1978), effective December 31, 1978.

The commentator gives two examples of such transactions. One involves temporary overdrafts incurred by a plan trustee to pay for securities purchased for the plan. It explains that cash to cover the purchase might be invested in Treasury bills or commercial paper that could not be liquidated until the following day. Under ordinary circumstances, the commentator asserts, the bank trustee would simply advance the purchase price and obtain reimbursement in a day or two when cash becomes available.

The other example of such transaction involves the crediting, by a bank trustee, of dividends or interest to a plan on the due date, even though the dividend or interest has not in fact been received by the bank.

The Department agrees that such extensions of credit, although incidental to the operation of a plan and beneficial to a plan, may not be covered by the exemption as proposed. Therefore, the second condition has been modified in order to cover the transactions discussed above and similar incidental extensions of credit.

Another commentator suggested that the proposed exemption may cause confusion concerning the permissibility of maintaining unallocated suspense accounts in defined contribution plans. He noted that, under certain circumstances, the maintenance of an unallocated suspense account in a defined contribution plan is prohibited by the Internal Revenue Service.[2] According to the commentator, some plan sponsors may be misled into thinking that the proposed exemption permits such unallocated suspense accounts. The Department notes that the exemption has no effect on any such prohibitions.

Two commentators suggested that the second condition of the proposed exemption, which requires that the proceeds of the loan or extension of credit be used only for the payment of ordinary operating expenses, including the payment of benefits and periodic premiums under an insurance or annuity contract, be expanded to permit the proceeds of the loan to be used by an employee stock ownership plan (ESOP) to purchase employer securities from beneficiaries of the ESOP who have received the securities as plan distributions. One of the commentators stated that, although the employer sponsoring an ESOP is required to repurchase the securities from a distributee, in actual operation, many ESOPs repurchase the securities. The Department notes, however, that the requirement that an employer repurchase employer securities distributed by an ESOP relates only to certain securities that are purchased by an ESOP with the proceeds of a loan from a party in interest or a loan that is guaranteed by a party in interest. Such a loan is permitted by sections 408(b)(3) of the Act and 4975(d)(3) of the Code if the conditions of those sections and the regulations issued thereunder are met.[3] Since those sections permit a party in interest to make a loan to an ESOP for the purpose of purchasing employer securities from any person (including participants and beneficiaries of the ESOP), the Department does not believe that the requested expansion of the proposed exemption is either necessary or appropriate.

Another commentator suggested that the proposed exemption be broadened to include arrangements under which employee benefit plans could receive valuable services or facilities, at no cost, from parties in interest. The Department has considered this comment and has decided that such arrangements, if prohibited at all, are not within the scope of the application for exemption and are not properly included within this exemption. In this regard, the Department notes that section 408(b)(2) of the Act and section 4975(d)(2) of the Code, and regulations thereunder, provide statutory exemptions from the prohibitions of sections 406(a) of the Act and 4975(c)(1)(A) through (D) of the Code, respectively, for contracting or making reasonable arrangements with a partiy in interest (or disqualified person) for the leasing of office space to a plan, or the provision of legal, accounting, or other services necessary for the establishment or operation of a plan, and for the provision of goods incidental to such services, if no more than reasonable compensation is paid therefor.[4]

One commentator also requested that the exemption make it clear that an interest free loan to a plan covered by the exemption would not give rise to an indirect contribution to the plan for tax purposes.[5] The Department notes that this issue is outside the scope of the exemption.

General Information

The attention of interested persons is directed to the following:

(1) The fact that a transaction is the subject of an exemption under section 408(a) of the Act and section 4975(c)(2) of the Code does not relieve a fiduciary or other party in interest or disqualified person from certain other provisions of the Act and the Code. These provisions include any prohibited transaction provisions to which the exemption does not apply and the general fiduciary responsibility provisions of section 404 of the Act, which, among other things, require a fiduciary to discharge his duties respecting the plan solely in the interests of participants and beneficiaries of the plan and in a prudent fashion in accordance with section 404(a)(1)(B) of the Act; nor does it affect the requirement of section 401(a) of the Code that the plan must operate for the exclusive benefit of employees of employers maintaining the plan and their beneficiaries.

(2) This exemption does not extend to transactions prohibited under section 406(b)(1) and (3) of the Act or section 4975(c)(1)(E) and (F) of the Code.

(3) This exemption is supplemental to, and not in derogation of, any other provisions of the Act and the Code, including statutory or administrative exemptions and transitional rules. Furthermore, the fact that a transaction is subject to an administrative or statutory exemption is not dispositive of whether the transaction is in fact a prohibited transaction.

(4) This class exemption is applicable to a particular transaction only if the transaction satisfies the conditions specified in the class exemption.

Exemption

In accordance with section 408(a) of the Act and section 4975(c)(2) of the Code, and based upon the entire record including the written comments submitted in response to the notice of February 8, 1980, the Department makes the following determinations:

(a) The class exemption set forth herein is administratively feasible;

(b) It is in the interests of plans and of their participants and beneficiaries; and

(c) It is protective of the rights of participants and beneficiaries of plans.

Accordingly, the following exemption is hereby granted under the authority of section 408(a) of the Act and section 4975(c)(2) of the Code and in accordance with the procedures set forth in ERISA Procedure 75-1.

Effective January 1, 1975, the restrictions of section 406(a)(1)(B) and (D) and section 406(b)(2) of the Act, and the taxes imposed by section 4975(a) and (b) of the Code by reason of section 4975(c)(1)(B) and (D) of the Code, shall not apply to the lending of money or other extension of credit from party in interest or disqualified person to an employee benefit plan, nor to the repayment of such loan or other extension of credit in accordance with its terms or written modifications thereof, if:

(a) No interest or other fee is charged to the plan, and no discount for payment in cash is relinquished by the plan, in connection with the loan or extension of credit;

(b) The proceeds of the loan or extension of credit are used only:

(1) For the payment of ordinary operating expenses of the plan, including the payment of benefits in accordance with the terms of the plan and periodic premiums under an insurance or annuity contract; or

(2) For a period of no more than three days, for a purpose incidental to the ordinary operation of the plan;

(c) The loan or extension of credit is unsecured; and

(d) The loan or extension of credit is not directly or indirectly made by an employee benefit plan.

Announcement of the Disbarment, Suspension, or Consent to Voluntary Suspension of Attorneys, Certified Public Accountants, Enrolled Agents and Enrolled Actuaries from Practice before the Internal Revenue Service

Under Section 1026, Title 31 of the United States Code (1970 ed.), the Secretary of the Treasury, after due notice and opportunity for hearing, is authorized to suspend or disbar from practice before the Internal Revenue Service any person who has violated the rules and regulations governing the recognition of attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents or enrolled actuaries to practice before the Internal Revenue Service.

Attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries are prohibited in any Internal Revenue Service matter from directly or indirectly employing, accepting assistance from, being employed by or sharing fees with, any practitioner disbarred or under suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service.

To enable attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries to identify such disbarred or suspended practitioners, the Director of Practice will announce in the Internal Revenue Bulletin the names and addresses of practitioners who have been disbarred or suspended from such practice, their designation as attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, and the date of disbarment or period of suspension. This announcement will appear and will continue to appear in the weekly Bulletins for five successive weeks for each attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary so suspended or disbarred and will later be consolidated and published in the Cumulative Bulletin.

After due notice and opportunity for hearing, the following individual has been disbarred from further practice before the Internal Revenue Service:

Name	Address	Designation	Effective Date
John E. DeSantis	Belmont, CA	Certified Public Accountant	May 12, 1980

Announcement Relating to Proposed Regulations Published With Notice of Proposed Rulemaking

Changes in regulations as announced below have been published in the Federal Register in tentative or proposed form to provide interested parties with an opportunity to file their objections or suggestions for consideration prior to final adoption of such regulations. These announcements will appear in the Bulletin during the period which has been prescribed for the submission and consideration of any views, arguments, or suggestions pertaining to the proposed regulations so published. Statement of such views, arguments or suggestions should be submitted in writing, preferably six copies, to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Attention: CC:LR:T, Washington, D.C. 20224.

Definition of Terms

Revenue Rulings and Revenue Procedures (hereinafter referred to as "rulings") that have an effect on previous rulings use the following defined terms to describe the effect:

Amplified describes a situation where no change is being made in a prior published position, but the prior position is being extended to apply to a variation of the fact situation set forth therein. Thus, if an earlier ruling held that a principle applied to A, and the new ruling holds that the same principle also applies to B, the earlier ruling is amplified. (Compare with modified, below).

Clarified is used in those instances where the language in a prior ruling is being made clear because the language has caused, or may cause, some confusion. It is not used where a position in a prior ruling is being changed.

Distinguished describes a situation where a ruling mentions a previously published ruling and points out an essential difference between them.

Modified is used where the substance of a previously published position is being changed. Thus, if a prior ruling held that a principle applied to A but not to B, and the new ruling holds that it applies to both A and B, the prior ruling is modified because it corrects a published position. (Compare with amplified and clarified, above).

Obsoleted describes a previously published ruling that is not considered determinative with respect to future transactions. This term is most commonly used in a ruling that lists previously published rulings that are obsoleted because of changes in law or regulations. A ruling may also be obsoleted because the substance has been included in regulations subsequently adopted.

Revoked describes situations where the position in the previously published ruling is not correct and the correct position is being stated in the new ruling.

Superseded describes a situation where the new ruling does nothing more than restate the substance and situation of a previously published ruling (or rulings). Thus, the term is used to republish under the 1954 Code and regulations the same position published under the 1939 Code and regulations. The term is also used when it is desired to republish in a single ruling a series of situations, names, etc., that were previously published over a period of time in separate rulings. If the new ruling does more than restate the substance of a prior ruling, a combination of terms is used. For example, modified and superseded describes a situation where the substance of a previously published ruling is being changed in part and is continued without change in part and it is desired to restate the valid portion of the previously published ruling in a new ruling that is self contained. In this case the previously published ruling is first modified and then, as modified, is superseded.

Supplemented is used in situations in which a list, such as a list of the names of countries, is published in a ruling and that list is expanded by adding further names in subsequent rulings. After the original ruling has been supplemented several times, a new ruling may be published that includes the list in the original ruling and the additions, and supersedes all prior rulings in the series.

Suspended is used in rare situations to show that the previous published rulings will not be applied pending some future action such as the issuance of new or amended regulations, the outcome of cases in litigation, or the outcome of a Service study.

INTERNAL REVENUE BULLETIN

The Introduction on page 3 describes the purpose and content of this publication. The weekly Internal Revenue Bulletin is sold on a yearly subscription basis by the Superintendent of Documents. Current subscribers are notified by the Superintendent of Documents when their subscriptions must be renewed.

CUMULATIVE BULLETINS

The contents of the weekly Bulletin are consolidated semiannually into a permanent, indexed, Cumulative Bulletin. These are sold on a single copy basis and are not included as part of the subscription to the Internal Revenue Bulletin. Subscribers to the weekly Bulletin are notified when copies of the Cumulative Bulletin are available. Certain issues of Cumulative Bulletins are out of print and are not available. Persons desiring available Cumulative Bulletins, which are listed on the reverse, may purchase them from the Superintendent of Documents.

BULLETIN INDEX-DIGEST SYSTEM

The Bulletin Index-Digest System (12-78) provides a fast and easy way to research Revenue Rulings, Revenue Procedures, Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and other matters of a permanent nature published in the weekly Internal Revenue Bulletin, or Cumulative Bulletin from 1953 on. It is a comprehensive and up-to-date research tool that requires no filing or other clerical maintenance. The current revision consists of four Services, available on a subscription basis, each including a basic volume that covers the period 1953-1978 and a cumulative supplement covering material published in subsequent Bulletins for the following two-year period. Cumulative supplements are issued quarterly for the Income Tax Service and semiannually for the Estate and Gift, Employment, and Excise Tax Services.

HOW TO ORDER

Check the publications and/or subscription(s) desired on the reverse, complete the order blank, enclose the proper remittance, detach entire page, and mail to the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. Please allow two to six weeks, plus mailing time, for delivery.

Highlights of this Issue

Rev. Rul. 80-180, page 7.

Bad debts; banks; charge off; instructions of supervisory federal authority. A bank charged off the entire outstanding balance of a loan in accordance with a specific order by the bank's supervisory federal authority and deducted the balance on that year's tax return as a bad debt. In a later year, the authority reconsidered its charge off action and took the position that only two-thirds of the balance should be classified as a loss. The bank's bad debt deduction was proper and the later action by the authority does not constitute a recovery.

Rev. Rul. 80-181, page 14.

Controlled corporations; split-off; active business requirement. Rev. Rul. 79-394 is amplified to hold that the wholly owned subsidiary corporation whose stock was to be distributed in the transaction described in that ruling would satisfy the active business requirement of section 355(b) of the Code even if the related corporations were not reimbursed for the services performed by their officers and employees for the subsidiary. In the absence of reimbursement, section 482 would be applicable to allocated income and deductions among the corporations to reflect an arm's length charge for the services.

Rev. Rul. 80-182, page 15.

Oil and gas leases; removal of offshore platforms and wells. A corporation using the accrual method of accounting entered into long-term offshore oil and gas leases with the federal government under which the corporation was required to remove the platforms and well fixtures upon abandonment of the wells or termination of the leases. The corporation may deduct the cost of removing the platforms and well fixtures only in the taxable year during which the removal services are performed by the corporation or by a separate contractor.

Rev. Rul. 80-183, page 16.

Depletion; gross income from mining; transportation in excess of 50 miles. A domestic corporation is engaged in mining a mineral for export in a foreign country that required the location of processing facilities in an area that is more than 50 miles from the point of extraction to encourage economic development of the area. The corporation derived economic benefit by developing the processing facilities in the required area. The transportation of the mineral in excess of 50 miles from the point of extraction to the processing facilities is "mining" within the meaning of section 613(c)(2) of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 80-184, page 17.

Involuntary conversions; severance-damage award reinvested; similar property. Part of a severance-damage award was used to demolish a building leased to retail stores and to construct a warehouse for lease in its place. The remaining part of the award was used to purchase another parcel of land and to construct an office building thereon. The business risks and responsibilities in managing the warehouse and office building were

Internal Revenue Service

Statement of Principles of Internal Revenue Tax Administration

The function of the Internal Revenue Service is to administer the Internal Revenue Code. Tax policy for raising revenue is determined by Congress.

With this in mind, it is the duty of the Service to carry out that policy by correctly applying the laws enacted by Congress; to determine the reasonable meaning of various Code provisions in light of the Congressional purpose in enacting them; and to perform this work in a fair and impartial manner, with neither a government nor a taxpayer point of view.

At the heart of administration is interpretation of the Code. It is the responsibility of each person in the Service, charged with the duty of interpreting the law, to try to find the true meaning of the statutory provision and not to adopt a strained construction in the belief that he is "protecting the revenue." The revenue is properly protected only when we ascertain and apply the true meaning of the statute.

The Service also has the responsibility of applying and administering the law in a reasonable, practical manner. Issues should only be raised by examining officers when they have merit, never arbitrarily or for trading purposes. At the same time, the examining officer should never hesitate to raise a meritorious issue. It is also important that care be exercised not to raise an issue or to ask a court to adopt a position inconsistent with an established Service position.

Administration should be both reasonable and vigorous. It should be conducted with as little delay as possible and with great courtesy and considerateness. It should never try to overreach, and should be reasonable within the bounds of law and sound administration. It should, however, be vigorous in requiring compliance with law and it should be relentless in its attack on unreal tax devices and fraud.

Introduction

The Internal Revenue Bulletin is the authoritative instrument of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for announcing official rulings and procedures of the Internal Revenue Service and for publishing Treasury Decisions, Executive Orders, Tax Conventions, legislation, court decisions, and other items of general interest. It is published weekly and may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. Bulletin contents of a permanent nature are consolidated semiannually into Cumulative Bulletins, which are sold on a single-copy basis.

It is the policy of the Service to publish in the Bulletin all substantive rulings necessary to promote a uniform application of the tax laws, including all rulings that supersede, revoke, modify, or amend any of those previously published in the Bulletin. All published rulings apply retroactively unless otherwise indicated. Procedures relating solely to matters of internal management are not published; however, statements of internal practices and procedures that affect the rights and duties of taxpayers are published.

Revenue rulings represent the conclusions of the Service on the application of the law to the pivotal facts stated in the revenue ruling. In those based on positions taken in rulings to taxpayers or technical advice to Service field offices, identifying details and information of a confidential nature are deleted to prevent unwarranted invasions of privacy and to comply with statutory requirements.

Rulings and procedures reported in the Bulletin do not have the force and effect of Treasury Department Regulations, but they may be used as precedents. Unpublished rulings will not be relied on, used, or cited as precedents by Service personnel in the disposition of other cases. In applying published rulings and procedures, the effect of subsequent legislation, regulations, court decisions, rulings, and procedures must be considered, and Service personnel and others concerned are cautioned against reaching the same conclusions in other cases unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same.

The Bulletin is divided into four parts as follows:

Part I.—1954 Code.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

Part II.—Treaties and Tax Legislation.

This part is divided into two subparts as follows: Subpart A, Tax Conventions, and Subpart B, Legislation and Related Committee Reports.

Part III.—Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous.

To the extent practicable, pertinent cross references to these subjects are contained in the other Parts and Subparts.

Part IV.—Items of General Interest.

With the exception of the disbarment and suspension list included in this part, none of these announcements is consolidated in the Cumulative Bulletins.

The first Bulletin for each month includes an index for the matters published during the preceding month. These monthly indexes are cumulated on a quarterly and semiannual basis, and are published in the first Bulletin of the succeeding quarterly and semi-annual period, respectively.

The Bulletin Index-Digest System, a research and reference service supplementing the Bulletin, may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. It consists of four Services: Service No. 1, Income Tax; Service No. 2, Estate and Gift Taxes; Service No. 3, Employment Taxes; Service No. 4, Excise Taxes. Each Service consists of a basic volume and a cumulative supplement that provide (1) finding lists of items published in the Bulletin, (2) digests of revenue rulings, revenue procedures, and other published items, and (3) topical indexes of Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and Tax Conventions.

The contents of this publication are not copyrighted and may be reprinted freely. A citation of the Internal Revenue Bulletin as the source would be appropriate.

For sale by the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. Prices: Domestic—$2.00 a single copy, $55.00 a year subscription; Foreign—$2.50 a single copy, $68.75 a year subscription.

(Also Section 61; 1.61-7.)

Arbitrage bonds; grant anticipation notes. A description is given of grant anticipation notes issued to provide interim financing for the construction of additions to a sewer system that are arbitrage bonds within the meaning of section 103(c)(2) of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 80-193

ISSUE

Will a sewer authority fail to comply with the arbitrage yield restrictions of section 103(c) of the Internal Revenue Code with respect to an issue of grant anticipation notes in the circumstances described below?

FACTS

On January 2, 1981, sewer authority M, a political subdivision of the state of O, will issue $4,500,000 in grant anticipation notes, the proceeds of which will be used to provide interim financing for the construction of additions to M's sewer system. The total cost of the project will be $6,000,000. Construction will begin shortly after the notes are issued and is scheduled for completion by March 31, 1982.

On December 31, 1980, M expects to have $1,500,000 and a "reasonably required cash balance" of $400,000 on hand to begin the project. M anticipates that it will spend $400,000 a month and that grant installments of $1,500,000 will be forthcoming from the Environmental Protection Agency on June 30, 1981, December 31, 1981, and on June 30, 1982, and plans to retire $1,500,000 of notes within 6 months of the receipt of each installment. Thereafter, M expects to receive revenues in the nature of connection fees from hookups to the sewer system.

During the construction period, the note proceeds not being used to pay for construction expenses will be invested in federal obligations at a yield that is materially higher than the yield on the notes under section 1.103-13(b)(5)(iv) of the Income Tax Regulations.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 103(a)(1) of the Code provides that gross income does not include interest on the obligations of a state or a political subdivision of a state.

Section 103(c)(1) of the Code provides that, with certain minor exceptions, the interest on any arbitrage bond will not be excludable from gross income.

Section 103(c)(2) of the Code provides that the term "arbitrage bond" means any obligation that is issued as part of an issue all or a major portion (more than 15 percent) of the proceeds of which are reasonably expected to be used directly or indirectly (A) to acquire securities or obligations that may be reasonably expected at the time of issuance of such issue, to produce a yield over the term of the issue that is materially higher than the yield on obligations of such issue, or (B) to replace funds that were used directly or indirectly to acquire securities or obligations described in section 103(c)(2)(A).

Section 103(c)(4) of the Code provides that an obligation shall not be treated as an arbitrage bond solely by reason of the fact that the proceeds of the issue of which such obligation is a part may be invested for a temporary period in securities or other obligations until such proceeds are needed for the purpose for which such issue was issued.

Section 1.103-14(b)(1) of the regulations provides that original proceeds and investment proceeds of an issue of governmental obligations that are invested in acquired obligations during a 3-year period (or a longer period if determined to be necessary under paragraph (b)(5) of this section) beginning on the date of issue are invested for a temporary period if the expenditure test of paragraph (b)(2), the time test of paragraph (b)(3), and the due diligence test of paragraph (b)(4) are satisfied. However, section 1.103-14(b)(1) further provides that section 1.103-14(c) applies in the case of an issue of obligations issued in anticipation of taxes or other revenues.

Section 1.103-14(c)(1) of the regulations provides that in the case of an issue of obligations issued in anticipation of taxes or other revenues, proceeds that are invested are an investment for a temporary period if such obligations—

(i) Will not be outstanding after (A) a period ending 13 months after the date on which such obligations are issued, (B) a period ending 60 days (but not more than 24 months after such obligations are issued) after the last date for payment without interest or penalty of the anticipated tax (or last installment thereof) imposed by an annual tax levy or the first year's tax (or last installment thereof) of the anticipated tax imposed by a levy for more than 1 year, or (C) in the case of obligations issued in anticipation of governmental grants or advances and not in anticipation of taxes or revenues from other sources, a period ending 6 months after the date on which the issuer expects to receive such grants or advances (but not more than 30 months after such obligations are issued), and

(ii) Will not be issued in an amount greater than the maximum anticipated cumulative cash flow deficit to be financed by such anticipated tax or other revenue sources for the period for which such taxes or other revenues are anticipated and during which such obligations are outstanding.

Section 1.103-14(c)(2) of the regulations defines the cumulative cash flow deficit at any time during a period as an amount equal to:

(i) The amount that the issuing state or local government unit will expend from the beginning of such period to such computation date to pay expenditures that would ordinarily be paid out of or financed by the anticipated tax or other revenues, plus

(ii) The amount reasonably required by the issuer as a cash balance on hand at all times (the amount of the anticipated expenditures for a period of 1 month from such time being deemed to be reasonably required for this purpose), minus

(iii) The sum of the amounts (other than the proceeds of the issue in question), whether in the form of cash, marketable securities, or otherwise that will be available for the payment of such expenditures from the beginning of such period to such time.

Section 1.103-14(c)(3) of the regulations provides that amounts in accounts will be considered to be available for the payment of such expenditures to the extent that such accounts may, without legislative or judicial action, be invaded to pay such expenditures without a legislative, judicial, or contractual requirement that such accounts be reimbursed.

The following table illustrates the projected month-to-month financial status of M for the period beginning one month before the notes are issued and ending when the last installment is received:

Month	Cumulative Surplus (or Deficit) At End of Month *	Expenditures	Receipts
Dec. 1980	$1,500,000	$ —0—	—0—
Jan. 1981	1,100,000	400,000	—0—

June 1982	—0—	—0—	$1,500,000

* Does not include amount of reasonably required cash balance of $400,000.

In this case the maximum anticipated cumulative cash flow deficit is the $1,500,000 deficit to be reached in March of 1982. This amount is determined by subtracting $4,900,000, the sum of the amounts that will be available to M until that date for the payment of expenditures, from $6,400,000, M's total expenditures until that date plus one month's reasonably required cash balance. Although M will retire a portion of the note within 6 months of the receipt of each installment, this does not mean that these installments are unavailable to M. Evidence of this can be found by the fact that under prior versions of the regulations in existence before current section 1.103-14(c)(2)(iii) was promulgated as part of the proposed regulations of May 8, 1978 (43 FR 19675), the parenthetical in subparagraph (2)(ii) read "other than the proceeds of the anticipated tax or other revenues." This change in language indicates a specific intent that the grants be available. Thus, section 1.103-14(c)(1)(i)(C) does not require that M retire the notes until the earlier of 6 months after the last installment is received or 30 months after the notes were issued.

Because M's issuance of notes will be in excess of the maximum anticipated cumulative cash flow deficit, M's investment of the note proceeds in the federal obligations will not qualify as an investment for a temporary period under section 1.103-14(c)(1) of the regulations.

Section 1.103-13(b)(5)(i) of the regulations provides that the yield produced by acquired obligations is materially higher than the yield produced by a yield on an issue of governmental obligations if the yield produced by the acquired obligations exceeds the yield produced by the issue of governmental obligations by more than one-eighth of one percentage point.

Section 1.103-13(b)(5)(iv) of the regulations defines the term "materially higher" in those situations in which it is reasonably expected that the original proceeds of an issue will exceed the amount necessary for the governmental purpose or purposes of the issue by more than 5 percent of such amount. Any portion of the issue issued solely for the purpose of investing such portion at a materially higher yield as less than a major portion is not issued for a governmental purpose. The yield produced by acquired obligations acquired with the proceeds of such issue is materially higher than the yield produced by an issue of governmental obligations if the yield produced by the acquired obligations is higher than $Y + [($5,000 \times Y) \div P]$ where "Y" stands for the yield on the issue and "P" stands for the amount of the original proceeds of the issue.

M's issuance of the notes in the amount of $4,500,000 will exceed by more than 5 percent the amount necessary to satisfy the governmental purpose of the issue. Therefore, M will be subject to the yield restrictions of section 1.103-13(b)(5)(iv) of the regulations in determining the permissible yield for the note proceeds.

HOLDING

The issuance of M's notes will fail to comply with the arbitrage yield restrictions of section 1.103-13(b)(5)(iv) of the regulations, and the notes will be arbitrage bonds within the meaning of section 103(c)(2) of the Code. Therefore, the interest on the notes will not be excludable from gross income under section 103(a)(1).

Section 111.—Recovery of Bad Debts, Prior Taxes, and Delinquency Amounts 26 CFR 1.111-1: Recovery of certain items previously deducted or credited.

Whether an expression of doubt issued subsequent to the issuance of a charge off order by a supervisory federal authority constitutes a recovery of a bank's previously deducted bad debt. See Rev. Rul. 80-180, below.

Section 166.—Bad Debts

26 CFR 1.166-2: Evidence of worthlessness. (Also Section 111; 1.111-1.)

Bad debts; banks; charge off; instructions of supervisory federal authority. A bank charged off the entire outstanding balance of a loan in accordance with a specific order by the bank's supervisory federal authority and deducted the balance on that year's tax return as a bad debt. In a later year, the authority reconsidered its charge off action and took the position that only two-thirds of the balance should be classified as a loss. The bank's bad debt deduction was proper and the later action by the authority does not constitute a recovery.

Rev. Rul. 80-180

ISSUES

Does a subsequent expression of doubt as to the worthlessness of a bank's loan by a supervisory federal authority affect the conclusive presumption of worthlessness arising from a specific order by that federal authority to charge off the entire outstanding balance of the questionable loan?

Does such an expression of doubt constitute a recovery of a previously deducted bad debt?

FACTS

A commercial bank made an unsecured loan to X, a corporation, in 1972. In 1973, X filed a petition for voluntary bankruptcy and has since been operating under section 77 of the Bankruptcy Act. In 1974, in obedience to the specific order of its supervisory federal authority, the bank charged off the entire outstanding balance of the X debt. The bank, which employs the specific charge off method of accounting for bad debts, deducted the balance of the X debt on its 1974 federal income return.

In 1976, the supervisory federal authority advised the bank by letter that it had reconsidered its charge off action regarding the X loan and had taken the position that only two-thirds of the X debt will be classified as a loss and the balance will be viewed as doubtful.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 1.166-2(d)(1) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that if a bank, which is subject to supervision by federal authorities, charges off a debt in whole or in part in obedience to the specific orders of such authority, then the debt shall, to the extent charged off and deducted for federal income tax purposes, be conclusively presumed to be worthless during the taxable year.

The purpose of this regulation is to insure that a taxpayer receives fair and consistent treatment when dealing with the Service and another branch of the federal government. United States v. Beckman, 104 F. 2d 260 (3d Cir. 1939). Thus a debt charged off pursuant to the orders of a supervisory federal authority is conclusively presumed to be worthless during the taxable year pursuant to section 1.166-2(d) of the regulations. An expression of doubt on a subsequent year cannot affect the conclusive presumption. Therefore, the bad debt deduction claimed by the bank in 1974 is proper.

Section 1.111-1(a)(2) of the regulations provides that recoveries result from the receipt of amounts in respect of the previously deducted section 111 items, such as from the collection or sale of a bad debt. For there to be a recovery of a bad debt there must be a receipt of amounts attributable to such debt or an event inconsistent with the prior deduction. In this context, an event is inconsistent with the prior deduction only if the taxpayer's actual dealings with, as opposed to book entries with respect to, the item are inconsistent with such deduction. The mere expression of doubt does not constitute a receipt or an inconsistent event.

HOLDINGS

Because the expression of doubt, which was issued in a year subsequent to the issuance of the original charge off order, did not affect the conclusive presumption of worthlessness, the bank's bad debt deduction in 1974 was proper.

The expression of doubt does not constitute a recovery for purposes of the tax benefit rule.

Section 191.—Amortization of Certain Rehabilitation Expenditures of Certified Historic Structures

26 CFR 1.191-1: Amortization of certain rehabilitation costs for certified historic structures.

T.D. 7700

TITLE 26.—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER I, SUBCHAPTER A, PART 1.—INCOME TAX; TAXABLE YEARS BEGINNING AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1953; PART 7.—TEMPORARY INCOME TAX REGULATIONS UNDER THE TAX REFORM ACT OF 1976

Amortization of Certain Rehabilitation Costs for Certified Historic Structures

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Final regulations.

SUMMARY: This document provides final regulations relating to amortization of certain rehabilitation expenditures for certified historic structures. Changes to the applicable tax law were made by the Tax Reform Act of 1976 [Pub. L. 94-455, 1976-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1] and the Revenue Act of 1978 [Pub. L. 95-600, 1978-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1]. The regulations affect all persons desiring to amortize such rehabilitation expenditures and provide them with the guidance needed to comply with the law.

DATE: The regulations are effective for additions to capital account after June 14, 1976, and before June 15, 1981.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

On August 30, 1978, the Federal Register published proposed amendments to the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) and the Temporary Income Tax Regulations under the Tax Reform Act of 1976 (26 CFR Part 7), all under section 191 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 ("Code") (43 FR 38731). The amendments were proposed to conform the regulations to section 2124 (a)(1) and (3)(B) of the Tax Reform Act of 1976 (90 Stat. 1916).

Technical amendments were made to section 191 of the Code by section 701(f)(1), (2), and (7) of the Revenue Act of 1978 (92 Stat. 2900, 2903). These statutory amendments made by the Revenue Act of 1978 were only technical changes and prescribe rules favorable to taxpayers. For this reason and because there is a need for immediate guidance for taxpayers, the relevant provisions of the Administrative Procedure Act (5 U.S.C. 553) requiring further notice of proposed rulemaking, opportunity for public participation, and delay in effective date are found to be inapplicable to changes to the August 1978 proposed regulations necessitated by these statutory changes.

A public hearing on the proposed regulations was held on March 15, 1979. After consideration of all written and oral comments regarding the proposed amendments, final regulations are adopted by this Treasury decision.

PROVISIONS OF THE REGULATIONS

Under section 191, owners of historic structures certified by the Secretary of the Interior may elect to amortize the amortizable basis attributable to costs incurred in certified rehabilitation of these structures. If this election is made, the rehabilitation costs are amortized over a 60-month period rather than depreciated over their actual useful life. Amortization deductions under section 191 may not be claimed if any part of the costs of the certified rehabilitation are deducted under any other provision of the Internal Revenue Code. However, allowable depreciation deductions of the basis of the historic structure, exclusive of the rehabilitation costs, may be continued during the amortization period. If an election involving the historic structure is made under section 191, no election may be made under section 167(o).

The election is available to owners, life tenants, and certain lessees of certified historic structures. In general, these persons may amortize only those expenditures made while they own (or lease) the property and only those expenditures for rehabilitation of an existing historic structure.

In the event of a disposition of the property, part or all of the amounts deducted under section 191 may be recaptured as ordinary income. In addition, the difference between rapid amortization and straight-line depreciation (based on the actual useful life of the structure) may be subject to the minimum tax.

All costs of a certified rehabilitation are generally amortizable. However, costs attributable to nondepreciable portions of a certified historic structure (where only part of the structure is used in a trade or business or for the production of income) and costs of new construction associated with a certified rehabilitation are not amortizable.

To elect the 60-month amortization, the taxpayer indicates that the election is being made as directed on the taxpayer's return for the taxable year in which falls the first month of the amortization period chosen pursuant to section 191(a). The election may be made after a request has been made for, but before, certification of the project by the Department of the Interior. If the election is made before final certification is received, proof of certification is to be submitted with the first tax return filed by the taxpayer after receipt of the certification. If proof of certification is not submitted within 30 months after commencement of the amortization period, the taxpayer may be asked to agree to an extension of time for assessment of additional tax for the period for which amortization deductions are claimed.

Once made, the election may be discontinued at any time by filing written notice with the taxpayer's income tax return for the year in which amortization is to cease.

ADDITIONAL CONSIDERATIONS

These regulations are needed in order to provide guidance to the public as well as to government employees responsible for the implementation of section 191 of the Code. Considering both the direct and indirect effects of these regulations, it is believed that they satisfactorily implement section 2124(a)(1) and (3) of the Tax Reform Act of 1976 [Pub. L. 94-455, 1976-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1, 392], as amended by section 701(f)(1), (2), and (7) of the Revenue Act of 1978 [Pub. L. 95-600, 1978-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1, 134]. Evaluation of the effectiveness of the regulations after issuance will be based upon comments received from offices within the Internal Revenue Service and the Treasury Department, the Department of the Interior, other government agencies, and the public.

PUBLIC COMMENTS

Twenty-five comments were received in response to the proposed regulations. As a general matter, these comments pointed out that the proposed regulations did not reflect changes made in the law by the Revenue Act of 1978. The technical amendments made by that Act (which became law after publication of the proposed regulations) have been incorporated at the appropriate places throughout the regulations. See, for example, § 1.191-1 (b)(3) on the relation of section 191 to other Code provisions, § 1.191-1(c) (2)(vi) on rules for lessees, § 1.191-1 (e) on the relation of section 191 to the minimum tax, and §§ 1.191-2(a) and (b) for amended definitions of "certified historic structure" and "registered historic district." One comment urged permitting separate amortization periods to be established for any expenditures made during a given month. This suggestion was not adopted since section 167, which applies if section 191 is not elected, requires the presence of a component part of a structure for depreciation to be allowable. This rule has been restated in § 1.191-1(b)(1)(i) to remove any doubt concerning whether a component part is required for a separate amortization period to be established. Another comment requested express provisions governing demolition undertaken as part of certified rehabilitation. New § 1.191-1(b)(4) and § 1.191-2(e)(7) have been added to provide specific rules on demolition. Under new § 1.191-1(b)(4), if an historic structure is expanded to the site of another demolished historic structure by certified rehabilitation, section 191 treatment is still available despite the provisions of section 167(n). Portions of the rehabilitated historic structure actually on the demolition site would, however, be subject to the limitations of section 167(n). This position was adopted because it is believed that the requirement that the rehabilitation be certified by the Secretary of the Interior will insure protection of all structures intended to be protected by section 167(n). Two comments requested clarification of the rule contained in the proposed regulations making certain transferees of certified historic structures eligible for section 191 treatment. Section 1.191-1(b)(6) was amended to clarify that, if amortization deductions are discontinued during the 60-month period, the remaining depreciable life of the structure is determined at time amortization ceases. Section 1.191-1(c)(2)(iii) was amended to indicate that transferees at the completion of rehabilitation are eligible for section 191 treatment even where the structure was not taken out of service during rehabilitation. Another change to § 1.191-1(c)(2)(iii) clarifies that, for a transferee to elect section 191, the transfer to him must occur before the property is placed in service after rehabilitation, even though the transferor could elect to delay amortization deductions until the first month of the following taxable year and had in fact claimed no amortization deductions at the time of the transfer. In response to other requests, § 1.191-1(c)(viii) was amended to accord treatment as lessees to all concessionaires where Federal government restrictions prevent leasing the property. Two comments requested extension of section 191 treatment to ships that are individually listed on the National Register of Historic Places whether or not they are permanently anchored so as to become real property. This suggestion was not adopted because section 191, as is true of all of section 2124 of the Tax Reform Act of 1976 is applicable only to real property. See § 1.191-2(c). Some comments expressed confusion as to the meaning of a "reconstruction" of an historic structure which is excluded from section 191 treatment. This term had been used because it is used in Interior Department guidelines. To eliminate this confusion, however, § 1.191-2(d) was amended to substitute the term "reproduction" for "reconstruction." Thus, "reproductions" of historic structures are excluded from section 191 treatment. Section 1.191-2(e)(1) was expanded in response to comments which revealed a misunderstanding of the respective roles of the Internal Revenue Service and the Department of the Interior in implementing section 191. That paragraph now expressly states that the Interior Department certifies that standards of historic character are met while the Internal Revenue Service determines other rules governing eligibility for section 191 treatment. Section 48 on investment tax credits for rehabilitated buildings contains a requirement that 75 percent of the existing exterior walls of a structure remain after rehabilitation. Similarly, regulations under 167(k) state that if one or more outer walls and the internal structural framework of a building are replaced, expenditures are generally attributable to new construction. In response to the comments and to provide more consistent rules throughout the Code, § 1.191-2(e)(5) now contains a comparable rule. Section 1.191-2(e)(5) was also amended to indicate that buildings may be disassembled and reassembled and a part of certified rehabilitation because this is a frequent rehabilitation technique. In response to a request from the Department of the Interior, new §§ 1.191-2(e)(6) and (7) were added to provide rules on costs of relocating structures and demolition expenses incurred as part of certified rehabilitation. One comment questioned the rule on when additions to capital account are made which is contained in § 1.191-2(e)(8). To provide more nearly equal treatment for rehabilitations begun before June 14, 1976, and those ending after June 14, 1981, § 1.191-2(e)(8) was changed to permit amortization of costs attributable to completed components of rehabilitations still in progress on June 14, 1981. A conforming paragraph, § 1.191-3(b)(4), was added to permit elections to be made after June 14, 1981, for expenditures attributable to these completed components.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of these regulations was H. B. Hartley of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulations, both on matters of substance and style.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, amendments to the regulations (26 CFR Parts 1 and 7), are hereby adopted as set forth below.

INCOME TAX REGULATIONS
(26 CFR Part 1)

Paragraph 1. The following new sections are added immediately after § 1.190-3.

§ 1.191-1. Amortization of certain rehabilitation costs for certified historic structures.

(a) In general. Section 191 allows an owner of a certified historic structure who rehabilitates that structure to elect to amortize over a 60-month period certain expenditures attributable to certified rehabilitation. The election may be made only if the certified historic structure (as defined in § 1.191-2(a)) and the improvements made are otherwise of a character subject to depreciation under section 167. In general, only those rehabilitation expenditures which result in additions to capital account after June 14, 1976, and before June 15, 1981, are eligible for this special amortization procedure. To qualify for the election, the rehabilitation must be certified by the Secretary of the Interior to the Internal Revenue Service as consistent with the historic character of the structure. See § 1.191-2(d) for the definition of certified rehabilitation. Along with the amortization deductions, the taxpayer may continue otherwise allowable depreciation deductions of the basis of the structure, exclusive of rehabilitation costs which are a part of the amortizable basis (as defined in § 1.191-2(e)).

(b) Allowance of deduction—(1) Determination of amortization period—(i) General rule. The taxpayer may elect to begin the 60-month amortization period with the month following the month in which the amortizable basis is acquired, or with the first month of the succeeding taxable year. Generally amortizable basis must be acquired after June 14, 1976, and before June 15, 1981. For purposes of this section, the month in which the amortizable basis is acquired is the latest of the month in which the work (or a component part of the work) is completed, the month in which costs are added to capital account, or the month in which depreciation deductions under section 167 would be first allowable with respect to the structure. See, however, § 1.191-2(e)(8) for special rules for certified rehabilitations in part occurring outside the effective period of section 191. No amortization deduction may be claimed before a building is used (or held for use) in a trade or business or for the production of income.

(ii) Multiple amortization periods. After a structure is eligible for depreciation, a separate amortization period may be established for each month's expenditures and completed work as that portion of the rehabilitation is placed in service in a depreciable use. The completed work for which a separate amortization period is established must, however, be an identifiable separate component of the entire project and not simply progress payments upon partial completion of overall rehabilitation activities. For example, a single structure could have a series of amortization periods based upon the component parts of the work completed and expenditures made for those component parts during each month in which the certified rehabilitation is in progress if the structure were already depreciable before completion of the rehabilitation activities. Alternatively, the taxpayer may treat his entire amortizable basis as acquired upon completion of the entire rehabilitation project rather than allocating amounts to each month in which the costs of component parts could have been added to basis. This treatment applies although rehabilitation extends over more than one taxable year, if there is no interruption in rehabilitation activities. If the taxpayer chooses to delay amortization deductions until completion of an entire project, then depreciation deductions with respect to any portion of the rehabilitation expenditures are treated as not allowable until the completion.

(2) Amount of deduction. The allowable deduction for each month is determined by dividing the amortizable basis as of the last day of the month by the number of months (including the current month) which remain in the 60-month amortization period. This calculation is repeated for each month of the 60-month period to determine each month's allowable amount of amortization deduction.

(3) Relation to section 167(o) and other provisions. If an election involving a certified historic structure is made under section 191, no election may be made under section 167(o) either for the same rehabilitation or for any subsequent rehabilitation of the same structure undertaken by the taxpayer making an election under section 191. Additionally, no election is permitted under section 191 if depreciation deductions or credits against tax based upon any part of the costs qualifying for amortization under section 191, are at any time claimed (or allowable (under any depreciation or other provision of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. However, this limitation with respect to investment tax credits under section 18 applies only to structures placed in service after October 31, 1978. If section 191 treatment is timely elected on a structure placed in service after October 31, 1978, the investment tax credit under section 38 is considered not to have been allowable with respect to that structure.

(4) Expansions of rehabilitated structures to sites of demolished structures. If a certified rehabilitation results in expansion of a certified historic structure to the site of a separate certified historic structure which is demolished as part of the rehabilitation, section 191 treatment is not available with respect to any expenditures attributable to that demolition or to any expenditures attributable to portions of the rehabilitated historic structure actually located on the demolition site. (See § 1.191-2(e)(7).) Subject to this restriction, however, section 191 treatment is available for expenditures for certified rehabilitation of the remaining historic structure which form a part of amortizable basis under § 1.191-2(e). See section 167(n) for special rules on depreciation of structures on sites previously occupied by certified historic structures and section 280B for rules on demolition costs.

(5) Depreciation upon notice to discontinue amortization deductions. If the taxpayer chooses to discontinue amortization deductions, the unamortized rehabilitation costs are added to the adjusted basis of the structure as of the first day of the month for which the notice to discontinue amortization deductions is effective. Deductions for depreciation of the structure under section 167 may then be computed on the resulting adjusted basis beginning at that time and are based on the estimated remaining useful life of the rehabilitated structure, determined as of the date amortization deductions cease.

(6) Examples. The provisions of this paragraph (b) may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (i). A, a calendar-year taxpayer, secured the necessary certifications from the Secretary of the Interior and began rehabilitation of a 100-year-old townhouse previously rented as a one-family dwelling, in order to convert it into two equally-sized apartments. In June 1977, the exterior work was completed, and A paid his contractor the cost of $20,000. Apartment #1 was completed and rented in September, and the cost of $40,000 was paid. In November, Apartment #2 was finished and rented, and A paid the cost of $47,500. A elects to use the 60-month amortization allowed under section 191. A chooses to establish separate amortization periods for each of these phases of the work, each period beginning at the earliest possible date. These periods and the amortizable basis for each period are as follows:

Apartment No. 1, and Allocable Portion of Exterior, beginning October 1, 1977, $50,000 basis.

Apartment No. 2, and Allocable Portion of Exterior, beginning December 1, 1977, $57,500 basis.

If A had chosen to do so, A could have selected an amortization period for the entire amortizable basis of $107,500 beginning on December 1, 1977, or January 1, 1978.

Example (ii). B owns a 19th Century warehouse building which is listed in the National Register. In a certified rehabilitation B converted the building into a small shopping mall at a cost of $480,000. The rehabilitation was begun in January 1977, and was completed, placed in service, and paid for in November 1977. B elected to claim amortization deductions under section 191 and to begin the amortization period in December 1977. B's allowable amortization deductions are $8,000 per month, computed as follows:

December 1977: $480,000 amortizable basis/60 months in period = $8,000 deduction.

January 1978: $472,000 amortizable basis/59 months in period = $8,000 deduction.

(c) Person to claim deduction—(1) In general. Except as otherwise provided in this paragraph (c)—

(i) Only the owner of a fee-simple interest in a certified historic structure and the site on which the structure is located may elect to amortize certified rehabilitation costs; and

(ii) The electing owner must have acquired ownership of the property before commencement of rehabilitation activities, the costs of which are to be amortized.

An electing owner need not have owned the property before commencement of all rehabilitation activities. Where the property is not acquired before rehabilitation begins, however, only those costs incurred subsequent to the acquisition of ownership of the site and structure may be considered for purposes of amortization deductions under section 191.

(2) Exceptions and special rules—(i) Life tenant and remainderman. For purposes of section 191, the holder of a life estate in property is considered to own the property. A remainderman taking the property on the death of the life tenant is permitted to amortize only those rehabilitation costs which are incurred for improvements begun following termination of all preceding interests in the property and paid by the remainderman.

(ii) Owners of joint or undivided interests in historic structures. Joint tenants, tenants by the entirety, tenants in common, and owners of other joint or undivided interests in a certified historic structure may, under section 191, amortize expenditures made for certified rehabilitation. The right of any one such owner to make an election under section 191 is not dependent upon any other co-owner making such an election. Each electing owner's amortizable basis consists of the full amount of expenditures actually made by that individual owner for certified rehabilitation. See paragraph (c)(2)(v) of this section for rules on partnerships.

(iii) Certain transferees of historic structures. If expenditures for certified rehabilitation are in fact made by the owner of a certified historic structure, and if one or more transferees then acquire the ownership of the rehabilitated structure directly from that owner before the structure is placed in service in its rehabilitated use, the transferees, solely for purposes of section 191, may be treated as having made the rehabilitation expenditures at the later of the time the structure is acquired or the rehabilitation is completed. Transferees acquiring structures in transfers occurring after the structure is placed in service after its rehabilitation but before the first day of the following taxable year, are not eligible for section 191 treatment, because depreciation deductions for rehabilitation costs are allowable to the transferor before the transfer. The amount of rehabilitation expenditures treated as made by the transferees under this subdivision (iii) is the lesser amount of—

(A) The rehabilitation expenditures actually made before the date on which the transferee acquired ownership of the structure, or

(B) The portion of the transferee's cost or other basis for the property (determined according to the rules of section 167) which is attributable to rehabilitation expenditures made before the date on which the transferee acquired ownership of the structure.

(iv) Estates and trusts. The amortization deduction provided by section 191 is allowable to estates and trusts; see sections 642(f) and 1.642(f)-1.

(v) Partnerships. Partnerships owning certified historic structures may elect to amortize expenditures for certified rehabilitations made by the partnerships. Any election for partnership property must be made by the partnership and not by the partners individually.

(vi) Lessees of historic structures. A lessee of an historic structure (including a structure which is not depreciable to the lessor) which is certified by the Secretary of the Interior and which is used by the lessee in a depreciable use can elect under section 191 to amortize rehabilitation expenditures actually made by the lessee. A lessee can make an election under section 191 only if the remaining term of the lease equals or exceeds both a period of 30 years and the actual useful life of the improvements constituting the certified rehabilitation. The lessee's remaining lease term is measured as of the date on which the full certified rehabilitation is completed. Under section 191(f)(2), renewal periods are not treated as part of the remaining lease term. However, if, before the date on which the full rehabilitation is completed, the lessee becomes obligated for periods beyond the current term of the lease to the same extent that the lessee is obligated during the current term, those additional periods are considered to be part of the current lease term and not renewal periods.

(vii) Concessionaires from governmental entities. For purposes of section 191 and this section, holders of concession contracts on properties owned by the Federal government or by any State or local government who do not lease the property because of express Federal government restrictions, are, nevertheless, considered to be lessees.

(d) Recapture. If a taxpayer disposes of property for which the taxpayer has claimed amortization deductions under section 191, part or all of any gain on the disposition may be recaptured as ordinary income under the applicable provisions of the Code.

(e) Minimum tax on preference income under section 56. Amortization deductions under section 191 are items of tax preference for purposes of the minimum tax to the extent the deductions exceed the amount that may be claimed under straight-line depreciation using the actual useful life of the property. See section 57(a)(2). For special rules for elevators and escalators, see section 57(a)(1).

§ 1.191-2 Definitions and special rules.

(a) Certified historic structure. A certified historic structure is a building or other structure which is of a character subject to depreciation under section 167 and is either—

(1) Listed in the National Register of Historic Places, or

(2) Located in a registered historic district and certified by the Secretary of the Interior as being of historic significance to the district.

Under section 191, a structure is considered to be of a character subject to depreciation only if its first use following completion of certified rehabilitation is a use in a trade or business or for the production of income.

(b) Registered historic district. A registered historic district is—

(1) A district listed in the National Register of Historic Places, or

(2) A district designated under a statute (including an ordinance) of a State (or local government), but only if the Secretary of the Interior certifies that—

(i) The statute contains criteria which achieve the purpose of preserving historically significant buildings; and

(ii) The district meets substantially all of the requirements for districts to be listed in the National Register of Historic Places.

(c) Structure. A structure is a specific building or other man-made construction which constitutes depreciable real property under section 167 of the Code. The term structure does not include ships, other vessels, aircraft, railway cars, or other construction which does not constitute real property even though the other items are listed in the National Register of Historic Places. The term structure also does not include site work or other related items associated with the building or other construction. Examples of structures include rental housing, office buildings, lighthouses, hotels, factories, and bridges.

(d) Certified rehabilitation. A certified rehabilitation consists of improvements to or restoration of an existing certified historic structure, which the Secretary of the Interior certifies to be consistent with Interior Department standards for rehabilitation. Reproduction (as opposed to restoration) of an historic structure is not a certified rehabilitation even in cases where the reproduction is listed in the National Register upon its completion since it does not enhance the historic value of an existing historic structure.

(e) Amortizable basis—(1) In general. The amortizable basis of a certified historic structure consists of any otherwise depreciable additions to the capital account of the structure during the effective period of section 191. See § 1.191-2(e)(8) for rules on the time amounts are added to capital account and on the effective period of section 191. Only amounts expended by the electing person directly for rehabilitation of existing historic structures are part of amortizable basis. Amortizable basis does not include new construction even though the certification of rehabilitation by the Secretary of the Interior certifies that the entire project is consistent with Interior Department standards and makes no distinction between rehabilitation of the existing historic structure and new construction relating to the historic structure. Amortizable basis also does not include certain additions which do not meet the requirements of paragraphs (d) and (e) of this section even though such additions are considered under local law to be rehabilitation. For purposes of section 191, architectural and engineering fees, real estate commissions, site survey fees, legal expenses, insurance premiums, developers' fees, and other construction-related costs are a part of amortizable basis. Any costs for which a deduction is claimed under any other section of the Code or for which specific provision is made in another section of the Code (such as section 189 on construction period interest and taxes or section 266 on carrying charges) are not a part of amortizable basis. Any costs which must be added to the basis of land associated with the historic structure, rather than depreciated under section 167, are not a part of the amortizable basis.

(2) Partially depreciable property. A certified historic structure may be depreciable only in part, as, for example, a private residence which includes a separate rental apartment. In such case, only that portion of the costs of the certified rehabilitation which is attributable to the portion of the total structure that is depreciable propery under section 167 is a part of amortizable basis. The determination of the portion of the expenditures which is included in amortizable basis is made according to the rules of section 167. The remaining certified rehabilitation costs must be added to the nondepreciable portion of the basis of the historic structure.

(3) Rehabilitations which include new construction. If a rehabilitation project only partially qualifies for amortization deductions because a portion of the project is new construction (as defined in this paragraph (e)), the apportionment rules of section 167 apply to determine the amount of the taxpayer's amortizable basis. For example, the cost of a single heating system used both for a rehabilitated historic structure and for a nonhistoric new wing added thereto would be apportioned between the amortizable rehabilitation costs and nonamortizable new construction costs.

(4) Modernization of existing structure included. Expenditures for structural modernization of an existing historic structure, which are made in a rehabilitation certified by the Secretary of the Interior to be consistent with the historic character of the structure, are a part of amortizable basis. Examples of such expenditures include the costs of modern plumbing and electrical wiring and fixtures, heating and air conditioning systems, elevators, escalators, and improvements required by local building or fire codes. The addition of an attached facility exclusively for elevators, fire stairs, or barrier-free access will also be considered rehabilitation, if the construction of elevators, fire stairs, or barrier-free access within the existing structure is prohibited by the Secretary of the Interior as destructive of the historic character of the structure. Carpeting, draperies, office equipment, furniture (even where it is built in), nonpermanent (demountable) walls or partitions, and other similar items of personal property are not a part of amortizable basis.

(5) New construction excluded. Expenditures attributable to new construction associated with a certified rehabilitation are not a part of amortizable basis. Whether expenditures are attributable to the rehabilitation of an existing structure, or are attributable to new construction, will be determined upon the basis of all the facts and circumstances. Expenditures will generally be considered attributable to rehabilitation if the foundation and outer walls of the existing building are retained and the costs are attributable to work done within that existing framework. Where the internal structural framework of a building is replaced and one or more outer walls are also replaced, all expenditures are normally attributable to new construction even though the construction may qualify as rehabilitation under local law. The internal structural framework and outer walls are not considered to have been replaced if they are disassembled and reassembled as part of rehabilitation so long as the reassembled framework and outer walls consist of at least 75% of materials original to that structure. Except as otherwise provided in this paragraph (e), any expansion of the existing structure is considered new construction even if the expansion consists of the reproduction of portions of the structure which no longer existed when rehabilitation was started. For example, the addition of a new story to an existing building is new construction. Likewise, related construction such as a garage, sidewalk, or parking lot (or the addition of landscaping) will not be considered rehabilitation even though the related construction may be physically attached to the historic structure.

(6) Relocation of certified historic structures. Costs attributable to relocation of an existing certified historic structure (other than costs that are not depreciable under section 167) are included in amortizable basis if the relocation is expressly approved by the Secretary of the Interior.

(7) Rehabilitations which include expenditures for demolition. Expenditures attributable to demolition of a portion of an existing certified historic structure as part of certified rehabilitation are included in amortizable basis. However, costs attributable to demolition of related facilities not forming a part of the existing certified historic structure, or to demolition of separate certified historic structures as part of an overall rehabilitation plan, are not included in amortizable basis. For a special rule on costs attributable to demolition of certified historic structures, see section 280B, and for rules limiting depreciation and amortization deductions for structures constructed or used in whole or in part on the site of a demolished certified historic structure, see section 167(n) and § 1.191-1(b)(4).

(8) Time when amounts are added to capital account. Under section 191, expenditures are treated as added to capital account at the time they are actually made (paid or accrued). However, amortizable basis includes only expenditures attributable to component parts of the structure completed before June 15, 1981. Therefore, expenditures for improvements completed after June 14, 1981, are not a part of the taxpayer's amortizable basis even though they may have been paid or accrued prior to that date. In the case of a single and continuous rehabilitation project all of which is certified by the Secretary of the Interior, expenditures for rehabilitation begun before June 14, 1976, but completed and charged thereafter, are a part of the taxpayer's amortizable basis. However, even where there is a single and continuous rehabilitation project, expenditures made for any component part of the improvements completed and charged before June 14, 1976, are not a part of the taxpayer's amortizable basis.

§ 1.191-3 Time and manner of making election.

(a) In general. Under section 191 (b), an election by the taxpayer (including a partnership) to claim amortization deductions with respect to a certified historic structure is made by so electing at the appropriate place on the taxpayer's return for each year in which amortization deductions are claimed. Additionally, in any year in which falls the first month of a 60-month amortization period selected pursuant to § 1.191-1(b), the amount of amortizable basis from which deductions are to be claimed during that 60-month period must be entered at the appropriate place on the return. If an election is made for more than one certified historic structure, the amount of amortizable basis for each structure must be separately entered on the return.

(b) Special rules—(1) Letters of certification. A copy of the letter of certification issued by the Secretary of the Interior qualifying each certified rehabilitation must be submitted with taxpayer's return on which an election to amortize rehabilitation expenditures for any structure is first made. If final certification of a rehabilitation has not been issued by the Secretary of the Interior by the date of the election, a copy of the first page of the application for certification of the completed rehabilitation work must be attached to the return.

(2) Certifications not issued and failure to submit proof of certification. If final certification of rehabilitation has not been issued at the time amortization deductions begin, the electing party must submit a copy of that certification with the first income tax return filed after the receipt by the taxpayer of the certification. If the required notice of certifications is not received by the Internal Revenue Service within 30 months after the date of the commencement of the 60-month amortization period, the electing taxpayer may be requested to consent to an agreement under section 6501(c)(4) extending the period of assessment for any tax relating to the time for which amortization deductions are claimed.

(3) Election of multiple amortization periods for a single structure. If the taxpayer elects a separate amortization period for each month in which rehabilitation expenditures for a single structure are made and component work completed, the taxpayer must combine all such elections for periods beginning in one taxable year in a single election, and must enter on the return the total amount of amortizable basis from which deductions are first claimed in that year. If multiple amortization periods are selected for a single structure to commence in different taxable years, a copy of the letter certifying the rehabilitation must be attached to each return on which a deduction for a separate amortization period is first claimed.

(4) Elections to begin amortization deductions after June 14, 1981. Notwithstanding the rules of § 1.191-1(b)(1)(i), expenditures for component parts of a rehabilitation project which is not completed and placed in service until after June 14, 1981, are included in amortizable basis if the component parts are completed and the expenditures are added to capital account under § 1.191-2(e)(8) by that date. Amortization deductions for the costs of such component parts are allowable beginning with the month in which the entire rehabilitation would qualify under § 1.191-1(b)(1), but for the expiration of section 191 on June 14, 1981.

(c) Notice to discontinue amortization—(1) In general. A notice to discontinue amortization deductions as provided by section 191(c) may be made at any time during the amortization period. This notice is made by a statement attached to the return of the taxpayer filed for the taxable year in which falls the first month for which the election terminates. In the case of a partnership, the statement is to be attached to the partnership return. The statement must specify the month as of the beginning of which the taxpayer chooses to discontinue amortization deductions. The statement must be filed with the taxpayer's income tax return for the year in which amortization is to cease. In addition, the statement must contain a description clearly identifying the certified historic structure and rehabilitation with respect to which the taxpayer elects to discontinue the amortization deduction. In the case of multiple amortization periods relating to the same structure, an election to discontinue any amortization deductions terminates all amortization periods that have been established. If final certification of the rehabilitation has been issued, a copy of the letter of certification must be attached to the taxpayer's return. If, at the time of the election to discontinue amortization deductions, final certification has not been issued, the taxpayer must submit a copy of the first page of the application for that certification and must submit a copy of the letter of certification with the next succeeding tax return after its receipt. If the required certification has not been issued and 30 months or more have elapsed since amortization deductions under section 191 were first claimed, the taxpayer may be requested to consent to an agreement under section 6501(c)(4) extending the period of assessment for any tax relating to the time for which amortization deductions were claimed.

(2) Notification by Secretary of the Interior. For purposes of this paragraph (c), notification to the Secretary or his delegate from the Secretary of the Interior that he has notified the owner of the historic structure that the structure or the rehabilitation no longer meets the requirements for certification has the same effect as notice from the taxpayer electing to terminate amortization deductions as of the first day of the month following the month that the structure or rehabilitation ceased to meet the requirements of section 191.

Par. 2. Section 1.642(f)-1 is amended to read as follows:

§ 1.642(f)-1 Amortization deductions.

An estate or trust is allowed amortization deduction with respect to an emergency facility as defined in section 168(d), with respect to a certified pollution control facility as defined in section 169(d), with respect to qualified railroad rolling stock as defined in section 184(d), with respect to certified coal mine safety equipment as defined in section 187(d), with respect to on-the-job training and child-care facilities as defined in section 188(b), and with respect to certain rehabilitations of certified historic structures as defined in section 191, in the same manner and to the same extent as in the case of an individual. However, the principles governing the apportionment of the deductions for depreciation and depletion between fiduciaries and the beneficiaries of an estate or trust (see sections 167(h) and 611(b) and the regulations thereunder) shall be applicable with respect to such amortization deductions.

Section 355.—Distribution of Stock and Securities of a Controlled Corporation

26 CFR 1.355-1: Distribution of stock and securities of controlled corporation.
(Also Section 482; 1.482-2.)

Controlled corporations; split-off; active business requirement. Rev. Rul. 79-394 is amplified to hold that the wholly owned subsidiary corporation whose stock was to be distributed in the transaction described in that ruling would satisfy the active business requirement of section 355(b) of the Code even if the related corporations were not reimbursed for the services performed by their officers and employees for the subsidiary. In the absence of reimbursement, section 482 would be applicable to allocate income and deductions among the corporations to reflect an arm's length charge for the services.

Rev. Rul. 80-181

ISSUE

Whether the active trade or business requirement of section 355(b) of the Internal Revenue Code is satisfied if the wholly owned subsidiary corporation in the transaction described in Rev. Rul. 79-394, 1979-2 C.B. 141, does not reimburse related corporations for the use of their employees and officers in the conduct of the subsidiary's real estate activities.

ANALYSIS

In Rev. Rul. 79-394 a corporation (P) owned all of the stock of another corporation (Y) for more than 5 years, and during that period Y was engaged in renting real estate to unrelated third parties. Y's business required considerable day to day management and operational functions and also involved acquiring, renovating, refurbishing, and servicing the real estate which it leased. Y had no salaried employees, but its activities were performed by employees of another corporation (X), which was wholly owned by P, who were under the supervision and control of Y's officers who were also officers of P and X. Y reimbursed X for the services performed by X's employees, and Y also reimbursed P and X for the services performed by their officers. P then proposed to distribute the Y stock to one of its (P's) shareholders in a transaction intended to meet the requirements of section 355 of the Code, which, if satisfied, would make the distribution nontaxable to the P shareholders. After the distribution, Y would directly employ most of those employees who had worked on Y's behalf prior to the distribution.

In considering the issue of whether before the distribution Y was engaged in the conduct of an active trade or business within the meaning of section 355(b) of the Code, Rev. Rul. 79-394 states that the presence or absence of formal employment of employees (other than officers) by the controlled corporation (or the distributing corporation) is only one factor to be considered in the determination under section 355(b). Rev. Rul. 79-394 concludes that the scope of Y's management and operation activities was sufficient to distinguish these activities from a passive investment in real estate, even though it had no salaried employees prior to the distribution, and holds that the active trade or business requirement of section 355(b) was satisfied under these circumstances.

The fact that Y reimbursed X and P for the services performed by their employees and officers in connection with Y's rental activities was one of the factors in favor of concluding that Y was engaged in the conduct of an active trade or business within the meaning of section 355(b) of the Code, and the absence of reimbursement is a negative factor in this determination. However, Y's failure to reimburse X and P for the services performed by their employees and officers would not materially change the nature of Y's predistribution management and operational activities, especially since Y would continue to supervise and control X's employees in the conduct of these activities. Moreover, the fact that these services were performed by employees of X, which was wholly owned by Y's parent (P), is significant in determining whether an active business was conducted by the distributing or controlled corporation during the five-year period prior to the distribution. Compare Rev. Rul. 73-234, 1973-1 C.B. 180; Rev. Rul. 73-236, 1973-1 C.B. 183; and Rev. Rul. 73-237, 1973-1 C.B. 184.

HOLDING

The active trade or business requirement of section 355(b) of the Code is satisfied even though Y does not reimburse P and X for the use of their employees and officers in the conduct of Y's real estate activities.

If Y did not reimburse X and P for the services rendered to Y by the employees of X and the officers of X and P, then section 482 of the Code would be applicable to allocate income to X and P in an amount equal to an arm's length charge, pursuant to section 1.482-1(b) and section 1.482-2(b) of the Income Tax Regulations, for the services rendered by the employees of X and the officers of X and P to Y. In addition, Y would then be entitled to a deduction under section 162 provided the amounts deemed paid by Y to X and P for the services rendered represent ordinary and necessary business expenses to Y.

EFFECT ON OTHER REVENUE RULINGS

Rev. Rul. 79-394 is amplified.

Section 461.—General Rule for Taxable Year of Deduction

26 CFR 1.461-1: General rule for taxable year of deduction.

Oil and gas leases; removal of offshore platforms and well. A corporation using the accrual method of accounting entered into long-term offshore oil and gas leases with the federal government under which the corporation was required to remove the platforms and well fixtures upon abandonment of the wells or termination of the leases. The corporation may deduct the costs of removing the platforms and well fixtures only in the taxable year during which the removal services are performed by the corporation or by a separate contractor.

Rev. Rul. 80-182

ISSUE

When may a taxpayer using the accrual method of accounting deduct the cost of removing offshore platforms and well fixtures installed pursuant to a long-term oil and gas lease with the federal government?

FACTS

Situation 1

X is a corporation that files its federal income tax return on a calendar year basis using the accrual method of accounting. During 1978 X entered into offshore oil and gas leases with the federal government. The leases provide that X is obligated to remove offshore platforms and well fixtures used in the drilling operation upon X's abandonment of the wells or on termination of the leases. The typical offshore lease has a duration of 20 years or more. X installed the offshore platforms and well fixtures in 1978 and in its federal income tax return for the year deducted the estimated cost of removing them. X will perform all services incidental to removing the offshore platforms and well fixtures.

Situation 2

The facts are the same as Situation 1 except that instead of X performing the removal services it contracts with Y, an unrelated corporation, to perform them.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 461 of the Internal Revenue Code provides that the amount of any deduction shall be taken for the taxable year that is the proper taxable year under the method of accounting used in computing taxable income.

Section 1.461-1(a)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that under an accrual method of accounting an expense is deductible for the taxable year in which (1) all the events have occurred that determine the fact of the liability and (2) the amount thereof can be determined with reasonable accuracy. If the taxpayer is to be entitled to a deduction in 1978 for the cost of removing the platforms and fixtures, both of these conditions must be satisfied.

The specific question is whether the existence during a taxable year of a contractual obligation requiring a taxpayer to incur a deductible expense at some time in the future is sufficient to permit the accrual of such expenditure under section 1.461-1(a)(2) of the regulations even though the contractually mandated services have not been rendered by either the taxpayer or a third-party contractor at the end of the taxable year.

An accrual basis obligor is not permitted to deduct an expense stemming from a bilateral contractual arrangement, that is, mutual promises, prior to the performance of the contracted for services by the obligee. See Levin v. Commissioner, 21 T.C. 996 (1954), aff'd 219 F.2d 588 (3rd Cir. 1955) and Amalgamated Housing Corporation v. Commissioner, 37 B.T.A. 817 (1938), aff'd per curiam, 108 F.2d 1010 (2nd Cir. 1940). The taxpayer obligor, through the vehicle of a bare contractual obligation, has incurred no liability but has merely agreed to become liable to pay in the event the future services called for are performed. The liability under the contract is contingent upon performance. All events are not fixed within the meaning of section 1.461-1(a)(2) of the regulations until the required performance is rendered.

In National Bread Wrapping Machine Co. v. Commissioner, 30 T.C. 550 (1958), the taxpayer was denied a deduction for guaranteed installation services for machines sold but uninstalled. The court held that although the taxpayer was obligated to render installation services, until the installation services were rendered there was no definite liability on the part of the taxpayer to pay any amount to any person. The liability was contingent until performance occurred. See also Spencer, White and Prentis Inc. v. Commissioner, 144 F.2d 45 (2nd Cir. 1944), cert. denied, 323 U.S. 780 (1944), in which the taxpayer was denied a deduction for the estimated cost of future restoration work that the taxpayer was obligated to perform under a construction contract.

In both Situation 1 and 2, X has a contractual obligation under its lease with the federal government to remove the platforms and fixtures. In Situation 1, as X's employees perform the services required to remove the platforms and fixtures the fact of the liability will become fixed. In Situation 2, X's liability to Y for removing the platforms and fixtures is contingent on Y's performance. As Y performs the actual removal services the fact of the liability will become fixed and X will be entitled to deduct the cost of the removal services actually performed by Y. The fact that X is contractually liable for the cost of the entire removal services does not entitle it to deduct the cost of such services before they are performed.

HOLDING

A taxpayer using the accrual method of accounting may deduct the costs of removing offshore platforms and well fixtures installed pursuant to a long-term oil and gas lease with the federal government in the taxable years during which the removal services are performed. This same conclusion results whether the removal services are performed by the taxpayer or a third-party contractor.

Section 482.—Allocation of Income and Deductions among Taxpayers

26 CFR 1.482-2: Determination of taxable income in specific situations.

Whether section 482 of the Code would be applicable to allocate income from one subsidiary to another subsidiary and their common parent in an amount equal to an arm's length charge for services rendered by the employees of the second subsidiary and the parent to the first subsidiary. See Rev. Rul. 80-181, page 14.

Section 613.—Percentage Depletion

26 CFR 1.613-4: Gross income from the property in the case of minerals other than oil and gas.

Depletion; gross income from mining; transportation in excess of 50 miles. A domestic corporation is engaged in mining a mineral for export in a foreign country that required the location of processing facilities in an area that is more than 50 miles from the point of extraction to encourage economic development of the area. The corporation derived economic benefit by developing the processing facilities in the required area. The transportation of the mineral in excess of 50 miles from the point of extraction to the processing facilities is "mining" within the meaning of section 613(c)(2) of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 80-183

ISSUE

Does the taxpayer's transportation in excess of 50 miles qualify as "mining" within the meaning of section 613(c)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code?

FACTS

Corporation X is incorporated in the United States and does business in foreign country R. X is engaged in mining mineral y for export.

Mineral y is drilled, blasted, and loaded with power shovels directly into railroad cars for shipment to a port 90 miles away from the mine.

The railroad and port facilities are owned by R.

At the port, the ore is crushed, dried, and either stockpiled in covered storage areas or loaded directly in ships for ocean transportation to markets.

R required location of the crushing and drying facilities at the port to encourage economic development of the port area. X derived the following economic advantages by developing the processing facilities at the port: During the rainy season, X would not have to ship ore in covered cars or re-dry the ore when it reached port as it would if the facilities were located at the mine. The lower mean annual temperature at the port is more conducive to operations there than at the mine site. By locating at the port, the crushing and drying facilities could be constructed simultaneously with the mine development, accelerating the start-up of actual production of the mineral. Other efficiencies in the overall operation would be increased because fuel and other supplies would not have to be reshipped to the mine from the port.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 613(c)(2) of the Code provides that the term "mining" includes that portion of the transportation of ores from the point of extraction from the ground to the plant or mills in which the treatment processes are applied thereto as is not in excess of 50 miles unless the Secretary finds that the physical and other requirements are such that the ore or mineral must be transported a greater distance to such plants or mills. See also section 1.613-4(d)(3)(i) of the Income Tax Regulations.

Section 1.613-4(h) of the regulations provides that the application to treat as mining transportation in excess of 50 miles must include a statement setting forth in detail the facts concerning physical and other requirements that prevented the construction and operation at a place nearer to the point of extraction from the ground.

In this case the mineral is extracted and shipped by rail to the port, a distance in excess of fifty miles, for the application of crushing and drying processes that are recognized in section 613(c)(4)(I) of the Code and section 1.613-4(f)(5) of the regulations as mining. Therefore, transportation of the mineral for fifty miles is mining.

The control that R had over the location and magnitude of mining operations and the other reasons given fulfilled the "physical and other reasons" requirement for performing the crushing and drying at the port.

HOLDING

In this case, the transportation of the mineral y in excess of fifty miles is mining.

Section 1033.—Involuntary Conversions

26 CFR 1.1033(f)-1: Condemnation of real property held for productive use in trade or business or for investment.

Involuntary conversions; severance-damage award reinvested; similar property. Part of a severance-damage award was used to demolish a building leased to retail stores and to construct a warehouse for lease in its place. The remaining part of the award was used to purchase another parcel of land and to construct an office building thereon. The business risks and responsibilities in managing the warehouse and office building were substantially similar to those under the leases with the retail stores. The investments constitute reinvestments in property similar or related in service or use for purposes of deferring the recognition of gain under section 1033 (a)(2)(A) of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 80-184

ISSUES

(1) May a taxpayer under section 1033(a)(2)(A) of the Internal Revenue Code defer the recognition of gain realized as a result of a severance-damage award for the part of such award used to demolish a building on the retained land that was leased to retail stores and to construct in its place a warehouse for lease?

(2) May a taxpayer under section 1033(a)(2)(A) of the Code defer the recognition of gain realized as a result of a severance-damage award for the part of such award used to purchase another parcel of land and to construct an office building for lease on it if the taxpayer retains the damaged land for which the severance-damage award was received?

FACTS

The taxpayer owned a parcel of land in a business district. The land contained a building owned by the taxpayer that was leased to retail stores.

The state condemned the entire frontage of the taxpayer's land for construction of a highway interchange. The state paid 1,000*x* dollars to the taxpayer for this condemnation. Of the 1,000*x* dollars paid to the taxpayer, 350*x* dollars was paid for the property actually taken by the state. The remaining 650*x* dollars represented severance damages to compensate the taxpayer because the rest of the taxpayer's land was no longer readily accessible and therefore was no longer suited to the business that had operated there.

Within the prescribed period of time set forth in section 1033(a)(2)(B) of the Code, the taxpayer used 500*x* dollars of the severance damages to demolish the existing building and construct a warehouse on the remaining land. The taxpayer leased the warehouse to a warehouse operator. It was not economically feasible or practical to invest any more funds in constructing additional rental structures on the remaining property. Therefore, the taxpayer used the 500*x* dollar balance of the condemnation award (which included 150*x* dollars of the 650*x* dollars severance damages) to acquire another parcel of land and to construct an office building on it that it leased to another person. The business risks and the taxpayer's responsibilities in the way of management, services and relations to the tenants under the leases involving the warehouse and the office building are substantially similar to the risks and responsibilities under the former leases involving the retail stores.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 1033(a) of the Code provides that if property, as a result of a condemnation, is compulsorily or involuntarily converted into money, the gain (if any) shall be recognized except to the extent provided in section 1033(a)(2)(A).

Section 1033(a)(2)(A) of the Code provides that if during a specified period the taxpayer purchases other property similar or related in service or use to the property so converted, at the election of the taxpayer the gain shall be recognized only to the extent that the amount realized on the conversion exceeds the cost of such other property.

Section 1033(g)(1) of the Code provides that for purposes of section 1033(a), if real property held for productive use in trade or business or for investment is (as the result of its seizure, requisition, or condemnation, or threat or imminence thereof) compulsorily or involuntarily converted, property of a like kind to be held either for productive use in trade or business or for investment shall be treated as property similar or related in service or use to the property so converted. The 350*x* dollars received for the land actually taken was invested in land and the construction of a building which is like-kind property, and the taxpayer can defer the recognition of gain attributable to these proceeds.

Severance damages are compensation in addition to the award paid for the property actually condemned when the value of the retained property has decreased as a result of the condemnation. Rev. Rul. 68-37, 1968-1 C.B. 359, provides that an award of severance damages reduces the basis of the retained property and any amount received in excess of basis is treated as gain.

The recognition of gain realized as a result of an award of severance damages may be deferred under section 1033(a)(2)(A) if, assuming the other requirements of section 1033 are met, the money reinvested restores the retained property to its former use. See, for example, Rev. Rul. 72-433, 1972-2 C.B. 470; Rev. Rul. 69-240, 1969-1 C.B. 199; Rev. Rul. 60-69, 1960-1 C.B. 294; Rev. Rul. 271, 1953-2 C.B. 36.

The specific question raised by Issue 1 is whether this part of the severance-damage award was used to restore the retained property to its former use or to change the use of the retained property.

Rev. Rul. 64-237, 1964-2 C.B. 319, provides that in considering whether replacement property acquired by an investor is similar in service or use to the converted property, attention will be directed primarily to the similarity in the relationship of the services or uses that the original and replacement properties have to the taxpayer-owner. In applying this test, a determination will be made as to whether the properties are of a similar service to the taxpayer, the nature of the business risks connected with the properties, and what such properties demand of the taxpayer in the way of management, services and relations to his tenants. See also Liant Record, Inc. v. Commissioner, 303 F.2d 326 (2d Cir. 1962).

In the owner-investor situation the important factor is the similarity in the taxpayer's relationship to the use of the original and replacement properties. This relationship can be sufficiently similar even though the use by the respective tenants changes. See, for example, Rev. Rul. 71-41, 1971-1 C.B. 223. However, the fact that the taxpayer leases both properties is not alone sufficient to justify nonrecognition of the gain because both properties might be leased yet represent materially different investments to the owner-investor. See Rev. Rul. 76-391, 1976-2 C.B. 243.

In the present situation, the taxpayer's risks and responsibilities remained substantially the same despite the change in the nature of the tenants. Therefore, the reinvestment of the severance damages in the retained property to demolish the building leased to retail stores and to construct in its place a warehouse for lease constitutes a reinvestment of the severance damages in property similar or related in service or use to the damaged property.

The remaining part of the severance-damage award was used to purchase another parcel of land and to improve that land by constructing an office building thereon. The business risks and the taxpayer's responsibilities under the leases involving the office building are substantially similar to the risks and responsibilities under the former leases involving the retail stores.

Rev. Rul. 72-433 indicates that if it is necessary for the taxpayer to purchase additional land in order to restore the volume of production that existed before the involuntary granting of an easement, such use of the proceeds will qualify as an investment in property similar or related in service or use. Similarly, in this case, the taxpayer could only restore his original rental capacity by purchasing additional land and constructing rental units thereon. Since the taxpayer restored the damaged land to its maximum similar or related use, the remaining part of the severance-damage award can be invested in other property to return the taxpayer to his pre-damage business position, and such property will be considered similar or related in service or use.

HOLDINGS

(1) Under section 1033(a)(2)(A) of the Code the taxpayer may defer the recognition of gain realized as a result of a severance-damage award for the part of such award used to demolish a building on the retained land that was leased to retail stores and to construct in its place a warehouse for lease.

(2) Under section 1033(a)(2)(A) of the Code the taxpayer may defer the recognition of gain realized as a result of a severance-damage award for the part of such award used to purchase another parcel of land and to construct an office building for lease on it even though the taxpayer retains the damaged land for which the severance-damage award was received.

Section 2012.—Credit for Gift Tax

26 CFR 20.2012-1: Credit for gift tax. (Also Section 2056; 20.2056(a)-1.)

Gift tax credit; "second limitation"; donee other than spouse. For the purpose of computing the "second limitation" of the credit for gift tax, the value of the gift made to a donee other than the decedent's spouse is not reduced under section 2012(b)(2) of the Code by the additional marital deduction that results from inclusion of the gift in the gross estate.

Rev. Rul. 80-185

ISSUE

In computing the "second limitation" of the credit for gift tax under section 2012 of the Internal Revenue Code, what is the value of the gift made to a donee other than the spouse, if the inclusion in the gross estate has the effect of increasing the marital deduction?

FACTS

The decedent, D, made gifts of future interests in property of 100*x* dollars to each of D's two children on December 7, 1976. A federal gift tax return was filed and a gift tax was paid.

D died on January 27, 1977. On the federal estate tax return filed for D's estate, the executor included the gifts in the gross estate pursuant to section 2035 of the Code. The inclusion of the transfers under section 2035 resulted in an increase in the adjusted gross estate and a corresponding increase in the maximum marital deduction, the computation of which was based on the adjusted gross estate.

The executor claimed a credit against the federal estate tax liability for the gift tax paid with respect to the included gifts. The credit was based upon the "second limitation" under section 2012.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Under section 2012 of the Code, a credit is allowed against the federal estate tax for federal gift tax paid with respect to the transfer of property by gift if the gift is subsequently included in the donor-decedent's gross estate. Section 2012(e), as added by the Tax Reform Act of 1976, Pub. L. 94-455, 1976-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1, provides that the credit is allowed only as to gifts made before January 1, 1977.

The credit is limited to the lesser of two "limitations." Section 20.2012-1(b) of the Estate Tax Regulations. The "first limitation" is the amount of the gift tax attributable to the included gift. The "second limitation" is the amount of estate tax attributable to the inclusion of the gift in the gross estate. The "second limitation" is expressed as:

$$\frac{\text{the value of the gift (at the time of the gift or at time of death, whichever is lower)}}{\text{the value of the gross estate, less all marital and charitable deductions allowable}} \times \text{gross estate tax, less credit for state death taxes}$$

Section 2012(b)(2) of the Code provides that the value of the gift in the ratio shall be reduced if a deduction with respect to such gift is allowed under section 2056(a) (relating to marital deduction).

Section 20.2012-1(d)(2)(ii) of the regulations provides, in part, that the value of the gift is reduced if any portion of the value of property is allowed as a marital deduction under section 2056 of the Code.

Section 2056 of the Code, as amended by the Tax Reform Act of 1976, provides that the value of the taxable estate shall be determined by deducting from the value of the gross estate an amount equal to the value of any interest in property which passes or has passed from the decedent to the surviving spouse, but only to the extent that such interest is included in determining the value of the gross estate. The maximum allowable marital deduction is limited to the greater of $250,000 or fifty percent of the adjusted gross estate.

The inclusion of the gift property in the decedent's gross estate resulted in an increase in the adjusted gross estate and in the allowable marital deduction. However, the gift property itself could not qualify for the marital deduction since the property did not pass to the surviving spouse. Thus, no marital deduction was allowed with respect to such gift. However, compare the example in section 20.2012-1(d)(3) where the value of the gift was reduced because the gift was to the spouse and qualified for the estate tax marital deduction.

HOLDING

For purposes of computing the "second limitation" of the credit for gift tax, the value of the gift made to a donee other than the spouse is not reduced by the amount of the additional marital deduction resulting from the inclusion of the gift in the gross estate. Therefore, the value of the gift in the subject case is 100*x* dollars for each gift.

Section 2056.—Bequests, Etc., to Surviving Spouse

26 CFR 20.2056(a)-1: Marital deduction; in general.

Whether in computing in the "second limitation" of the credit for gift tax under section 2012 of the Code, the value of the gift made to a donee other than the spouse is reduced where the inclusion in the gross estate has the effect of increasing the marital deduction. See Rev. Rul. 80-185, above.

Section 2511.—Transfers in General

26 CFR 25.2511-2: Cessation of donor's dominion and control.

Option transferred; nominal consideration; related party. A transfer to a related party for nominal consideration of an option to purchase real property, for a specified period at a price below fair market value, is a completed gift on the date the option is transferred if under state law the option is binding and enforceable on the date of transfer.

Rev. Rul. 80-186

ISSUE

Is the transfer, to a related party for nominal consideration, of an option to purchase real property for a specified period a completed gift under section 2511 of the Internal Revenue Code on the date the option is transferred or on the date the option is exercised?

FACTS

On January 2, 1978, A transferred to B, A's child, an option to purchase real property located in State X and owned by A. B paid A $10 upon receipt of the option. Under the option, B had the right to purchase the property at any time during a two-year period for $475,000. The option could be sold or assigned by B. The transfer was not made in the ordinary course of business. The fair market value of the property on the date of the transfer was $500,000.

On January 1, 1980, B exercised the option by delivering to A $475,000. Upon receipt of the option price, A delivered to B a deed transferring the property to B.

Under the law of State X, an option is defined as a contract by which a person acquires from the owner of property, for consideration, the right or privilege to buy property at a fixed price within a specified time, without imposing any obligation on the optionee to do so. While an option to purchase land is property and the optionee gets valuable property rights, the option does not, before exercise, vest in the optionee any interest, estate or title in the land.

State X law further provides that an option supported by consideration may not be withdrawn during the time stipulated, and therefore is binding upon the parties. The fact that only nominal consideration is given for the option does not make it unenforceable. Adequacy of consideration, as measured by the general market, is not a prerequisite to enforcement.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 2501 of the Code imposes a tax on the transfer of property by gift by any individual. The gift tax is not imposed upon the receipt of the property by the donee, nor is it necessarily determined by the measure of enrichment resulting to the donee at the time of the transfer. The tax is a primary and personal liability of the donor, is an excise upon his act of making the transfer, is measured by the value of the property passing from the donor, and attaches at the time the property passes, regardless of the fact that the identity of the donee may not then be known or ascertainable. Section 25.2511-2(a) of the Gift Tax Regulations.

The gift tax is aimed at every kind of transfer by way of gift, whether the gift is direct or indirect, and whether the property is real or personal, tangible or intangible. Section 25.2511-1 (a) of the regulations. The term property is used in its broadest and most comprehensive sense and reaches "every species of right or interest protected by law and having an exchangeable value." H.R. Rep. No. 708, 72d Cong., 1st Sess. 27 (1932); S. Rep. No. 665, 72d Cong., 1st Sess. 39 (1932); both reprinted in 1939-1 C.B. (Part 2) at 476, 524.

Generally, a gift is complete and subject to the gift tax when the donor has so parted with dominion and control over the property transferred as to leave in him no power to change its disposition, whether for his own benefit or for the benefit of another. Section 25.2511-2(b) of the regulations.

Under section 2512(b) of the Code, if property is transferred for less than adequate and full consideration in money or money's worth, the excess of the value of the transferred property over the value of any consideration received is a gift for federal gift tax purposes. Consideration not reducible to a value in money or money's worth, such as love and affection, is to be wholly disregarded for federal gift tax purposes. Section 25.2512-8 of the regulations.

On January 2, 1978, B received an enforceable right to acquire land owned by A provided B exercised the option within two years. A's promise was binding and could not be withdrawn because it was supported by consideration. Although B received no interest or title in the land, the option itself was valuable property that was protected by law, could be transferred, and had an exchangeable value.

The gift was complete and subject to the gift tax on January 2, 1978, the date A transferred the option to B. The amount of the gift is the difference between the fair market value of the option on the date it was given to B and the consideration in money or money's worth paid by B ($10). See Hoffman v. Commissioner, 2 T.C. 1160 (1943), aff'd on other issue, 148 F. 2d 285 (9th Cir.), cert denied, 326 U.S. 730 (1945).

The value of the option is a factual question for determination by the district director on audit of the gift tax return. However, factors to be considered in determining the option's fair market value include the fair market value of the land on the date the option was given, the option price, any potential for appreciation or depreciation during the period, and the time period of the option.

HOLDING

The transfer, to a related party for nominal consideration, of an option to purchase real property for a specified period is a completed gift under section 2511 of the Code on the date the option is transferred if under state law the option is binding and enforceable on the date of transfer.

TER C, PART 31.—EMPLOYMENT TAXES; APPLICABLE ON AND AFTER JANUARY 1, 1955

Changes in the deposit requirements for social security and withheld income taxes

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Final regulations.

SUMMARY: This document contains final regulations relating to the requirements with regard to depositing social security and withheld income taxes. The regulations affect certain employers with undeposited amounts of those taxes, and provide necessary guidance to such employers.

DATES: The regulations are generally effective with respect to wages paid after December 31, 1980. However, the "safe haven" provision for large employers will be effective with respect to wages paid after December 31, 1981.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

On February 8, 1980, the Federal Register published proposed amendments to the Employment Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 31) under section 6302 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (45 FR 8666). The amendments were proposed to balance the administrative burden of the deposit requirements for social security and withheld income taxes against the benefits of more rapid deposits of those taxes. In addition, the amendments were proposed to reduce the administrative burdens for small- and medium-sized employers. After consideration of all comments received in response to the notice of proposed rulemaking and at the public hearing on the proposed amendments which was held on April 16, 1980, those amendments are adopted as modified by this Treasury decision.

EXPLANATION OF PROVISIONS

Section 6302(c) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 authorizes the Secretary to prescribe the manner, times, and other conditions with which employers must comply in depositing social security and withheld income taxes in authorized depositaries. These amendments establish new deposit requirements pursuant to that authorization.

Among the modifications made to the proposed rules after consideration of the public comments received is the reduction to $500 (from the $1,000 level proposed in the notice) in the end-of-month level of accumulated employment taxes which subjects an employee to the monthly deposit requirement. This amendment was made as a result of the concern expressed at the public hearing that the proposal allowing small employers to defer payment of up to $1,000 of accumulated employment taxes until the end of a calendar quarter could cause compliance difficulties for these employers. The rule adopted represents a relaxation of the currently applicable $200 threshold for the monthly deposit requirement. Employers with aggregate taxes of under $500 during a calendar quarter may remit them with their quarterly returns, effective on January 1, 1981.

After review of the comments regarding the difficulties medium-sized employers would face in making monthly deposits of at least 95 percent of the taxes within 7 days after the end of the month, this Treasury decision revises the proposed rule to provide that such employers must deposit the full amount of the undeposited taxes within 15 days after the end of the month. This is generally the same as the presently applicable rule, except that the deposit with respect to the final month of a return period will also be due on the 15th day of the following month rather than, as under current rules, on the last day of the following month.

In view of the generally unfavorable comments on the proposal to permit employers with under $13,000 of employment taxes in each of the 4 preceding calendar quarters to make monthly deposits of such taxes during the current calendar quarter, this provision is not adopted by the Treasury decision. Instead, the Treasury decision eases the deposit requirement for a number of medium-sized employers by providing that those employers with less than $3,000 (instead of the present $2,000) of aggregate taxes with respect to wages paid at the end of a month will, effective on January 1, 1981, be permitted to make a monthly deposit. In lieu of the $13,000 "safe haven", the Treasury decision also provides that most employers who can establish to the Commissioner's satisfaction that they had not been required to make any quarter-monthly or eighth-monthly deposit during the previous 4 calendar quarters or during earlier months of the current quarter may make a monthly deposit for the first month in which they have accumulated $3,000 or more by the end of the month. Such employers thus would not be penalized for failure to make a 3-banking-day deposit for the first month in which they otherwise would be required to comply with the eighth-monthly deposit provision.

After consideration of the adverse comments regarding administrative burdens caused by the acceleration from the present quarterly-monthly deposit schedule to the proposed eighth-monthly deposit schedule, it was determined that the eighth-monthly rule should be adopted but revised to provide that an employer will be required to make a deposit with respect to an eighth-monthly period only when the aggregate undeposited taxes with respect to the period (and any prior eighth-monthly period with respect to which no deposit was made) reaches or exceeds $3,000, thus relaxing the proposed $1,000 rule as well as the currently applicable $2,000 threshold for 3-banking-day deposits. This change will substantially reduce (as compared with the proposed rule) the number of employers who will be required to make more than 4 deposits a month.

In addition, the Treasury decision does not adopt the proposed rule which would have required aggregating any undeposited "safe haven" amount for purposes of determining when the first eighth-monthly deposit after the 15th day of the following month must be made.

A number of commentators criticized the proposal to reduce the "safe haven" for deposits by large employers from 90 percent to 95 percent; this change, they argued, would make even more difficult those employers' task in correctly estimating the amount of deposit required without risking a penalty for an underdeposit. Upon consideration of these comments, it was determined that a 5 percent margin is sufficient for purposes of estimating deposit amounts. Therefore, the Treasury decision adopts the proposed requirement that, effective on January 1, 1982, employers deposit at least 95 percent of the taxes with respect to wages paid during an eighth-monthly period.

A number of commentators expressed confusion regarding whether large employers would be required to make 8 deposits per month, even if they paid their employees less frequently, such as on a weekly or semimonthly schedule. As is the case under the current quarter-monthly deposit requirements, an eighth-monthly deposit will only be required when aggregate taxes with respect to wages actually paid during the eighth-monthly period (and earlier periods with respect to which no deposit was made) equal or exceed the threshold amount. Taxes with respect to wages earned by but not yet paid to employees are not aggregated for purposes of determining the frequency or amount of deposits.

Following is a table which summarizes the rules provided by this decision:

Payment Schedule for Withheld Income Tax and FICA Tax Liabilities
(Effective January 1, 1981)

If the accumulated unpaid liability is:	Then the payment requirement is:
$3,000 or more at end of any eighth-monthly period (eighth-monthly periods end on the 3rd, 7th, 11th, 15th, 19th, 22nd, 25th, and the last day of each month)	Employer must deposit accumulated liability within 3 banking days after close of eighth-monthly period. No penalty imposed provided employer deposits at least 95 percent (90 percent in 1981) of liability within 3 banking days, with remainder paid by specified dates. Exception provided for most first-time 3-banking-day depositors.
$500 or more at the end of any month (unless an eighth-monthly deposit was required during the month pursuant to above rule)	Employer must deposit the accumulated liability by the 15th of the following month.
Less than $500 at the end of the calendar quarter.	Employer must pay the accumulated liability by the end of the following month (the due date of the quarterly return). Liability may be paid with the return or deposited.

Evaluation of the effectiveness of these regulations will be based on comments received from offices within the Treasury and the Internal Revenue Service, other governmental agencies, the Congress, State and local governments, and the public. Although these regulations will impose no new reporting requirement, they may impose additional recordkeeping and administrative burdens for certain large employers due to the acceleration of deposits provided by this Treasury decision.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of these proposed regulations is John A. Tolleris of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department developed the substance of the regulations.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, the following amendments to the regulations are hereby adopted:

Subparagraph (1)(i), (ii), and (iv) of § 31.6302(c)-1(a) is amended to read as follows:

§ 31.6302(c)-1 Use of Government depositaries in connection with taxes under Federal Insurance Contributions Act and income tax withheld.

(a) Requirement—(1) In general. (i) In the case of a calendar month which begins after December 31, 1980—

(a) Except as provided in paragraph (b) of this section and hereinafter in this subdivision (i), if at the close of any calendar month the aggregate amount of undeposited taxes (as defined in subdivision (iii) of this subparagraph) is $500 or more, the employer shall deposit the undeposited taxes in a Federal Reserve bank or authorized financial institution within 15 calendar days after the close of such calendar month. However, this (a) of subdivision (i) shall not apply if the employer was required to make a deposit of taxes pursuant to (b) of this subdivision (i) with respect to an eighth-monthly period which occurred during the calendar month.

(b) Except as provided in paragraph (b) of this section and except in the case of first-time 3-banking-day depositors, if at the close of any eighth-monthly period the aggregate amount of undeposited taxes is $3,000 or more, the employer shall deposit the undeposited taxes in a Federal Reserve bank or authorized financial institution within 3 banking days after the close of such eighth-monthly period.

For purposes of determining the amount of undeposited taxes at the close of an eighth-monthly period, undeposited taxes with respect to wages paid during a prior eighth-monthly period shall not be taken into account if the employer has made a deposit with respect to such prior eighth-monthly period. An employer will be considered to have complied with the requirements of this subdivision (i) (b) for a deposit with respect to the close of an eighth-monthly period if—

(1) His deposit is not less than 95 percent (90 percent before January 1, 1982) of the aggregate amount of the taxes with respect to wages paid during the period for which the deposit is made, and

(2) If such eighth-monthly period occurs in a month other than the last month of a period for which a return is required to be filed (hereinafter in this subparagraph referred to as a return period), he deposits any underpayment with his first deposit which is otherwise required by this subdivision (i) (b) to be made after the 15th day of the following month.

For purposes of this subdivision (i) (b), a "first-time 3-banking-day depositor" is an employer who establishes to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that he was not required (but for this exception) to make a deposit pursuant to this subdivision (i) (b) (or pursuant to subdivision (ii) (b) of this subparagraph) with respect to each period in any preceding month of the current calendar quarter and with respect to each period in the 4 calendar quarters preceding the current calendar quarter. An employer may in no event qualify as a "first-time 3-banking-day depositor" with respect to any eighth-monthly period if the undeposited taxes at the close of that period are $10,000 or more. The excess (if any) of a deposit over the actual taxes for a deposit period shall be applied in order of time to each of the employer's succeeding deposits with respect to the same return period, until exhausted, to the extent that the amount by which the taxes for a subsequent deposit period exceed the deposit for such subsequent deposit period. For purposes of this subdivision (i), "eighth-monthly period" means the first 3 days of a calendar month, the 4th day through the 7th day of a calendar month, the 8th day through the 11th day of a calendar month, the 12th day through the 15th day of a calendar month, the 16th day through the 19th day of a calendar month, the 20th day through the 22nd day of a calendar month, the 23rd day through the 25th day of a calendar month, or the portion of a calendar month following the 25th day of such month.

(ii) In the case of a calendar month which begins after January 31, 1971, and before January 1, 1981—

(a) Except as provided in paragraph (b) of this section and hereinafter in this subdivision (ii), if at the close of any calendar month other than the last month of a period for which a return is required to be filed, the aggregate amount of taxes (as defined in subdivision (iii) of this subparagraph) is $200 or more, the employer shall deposit the undeposited taxes in a Federal Reserve bank or authorized financial institution within 15 days after the close of such calendar month. However, the preceding sentence shall not apply if the employer has made a deposit of taxes pursuant to (b) of this subdivision (ii) with respect to a quarter-monthly period which occurred during such month; or

(b) If at the close of any quarter-monthly period the aggregate amount of undeposited taxes is $2,000 or more, the employer shall deposit the undeposited taxes in a Federal Reserve bank or authorized commercial bank within 3 banking days after the close of such quarter-monthly period. For purposes of determining the amount of undeposited taxes at the close of a quarter-monthly period, undeposited taxes with respect to wages paid during a prior quarter-monthly period shall not be taken into account if the employer has made a deposit with respect to such prior quarter-monthly period. An employer will be considered to have complied with the requirements of this subdivision (ii) (b) for a deposit with respect to the close of a quarter-monthly period if—

(1) His deposit is not less than 90 percent of the aggregate amount of the taxes with respect to wages paid during the period for which the deposit is made, and

(2) If such quarter-monthly period occurs in a month other than the last month of a return period, he deposits any underpayment with his first deposit which is otherwise required by this subdivision (ii) to be made after the 15th day of the following month.

The excess (if any) of a deposit over the actual taxes for a deposit period shall be applied in order of time to each of the employer's succeeding deposits with respect to the same return period, until exhausted, to the extent that the amount by which the taxes for a subsequent deposit period exceed the deposit for such subsequent deposit period. For purposes of this subdivision (ii), "quarter-monthly period" means the first 7 days of a calendar month, the 8th day through the 15th day of a calendar month, the 16th day through the 22nd day of a calendar month, or the portion of a calendar month following the 22nd day of such month.

(iv) If the aggregate amount of taxes reportable on a return (other than a return on Form 942) for a return period exceeds the total amount deposited by the employer pursuant to subdivision (i) or (ii) of this subparagraph for such return period (a) by $500 or more in the case of a return period which ends after December 31, 1980, or (b) by more than $200 in the case of a return period which ends after December 31, 1970, and before January 1, 1981, the employer shall, on or before the last day of the first calendar month following the return period, deposit with a Federal Reserve bank or authorized financial institution an amount equal to the amount by which the taxes reportable on the return exceed the total deposits (if any) made pursuant to subdivision (i) or (ii) of this subparagraph for such period. As used in this subdivision, the term "taxes" shall have the meaning assigned to such term in subdivision (iii) of this subparagraph, except that the term shall include the taxes referred to in (a), (b), and (c) of such subdivision (iii) of this subparagraph with respect to any wages for domestic service in a private home of the employer which the employer elects to report on a quarterly return other than a quarterly return made on Form 942.

This Treasury decision is issued under the authority contained in sections 6302 and 7805 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (68A Stat. 775, 917; 26 U.S.C. §§ 6302, 7805).

JEROME KURTZ,
Commissioner of
Internal Revenue.

Part II. Treaties and Tax Legislation

Subpart B.—Legislation and Related Committee Reports

Public Law 96-249
96th Congress, H.R. 4303 [1]
May 26, 1980

An Act to amend the Food Stamp Act of 1977 to improve food stamp program fiscal accountability through reductions in inaccurate eligibility and benefit determinations; to improve the system of deductions; to increase the specific dollar limitations on appropriations for the fiscal years 1980 and 1981 food stamp programs; and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That this Act may be cited as the "Food Stamp Act Amendments of 1980."

TITLE I—REDUCTION IN FOOD STAMP ERROR AND FRAUD AND REVISION OF DEDUCTIONS

* * * * *

DISCLOSURE PROVISIONS

SEC. 127.(a)(1) Subsection (i) of section 6103 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (relating to disclosure of returns and return information for purposes other than tax administration) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(7) DISCLOSURE OF CERTAIN RETURN INFORMATION BY SOCIAL SECURITY ADMINISTRATION TO DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE AND TO STATE FOOD STAMP AGENCIES.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The Commissioner of Social Security may disclose return information from returns with respect to net earnings from self-employment (as defined in section 1402), wages (as defined in section 3121(a) or 3401(a)), and payments of retirement income which have been disclosed to the Social Security Administration as provided by paragraph (1) or (5) of this subsection—

"(i) upon request, to officers and employees of the Department of Agriculture, and

"(ii) upon written request, to officers and employees of a State food stamp agency.

"(B) RESTRICTION ON DISCLOSURE. —The Commissioner of Social Security shall disclose return information under subparagraph (A) only for purposes of, and to the extent necessary in, determining an individual's eligibility for benefits, or the amounts of benefits, under the food stamp program established under the Food Stamp Act of 1977.

"(C) STATE FOOD STAMP AGENCY. —For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'State food stamp agency' means any agency described in section 3(n)(1) of the Food Stamp Act of 1977 which administers the food stamp program established under such Act.".

(2)(A) Subparagraph (A) of section 6103(p)(3) of such Code (relating to records of inspection and disclosure) is amended by striking out "(l)(1) or (4)(B) or (5)" and inserting in lieu thereof "(l)(1), (4)(B), (5), or (7)".

(B) Paragraph (4) of section 6103 (p) of such Code (relating to safeguards) is amended by striking out "(l)(3) or (6)" in so much of such paragraph as precedes subparagraph (A) thereof and inserting in lieu thereof "(l)(3), (6), or (7)".

(C) Clause (i) of section 6103 (p)(4)(F) of such Code is amended by striking out "(l)(6)" and inserting in lieu thereof "(l)(6) or (7)".

(D) The first sentence of paragraph (2) of section 7213(a) of such Code is amended—

(i) by striking out "or any educational institution" and inserting in lieu thereof "any educational institution, or any State food stamp agency (as defined in section 6103(l)(7)(C))", and

(ii) by striking out "subsection (d), (l)(6), or (m)(4)(B)" and inserting in lieu thereof "subsection (d), (l)(6) or (7), or (m)(4)(B)".

(3) The amendments made by this subsection shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

FOOD STAMP ACT AMENDMENTS OF 1980

FEBRUARY 27, 1980

Mr. FOLEY, from the Committee on Agriculture, submitted the following report together with supplemental views, dissenting views, additional, dissenting views, and separate views to accompany S. 1309.[1]

[68] B. CONTROL OF ERROR AND FRAUD

* * * * *

[101] 7. DEDUCTION OF ERROR AND FRAUD THROUGH COMPUTER MATCHING

* * * * *

[106] d. Present legal barriers

This Committee commenced its efforts to foster computer matching in Public Law 96-58 when it required food stamp recipients to provide social security numbers as a condition for eligibility with the intent of using those numbers in computer matching to compare the income reported by food stamp households against wage and benefit information in the files of the Social Security Administration.

Requiring the social security number was only the first step in achieving that goal. This bill removes other legal barriers to access to the Social Security Administration's files (by way of the necessary social security number) as well as State unemployment compensation files and the files of any other Federal agency with benefit data that could affect the eligibility or benefit levels of a significant part of the food stamp applicant and recipient population.

The legal barriers that need to be lowered or, in some instances, withdrawn entirely, are substantial, appropriately so in light of the privacy considerations involved and the danger of abuse of confidential information for illegitimate purposes by both Federal and State food stamp personnel. The program need for certain information is great, but it must be carefully balanced by the need to protect needy individuals from having their privacy bartered away in order to assuage their hunger. Existing protections should not be reduced without careful consideration and without the substitution of other meaningful safeguards. The Committee's bill attempts to achieve this balanced approach to disclosure of relevant wage and benefit information.

Under present law, tax returns and return information are confidential and generally are not subject to disclosure except as provided in section 6103 of the Internal Revenue Code (hereafter "Code"). Disclosure is permitted, in certain circumstances, to the Social Security Administration, the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, and Federal, State, and local child support enforcement agencies.

Under present law, tax returns and return information are confidential and generally are not subject to disclosure except as provided in section 6103 of the Internal Revenue Code. Disclosure is permitted, in certain circumstances, to the Social Security Administration, the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, and Federal, State, and local child support enforcement agencies.

Upon written request, the Social Security Administration may obtain returns and return information concerning employment taxes for purposes of the administration of the Social Security Act (Code sec. 6103(l)(1)). In addition, copies of annual registration statements of employee benefit plans and related information concerning vested benefits of employees may be furnished to the Social Security Administration. The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare may also receive, upon written request, certain information returns for the purpose of carrying out an effective return processing program (Code sec. 6103 (l)(5)).

Federal, State, and local child support enforcement agencies may receive, upon written request, certain return information with respect to individuals for whom child support obligations are sought to be enforced or established and with respect to individuals to whom support obligations are owing (Code sec. 6103(l)(6)). This return infor-[107]mation may be disclosed only for purposes of, and to the extent necessary in, establishing and collecting child support obligations from, and locating, individuals owing such obligations.

Where disclosure or inspection of return information is permitted under the Code, it is permitted only at the times, in the manner, and at the places prescribed by the Internal Revenue Service. Present law generally requires the IRS to maintain a standardized system of permanent records on the use and disclosure of returns and return information. (Code sec. 6103 (p)(3)). This requirement applies with respect to disclosures made to Federal, State, and local child support enforcement agencies but does not apply in the case of disclosure made to the Social Security Administration or to the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare. In addition to the recordkeeping requirements imposed on the IRS, present law requires each Federal and State agency that receives tax information to maintain, pursuant to Treasury regulations, a standardized system of permanent records on the use and disclosure of that information. Maintaining these records is a prerequisite to obtaining, and continuing to receive, tax information.

Under present law, no tax information may be furnished by the IRS to another agency unless the other agency establishes procedures satisfactory to the IRS for safeguarding the tax information it receives (Code sec. 6103 (p)(4)). Disclosure by the IRS of tax information to other agencies is conditioned upon the recipient maintaining a secure place for storing the information, restricting access to the information to individuals whose duties require access and to whom disclosure is permitted, providing other safeguards necessary to keeping the information confidential, and returning or destroying the information when the agency is finished with it. The IRS is required to review, on a regular basis, the safeguards established by agencies to whom disclosure is made. In the event of unauthorized disclosure by the employees of another agency, the IRS may discontinue disclosure to that agency.

Any unauthorized disclosure of a return or return information is a felony which is punishable by a fine of up to $5,000, imprisonment of up to five years, or both (Code sec. 7213).

e. Safeguards and limitations

The safeguards and limitations contained in section 6103 of the Code with respect to the disclosure of tax returns and return information ought to be applied to similar disclosure in the context of the food stamp program.

The Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives in preparing H.R. 4904, the Social Welfare Reform Amendments Act of 1979, which passed the House on November 7, 1979, extended those safeguards and limitations to such disclosure for purposes of administering the AFDC program by inserting a new section in the Social Security Act containing a cross reference to section 6103 of the Code for provisions relating to the disclosure of return information to State welfare agencies and by amending another section of the Social Security Act to provide that the disclosure of returns or return information transmitted from the Internal Revenue Service to the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare would be permitted only as prescribed under section 6103 of the Code.

[108] To further cement this into law and in light of the express desire of the Internal Revenue Service, repeated in testimony to this Committee by Emil Sunley, Deputy Assistant Secretary of the Treasury for Tax Policy, on October 30, 1979, to "ensure a degree of uniformity in applying confidentiality standards to, and safeguards on, the use of tax data for nontax related purposes" by consolidating "in the tax code all of the rules relating to disclosure of tax information" rather than reverting "to the piecemeal approach to tax disclosure that existed prior to 1976" when Congress performed the consolidation, the welfare reform bill also amended section 6103 of the Code to incorporate this new form of disclosure and thereby subject it to all of the existing uniform safeguards and limitations.

This Committee, unlike the Ways and Means Committee, lacks the jurisdictional authority to amend the Code in order to make the Code's specific provisions applicable to the disclosure of return information, but this Committee intends to make certain insofar as it legally can that the same safeguards and limitations apply. It is the Committee's understanding that the preferable way to handle the matter would be by way of direct amendment to the Code, but, lacking that authority, the Committee notes its confirmed desire to reach the safe objective indirectly, with the hope that the appropriate Committees will propose the necessary accompanying changes in section 6103 of the Code.

Accordingly, this bill would provide that the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare would have to disclose to officers and employees of the Department and to officers and employees of a State welfare agency (the "State agency" within the meaning of section 3(n) of the Act) information with respect to wages, net earnings from self-employment, benefits, and payments of retirement income (the latter two appear to be synonymous, but the former includes any other Federal program benefits, if any, as to which information is available) that is contained in the records of the Social Security Administration, including such information which previously was disclosed to the Social Security Administration (that is the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare or his officers and employees) in the form of information from returns from the Internal Revenue Service's files pursuant to law (that is, under the authority of sections 6103(l)(1) or (5) of the Code).

The safeguards and limitations that would confine this disclosure are multiple and would be made effective by way of regulations promulgated by the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, whom the bill empowers to establish such safeguards as the Secretary determines to be necessary to insure that any information made available is used only for authorized purposes:

(1) The Department's officers and employees would have to make a request in order to obtain the information, which request could be oral as well as written.

(2) The Department's officers and employees, despite a request, could not obtain the information unless their duties required them to have access to such information and unless disclosure legally could be made to them.

(3) The State agency's officers and employees would have to make a written request in order to obtain the information.

[109] (4) The State agency's officers and employees would not be entitled to the requested information unless their duties required them to have access to it and unless disclosure legally could be made to them. This limitation would have to be enforced with particular ease in the case of any tribal organization of an Indian tribe that became the State agency in accordance with the provisions of section 3(n)(2), 4(b), and 11(d) of the Act.

(5) Disclosure could be made only for three purposes and only to the extent necessary to accomplish them—(a) initially determining a household's eligibility to receive food stamps (on the amount thereof) at the point of certification or recertification, (b) auditing a household's eligibility to receive food stamps (and the amount thereof) during quality control or post-certification reviews or in light of reported changes, and (c) verifying any information related to the processes referred to in (a) or (b).

(6) The recordkeeping requirements, safeguard requirements, and penalties for unauthorized disclosure contained in section 6103 of the Code would govern this expanded disclosure through the regulations promulgated by the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare. For example, the Social Security Administration would be required to maintain a permanent system of standardized records on the use and disclosure of tax information permitted to be disclosed under the bill, and the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, the Department, and State agencies would be required to maintain a strict accounting with respect to return information they receive from the Social Security Administration: In addition, the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, the Department, and State agencies would be required to establish procedures satisfactory to the Internal Revenue Service for safeguarding the return information they receive from the Social Security Administration. See 45 C.F.R. § 431.300 et. seq.

The concerns for privacy would, we believe, be more than adequately protected by these safeguards modeled on section 6103 of the Code, and in particular section 6103(p)(4), of restricting access only to people who have legitimate need for the information, of making sure that those persons are thoroughly trained in privacy issues, and of guaranteeing proper physical security with respect to the storage of such sensitive information. The Privacy Act, 5 U.S.C. § 552a, and, in particular, section 552a(b) would be satisfied by these legal limitations.

FOOD STAMP ACT AMENDMENTS OF 1980

May 14, 1980

Mr. Foley, from the committee of conference, submitted the following conference report to accompany S. 1309.[1]

[17] JOINT EXPLANATORY STATEMENT OF THE COMMITTEE OF CONFERENCE

* * * * *

[26] (25) Disclosure provisions

The House amendment required the disclosure of certain income tax information in the files of the Social Security Administration and certain wage and unemployment insurance (UI) information in the records of State UI agencies to the Department and State food stamp agencies only for the purpose of, and to the extent necessary for, determining a person's eligibility for food stamps. The House amendment requires that tax return information be disclosed in accordance with the procedures, conditions and safeguards specified in section 6103 of the Internal Revenue Code. The House amendment, effective January 1, 1983, further provides that as a condition of receipt of its Federal UI administrative grant, each State UI agency would have to make available, under procedures and safeguards to be established by the Secretary of Labor, information in its records pertaining to an individual's wages, home address, UI eligibility, and offers of employment.

Part III. Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous

Delegation Order No. 156 (Rev. 1), Amend. 1 (Effective June 1, 1980)

Authority to Disclose Returns and Return Information to Federal Officers or Employees for Administration on Nontax Federal Criminal Laws

Pursuant to the authority vested in the Commissioner of Internal Revenue by Treasury Department Order No. 150-37, dated March 17, 1955, authority is hereby delegated as follows:

1. The Deputy Commissioner; Assistant Commissioner (Taxpayer Service and Returns Processing); Deputy Assistant Commissioner (Taxpayer Service and Returns Processing); Director, Disclosure Operations Division; Regional Commissioners; District and Service Center Directors; Assistant District and Service Center Directors; Director of International Operations; and Assistant Director of International Operations are authorized:

a. To disclose or in specific instances, authorize the disclosure of returns or taxpayer return information to officers and employees of a Federal agency pursuant to an ex parte order by a Federal district court judge when needed for use in the enforcement of a Federal criminal statute (not involving tax administration), subject to the conditions prescribed in IRC 6103(i)(1) and the Treasury Regulations thereunder. This authority may not be redelegated.

b. To disclose or, in specific instances, authorize the disclosure of return information (other than taxpayer return information) to officers and employees of a Federal agency upon written request by the head of such agency, or in the case of the Department of Justice, the Attorney General, the Deputy Attorney General, or an Assistant Attorney General, when needed for use in the enforcement of a Federal criminal statute (not involving tax administration) subject to the conditions prescribed in IRC 6103(i)(2). This authority may not be redelegated.

2. The Deputy Commissioner; Assistant Commissioner (Taxpayer Service and Returns Processing); Deputy Assistant Commissioner (Taxpayer Service and Returns Processing); Director, Disclosure Operations Division; and Regional Commissioners are authorized:

a. To withhold any return or taxpayer return information pursuant to IRC 6103(i)(1) or (i)(4), upon a determination that such disclosure would identify a confidential informant or seriously impair any civil or criminal tax investigation. This authority may not be redelegated.

b. To withhold return information (other than taxpayer return information), pursuant to IRC 6103(i)(2) or (i)(4), upon a determination that such disclosure would identify a confidential informant or seriously impair any civil or criminal tax investigation. This authority may not be redelegated.

c. To disclose or, in specific instances, authorize the disclosure in writing of return information (other than taxpayer return information), which may constitute evidence of a violation of Federal criminal laws, to the extent necessary to apprise the head of the appropriate Federal agency enforcing such laws, subject to the conditions prescribed in IRC 6103(i)(3). The authority to withhhold return information (other than taxpayer return information), pursuant to IRC 6103(i)(4) upon a determination that such disclosure would identify a confidential informant or seriously impair a civil or criminal tax investigation is also delegated. The authority delegated in this paragraph may be redelegated to Assistant Regional Commissioners (Taxpayer Service and Returns Processing) and Regional Disclosure Officers, but such redelegation shall not extend to the authority to withhold return information (other than taxpayer return information). This authority is in addition to the authority previously delegated in paragraph (1)(g) of Delegation Order No. 156 (Rev. 1) [1979-2 C.B. 485].

3. This Amendment amends paragraphs (6)(b), (c), and (d) of Delegation Order No. 156 (Rev. 1). Delegation Order No. 156 (Rev. 1), issued July 30, 1979, is printed in the Federal Register dated August 1, 1979, Vol. 44, No. 149, Page 45275.

Part IV. Items of General Interest

New Provisions Relative to Jobs Tax Credits

Announcement 80-89

Section 103(a)(6) of the Technical Corrections Act of 1979, Pub. L. 96-222, 1980-20 I.R.B. 5, 12, provides that the new jobs tax credit, which was in effect for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1976, and which expired December 31, 1978, is now elective rather than mandatory. Under the prior law, an employer was required to reduce its wage and salary expense deduction by the amount of the new jobs tax credit, even in situations where the full amount of the credit was not allowable in the current year because of the limitations of section 53 of the Internal Revenue Code. Under section 44B, as now amended, however, employers are allowed to forego the new jobs tax credit and thus take the full wage and salary deduction.

Taxpayers may make a retroactive election not to take the credit and thus not to reduce their deduction, by filing amended returns for any taxable years beginning after December 31, 1976, that include wages paid from January 1, 1977, through December 31, 1978. The amended returns must be filed before expiration of the statute of limitations.

Section 103(a)(6) of the Act also extended through December 31, 1981, the existing targeted jobs tax credit, which was to have expired with respect to wages paid and incurred through December 31, 1980.

Form 3672, Application for Approval of Master or Prototype Defined Contribution Plan for Self-Employed Individuals

Announcement 80-92

Form 3672, Application for Approval of Master or Prototype Defined Contribution Plan for Self-Employed Individuals, has been substantially revised. The expanded format should speed approval of applications for master and prototype plans that use this application by reducing or eliminating the need for follow up contact with applicants.

The revised form (Revised June 1980) should be available in Service offices by the end of July. Applicants are requested to use the new form as soon as it becomes available.

Announcement of the Disbarment, Suspension, or Consent to Voluntary Suspension of Attorneys, Certified Public Accountants, Enrolled Agents and Enrolled Actuaries from Practice before the Internal Revenue Service

Under Section 1026, Title 31 of the United States Code (1970 ed.), the Secretary of the Treasury, after due notice and opportunity for hearing, is authorized to suspend or disbar from practice before the Internal Revenue Service any person who has violated the rules and regulations governing the recognition of attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents or enrolled actuaries to practice before the Internal Revenue Service.

Attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries are prohibited in any Internal Revenue Service matter from directly or indirectly employing, accepting assistance from, being employed by or sharing fees with, any practitioner disbarred or under suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service.

To enable attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries to identify such disbarred or suspended practitioners, the Director of Practice will announce in the Internal Revenue Bulletin the names and addresses of practitioners who have been disbarred or suspended from such practice, their designation as attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, and the date of disbarment or period of suspension. This announcement will appear and will continue to appear in the weekly Bulletins for five successive weeks for each attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary so suspended or disbarred and will later be consolidated and published in the Cumulative Bulletin.

After due notice and opportunity for hearing, the following individual has been disbarred from further practice before the Internal Revenue Service:

Name	Address	Designation	Effective Date
John E. DeSantis	Belmont, CA	Certified Public Accountant	May 12, 1980

Under 31 Code of Federal Regulations, Part 10, an attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, in order to avoid the institution or conclusion of a proceeding for his disbarment or suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, may offer his consent to suspension from such practice. The Director of Practice, in his discretion, may suspend an attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary in accordance with the consent offered.

Attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries are prohibited in any Internal Revenue Service matter from directly or indirectly employing, accepting assistance from, being employed by or sharing fees with, any practitioner disbarred or under suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service.

To enable attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries to identify practitioners under consent suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, the Director of Practice will announce in the Internal Revenue Bulletin the names and addresses of practitioners who have been suspended from such practice, their designation as attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, and the date or period of suspension. This announcement will appear in the weekly Bulletin at the earliest practicable date after such action and will continue to appear in the weekly Bulletins for five successive weeks or for as many weeks as is practicable for each attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary so suspended and will later be consolidated and published in the Cumulative Bulletin.

The following individuals have been placed under consent suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service:

Name	Address	Designation	Term of Suspension
John H. Frazier	Nashville, TN	Certified Public Accountant	Fifteen months effective June 16, 1980
Clifford Y. Pierce	Miami, FL	Certified Public Accountant	Indefinite effective June 13, 1980

Announcement Relating to Proposed Regulations Published With Notice of Proposed Rulemaking

Changes in regulations as announced below have been published in the Federal Register in tentative or proposed form to provide interested parties with an opportunity to file their objections or suggestions for consideration prior to final adoption of such regulations. These announcements will appear in the Bulletin during the period which has been prescribed for the submission and consideration of any views, arguments, or suggestions pertaining to the proposed regulations so published. Statement of such views, arguments or suggestions should be submitted in writing, preferably six copies, to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Attention: CC:LR:T, Washington, D.C. 20224.

INTERNAL REVENUE BULLETIN

The Introduction on page 3 describes the purpose and content of this publication. The weekly Internal Revenue Bulletin is sold on a yearly subscription basis by the Superintendent of Documents. Current subscribers are notified by the Superintendent of Documents when their subscriptions must be renewed.

CUMULATIVE BULLETINS

The contents of the weekly Bulletin are consolidated semiannually into a permanent, indexed, Cumulative Bulletin. These are sold on a single copy basis and are not included as part of the subscription to the Internal Revenue Bulletin. Subscribers to the weekly Bulletin are notified when copies of the Cumulative Bulletin are available. Certain issues of Cumulative Bulletins are out of print and are not available. Persons desiring available Cumulative Bulletins, which are listed on the reverse, may purchase them from the Superintendent of Documents.

BULLETIN INDEX-DIGEST SYSTEM

The Bulletin Index-Digest System (12-78) provides a fast and easy way to research Revenue Rulings, Revenue Procedures, Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and other matters of a permanent nature published in the weekly Internal Revenue Bulletin, or Cumulative Bulletin from 1953 on. It is a comprehensive and up-to-date research tool that requires no filing or other clerical maintenance. The current revision consists of four Services, available on a subscription basis, each including a basic volume that covers the period 1953-1978 and a cumulative supplement covering material published in subsequent Bulletins for the following two-year period. Cumulative supplements are issued quarterly for the Income Tax Service and semiannually for the Estate and Gift, Employment, and Excise Tax Services.

HOW TO ORDER

Check the publications and/or subscription(s) desired on the reverse, complete the order blank, enclose the proper remittance, detach entire page, and mail to the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. Please allow two to six weeks, plus mailing time, for delivery.

Rev. Rul. 80-187, page 5.
Railway road crossings; investment credit; retirement-replacement depreciation method. Costs for replacement of railway road crossings over railroad tracks are included in the term "section 38 property." The retirement-replacement method of accounting for depreciation of crossings and the charge to expense of replacement costs are not proper.

Rev. Rul. 80-189, page 7.
Parent's stock purchased by subsidiary; basis. The purchase of a parent corporation's stock from its sole shareholder by its subsidiary will not result in a constructive distribution to the parent. The parent's adjusted basis in the subsidiary's stock will remain the same as it was prior to the transaction, and the subsidiary, under section 1012 of the Code, will have a basis in the parent's stock acquired in the transaction equal to the amount paid. Rev. Rul. 69-261 modified.

Rev. Rul. 80-190, page 17.
LIFO; freight-in added to cost of inventory; accounting method. A taxpayer's change in the cost computation of its LIFO inventory to include the cost of freight-in is a change in method of accounting under section 446 of the Code that requires the consent of the Secretary. The exclusion of the cost of freight-in from the cost of inventory does not warrant disallowance of the LIFO election.

Rev. Rul. 80-191, page 18.
Deductions; workmen's compensation. The Service will not follow the decisions of the Court of Appeals in Crescent Wharf and Warehouse Company and Wien Consolidated Airlines, Inc., which held that an employer's liability for workmen's compensation is deductible in the year of an employee's death or injury even if the amount of the liability is contingent upon the occurrence of certain subsequent events; Rev. Rul. 70-262 amplified.

Rev. Rul. 80-203, page 6.
Travel expenses; reimbursement; mileage allowances. With respect to expenses paid or incurred after 1979, mileage allowances not exceeding 20 cents per mile for transportation paid by employers to employees will satisfy the subtantiation and adequate accounting requirements of sections 1.162-17(b) and 1.274-5 of the regulations; Rev. Rul. 80-62 modified.

Rev. Proc. 80-32, page 27.
Automobile expenses; standard mileage rates. With respect to transportation expenses paid or incurred after 1979, the standard mileage rate for the optional, simplified method of computing deductible costs of operating passenger automobiles for business purposes is 20 cents per mile for the first 15,000 miles and 11 cents per mile for any excess over 15,000 miles each year. The standard mileage rate for charitable, medical, or moving expenses purposes is 9 cents per mile. Rev. Proc. 80-7 modified.

Department of the Treasury
Internal Revenue Service

Statement of Principles of Internal Revenue Tax Administration

The function of the Internal Revenue Service is to administer the Internal Revenue Code. Tax policy for raising revenue is determined by Congress.

With this in mind, it is the duty of the Service to carry out that policy by correctly applying the laws enacted by Congress; to determine the reasonable meaning of various Code provisions in light of the Congressional purpose in enacting them; and to perform this work in a fair and impartial manner, with neither a government nor a taxpayer point of view.

At the heart of administration is interpretation of the Code. It is the responsibility of each person in the Service, charged with the duty of interpreting the law, to try to find the true meaning of the statutory provision and not to adopt a strained construction in the belief that he is "protecting the revenue." The revenue is properly protected only when we ascertain and apply the true meaning of the statute.

The Service also has the responsibility of applying and administering the law in a reasonable, practical manner. Issues should only be raised by examining officers when they have merit, never arbitrarily or for trading purposes. At the same time, the examining officer should never hesitate to raise a meritorious issue. It is also important that care be exercised not to raise an issue or to ask a court to adopt a position inconsistent with an established Service position.

Administration should be both reasonable and vigorous. It should be conducted with as little delay as possible and with great courtesy and considerateness. It should never try to overreach, and should be reasonable within the bounds of law and sound administration. It should, however, be vigorous in requiring compliance with law and it should be relentless in its attack on unreal tax devices and fraud.

Introduction

The Internal Revenue Bulletin is the authoritative instrument of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for announcing official rulings and procedures of the Internal Revenue Service and for publishing Treasury Decisions, Executive Orders, Tax Conventions, legislation, court decisions, and other items of general interest. It is published weekly and may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. Bulletin contents of a permanent nature are consolidated semiannually into Cumulative Bulletins, which are sold on a single-copy basis.

It is the policy of the Service to publish in the Bulletin all substantive rulings necessary to promote a uniform application of the tax laws, including all rulings that supersede, revoke, modify, or amend any of those previously published in the Bulletin. All published rulings apply retroactively unless otherwise indicated. Procedures relating solely to matters of internal management are not published; however, statements of internal practices and procedures that affect the rights and duties of taxpayers are published.

Revenue rulings represent the conclusions of the Service on the application of the law to the pivotal facts stated in the revenue ruling. In those based on positions taken in rulings to taxpayers or technical advice to Service field offices, identifying details and information of a confidential nature are deleted to prevent unwarranted invasions of privacy and to comply with statutory requirements.

Rulings and procedures reported in the Bulletin do not have the force and effect of Treasury Department Regulations, but they may be used as precedents. Unpublished rulings will not be relied on, used, or cited as precedents by Service personnel in the disposition of other cases. In applying published rulings and procedures, the effect of subsequent legislation, regulations, court decisions, rulings, and procedures must be considered, and Service personnel and others concerned are cautioned against reaching the same conclusions in other cases unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same.

The Bulletin is divided into four parts as follows:

Part I.—1954 Code.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

Part II.—Treaties and Tax Legislation.

This part is divided into two subparts as follows: Subpart A, Tax Conventions, and Subpart B, Legislation and Related Committee Reports.

Part III.—Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous.

To the extent practicable, pertinent cross references to these subjects are contained in the other Parts and Subparts.

Part IV.—Items of General Interest.

With the exception of the disbarment and suspension list included in this part, none of these announcements is consolidated in the Cumulative Bulletins.

The first Bulletin for each month includes an index for the matters published during the preceding month. These monthly indexes are cumulated on a quarterly and semiannual basis, and are published in the first Bulletin of the succeeding quarterly and semi-annual period, respectively.

The Bulletin Index-Digest System, a research and reference service supplementing the Bulletin, may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. It consists of four Services: Service No. 1, Income Tax; Service No. 2, Estate and Gift Taxes; Service No. 3, Employment Taxes; Service No. 4, Excise Taxes. Each Service consists of a basic volume and a cumulative supplement that provide (1) finding lists of items published in the Bulletin, (2) digests of revenue rulings, revenue procedures, and other published items, and (3) topical indexes of Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and Tax Conventions.

The contents of this publication are not copyrighted and may be reprinted freely. A citation of the Internal Revenue Bulletin as the source would be appropriate.

For sale by the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. Prices: Domestic—$2.00 a single copy, $55.00 a year subscription; Foreign—$2.50 a single copy, $68.75 a year subscription.

26 CFR 1.48-1: Definition of section 38 property.
(Also Sections 167, 263; 1.167(a)-1, 1.263(a)-1.)

Railway road crossings; investment credit; retirement-replacement depreciation method. Costs for replacement of railway road crossings over railroad tracks are included in the term "section 38 property." The retirement-replacement method of accounting for depreciation of crossings and the charge to expense of replacement costs are not proper.

Rev. Rul. 80-187

ISSUES

(1) Whether, under the circumstances described below, the term "section 38 property" includes the material and installation costs for replacement of private and public railway road crossings over the taxpayer's railroad tracks.

(2) Whether, for federal income tax purposes, it is proper to use the retirement-replacement method of accounting for depreciation of crossings and charge such replacement costs to expense.

FACTS

The material and installation costs at issue are for replacement of railway road crossings (in Interstate Commerce Commission (ICC) capital accounts 2½ and 39) that are paid for by the taxpayer, and involve items such as wooden planking laid parallel to the track, hardware, and paving or fill material directly adjacent to the track. The area inside of and surrounding the track is built up so that automobiles and other vehicles, including railroad work equipment, can cross the track and so that trains can operate through the crossings.

For book purposes, the replacement costs of these road crossing assets are capitalized and ratably depreciated. Retirements are charged to the depreciation reserve.

For tax purposes, the taxpayer has treated the initial costs of these road crossing assets as capital costs subject to recovery upon retirement without replacement. However, when such capitalized assets are replaced (retired for books), the costs of replacement have been currently expensed. Thus, the taxpayer has been using the same retirement-replacement method of accounting for depreciation of its crossings in ICC capital accounts 2½ and 39 that it uses for depreciation of its railroad track in ICC capital accounts 8, 9, 10, 11, and 12, on which investment credit is allowable for costs of replacement track materials and their installation under section 48(a)(9) of the Internal Revenue Code.

The average life of the private road crossings is 10 years, and the average life of the public road crossings is 8 years. The present trend in the industry is to eliminate road crossings at grade with underpasses and overpasses.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 48(a)(9) of the Code, which was enacted by the Revenue Act of 1971, Pub. L. 92-178, 1972-1 C.B. 443, provides that section 38 property includes material for track on which the retirement-replacement method of accounting for depreciation is used. Replacements include the costs of rail, ties, ballast, other track materials, and their related installation costs.

Section 167(a) of the Code provides the general rule that there shall be allowed as a depreciation deduction a reasonable allowance for the exhaustion, wear and tear, and obsolescence of property used in the trade or business or of property held for the production of income.

Section 263(a) of the Code provides the general rule that no deduction shall be allowed for any amount paid out for permanent improvements or betterments made to increase the value of any property, or for any amount expended in restoring property or making good the exhaustion thereof for which an allowance is or has been made.

Section 1.48-1(a) of the Income Tax Regulations provides the general rule that "section 38 property" means property (1) on which depreciation is allowable to the taxpayer, (2) that has an estimated useful life of 3 years or more, and (3) that is tangible personal property or other tangible property (excluding buildings and structural components) used as an integral part of furnishing transportation.

The road crossings are permanent improvements under section 263(a) of the Code for which ratable depreciation deductions are allowable under section 167(a). Their use as integral parts of furnishing transportation by allowing trains to operate through and vehicles to cross over the tracks qualify them as section 38 property eligible for the investment tax credit under section 1.48-1(a) of the regulations.

Rev. Rul. 78-199, 1978-1 C.B. 66, provides that the entire track structure of a railroad, including the main line, branch lines, spurs, and sidings, constitutes one unit of property for purposes of computing depreciation under the retirement-replacement method since the economic value of one element of the structure lies only on its relationship to the use of another or other elements of the structure as a whole. This single unit of property concept supports the underlying theory of the retirement-replacement method that the charges to expense on account of all track items retired or replaced in any particular year are taken as a rough equivalent of what would be a proper depreciation allowance for all the working track assets of the taxpayer for that year. Section 48(a)(9) of the Code recognizes the peculiarity of the retirement-replacement method for track.

Although the crossings are within and around the track at specific locations, and provide the necessary means for vehicles to cross over the track and allow trains to operate through them, they are not track nor accounted for as part of the track structure, which is accounted for in ICC capital accounts 8, 9, 10, 11, and 12. Each crossing is a distinct unit of property having a determinable useful life while the entire track structure of a railroad, including the main line, branch line, spurs and sidings, is treated as a unit of property having an indeterminate life under the retirement-replacement method of accounting for depreciation. Accordingly, deduction of replacement costs of crossings is not proper because the crossings are distinct units of property and have determinable useful lives over which ratable deductions may be taken annually.

HOLDINGS

(1) The term "section 38 property" includes the material and installation costs for replacement of private and public railroad road crossings over the taxpayer's railroad tracks.

(2) For federal income tax purposes, it is not proper to use the retirement-replacement method of accounting for depreciation of crossings and charge their replacement costs to expense. Such costs must be capitalized and depreciated over the useful lives of the crossings.

Section 274.—Disallowance of Certain Entertainment, Etc., Expenses

26 CFR 1.274-5: Substantiation requirements.
(Also Section 162; 1.162-17.)

Travel expenses; reimbursement; mileage allowances. With respect to expenses paid or incurred after 1979, mileage allowances not exceeding 20 cents per mile for transportation paid by employers to employees will satisfy the substantiation and adequate accounting requirements of sections 1.162-17(b) and 1.274-5 of the regulations; Rev. Rul. 80-62 modified.

Rev. Rul. 80-203

This revenue ruling modifies Rev. Rul. 80-62, 1980-8 I.R.B. 9, with respect to the mileage allowance for transportation paid by employers to employees.

The sixth paragraph of Rev. Rul. 80-62 is amended to read as follows:

If a fixed mileage allowance not exceeding 20 cents per mile is used by an employer in payment of an employee's ordinary and necessary expenses of transportation while traveling away from home and the elements of time, place, and business purpose of the travel are substantiated in accordance with paragraphs (b)(2) and (c) (other than subparagraph (2)(iii)(a) thereof) of section 1.274-5 of the regulations, such an allowance shall be deemed as satisfying with respect to such travel amounts, the substantiation requirements of section 1.274-5 (c) and the adequate accounting requirements of section 1.274-5(e). Also, if an employer grants an allowance not exceeding 20 cents per mile to an employee for ordinary and necessary transportation expenses not involving travel away from home, such an arrangement shall be considered to be an accounting to the employer within the meaning of section 1.162-17(b). However, an employer may grant an additional allowance for parking fees and tolls attributable to the traveling and transportation expenses as separate items.

This amendment is effective with respect to expenses paid or incurred after December 31, 1979.

Rev. Rul. 69-261 modified.

Rev. Rul. 80-189

ISSUE

Whether a parent corporation is in receipt of a constructive distribution from its subsidiary when the subsidiary purchases the parent's stock from a third party.

FACTS, LAW, AND ANALYSIS

In Rev. Rul. 69-261, 1969-1 C.B. 94, S corporation purchased for cash some of the stock of P corporation, its sole shareholder, from a third party, A, the sole shareholder of P. Section 304(a)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code provides that, for purposes of sections 302 and 303, if in return for property, a subsidiary acquires stock of its parent from a shareholder of the parent, such property will be treated as a distribution in redemption of the stock of the parent. Section 304(b)(2)(B) provides that in such a case, the determination of the amount that is a dividend will be made as if the property were distributed by the subsidiary to the parent and immediately thereafter distributed by the parent. Rev. Rul. 69-261 holds that the amount received by A is a constructive dividend to A.

Rev. Rul. 69-261 further holds that the amount deemed distributed by S to P, by operation of section 304(b)(2)(B) of the Code, is a constructive dividend to P under section 301. This position was sustained by the United States Tax Court in Union Bankers Insurance Co. v. Commissioner, 64 T.C. 807 (1975), and by the United States District Court in Broadview Lumber Co. v. United States, Civil Nos. 73 F 104, 105 (N.D. Ind., Oct. 15, 1975). However, the Tax Court reversed its position in the case of Webb v. Commisioner, 67 T.C. 293 (1976), aff'd per curiam, 572 F.2d 135 (5th Cir. 1978), reasoning that section 304(b)(2)(B) is directed only toward adjusting the earnings and profits of the parent for the purpose of determining the amount that is a dividend to the shareholder, and has nothing to do with determining the parent corporation's income. Later, the Tax Court in Virginia Materials Corp. v. Commissioner, 67 T.C. 372 (1976), aff'd without opinion (4th Cir., June 20, 1978) reached a similar decision. Further, the District Court in Broadview Lumber was reversed on this issue on appeal, 561 F.2d 698 (7th Cir., 1977).

HOLDING

The Internal Revenue Service will follow the decisions in Webb, Broadview Lumber, and Virginia Materials on this issue. Consequently, P is not in receipt of a constructive distribution from S when S purchases P's stock from a third party.

P's adjusted basis in S's stock will remain the same as it was prior to the transaction, and S, under section 1012 of the Code, will have a basis in P's stock acquired in the transaction equal to the amount paid therefor.

EFFECT ON OTHER REVENUE RULINGS

Rev. Rul. 69-261 is modified to the extent that it holds that P is in receipt of a constructive dividend by operation of section 304(b)(2)(B).

TITLE 26.—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER I, SUBCHAPTER A, PART 1.—INCOME TAX; TAXABLE YEARS BEGINNING AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1953

Elapsed time method of crediting service of employees under qualified plans

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Final regulations.

SUMMARY: This document provides final regulations relating to the elapsed time method of crediting service of employees under qualified plans. Changes in the applicable tax law were made by the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 [Pub. L. 93-406, 1974-3 C.B. 1]. These regulations provide necessary guidance to the public for compliance with the law, and affect all qualified plans which elect to use the elapsed time method of crediting service of employees.

DATE: The regulations have varying effective dates, the earliest of which, for plans not in existence on January 1, 1974, is plan years beginning after September 2, 1974.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

On December 28, 1976, the Department of Labor published in the Federal Register a proposed amendment to the Minimum Standards for Employee Pension Benefit Plans (29 CFR § 2530.200b-9) under sections 202, 203, and 204 of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA) (88 Stat. 853). Section 2530.200b-9 was published both as a temporary regulation effective immediately, and as a proposed regulation on which public comments were solicited.

Section 101 of the Reorganization Plan No. 4 of 1978 (43 FR 47713) transferred jurisdiction over the subject matter of this regulation from the Secretary of Labor to the Secretary of the Treasury.

Section 106 of the Reorganization Plan requires that the Secretary of the Treasury notify the Secretary of Labor before any regulations are issued on certain subject matters, listed therein, if the regulations would significantly impact on or substantially affect collectively bargained plans. This Treasury decision affects sections 410(a)(3) and 411(a)(5) and (6) of the Code, which are subject matters listed in section 106. The Secretary of the Treasury is also prohibited from issuing such regulations unless, within 100 calendar days after this notice is given, the Secretary of Labor certifies that he has no objection or fails to respond. These requirements of section 106 have been satisfied.

Although numerous comments were submitted on this regulation, a public hearing was neither requested nor held. After consideration of all the comments submitted regarding the proposed amendment, the amendment is adopted as revised by this Treasury decision.

OVERVIEW

The elapsed time method is an alternative method of crediting the service of employees for purposes of determining eligibility to participate, vesting, and benefit accrual. Under the elapsed time method, the amount of service to be credited to an individual is not determined by the number of hours worked in a particular year, but rather, with reference to the total period of time which elapses while that individual is employed by the employer or employers maintaining the plan. Accordingly, the rules regarding breaks in service contained in Code sections 410(a)(5) and 411(a)(6) are recast in this regulation in a manner compatible with the elapsed time concepts.

TRANSFERS BETWEEN METHODS OF CREDITING SERVICE

Section 1.410(a)-7(f)(1) provides the rules for plans using the general method of crediting service for some classes of employees, and the elapsed time method of crediting service for other classes of employees. This provision has been changed as a result of comments so that employees transferring from the general method class to the elapsed time method class will receive the greater of the credit they would receive under the elapsed time method for the entire year in which the transfer occurs, or the service they were credited with under the general method as of the date of the transfer.

Section 1.410(a)-7(f)(2) provides the rules applicable when an employee transfers from a plan using either the general method of crediting service or the elapsed time method, to a plan using the other method. This provision has been changed as a result of comments so that an employee's service required to be credited under the transferee plan will be determined under the rules for transfers within a plan that uses different methods of crediting service for different classes of employees.

Some of the plans in existence may be required to be amended to conform with the new rules of the final regulations. Those plans which may have to be amended are those which use the elapsed time method for crediting the service of some classes of employees and the general method for other classes. Also such plans are required to be amended only if they provide for partial years of service for purposes of benefit accrual.

Because the changes in the final regulations may require plan amendments, a transitional rule is provided for the provisions of paragraph (f) of § 1.410(a)-7. For plans in existence on June 17, 1980, the provisions of paragraph (f) apply to plan years beginning after December 31, 1983.

MISCELLANEOUS

Certain changes of a clerical nature and for the purpose of clarity are made in these final regulations. No substantive change is intended by the deletion in the final regulations of the citations to the "mirror image" provisions of Title I of ERISA. Also, certain conforming changes to the Income Tax Regulations are made on account of this regulation.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of these regulations is Kirk F. Maldonado of the Employee Plans and Exempt Organizations Division of the Office of the Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing this regulation, both on matters of substance and style.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, the following amendments to the regulations are hereby adopted:

Paragraph 1. Section 1.410(a)-1 is amended by redesignating paragraph (b)(7) and (b)(8) as (b)(8) and (b)(9), respectively, and by adding a new paragraph (b)(7) to read as follows:

§ 1.410(a)-1 Minimum participation standards; general rules.

* * * * *

(b) Organization of regulations relating to minimum participation standards. * * *

(7) Elapsed time. Section 1.410(a)-7 provides rules under section 410 and 411 relating to the elapsed time method of crediting years of service.

* * * * *

Par. 2. Section 1.410(a)-4(b)(1) is revised by deleting "Department of Labor Regulations" and inserting in lieu thereof "§ 1.410(a)-7".

Par. 3. Section 1.410(a)-5(a) is revised by deleting from the second sentence "elapsed time,".

Par. 4. Section 1.410(a)-7 is added at the appropriate place to read as follows:

§ 1.410(a)-7 Elapsed time.

(a) In general—(1) Introduction to elapsed time method of crediting service. (i) 29 CFR § 2530.200b-2 sets forth the general method of crediting service for an employee. The general method is based upon the actual counting of hours of service during the applicable 12-consecutive-month computation period. The equivalencies set forth in 29 CFR § 2530.200b-3 are also methods for crediting hours of service during computation periods. Under the general method and the equivalencies, an employee receives a year's credit (in units of years of service or years of participation) for a computation period during which the employee is credited with a specified number of hours of service. In general, an employee's statutory entitlement with respect to eligibility to participate, vesting and benefit accrual is determined by totalling the number of years' credit to which an employee is entitled.

(ii) Under the alternative method set forth in this section, by contrast, an employee's statutory entitlement with respect to eligibility to participate, vesting and benefit accrual is not based upon the actual completion of a specified number of hours of service during a 12-consecutive-month period. Instead, such entitlement is determined generally with reference to the total period of time which elapses while the employee is employed (i.e., while the employment relationship exists) with the employer or employers maintaining the plan. The alternative method set forth in this section is designed to enable a plan to lessen the administrative burdens associated with the maintenance of records of an employee's hours of service by permitting each employee to be credited with his or her total period of service with the employer or employers maintaining the plan, irrespective of the actual hours of service completed in any 12-consecutive-month period.

(2) Overview of the operation of the elapsed time method. (i) Under the elapsed time method of crediting service, a plan is generally required to take into account the period of time which elapses while the employee is employed (i.e., while the employment relationship exists) with the employer or employers maintaining the plan, regardless of the actual number of hours he or she completes during such period. Under this alternative method of crediting service, an employee's service is required to be taken into account for purposes of eligibility to participate and vesting as of the date he or she first performs an hour of service within the meaning of 29 CFR § 2530.200b-2(a)(1) for the employer or employers maintaining the plan. Service is required to be taken into account for the period of time from the date the employee first performs such an hour of service until the date he or she severs from service with the employer or employers maintaining the plan.

(ii) The date the employee severs from service is the earlier of the date the employee quits, is discharged, retires or dies, or the first anniversary of the date the employee is absent from service for any other reason (e.g., disability, vacation, leave of absence, layoff, etc.). Thus, for example, if an employee quits, the severance from service date is the date the employee quits. On the other hand, if an employee is granted a leave of absence (and if no intervening event occurs), the severance from service date will occur one year after the date the employee was first absent on leave, and this one year of absence is required to be taken into account as service for the employer or employers maintaining the plan. Because the severance from service date occurs on the earlier of two possible dates (i.e., quit, discharge, retirement or death or the first anniversary of an absence from service for any other reason), a quit, discharge, retirement or death within the year after the beginning of an absence for any other reason results in an immediate severance from service. Thus, for example, if an employee dies at the end of a four-week absence resulting from illness, the severance from service date is the date of death, rather than the first anniversary date of the first day of absence for illness.

(iii) In addition, for purposes of eligibility to participate and vesting under the elapsed time method of crediting service, an employee who has severed from service by reason of a quit, discharge or retirement may be entitled to have a period of time of 12 months or less taken into account by the employer or employers maintaining the plan if the employee returns to service within a certain period of time and performs an hour of service within the meaning of 29 CFR § 2530.200b-2(a)(1). In general, the period of time during which the employee must return to service begins on the date the employee severs from service as a result of a quit, discharge or retirement and ends on the first anniversary of such date. However, if the employee is absent for any other reason (e.g., layoff) and then quits, is discharged or retires, the period of time during which the employee may return and receive credit begins on the severance from service date and ends one year after the first day of absence (e.g., first day of layoff). As a result of the operation of these rules, a severance from service (e.g., a quit), or an absence (e.g., layoff) followed by a severance from service, never results in a period of time of more than one year being required to be taken into account after an employee severs from service or is absent from service.

(iv) For purposes of benefit accrual under the elapsed time method of crediting service, an employee is entitled to have his or her service taken into account from the date he or she begins to participate in the plan until the severance from service date. Periods of severance under any circumstances are not required to be taken into account. For example, a participant who is discharged on December 14, 1980 and rehired on October 14, 1981 is not required to be credited with the 10 month period of severance for benefit accrual purposes.

(3) Overview of certain concepts relating to the elapsed time method—(i) In general. The rules with respect to the elapsed time method of crediting service are based on certain concepts which are defined in paragraph (b) of this section. These concepts are applied in the substantive rules contained in paragraphs (c), (d), (e), (f) and (g) of this section. The purpose of this subparagraph is to summarize these concepts.

(ii) Employment commencement date. (A) A concept which is necessary in order to credit service accurately under any service crediting method is the establishment of a starting point for crediting service. The employment commencement date, which is the date on which an employee first performs an hour of service within the meaning of 29 CFR § 2530.200b-2(a)(1) for the employer or employers maintaining the plan, is used to establish the date upon which an employee must begin to receive credit for certain purposes (e.g., eligibility to participate and vesting).

(B) In order to credit accurately an employee's total service with an employer or employers maintaining the plan, a plan also may provide for an "adjusted" employment commencement date (i.e., a recalculation of the employment commencement date to reflect noncreditable periods of severance) or a reemployment commencement date as defined in paragraph (b)(3) of this section. Fundamentally, all three concepts rely upon the performance of an hour of service to provide a starting point for crediting service. One purpose of these three concepts is to enable plans to satisfy the requirements of this section in a variety of ways.

(C) The fundamental rule with respect to these concepts is that any plan provision is permissible so long as it satisfies the minimum standards. Thus, for example, although the rules of this section provide that credit must begin on the employment commencement date, a plan is permitted to "adjust" the employment commencement date to reflect periods of time for which service is not required to be credited. Similarly, a plan may wish to credit service under the elapsed time method as discrete periods of service and provide for a reemployment commencement date. Certain plans may wish to provide for both concepts, although it is not a requirement of this section that plans so provide.

(iii) Severance from service date. Another fundamental concept of the elapsed time method of crediting service is the severance from service date, which is defined as the earlier of the date on which an employee quits, retires, is discharged or dies, or the first anniversary of the first date of absence for any other reason. One purpose of the severance from service date is to provide the endpoint for crediting service under the elapsed time method. As a general proposition, service is credited from the employment commencement date (i.e., the starting point) until the severance from service date (i.e., the endpoint). A complementary purpose of the severance from service date is to establish the starting point for measuring a period of severance from service in order to determine a "break in service" (see paragraph (a)(3)(v) of this section). A third purpose of such date is to establish the starting point for measuring the period of time which may be required to be taken into account under the service spanning rules (see paragraph (a)(3)(vi) of this section).

(iv) Period of service. A third elapsed time concept is the use of the "period of service" rather than the "year of service" in determining service to be taken into account for purposes of eligibility to participate, vesting and benefit accrual. For purposes of eligibility to participate and vesting, the period of service runs from the employment commencement date or reemployment commencement date until the severance from service date. For purposes of benefit accrual, a period of service runs from the date that a participant commences participation under the plan until the severance from service date. Because the endpoint of the period of service is marked by the severance from service date, an employee is credited with the period of time which runs during any absence from service (other than for reason of a quit, retirement, discharge or death) which is 12 months or less. Thus, for example, a three week absence for vacation is taken into account as part of a period of service and does not trigger a severance from service date.

(v) Period of severance. A period of severance begins on the severance from service date and ends when an employee returns to service with the employer or employers maintaining the plan. The purpose of the period of severance is to apply the statutory "break in service" rules to an elapsed time method of crediting service.

(vi) Service spanning. Under the elapsed time method of crediting service, a plan is required to credit periods of service and, under the service spanning rules, certain periods of severance of 12 months or less for purposes of eligibility to participate and vesting. Under the first service spanning rule, if an employee severs from service as a result of quit, discharge or retirement and then returns to service within 12 months, the period of severance is required to be taken into account. Also, a situation may arise in which an employee is absent from service for any reason other than quit, discharge, retirement or death and during the absence a quit, discharge or retirement occurs. The second service spanning rule provides in that set of circumstances that a plan is required to take into account the period of time between the severance from service date (i.e., the date of quit, discharge or retirement) and the first anniversary of the date on which the employee was first absent, if the employee returns to service on or before such first anniversary date.

(4) Organization and applicability. (i) The substantive rules for crediting service under the elapsed time method with respect to eligibility to participate are contained in paragraph (c), the rules with respect to vesting are contained in subparagraph (d), and the rules with respect to benefit accrual are contained in paragraph (e). The format of the rules is designed to enable a plan to use the elapsed time method of crediting service either for all purposes or for any one or combination of purposes under sections 410 and 411. Thus, for example, a plan may credit service for eligibility to participate purposes by the use of the general method of crediting service set forth in 29 CFR § 2530.200b-2 or by the use of any of the equivalencies set forth in 29 CFR § 2530.200b-3, while the plan may credit service for vesting and benefit accrual purposes by the use of the elapsed time method of crediting service.

(ii) A plan using the elapsed time method of crediting service for one or more classifications of employees covered under the plan may use the general method of crediting service set forth in 29 CFR § 2530.200b-2 or any of the equivalencies set forth in 29 CFR § 2530.200b-3 for other classifications of employees, provided that such classifications are reasonable and are consistently applied. Thus, for example, a plan may provide that part-time employees are credited under the general method of crediting service set forth in 29 CFR § 2530.200b-2 and full-time employees are credited under the elapsed time method. A classification, however, will not be deemed to be reasonable or consistently applied if such classification is designed with an intent to preclude an employee or employees from attaining his or her statutory entitlement with respect to eligibility to participate, vesting or benefit accrual. For example, a classification applied so that any full-time employee credited with less than 1,000 hours of service during a given 12-consecutive-month period would be considered part-time and subject to the general method of crediting service rather than the elapsed time method would not be reasonable.

(iii) Notwithstanding paragraph (a)(4)(i) and (ii) of this section, the use of the elapsed time method for some purposes or the use of the elapsed time method for some employees may, under certain circumstances, result in discrimination prohibited under section 401(a)(4), even though the use of the elapsed time method for such purposes, and for such employees, is permitted under this section.

(5) More than one employer plans. For special rules for computing years of service in the case of a plan maintained by more than one employer, see 29 CFR Part 2530 (Department of Labor regulations relating to minimum standards for employee pension benefit plans).

(b) Definitions—(1) Employment commencement date. For purposes of this section, the term "employment commencement date" shall mean the date on which the employee first performs an hour of service within the meaning of 29 CFR § 2530.200b-2(a)(1) for the employer or employers maintaining the plan.

(2) Severance from service date. For purposes of this section, a "severance from service" shall occur on the earlier of—

(i) The date on which an employee quits, retires, is discharged or dies; or

(ii) The first anniversary of the first date of a period in which an employee remains absent from service (with or without pay) with the employer or employers maintaining the plan for any reason other than quit, retirement, discharge or death, such as vacation, holiday, sickness, disability, leave of absence or layoff.

(3) Reemployment commencement date. For purposes of this section, the term "reemployment commencement date" shall mean the first date, following a period of severance from service which is not required to be taken into account under the service spanning rules in paragraphs (c)(2)(iii) and (d)(1)(iii) of this section, on which the employee performs an hour of service within the meaning of 29 CFR § 2530.200b-2(a)(1) for the employer or employers maintaining the plan.

(4) Participation commencement date. For purposes of this section, the term "participation commencement date" shall mean the date a participant first commences participation under the plan.

(5) Period of severance. For purposes of this section, the term "period of severance" shall mean the period of time commencing on the severance from service date and ending on the date on which the employee again performs an hour of service within the meaning of 29 CFR § 2530.200b-2(a)(1) for an employer or employers maintaining the plan.

(6) Period of service—(i) General rule. For purposes of this section, the term "period of service" shall mean a period of service commencing on the employee's employment commencement date or reemployment commencement date, whichever is applicable, and ending on the severance from service date.

(ii) Aggregation rule. Unless a plan provides in some manner for an "adjusted" employment commencement date or similar method of consolidating periods of service, periods of service shall be aggregated unless such periods may be disregarded under section 410(a)(5) or 411(a)(4).

(iii) Other federal law. Nothing in this section shall be construed to alter, amend, modify, invalidate, impair or supersede any law of the United States or any rule or regulation issued under such law. Thus, for example, nothing in this section shall be construed as denying an employee credit for a "period of service" if credit is required by a separate federal law. Furthermore, the nature and extent of such credit shall be determined under such law.

(c) Eligibility to participate—(1) General rule. For purposes of section 410(a)(1)(A), a plan generally may not require as a condition of participation in the plan that an employee complete a period of service with the employer or employers maintaining the plan extending beyond the later of—

(i) The date on which the employee attains the age of 25; or

(ii) The date on which the employee completes a one-year period of service.

See the regulations under section 410(a) (relating to eligibility to participate).

(2) Determination of one-year period of service. (i) For purposes of determining the date on which an employee satisfies the service requirement for initial eligibility to participate under the plan, a plan using the elasped time method of crediting service shall provide that an employee who completes the 1-year period of service requirement on the first anniversary of his employment commencement date satisfies the minimum service requirement as of such date. In the case of an employee who fails to complete a one-year period of service on the first anniversary of his employment commencement date, a plan which does not contain a provision permitted by section 410(a)(5)(D) (rule of parity) shall provide for the aggregation of periods of service so that a one-year period of service shall be completed as of the date the employee completes 12 months of service (30 days are deemed to be a month in the case of the aggregation of fractional months) or 365 days of service.

(ii) For purposes of section 410(a)(1)(B)(i), a "3-year period of service" shall be deemed to be "3 years of service."

(ii) Service spanning rules. In determining a 1-year period of service for purposes of initial eligibility to participate and a period of service for purposes of retention of eligibility to participate, in addition to taking into account an employee's period of service, a plan shall take into account the following periods of severance—

(A) If an employee severs from service by reason of a quit, discharge or retirement and the employee then performs an hour of service within the meaning of 29 CFR § 2530.200b-2(a)(1) within 12 months of the severance from service date, the plan is required to take into account the period of severance; and

(B) Notwithstanding paragraph (c)(2)(iii)(A) of this service, if an employee severs from service by reason of a quit, discharge or retirement during an absence from service of 12 months or less for any reason other than a quit, discharge, retirement or death, and then performs an hour of service within the meaning of 29 CFR § 2530.200b-2(a)(1) within 12 months of the date on which the employee was first absent from service, the plan is required to take into account the period of severance.

(iv) For purposes of determining an employee's retention of eligibility to participate in the plan, a plan shall take into account an employee's entire period of service unless certain periods of service may be disregarded under section 410(a)(5) of the Code.

(v) Example. Employee W, age 31, completed 6 months of service and was laid off. After 2 months of layoff, W quit. Five months later, W returned to service. For purposes of eligibility to participate, W was required to be credited with 13 months of service (8 months of service and 5 months of severance). If, on the other hand, W had not returned to service within the first 10 months of severance (i.e., within 12 months after the first day of layoff), W would be required to be credited with only 8 months of service.

(3) Entry date requirements—(i) General rule. For purposes of section 410(a)(4), it is necessary for a plan to provide that any employee who has satisfied the minimum age and service requirements, and who is otherwise entitled to participate in the plan, commences participation in the plan no later than the earlier of—

(A) The first day of the first plan year beginning after the date on which such employee satisfied such requirements, or

(B) The date six months after the date on which he satisfied such requirements, unless such employee was separated from service before the date referred to in subdivision (i)(A) or (B), whichever is applicable. See the regulations under section (a) (relating to eligibility to participate).

(ii) Separation from service—(A) Definition. For purposes of this section, the term "separated from service" includes a severance from service or an absence from service for any reason other than a quit, discharge, retirement or death, regardless of the duration of such absence. Accordingly, if an employee is laid off for a period of six weeks, the employee shall be deemed to be "separated from service" during such period for purposes of the entry date requirements.

(B) Application. A period of severance which is taken into account under the service spanning rules in paragraph (c)(2)(iii) of this section or an absence of 12 months or less may result in an employee satisfying the plan's minimum service requirement during such period of time. In addition, once an employee satisfies the plan's minimum service requirement, either before or during such period of time, such period of time may contain an entry date applicable to such employee. In the case of an employee whose period of severance is taken into account and such period contains an entry date applicable to the employee, he or she shall be made a participant in the plan (if otherwise eligible) no later than the date on which he or she ended the period of severance. In the case of an employee whose period of absence contains an entry date applicable to such employee, he or she, no later than the date such absence ended, shall be made a participant in the plan (if otherwise eligible) as of the first applicable entry date which occurred during such absence from service.

(iii) Examples. For purposes of the following examples, assume that the plan provides for a minimum age requirement of 25 and a minimum service requirement of one year, and provides for semi-annual entry dates.

(A) Employee A, age 35, worked for 10 months in a job classification covered under the plan, became disabled for nine consecutive months and then returned to service. During the period of absence, A completed a 1-year period of service and passed a semi-annual entry date after satisfying the minimum service requirement. Accordingly, the plan is required to make A a participant no later than his return to service effective as of the applicable entry date.

(B) Employee B, after satisfying the minimum age and service requirements, quit work before the next semi-annual entry date, and then returned to service before incurring a 1-year period of severance, but after such semi-annual entry date. Employee B is entitled to become a participant immediately upon his return to service effective as of the date of his return.

(4) Break in service. For purposes of applying the break in service rules under section 410(a)(5)(B) and (C), the term "1-year period of severance" shall be substituted for the term "1-year break in service." A 1-year period of severance shall be determined on the basis of a 12-consecutive-month period beginning on the severance from service date and ending on the first anniversary of such date, provided that the employee during such 12-consecutive-month period does not perform an hour of service within the meaning of 29 CFR § 2530.200b-2(a)(1) for the employer or employers maintaining the plan.

(5) One-year hold-out—(i) General rule. (A) For purposes of section 410(a)(5)(C), in determining the period of service of an employee who has incurred a 1-year period of severance, a plan may disregard the employee's period of service before such period of severance until the employee completes a 1-year period of service after such period of severance.

(B) Example. Assume that a plan provides for a minimum service requirement of 1 year and provides for semi-annual entry dates, but does not contain the provisions permitted by section 410(a)(5)(D) (relating to the rule of parity). Employee G, age 40, completed a seven-month period of service, quit and then returned to service 15 months later, thereby incurring a 1-year period of severance. After working four months, G was laid off for nine months and then returned to work again. Although the plan may hold employee G out from participation in the plan until the completion of a 1-year period of service after the 1-year (or greater) period of severance, once the 1-year hold-out is completed, the plan is required to provide the employee with such statutory entitlement as arose during the 1-year hold-out. Accordingly, employee G satisfied the 1-year hold-out requirement as of the eighth month of layoff, and G is entitled to become a participant in the plan immediately upon his return to service after the nine-month layoff effective as of the first applicable entry date occurring after the date on which he satisfied the 1-year of service requirement (i.e., the first applicable entry date after the first month of layoff). See the regulations under section 410 (a) (relating to eligibility to participate).

(6) Rule of parity—(i) General rule. For purposes of section 410(a) (5)(D), in the case of a participant who does not have any nonforfeitable right under the plan to his accrued benefit derived from employer contributions and who incurs a 1-year period of severance, a plan, in determining an employee's period of service for purposes of section 410 (a)(1), may disregard his period of service if his latest period of severance equals or exceeds his prior periods of service, whether or not consecutive, completed before such period of severance. See the regulations under section 410(a) (relating to eligibility to participate).

(ii) In determining whether a completely nonvested employee's service may be disregarded under the rule of parity, a plan is not permitted to apply the rule until the employee incurs a 1-year period of severance. Accordingly, a plan may not disregard a period of service of less than one year until an employee has incurred a period of severance of at least one year.

(iii) Example. Assume that a plan provides for a minimum service requirement of one year and provides for the rule of parity. An employee works for three months, quits and then is rehired 10 months later. Such employee is entitled to receive 13 months of credit for purposes of eligibility to participate and vesting (see the service spanning rules). Although the period of severance exceeded the period of service, the three months of service may not be disregarded because no 1-year period of severance occurred.

(d) Vesting—(1) General rule. (i) For purposes of section 411(a)(2), relating to vesting in accrued benefits derived from employer contributions, a plan which determines service to be taken into account on the basis of elapsed time shall provide that an employee is credited with a number of years of service equal to at least the number of whole years of the employee's period of service, whether or not such periods of service were completed consecutively.

(ii) In order to determine the number of whole years of an employee's period of service, a plan shall provide that nonsuccessive periods of service must be aggregated and that less than whole year periods of service (whether or not consecutive) must be aggregated on the basis that 12 months of service (30 days are deemed to be a month in the case of the aggregation of fractional months) or 365 days of service equal a whole year of service.

(iii) Service spanning rules. In determining a participant's period of service for vesting purposes, a plan shall take into account the following periods of severance—

(A) If an employee severs from service by reason of a quit, discharge or retirement and the employee then performs an hour of service within the meaning of 29 CFR §2530.200b-2(a) (1) within 12 months of the severance from service date, the plan is required to take into account the period of severance; and

(B) Notwithstanding paragraph (d)(1)(iii)(A) of this section, if an employee severs from service by reason of a quit, discharge or retirement during an absence from service of 12 months or less for any reason other than a quit, discharge, retirement or death, and then performs an hour of service within the meaning of 29 CFR § 2530.200b-2(a)(1) within 12 months of the date on which the employee was first absent from service, the plan is required to take into account the period of severance.

(iv) For purposes of determining an employee's nonforfeitable percentage of accrued benefits derived from employer contributions, a plan, after calculating an employee's period of service in the manner prescribed in this paragraph, may disregard any remaining less than whole year, 12-month or 365-day period of service. Thus, for example, if a plan provides for the statutory five to fifteen year graded vesting, an employee with a period (or periods) of service which yield 5 whole year periods of service and an additional 321-day period of service is twenty-five percent vested in his or her employer-derived accrued benefits (based solely on the 5 whole year periods of service).

(2) Service which may be disregarded. (i) For purposes of section 411(a)(4), in determining the nonforfeitable percentage of an employee's right to his or her accrued benefits derived from employer contributions, all of an employee's period or periods of service with an employer or employers maintaining the plan shall be taken into account unless such service may be disregarded under paragraph (d)(2) (ii) of this section.

(ii) For purposes of paragraph (d) (2)(i) of this section, the following periods of service may be disregarded—

(A) The period of service completed by an employee before the date on which he attains age 22;

(B) In the case of a plan which requires mandatory employee contributions, the period of service which falls within the period of time to which a particular employee contribution relates, if the employee had the opportunity to make a contribution for such period of time and failed to do so;

(C) The period of service during any period for which the employer did not maintain the plan or a predecessor plan;

(D) The period of service which is not required to be taken into account by reason of a period of severance which constitutes a break in service within the meaning of paragraph (d) (4) of this section;

(E) The period of service completed by an employee prior to January 1, 1971, unless the employee completes a period of service of at least 3 years at any time after December 31, 1970; and

(F) The period of service completed before the first plan year for which this section applies to the plan, if such service would have been disregarded under the plan rules relating to breaks in service in effect at that time.

See the regulations under section 411(a) (relating to vesting).

(3) Seasonal industry. [Reserved.]

(4) Break in service. For purposes of applying the break in service rules, the term "1-year period of severance" shall be substituted for the term "1-year break in service." A 1-year period of severance shall be a 12-consecutive-month period beginning on the severance from service date and ending on the first anniversary of such date, provided that the employee during such 12-consecutive-month period fails to perform an hour of service within the meaning of 29 CFR § 2530.200b-2(a)(1) for an employer or employers maintaining the plan.

(5) One-year hold-out. For purposes of section 411(a)(6)(B), in determining the nonforfeitable percentage of the right to accrued benefits derived from employer contributions of an employee who has incurred a 1-year period of severance, the period of service completed before such period of severance is not required to be taken into account until the employee has completed a 1-year period of service after his return to service. See the regulations under section 411(a) (relating to vesting).

(6) Vesting in pre-break accruals. For purposes of section 411(a)(6)(C), a "1-year period of severance" shall be deemed to constitute a "1-year break in service." See the regulations under section 411(a) (relating to vesting).

(7) Rule of parity—(i) General rule. For purposes of section 411(a)(6)(D), in the case of an employee who is a nonvested participant in employer-derived benefits at the time he incurs a 1-year period of severance, the period of service completed by such participant before such period of severance is not required to be taken into account for purposes of determining the vested percentage of his or her right to employer-derived benefits if at such time the consecutive period of severance equals or exceeds his prior periods of service, whether or not consecutive, completed before such period of severance. See the regulations under section 411(a) (relating to vesting).

(e) Benefit accrual. (1) For purposes of section 411(b), a plan may provide that a participant's service with an employer or employers maintaining the plan shall be determined on the basis of the participant's total period of service beginning on the participation commencement date and ending on the severance from service date.

(2) Under section 411(b)(3)(A), a defined benefit pension plan may determine an employee's service for purposes of benefit accrual on any basis which is reasonable and consistent and which takes into account all service during the employee's participation in the plan which is included in a period of service required to be taken into account under section 410(a)(5) (relating to service which must be taken into account for purposes of determining an employee's eligibility to participate). A plan which provides for the determination of an employee's service with an employer or employers maintaining the plan on the basis permitted under paragraph (e)(1) of this section will be deemed to meet the requirements of section 411(b)(3)(A), provided that the plan meets the requirements of 29 CFR § 2530.204-3, relating to plans which determine an employee's service for purposes of benefit accrual on a basis other than computation periods. Specifically, under 29 CFR § 2530.204-3, it must be possible to prove that, despite the fact that benefit accrual under such a plan is not based on computation periods, the plan's provisions meet at least one of the three benefit accrual rules of section 411(b)(1) under all circumstances. Further, 29 CFR § 2530.204-3 prohibits such a plan from disregarding service under section 411(b)(3)(C) (which would otherwise permit a plan to disregard service performed by an employee during a computation period in which the employee is credited with less than 1,000 hours). See the regulations under section 411(b) (relating to benefit accrual).

(f) Transfers between methods of crediting service—(1) Single plan. A plan may provide that an employee's service for purposes of eligibility to participate, vesting or benefit accrual shall be determined on the basis of computation periods under the general method set forth in 29 CFR § 2530.200b-2 for certain classes of employees but under the alternative method permitted under this section for other classes of employees if the plan provides as follows—

(i) In the case of an employee who transfers from a class of employees whose service is determined on the basis of computation periods to a class of employees whose service is determined on the alternative basis permitted under this section, the employee shall receive credit for a period of service consisting of—

(A) A number of years equal to the number of years of service credited to the employee before the computation period during which the transfer occurs; and

(B) The greater of (1) the period of service that would be credited to the employee under the elapsed time method for his service during the entire computation period in which the transfer occurs, or (2) the service taken into account under the computation periods method as of the date of the transfer.

In addition, the employee shall receive credit for service subsequent to the transfer commencing on the day after the last day of the computation period in which the transfer occurs.

(ii) In the case of an employee who transfers from a class of employees whose service is determined on the alternative basis permitted under this section to a class of employees whose service is determined on the basis of computation periods—

(A) The employee shall receive credit, as of the date of the transfer, for a number of years of service equal to the number of 1-year periods of service credited to the employee as of the date of the transfer, and

(B) The employee shall receive credit, in the computation period which includes the date of the transfer, for a number of hours of service determined by applying one of the equivalencies set forth in 29 CFR § 2530.200b-3(e)(1) to any fractional part of a year credited to the employee under this section as of the date of the transfer. Such equivalency shall be set forth in the plan and shall apply to all similarly situated employees.

(2) More than one plan. In the case of an employee who transfers from a plan using either the general method of determining service on the basis of computation periods set forth in 29 CFR § 2530.200b-2 or the method of determining service permitted under this section to a plan using the other method of determining service, all service required to be credited under the plan to which the employee transfers shall be determined by applying the rules of paragraph (f)(1) of this section.

(g) Amendments to change method of crediting service. A plan may be amended to change the method of crediting service for any purpose or for any class of employees between the general method set forth in 29 CFR § 2530.200b-2 and the method permitted under this section, if such amendment contains provisions under which each employee with respect to whom the method of crediting service is changed is treated in the same manner as an employee who transfers from one class of employees to another under paragraph (f)(1) of this section.

(h) Transitional rule. For plans in existence on June 17, 1980, the provisions of paragraph (f) of this section are effective for plan years beginning after December 31, 1983.

Par. 5. Section 1.411(a)-5(b) is revised by deleting from suparagraphs (1)(iii) and (2) "Department of Labor regulations" and inserting in lieu thereof "§ 1.410(a)-7".

Par. 6. Section 1.411(a)-6(c)(1)(iii) is revised by deleting from the second sentence "Department of Labor Regulations" and inserting in lieu thereof "§ 1.410(a)-7".

This Treasury decision is issued under the authority contained in section 7805 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (68A Stat. 917; 26 U.S.C. 7805).

Section 412.—Minimum Funding Standards

26 CFR 1.412(b)-5: Election of the alternative amortization method of funding.

T.D. 7702

TITLE 26.—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER I, SUBCHAPTER A, PART 1.—INCOME TAX; TAXABLE YEARS BEGINNING AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1953

Election of Alternative Amortization Method of Funding Certain Pension Plans

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Final regulations.

SUMMARY: This document provides final regulations relating to the procedure for electing an alternative amortization method of funding certain pension plans. These regulations implement section 1013(d) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 [Pub. L. 93-406, 1974-3 C.B. 1, 92], and provide necessary guidance to the public for compliance with the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, as amended. The regulations would affect certain multiemployer pension plans which were in existence on January 1, 1974.

DATES: The regulations are effective generally for plan years beginning after 1975, but earlier (or later) in the case of some plans as provided by section 1017 of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

On November 23, 1979, proposed amendments to the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) under section 412 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 were published in the Federal Register (44 FR 67178). The amendments were proposed to conform the regulations to section 1013(d) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA) (Pub. L. 93-406, 88 Stat. 923). One comment concerning the proposed regulations was received. No public hearing was requested or held.

EXPLANATION OF PROVISIONS

Section 412 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, added by section 1013 of ERISA, provides minimum funding requirements with respect to certain pension plans. These requirements include the maintenance of a minimum funding standard account, to which is charged (among other items), in accordance with section 412(b)(2)(B), an amount necessary to amortize in equal annual installments the plan's unfunded past service liability.

With respect to certain multiemployer plans which were in existence on January 1, 1974, section 1013(d) of ERISA allows an election by the plan to fund certain unfunded past service liability on the basis of an equal annual percentage of the aggregate pay of all participants of the plan in lieu of the level dollar charges referred to above. This alternative amortization method applies to the amount of unfunded past service liability which exists as of the date 12 months after the date on which section 412 first applies to the plan.

The regulations prescribe the means by which certain multiemployer plans can elect the alternative amortization method. The multiemployer plans to which this election is available are those plans which (a) on January 1, 1974, had contributions under the plan based on a percentage of pay, (b) have actuarial assumptions with respect to pay which are reasonably related to past and projected experience, and (c) have rate of interest under the plan which are determined on the basis of reasonable actuarial assumptions. The election consists of the attachment of a statement to the annual report required under section 6058(a) for the plan year for which the election is made, stating that the alternative method is being adopted. Advance approval from the Internal Revenue Service is not required. The alternative method must be adopted on or before the deadline for filing the annual report corresponding to the last plan year beginning before January 1, 1982. If the election is made after the first plan year to which section 412 applies, recomputation of the contributions due in the prior years (to which section 412 applied) will be necessary.

COMMENTS ON THE PROPOSED REGULATIONS

The one written comment submitted concerned proposed § 1.412-5(d). That provision construes section 1013 (d)(2) of ERISA, which establishes minimum charges to the funding standard account for a plan year by a plan making the election. Under the proposed regulations, these minimum charges equal the interest on certain past service liabilities, determined as of the date 12 months after the date on which section 412 first applies to the plan.

The comment recommended that the determination of the minimum charges should also take into account additional liabilities generated by plan amendments after the initial 12-month period, and interest thereon. The Treasury Department does not regard this suggestion as a reasonable construction of the statute, as the election provided by section 1013(d)(1) applies only to the unfunded past service liability existing as of the date 12 months after section 412 first became applicable to the plan.

Accordingly, the proposed regulations are adopted without change.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of these regulations is Mr. Russell Greenblatt of the Employee Plans and Exempt Organizations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulations, both on matters of substance and style.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

The following amendments to 26 CFR Part 1 are hereby adopted:

§ 1.412(b)-5 Election of the alternative amortization method of funding.

(a) Alternative amortization method in general. Section 1013(d) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 provides an alternative method which may be used by certain multiemployer plans (as defined in section 414(f)) which were in existence on January 1, 1974, for funding certain unfunded past service liability. The multiemployer plans which may elect to use this alternative method are those plans (1) under which, on January 1, 1974, contributions were based on a percentage of pay, (2) which use actuarial assumptions with respect to pay that are reasonably related to past and projected experience, and (3) which use rates of interest that are determined on the basis of reasonable actuarial assumptions. The unfunded past service liability to which this method applies is that amount existing as of the date 12 months after the date on which section 412 first applies to the plan. The alternative method allows the plan to fund this liability over a period of 40 plan years by charging the funding standard account with an equal annual percentage of the aggregate pay of all participants in the plan instead of the level dollar charges required under section 412 (b)(2)(B). Paragraphs (b), (c), (d) and (e) of this section contain procedural rules for electing this alternative method.

(b) Election procedure. To elect the alternative amortization method, a multiemployer plan must attach a statement to the annual report required under section 6058(a) for the plan year for which the election is made, stating that the alternative method for funding unfunded past service liability is being adopted. Advance approval from the Internal Revenue Service is not required. The alternative method must be adopted on or before the last day prescribed for filing the annual report corresponding to the last plan year beginning before January 1, 1982.

(c) Charges to which the alternative amortization method is applicable. Once elected, the alternative amortization method is applicable to the unfunded past service liability existing as of the date 12 months after the date on which section 412 first applies to the plan. This results in charges to the funding standard account which are in lieu of—

(1) Charges required under clause (i) of section 412(b)(2)(B), and

(2) Charges required under clause (iii) of section 412(b)(2)(B) if the plan amendments referred to in such clause result in a net increase in the unfunded past service liability existing as of the date 12 months after the date on which section 412 first applies to the plan. Such charges generally will arise only with respect to plan amendments adopted in the first plan year to which section 412 applies.

If the election is made on an annual report corresponding to a plan year after the first plan year to which section 412 applies, recomputation of the contributions due in the prior years (to which section 412 applied) will be necessary.

(d) Limitation. The sum of the charges described in this paragraph may not be less than the interest on the unfunded past service liabilities described in section 412(b)(2)(B)(i) and (iii), determined as of the date 12 months after the date on which section 412 first applies to the plan.

(e) Reporting requirements. Each annual report required by section 6058 (a) and periodic report of the actuary required by section 6059 must include all additional information relevant to the use of the alternative amortization method as may be required by the applicable forms and the instructions for such forms.

This Treasury decision is issued under the authority contained in section 7805 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (68A Stat. 917; 26 U.S.C. 7805), and section 1013(d)(1) of ERISA (88 Stat. 923).

Section 446.—General Rule for Methods of Accounting

26 CFR 1.446-1: General rule for methods of accounting.
(Also Sections 471, 472, 481; 1.471-1, 1.472-1, 1.481-1.)

LIFO; freight-in added to cost of inventory; accounting method. A taxpayer's change in the cost computation of its LIFO inventory to include the cost of freight-in is a change in method of accounting under section 446 of the Code that requires the consent of the Secretary. The exclusion of the cost of freight-in from the cost of inventory does not warrant disallowance of the LIFO election.

Rev. Rul. 80-190

ISSUES

(1) Is the taxpayer's change in the cost computation of its last-in, first-out (LIFO) inventory to include the cost of freight-in a change in method of accounting under section 446 of the Internal Revenue Code that requires the advance consent of the Secretary?

(2) Does the taxpayer's exclusion of the cost of freight-in from the cost of its merchandise warrant disallowance or termination of the taxpayer's LIFO election?

FACTS

The taxpayer uses the accrual method of accounting. In 1974, the taxpayer adopted the LIFO inventory method provided in section 472 of the Code. In valuing its inventory at cost, the taxpayer consistently used the purchase price of the merchandise carried on its books, but the taxpayer excluded the cost of freight-in. The taxpayer instead, deducted the amount of freight-in for the taxable year in which it was incurred. In 1979, the taxpayer determined that the cost of freight-in should be included in the cost of its merchandise for purposes of valuing its inventory pursuant to section 1.471-3(b) of the Income Tax Regulations. In 1979, the taxpayer unilaterally changed the manner for determining the value of its inventory to include the cost of freight-in without securing the consent of the Commissioner.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 472(b)(2) of the Code provides that goods inventoried under the last-in, first-out (LIFO) method are inventoried at cost.

Section 1.471-3(b) of the regulations provides that in the case of merchandise purchased since the beginning of the taxable year, cost means the invoice price less trade or other discounts. To this net invoice price should be added transportation charges incurred in acquiring possession of the goods.

Section 446(e) of the Code provides that a taxpayer who changes its method of accounting on the basis of which it regularly computes its income in keeping its books shall secure the consent of the Secretary of the Treasury before computing its taxable income under the new method.

Section 1.446-1(e)(2)(ii)(a) of the regulations provides that a change of accounting method includes a change in the overall plan of accounting for gross income or deductions, as well as a change in any material item within the plan, and a method of accounting is not established for an item unless there is a pattern of consistent treatment. A material item is defined as any item that involves the proper time for the inclusion of the item in income or the taking of a deduction.

Section 1.446-1(e)(2)(ii)(c) of the regulations provides that a change in the treatment of any material item used in an overall plan for identifying or valuing inventory is a change of accounting method.

Rev. Proc. 79-23, 1979-1 C.B. 564, sets forth the types of situations that warrant disallowance or termination of a taxpayer's LIFO election. In addition, in that revenue procedure certain situations have been identified that do not warrant a disallowance or termination of a LIFO election. Section 3.01(c) of Rev. Proc. 79-23 provides that the failure by the taxpayer to value its LIFO inventory at cost for federal income tax purposes, for the year preceding the year of the LIFO election, and all subsequent taxable years may warrant the disallowance or termination of a LIFO election. However, in determining cost for the year of the LIFO election and any subsequent year, the failure to include (or exclude) an item of cost, such as in accordance with the full absorption inventory rules of section 1.471-11 of the regulations, will not warrant disallowance or termination.

Rev. Rul. 77-134, 1977-1 C.B. 132 states that the Internal Revenue Service will not follow the decision in Korn Industries, Inc. v. United States, 532 F.2d 1352 (Ct. Cl 1976). The United States Court of Claims held in that case that the taxpayer's change in its standard cost computation for finished goods to include 14 cost elements, where previously only 11 had been included, was not a change of accounting method but rather the correction of a mathematical or posting error. Rev. Rul. 77-134 holds that in Korn Industries, Inc. the taxpayer has changed its method of accounting under section 446 of the Code and such a change requires the consent of the Secretary.

Rev. Rul. 77-134 also states that if a taxpayer has consistently treated an item of income or expense in a particular manner, any change from that consistent treatment is a change of accounting method regardless of whether the consistent treatment was a proper method of accounting.

In the present situation, the taxpayer's exclusion of an item of cost (freight-in) for purposes of valuing the merchandise in its inventory established a consistent pattern of treating the cost of freight-in and the cost of the merchandise. The freight-in cost that was excluded by the taxpayer prior to 1979 in valuing its inventory is a material item because it involves the proper timing of an item of expense that is used in the overall plan for valuing the taxpayer's inventory.

Freight-in as provided in section 1.471-3 of the regulations is an item of cost. Its inclusion or exclusion in valuing the taxpayer's inventory is another example along with the full absorption rules mentioned in section 3.01(c) of Rev. Proc. 79-23 that will not warrant disallowance or termination of the taxpayer's LIFO election.

HOLDINGS

(1) The taxpayer's change in the cost computation of its LIFO inventory to include the cost of freight-in is a change in method of accounting under section 446 of the Code and the regulations thereunder, and such a change requires the consent of the Secretary. See section 1.446-1(e) of the regulations. When the Commissioner approves a change in method of accounting, both the opening and closing inventory in the year of change are placed on the new method. To the extent the opening inventory in the year of change exceeds the closing inventory at the end of the year preceding the year of change, there is an adjustment under section 481 solely by reason of the change to prevent an amount from being duplicated. The section 481 adjustment is taken into account in determining taxable income in the manner determined by the Commissioner in accordance with Rev. Proc. 70-27, 1970-2 C.B. 509, as clarified by Rev. Proc. 75-18, 1975-1 C.B. 687.

(2) The taxpayer's exclusion of the cost of freight-in from the cost of its merchandise alone does not warrant the disallowance or termination of the taxpayer's LIFO election.

Section 461.—General Rule for Taxable Year of Deduction

26 CFR 1.461-1: General rule for taxable year of deduction.

Deductions; workmen's compensation. The Service will not follow the decisions of the Court of Appeals in Crescent Wharf and Warehouse Company and Wien Consolidated Airlines, Inc., which held that an employer's liability for workmen's compensation is deductible in the year of an employee's death or injury even if the amount of the liability is contingent upon the occurrence of certain subsequent events; Rev. Rul. 70-262 amplified.

Rev. Rul. 80-191

ISSUE

Whether the Internal Revenue Service will follow the decisions of the United States Court of Appeals for the 9th Circuit in Crescent Wharf and Warehouses Company v. Commissioner, 518 F.2d 772 (9th Cir. 1975), rev'g and rem'g 59 T.C. 751 (1973), and Wien Consolidated Airlines, Inc. v. Commissioner, 528 F.2d 735 (9th Cir. 1976), aff'g 60 T.C. 13 (1973), nonacq., 1978-1 C.B. 3, with regard to when workmen's compensation expenses are deductible.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

In Crescent the taxpayer-employer was required to compensate its employees for certain injuries suffered by them in the course of their employment. One of the elements of the taxpayer's liability was the cost of necessary medical treatment. Another element of liability was compensation for disability. The taxpayer treated the liability as fixed when an employee was injured and accrued (deducted) the estimated cost of medical treatment and disability compensation. The court held that the deduction was allowable at this time if the amount could be determined with reasonable accuracy.

In Wien, which involved the same situation considered in Rev. Rul. 70-262, 1970-1 C.B. 122, the taxpayer-employer was liable for workmen's compensation benefits to spouses and minor children of employees killed in the course of their employment. The spouse was entitled to payments until death or remarriage, the children until death or their nineteenth birthday. The taxpayer accrued (deducted) the total amounts estimated to be payable when an employee was killed, rather than deducting each year only the amounts that actually became due. The court held, contrary to Rev. Rul. 70-262, that deduction for the children's benefits was allowable, but that deduction for the spouse's benefits was not determinable with reasonable accuracy and therefore not allowable.

The Supreme Court of the United States in Brown v. Helvering, 291 U.S. 193 (1934), Ct. D. 786, XIII-1 C.B. 223 (1934), dealt with the question of whether an insurance agent that uses the accrual method of accounting to report commission income on premiums for multi-year insurance contracts written in the taxable year can claim a current deduction on account of contract cancellations expected to occur in later years. The taxpayer computed the ratio of cancellations to premiums based on its experience for the 5-year period preceding the taxable year and used that ratio as the basis for the current deduction. The Court rejected this basis for claiming a deduction by an accrual basis taxpayer because the liability of the taxpayer for expected future cancellations was not fixed and absolute. In respect to no particular policy written within the year could it be known that it would be cancelled in a future year. Nor could it be known that a definite percentage of all the policies would be cancelled in the future years. The event necessary to create a liability was a cancellation, not the premium payment, and since the cancellation was not certain to occur, the liability was contingent. If a liability is contingent, the expense that it represents cannot accrue and a deduction therefor is not allowable.

The 9th Circuit in the Crescent and Wien decisions did not follow the Brown holding that a contingent liability does not generate an accruable expense even though the amount of such expense is determinable in the aggregate with reasonable accuracy.

In Crescent, the taxpayer-employer was liable for the cost of medical treatment only if medical treatment was received by an employee. If the employee never received treatment, the mere fact of injury would not be enough to establish liability. Similarly, the taxpayer was liable for disability payments only if the employee was absent from work for a required period.

In Wien, the taxpayer was liable to the spouse of an employee for death benefits only if (1) the spouse was alive, and (2) the spouse had not remarried. Each condition had to be satisfied for each taxable year in order for the taxpayer to be liable for that year. The fact, alone, of the employee's death would not be enough to establish liability, since if the spouse remarries or dies, the employer will clearly not be liable for further benefits. Similarly, the taxpayer was liable to a child of an employee for death benefits only if the child was alive.

HOLDING

The Service will not follow Crescent and Wien and will continue to disallow deductions for workmen's compensation expenses that are not based on a fixed liability.

Tread rubber; credit or refund; intercity, local, or school buses. The credit or refund provided by section 6416(b)(2)(M) of the Code is available to a tread rubber manufacturer who sells tread rubber tax-paid to its franchised retail dealers for use in retreading or recapping tires that are used by their customers on intercity, local, or school buses.

Rev. Rul. 80-192

ISSUE

Is a credit or refund of the manufacturers excise tax on tread rubber available under the circumstances described below?

FACTS

A manufacturer of tread rubber sells tread rubber tax-paid to its franchised retail dealers. The dealers use the tread rubber in retreading or recapping tires they intend to sell and also in retreading or recapping customer-owned tires. In either instance many of the retreaded tires are used by the dealers' customers on intercity, local, or school buses as defined in section 4221(d)(7) of the Internal Revenue Code.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 4071(a)(4) of the Code imposes a tax on tread rubber sold by the manufacturer, producer or importer. Under section 4221(e)(5)(B), as amended by the Energy Tax Act of 1978, Pub. L. 95-618, section 233, 1978-3 C.B. (Vol. 2) 1, 16, the tax on tread rubber does not apply where it is sold for use by the purchaser in the recapping or retreading of any tire to be used by the purchaser on or in connection with a qualified bus as defined in section 4221(d)(7).

Under section 6416(b)(2)(M) of the Code, as amended by the Energy Tax Act, a credit or refund is available in the case of tax-paid tread rubber used in the recapping or retreading of a tire sold to any person for use on or in connection with a qualified bus. This credit or refund is available provided the conditions to allowance set forth in section 6416 (a) have been satisfied.

It was the intention of Congress to remove the excise tax from tread rubber and other taxable articles that are used in private intercity, local, and school bus operations. See Senate Report No. 95-529, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. (1978), 1978-3 C.B. (Vol. 2) 199, 247, accompanying the Energy Tax Act. By enacting the credit or refund provision as well as the tax-free sale provision, Congress ensured tax relief wherever the ultimate use of tread rubber is in the recapping or retreading of a tire that is used on any intercity, local, or school bus. The fact that there may be an intervening party between the tread rubber manufacturer and the bus operator who uses the retreaded tires does not preclude the availability of the credit or refund. However, the credit or refund must be claimed by the tread rubber manufacturer, who paid the tax, rather than by the retreader or bus operator.

HOLDING

The credit or refund provided by section 6416(b)(2)(M) of the Code is available to the tread rubber manufacturer under the above circumstances, provided the conditions to allowances set forth in 6416(a) have been satisfied.

Section 7214.—Offenses by Officers and Employees of the United States

Ct. D. 2000

SUPREME COURT OF THE
UNITED STATES
No. 79-383

F. W. Standefer, Petitioner,
v. United States

[447 U.S.]

On Writ of Certiorari to the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit

[June 9, 1980]

Syllabus

No. 79-383. Argued April 14, 1980—
Decided June 9, 1980

Petitioner was indicted for, inter alia, aiding and abetting a named Internal Revenue Service agent in accepting unlawful compensation, in violation of 26 U.S.C. § 7214(a)(2) and 18 U.S.C. § 2, which provides that whoever commits an offense against the United States or aids, abets, counsels, commands, induces or procures its commission, is punishable as a principal. Prior to the indictment, the IRS agent was acquitted of certain of the § 7214(a)(2) violations which petitioner was accused of aiding and abetting. Petitioner moved to dismiss his indictment as to aiding and abetting these violations on the ground that since the agent had been acquitted of such violations, petitioner could not be convicted of aiding and abetting them. The District Court denied the motion, and after trial petitioner was convicted. The Court of Appeals affirmed.

Held: A defendant accused of aiding and abetting in the commission of a federal offense may properly be convicted despite the prior acquittal of the alleged actual perpetrator of the offense.

(a) Read against its common-law background, 18 U.S.C. § 2 evinces a clear congressional intent to permit such a conviction. The section gives general effect to what had always been a common-law rule for second-degree principals (principals who were actually or constructively present at the scene of the crime and aided and abetted its commission) and for all misdemeanants. The legislative history of § 2 confirms this understanding. With the enactment of § 2, all participants in conduct violating a federal criminal statute are "principals," and as such they are punishable for their criminal conduct, the fate of other participants being irrelevant.

(b) The Government is not barred, under the doctrine of nonmutual collateral estoppel, from relitigating the issue of whether the IRS agent accepted unlawful compensation. Application of that doctrine is not appropriate here. In a criminal case, the Government is often without the kind of "full and fair opportunity to litigate" that is a prerequisite of estoppel. The application of collateral estoppel in criminal cases is also complicated by rules of evidence and exclusion unique to criminal law. Finally, in this case the important federal interest in the enforcement of the criminal law outweighs the economy concerns undergirding the collateral estoppel doctrine.

610 F. 2d 1076, affirmed.

BURGER, C. J., delivered the opinion for a unanimous Court.

MR. CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER delivered the opinion of the Court.

We granted certiorari in this case to decide whether a defendant accused of aiding and abetting in the commission of a federal offense may be convicted after the named principal has been acquitted of that offense.

I

In June 1977, petitioner Standefer was indicted on four counts of making gifts to a public official, in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 201(f), and on five counts of aiding and abetting a revenue official in accepting compensation in addition to that authorized by law, in violation of 26 U.S.C. § 7214(a)(2) and 18 U.S.C. § (2).[1] The indictment charged that petitioner, as head of Gulf Oil Company's tax department, had authorized payments for five vacation trips to Cyril Niederberger, who then was the Internal Revenue Service agent in charge of the audits of Gulf's federal income tax returns.[2] Specifically, the indictment alleged that Gulf, on petitioner's authorization, had paid for vacations for Niederberger in Pompano Beach (July 1971), Miami (January 1973), Absecon (August-September 1973), Pebble Beach (April 1974), and Las Vegas (June 1974). The four counts under 18 U.S.C. § 201(f) related to the Miami, Absecon, Pebble Beach, and Las Vegas vacations; the five counts under 26 U.S.C. § 7214(a)(2) and 18 U.S.C. § 2 were one for each vacation.[3]

Prior to the filing of this indictment, Niederberger was separately charged in a 10-count indictment—two counts for each of the five vacations—with violating 18 U.S.C. § 201(g) and 26 U.S.C. § 7214(a)(2).[4] In February 1977, Niederberger was tried on these charges. He was convicted on four counts of violating § 201(g) in connection with the vacations in Miami, Absecon, Pebble Beach, and Las Vegas and of two counts of violating § 7215(a)(2) for the Pebble Beach and Las Vegas trips. He was acquitted on the § 201(g) count involving the Pompano Beach trip and on the three counts under § 7214(a)(2) charging him with accepting payments from Gulf for trips to Pompano Beach, Miami, and Absecon.[5]

[1] 18 U.S.C. § 201(f) provides, in relevant part, as follows:

"Whoever, otherwise than as provided by law for the proper discharge of official duty, directly or indirectly gives, offers, or promises anything of value to any public official . . . for or because of any official act performed or to be performed by such public official . . . [is guilty of an offense]."

26 U.S. § 7214(a)(2) punishes:

"Any officer or employee of the United States acting in connection with any revenue law of the United States . . . who knowingly demands other or greater sums than are authorized by law, or receives any fee, compensation, or reward, except as by law prescribed, for the performance of any duty."

18 U.S.C. § 2 provides in relevant part:

"Whoever commits an offense against the United States or aids, abets, counsels, commands, induces or procures its commission, is punishable as a principal."

[2] The indictment also named Gulf Oil Corporation and Joseph Fitzgerald, a manager in Gulf's tax department, as defendants. Gulf pleaded guilty and Fitzgerald nolo contendere to all nine counts.

[3] It appears that the statute of limitations had run on any violation of 18 U.S.C. § 201(f) in connection with the Pompano Beach vacation.

[4] 18 U.S.C. § 201(g) punishes:

"Whoever, being a public official . . . , otherwise than as provided by law for the proper discharge of official duty, directly or indirectly asks, demands, exacts, solicits, seeks, accepts, receives, or agrees to receive anything of value for himself for or because of any official act performed or to be performed by him."

In July 1977, following Niederberger's trial and before the trial in his own case commenced, petitioner moved to dismiss the counts under § 7214(a)(2) and 18 U.S.C. § (2) which charged him with aiding and abetting Niederberger in connection with the Pompano Beach, Miami, and Absecon vacations. Petitioner argued that because Niederberger, the only named principal, had been acquitted of accepting unlawful compensation as to those vacations, he could not be convicted of aiding and abetting in the commission of those offenses. The District Court denied the motion.

Petitioner's case then proceeded to trial on all nine counts. At trial, petitioner admitted authorizing payment for all five vacation trips, but testified that the trips were purely social and not designed to influence Niederberger in the performance of his official duties. The jury returned guilty verdicts on all nine counts.[6] Petitioner was sentenced to concurrent terms of six months' imprisonment followed by two years' probation; he was fined a total of $18,000—$2,000 on each count.

Petitioner appealed his convictions to the Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit claiming, inter alia, that he could not be convicted of aiding and abetting a principal, Niederberger, when that principal had been acquitted of the charged offense. By a divided vote, the Court of Appeals, sitting en banc, rejected that contention. 610 F.2d 1076 (1979). It concluded that "the outcome of Niederberger's prosecution has no effect on [petitioner's] convictions." Id., at 1078.

Because the question presented is one of importance to the administration of criminal justice on which the Courts of Appeals are in conflict, we granted certiorari.[7] We affirm.

II

Petitioner makes two main arguments: first, that Congress in enacting 18 U.S.C. § 2 did not intend to authorize prosecution of an aider and abettor after the principal has been acquitted of the offense charged; second, that, even if § 2 permits such a prosecution, the government should be barred from relitigating the issue of whether Niederberger accepted unlawful compensation in connection with the Pompano Beach, Miami, and Absecon vacations.[8] The first contention relies largely on the common law as it prevailed before the enactment of 18 U.S.C. § 2. The second rests on the contemporary doctrine of nonmutual collateral estoppel.

A

At common law, the subject of principals and accessories was riddled with "intricate" distinctions. 2 J. Stephen, History of the Criminal Law of England 231 (1883). In felony cases, parties to a crime were divided into four distinct categories: (1) principals in the first degree who actually perpetrated the offense; (2) principals in the second degree who were actually or constructively present at the scene of the crime and aided or abetted its commission; (3) accessories before the fact who aided or abetted the crime, but were not present at its commission; and (4) accessories after the fact who rendered assistance after the crime was complete. See W. LaFave & A. Scott, Criminal Law § 63 (1972); 4 W. Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England, 33 (1765); Perkins, Parties to Crime, 89 U. Pa. L. Rev. 581 (1941). By contrast, misdemeanor cases "d[id] not admit of accessaries [sic] either before or after the fact," United States v. Hartwell, 26 F. Cas. 196, 199 (1869); instead, all parties to a misdemeanor, whatever their roles, were principals. United States v. Dotterweich, 320 U.S. 277, 281 (1943); C. Torcia, 1 Wharton's Criminal Law, § 33 (1978).

Because at early common law all parties to a felony received the death penalty, certain procedural rules developed tending to shield accessories from punishment. See W. LaFave & A. Scott, at 499. Among them was one of special relevance to this case: the rule that an accessory could not be convicted without the prior conviction of the principal offender. See 1 M. Hale, Pleas of the Crown, 623-624 (1847). Under this rule, the principal's flight, death, or acquittal barred prosecution of the accessory. And if the principal were pardoned or his conviction reversed on appeal, the accessory's conviction could not stand. In every way, "an accessory follow[ed], like a shadow, his principal." 1 J. Bishop, Criminal Law § 666 (8th ed. 1892).

This procedural bar applied only to the prosecution of accessories in felony cases. In misdemeanor cases, where all participants were deemed principals, a prior acquittal of the actual perpetrator did not prevent the subsequent conviction of a person who rendered assistance. R. Humphreys and Turner, 3 All Eng. L. Rep. 689 (1965); R. v. Burton, 13 Cox, C.C. 71, 75 (1875). And in felony cases a principal in the second degree could be convicted notwithstanding the prior acquittal of the first-degree principal. King v. Taylor and Shaw, 168 Eng. Rep. 283 (1785); R. v. Wallis, 91 Eng. Rep. 294 (1703); Brown v. State, 28 Georgia 199 (1859); State v. Whitt, 113 N.C. 716, 18 S.E. 715 (1897). Not surprisingly, considerable effort was expended in defining the categories—in determining, for instance, when a person was [5] Niederberger was sentenced to six months' imprisonment followed by a five-year period of probation, and he was fined $5,000. His convictions were affirmed by the Court of Appeals. United States v. Niederberger, 580 F.2d 63 (CA3 1978).

[6] The jury was instructed that in order to render a guilty verdict on the § 7214(a) counts it must determine (1) that Niederberger knowingly "received a fee, compensation or reward except as prescribed by law . . . for the performance . . . of any duty" and (2) that petitioner "willfully aided and abetted [him]." App. 52a-56a.

[7] The Courts of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit, the Ninth Circuit, and the District of Columbia have reached the same conclusion as the Third Circuit. See United States v. Musgrave, 483 F.2d 327, 331-332 (CA5 1973); United States v. Azadian, 436 F.2d 81 (CA9 1971); Perkins v. United States, 315 F.2d 120, 122 (CA9 1963); Gray v. United States, 104 U.S. App. D.C. 153, 260 F.2d 483 (1958). The Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit has taken the contrary view that "where the only potential principal has been acquitted, no crime has been established and the conviction of an aider and abettor cannot be sustained." United States v. Shuford, 454 F.2d 772, 779 (1971). Accord, United States v. Prince, 430 F.2d 1325 (CA4 1970). See also n. 11, infra.

[8] Petitioner also challenges the instructions to the jury on criminal intent. We agree with the Court of Appeals that the instructions were correct.

"constructively present" so as to be a second-degree principal. 4 Blackstone Commentaries on the Laws of England 34 (1765). In the process, justice all too frequently was defeated.

To overcome these judge-made rules, statutes were enacted in England and in the United States. In 1848 the Parliament enacted a statute providing that an accessory before the fact could be "indicted, tried, convicted, and punished in all respects as if he were a principal felon." 11 & 12 Vic. ch. 46. s. 1 (emphasis added). As interpreted, the statute permitted an accessory to be convicted "although the principal be acquitted." R v. Hughes, Bell's Crown Cases 242, 248 (1860). Several state legislatures followed suit.[9] In 1899, Congress joined this growing reform movement with the enactment of a general penal code for Alaska which "abrogated" the common-law distinctions and provided that "all persons concerned in the commission of a felony . . . must be indicted, tried, and punished as principals, as in the case of a misdemeanor." Act of Mar. 3, 1899, ch. 429, §§ 184-187, 30 Stat. 1282 (emphasis added). In 1901 Congress enacted a similar provision for the District of Columbia.[10]

The enactment of 18 U.S.C. § 2 in 1909 was part and parcel of this same reform movement. The language of the statute, as enacted, unmistakably demonstrates the point:

> "Whoever directly commits any act constituting an offense defined in any law of the United States, or aids, abets, counsels, commands, induces or procures its commission, is a principal." Act of March 4, 1909, ch. 321, 35 Stat. 1152 (emphasis added).[11]

The statute "abolishe[d] the distinction between principals and accessories and [made] them all principals." Hammer v. United States, 271 U.S. 620, 628 (1926). Read against its common-law background, the provision evinces a clear intent to permit the conviction of accessories to federal criminal offenses despite the prior acquittal of the actual perpetrator of the offense. It gives general effect to what had always been the rule for second-degree principals and for all misdemeanants.

The legislative history of § 2 confirms this understanding. The provision was recommended by the Commission to Revise and Codify the Criminal and Penal Laws of the United States as "in accordance with the policy of recent legislation" by which "those whose relations to a crime would be that of accessories before the fact according to the common law are made principals." Final Report of the Commission to Revise and Codify the Laws of the United States 118-119 (1906). The Commission's recommendation was adopted without change. The House and Senate Committee reports, in identical language, stated its intended effect:

> "The committee has deemed it wise to make those who are accessories before the fact at common-law principal

[9] By 1909, when § 2 was enacted, 13 states had enacted legislation providing that the acquittal of the actual perpetrator was not a bar to the conviction of one charged with giving him aid. See Cal. Stat. ch. 99, §§ 11-12 (1850) (see People v. Bearss, 10 Cal. 68-70 (1858)); Del. Laws (Rev. Code) §§ 2919-2921 (1852); Iowa Rev. Since then, at least 21 other states have enacted legislation with that effect. See 1977 Ala. Laws, Act. No. 607, § 425; Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 13-304-1 (1978); Ark. Stat. Code Ann. § 77.03 (1973); Wis. Stat. § 39.05 (1958).

Eleven other states have enacted statutes that modify the common-law rule; these statutes have not been authoritatively construed on whether an accessory can be prosecuted after his principal's acquittal. See Haw. Rev. Stat. § 702-225 (1976); Idaho Code § 19-1431 (1979); Mass. Gen. Laws Ann. ch. 274 § 3 (1970); Minn. Stat. § 609.05 (1964); Nev. Rev. Stat. § 195.040 (1979); Ohio Rev. Stat. § 6-1-7114 (1977).

Only four states—Maryland, North Carolina, Rhode Island, and Tennessee—clearly retain the common-law bar. See State v. Wood, 284 Md. 189, 396 A. 2d 1041 (1978); State v. Jones, 101 N. C. 719, 8 S. E. 147 (1888) (interpreting N. C. Gen. Stat. § 14-15 (1969)); R. I. Gen. Laws § 11-1-3 (1956); Pierce v. State, 130 Tenn. 24, 168 S. W. 851 (1914).

The Model Penal Code provides that an accomplice may be convicted "though the person claimed to have committed the offense . . . has been acquitted." § 2.06 (7) and see comments Tentative Draft No. 1, May 1953, at 38-39.

[10] The provision is still in effect; it provides that all persons "aiding or abetting the principal offender, shall be charged as principals, not as accessories, the intent of this section being that as to all accessories before the fact the law heretofore applicable in cases of misdemeanor only shall apply to all crimes. . . ." Act of March 3, 1901, ch. 854, Section 908, 31 Stat. 1337; D. C. Code § 22-105 (1976) emphasis added).

[11] In 1951 the words "is a principal" were altered to read "is punishable as a principal." That change was designed to eliminate all doubt that in the case of offenses whose prohibition are directed at members of specified classes (e. g., federal employees) a person who is not himself a member of that class may nonetheless be punished as a principal if he induces a person in that class to violate the prohibition. See S. Rep. No. 1020, 82d Cong., 1st Sess., 7-8 (1951). The change was fully consistent with congressional intent to treat accessories before the fact as principals and to abolish the common-law procedural bar. Indeed, by the time of the 1951 re-enactment, the circuit courts that had addressed the question had concluded that § 2 authorizes conviction of an aider and abettor notwithstanding the prior acquittal of the perpetrator of the offense. See United States v. Klass, 166 F.2d 373, 380 (CA3 1948); Von Patzoll v. United States, 163 F.2d 216 (CA10 (1946); Kelly v. United States, 258 F. 392, 402 (CA6 1919); Rooney v. United States, 203 F. 928, 931-932 (CA 9 1913). Congress manifested no intent to disturb this interpretation. See Lorillard v. Pons, 434 U.S. 575, 580 (1978).

> offenders, thereby permitting their indictment and conviction for a substantive offense. At common law an accessory can not be tried without his consent before the conviction or outlawry of the principal except where the principal and accessory are tried together; if the principal could not be found or if he had been indicted and refused to plead, had been pardoned or died before conviction, the accessory could not be tried at all. This change of the existing law renders these obstacles to justice impossible." S. Rep. No. 10, 60th Cong., 1st Sess., Pt. 1, at 13 (1908); H. R. Rep. No. 2, 6th Cong., 1st Sess., at 13 (1908).[12]

And on the floor of the House of Representatives, Representative Moon, the chairman of the joint select committee, put the point simply: "[we] have abolished the existing arbitrary distinctions between felonies and misdemeanors." 42 Cong. Rec. 585 (1908).

This history plainly rebuts petitioner's contention that § 2 was not intended to authorize conviction of an aider and abettor after the principal had been acquitted of the offense charged.[13] With the enactment of that section, all participants in conduct violating a federal criminal statute are "principals." As such, they are punishable for their criminal conduct; the fate of other participants is irrelevant.[14]

B

The doctrine of nonmutual collateral estoppel was unknown to the common law and to the Congress when it enacted § 2 in 1909.[15] It emerged in a civil case in 1942, Bernhard v. Bank of America Nat. Trust & Savings Assn., 19 Cal. 2d 807, 112 P.2d 892. This Court first applied the doctrine in Blonder-Tongue v. University Foundation, 402 U.S. 313 (1971). There, we held that a determination of patent invalidity in a prior infringement action was entitled to preclusive effect against the patentee in subsequent litigation against a different defendant. Just this past Term we again applied the doctrine—this time "offensively"—to hold that a defendant who had had a "full and fair" opportunity to litigate issues of fact in a civil proceeding initiated by the Securities and Exchange Commission could be estopped from relitigating those issues in a subsequent action brought by a private plaintiff. Parklane Hosiery Co. v. Shore, 439 U.S. 322 (1979). In both cases, application of nonmutual estoppel promoted judicial economy and conserved private resources without unfairness to the litigant against whom estoppel was invoked.

Here, petitioner urges us to apply nonmutual estoppel against the government; specifically he argues that the government should be barred from relitigating Niederberger's guilt under § 7214(a)(2) in connection with the vacation trips to Pompano Beach, Miami, and Absecon. That issue, he notes, was an element of his offense which was determined adversely to the government at Niederberger's trial.[16]

This, however, is a criminal case, presenting considerations different from those in Blonder-Tongue or Parkland Hosiery. First, in a criminal case, the government is often without the kind of "full and fair opportunity to litigate" that is a prerequisite of estoppel. Several aspects of our criminal law make this so: the prosecution's discovery rights in criminal cases are limited, both by rules of court and constitutional privileges; it is prohibited from being granted a directed verdict or from obtaining a judgment notwithstanding the verdict no matter how clear the evidence in support of guilt, compare Fed. Rule Civ. Proc. 50; it can not secure a new trial on the ground that an acquittal was plainly contrary to the weight of the evidence, compare Fed. Rule Civ. Proc. 59; and it can not secure appellate review where a defendant has been acquitted. See United States v. Ball, 163 U.S. 662, 671 (1896).

The absence of these remedial procedures in criminal cases permits juries to acquit out of compassion or compromise or because of "their assumption of a power which they had no right to exercise, but which they were disposed through lenity." Dunn v. United States, 284 U.S. 390, 393 (1932). See generally H. Kalven & H. Zeisel, The American Jury 193-347

[12] Petitioner emphasizes the fact that the committee report fails to mention the common-law rule that the prior acquittal of a principal barred conviction of an accessory, and argues accordingly that Congress did not view that rule as an "obstacle to justice." The Court of Appeals correctly rejected this argument, being unwilling to "apply the canon of statutory interpretation . . . expressio unius, exclusio alterius . . . to the language employed in a committee report." 610 F.2d, at 1084 (emphasis added). We agree. Petitioner's argument would permit an omission in the legislative history to nullify the plain meaning of a statute. The language of § 2 abolishes the common-law categories and treats all parties as principals. It is not necessary for Congress in its committee reports to identify all of the "weeds" which are being excised from the garden.

[13] It bears mention that even prior to 1909 petitioner would not have prevailed in his attempt to bar prosecution on the § 7214(a)(2) counts. As the government notes, the version of 26 U. S. C. § 7214 then in effect defined the offense to be a misdemeanor. See R. S. 3169 (1878). Hence, the prior acquittal of his principal would not have barred petitioner's prosecution. And because petitioner accompanied Niederberger on four of five trips and therefore was "present" at the scene of the crime, see Tr. 1018-1020, 1024-1027, 1034-1036, 1096, he could have been convicted at common law for those crimes even if the offense had been designated a felony.

[14] Nothing in Shuttlesworth v. Birmingham, 373 U. S. 262 (1963), relied on by petitioner, is to the contrary. There, petitioner had been convicted of aiding and abetting others to violate a city trespass ordinance which subsequently was declared constitutionally invalid. See Gober v. Birmingham, 373 U. S. 374 (1963). Shuttlesworth's case merely applied the rule that "there can be no conviction for aiding and abetting someone do an innocent act." Id., at 265. Here, by contrast, the government proved in petitioner's case that Niederberger had violated § 7214(a)(2) in connection with each of the five trips. See no. 6, supra.

[15] In 1912 in Bigelow v. Old Dominion Copper Co., 225 U. S. 111, 127, this Court stated that it was "a principle of general elementary law that the estoppel of a judgment must be mutual." See also Stone v. Farmers Bank, 174 U. S. 409 (1899); Keokuk & W. R. Co. v. Missouri, 152 U. S. 301, 317 (1894); Litchfield v. Goodnow, 123 U. S. 549, 552 (1887).

[16] Petitioner does not contend that the Constitution prevents the government from prosecuting him on the three § 7214(a)(2) counts as to which Niederberger was acquitted. Nothing in the Double Jeopardy Clause or the Due Process Clause forecloses putting petitioner on trial as an aider and abettor simply because another jury has determined that his principal was not guilty of the offenses charged. Compare Ashe v. Swenson, 397 U.S. 436 (1970).

(1966).[17] It is of course true that verdicts induced by passion and prejudice are not unknown in civil suits. But in civil cases, post-trial motions and appellate review provide an aggrieved litigant a remedy; in a criminal case the government has no similar avenue to correct errors. Under contemporary principles of collateral estoppel, this factor strongly militates against giving an acquittal preclusive effect. See Restatement (Second) of Judgments § 68.1 (Ten. Draft No. 3, May 1976) (denying preclusive effect to an unreviewable judgment).[18]

The application of nonmutual estoppel in criminal cases is also complicated by the existence of rules of evidence and exclusion unique to our criminal law. It is frequently true in criminal cases that evidence inadmissible against one defendant is admissible against another. The Exclusionary Rule, for example, may bar the government from introducing evidence against one defendant because that evidence was obtained in violation of his constitutional rights. And the suppression of that evidence may result in an acquittal. The same evidence, however, may be admissible against other parties to the crime "whose rights were [not] violated." Alderman v. United States, 394 U.S. 165, 171-172 (1969). Accord, Rakas v. Illinois, 439 U.S. 128, 134 (1978). In such circumstances, where evidentiary rules prevent the Government from presenting all its proof in the first case, application of nonmutual estoppel would be plainly unwarranted.[19]

It is argued that this concern could be met on a case-by-case basis by conducting a pretrial hearing to determine whether any such evidentiary ruling had deprived the Government of an opportunity to present its case fully the first time around. That process, however, could prove protracted and burdensome. Under such a scheme, the Government presumably would be entitled to seek review of any adverse evidentiary ruling rendered in the first proceeding and of any aspect of the jury charge in that case that worked to its detriment. Nothing short of that would insure that its opportunity to litigate had been "full and fair." If so, the "pre-trial hearing" would fast become a substitute for appellate review, and the very purpose of litigation economy that estoppel is designed to promote would be frustrated.

Finally, this case involves an ingredient not present in either Blonder-Tongue or Parklane Hosiery: the important federal interest in the enforcement of the criminal law. Blonder-Tongue and Parkland Hosiery were disputes over private rights between private litigants. In such cases, no significant harm flows from enforcing a rule that affords a litigant only one full and fair opportunity to litigate an issue, and there is no sound reason for burdening the courts with repetitive litigation.

That is not so here. The Court of Appeals opinion put the point well:

> "[T]he purpose of a criminal court is not to provide a forum for the ascertainment of private rights. Rather it is to vindicate the public interest in the enforcement of the criminal law while at the same time safeguarding the rights of the individual defendant. The public interest in the accuracy and justice of criminal results is greater than the concern for judicial economy professed in civil cases and we are thus inclined to reject, at least as a general matter, a rule that would spread the effect of an erroneous acquittal to all those who participated in a particular criminal transaction. To plead crowded dockets as an excuse for not trying criminal defendants is in our view neither in the best interests of the courts, nor the public." 610 F.2d, at 1093.

In short, this criminal case involves "competing policy considerations" that outweigh the economy concerns that undergird the estoppel doctrine. See Restatement (Second) of Judgments § 68.1(e) and comments thereto; cf. Commissioner v. Sunnen, 333 U.S. 591 (1948) [Ct. D. 1698, 1948-1 C.B. 7].

III

In denying preclusive effect to Niederberger's acquittal, we do not deviate from the sound teaching that "justice must satisfy the appearance of justice." Offutt v. United States, 348 U.S. 11, 14 (1954). This case does no more than manifest the simple, if discomforting, reality that "different juries [may] reach different results under any criminal statute. That is one of the consequences of our jury system." Roth v. United States, 354 U.S. 476, 492 (1957). While symmetry of results may be intellectually satisfying, it is not required. See Hamling v. United States, 418 U.S. 87, 101 (1974).

Here, petitioner received a fair trial at which the Government bore the burden of proving beyond reasonable doubt that Niederberger violated 26 U.S.C. § 7214(a)(2) and that petitioner aided and abetted him in that venture. He was entitled to no less—and to no more.

The judgment of the Court of Appeals is Affirmed.

[17] Niederberger's case demonstrates the point. As to the Absecon and Miami vacations, the jury convicted Niederberger of receiving something of value "because of any official act performed . . . by him," 18 U. S. C. § 201(g), but acquitted him of receiving "any fee, compensation, or reward . . . for the performance of any duty," 26 U. S. C. § 7214(a)(2). No explanation has been offered for these seemingly irreconcilable determinations. This inconsistency is reason, in itself, for not giving preclusive effect to the acquittals on the Absecon and Miami counts. See Restatement (Second) Judgments, § 88(4). See also 610 F.2d at 1112 (Gibbons, J., concurring in part and dissenting in part); Harary v. Blumenthal, 55 F.2d 1113, 1116-1117 (CA2 1977).

[18] This is not to suggest that the availability of appellate review is always an essential predicate of estoppel. See Johnson Co. v. Wharton, 152 U.S. 252 (1894); see generally 1B Moore's Federal Practice ¶ 0.416 [5]. The estoppel doctrine, however, is premised upon an underlying confidence that the result achieved in the initial litigation was substantially correct. In the absence of appellate review, or of similar procedures, such confidence is often unwarranted.

[19] Indeed, as the Court of Appeals observed, to give the first case preclusive effect would undermine the Alderman rule by affording a defendant whose rights were not violated the benefits of suppression. See 610 F.2d, at 1094, n. 51.

Part III. Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous

Delegation Order No. 96 (Rev. 4) (Effective June 4, 1980)

Application of Rulings Without Retroactive Effect

1. Pursuant to authority granted to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue by 26 CFR 301.7805-1(b):

a. the Assistant Commissioner (Technical) and the Deputy Assistant Commissioner (Technical) are hereby authorized to prescribe the extent, if any, to which any ruling issued by or pursuant to authorization from the Assistant Commissioner relating to the internal revenue laws shall be applied without retroactive effect.

b. the Assistant Commissioner (Employee Plans and Exempt Organizations) and the Deputy Assistant Commissioner (Employee Plans and Exempt Organizations) are hereby authorized to prescribe the extent, if any, to which any ruling issued by or pursuant to authorization from the Assistant Commissioner relating to the internal revenue laws shall be applied without retroactive effect.

2. a. Pursuant to authority granted to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue by 26 CFR 301.7805-1(b), there is hereby delegated to the Director, Employee Plans Division and to the Director, Actuarial Division of the National Office, and to the Director of each EP/EO Key District, the authority to limit the retroactive effect of the revocation of any determination letter issued with respect to employee plans if the following conditions are met:

(1) The plan sponsor has received a favorable determination letter under the law in effect prior to the date that the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 [1974-3 C.B. 1] (ERISA) applied to the plan, but did not receive a favorable post-ERISA determination letter.

(2) The plan sponsor executed the necessary plan amendments to conform to ERISA retroactively to the first plan year that was subject to ERISA and such amendments are executed no later than 91 days after the issuance of a final determination letter or notice of amendments needed to effect compliance (which notice shall be issued at least 91 days period to the final examination report).

(3) Employees' and beneficiaries' rights and/or benefits under the plan are restored to levels they would have had to attain if the plan had never failed to qualify under ERISA.

(4) The requirements of section 2b relating to form are satisfied on June 4, 1980, and the requirements of section 2b relating to operation are met beginning with the ERISA effective date for the minimum participation standards determined with regard to each plan.

b. The requirements of this section are:

(1) The plan satisfies the age and service requirements for participation described in section 410(a) of the Code or fails to satisfy such requirements solely because the plan incorrectly credits service for eligibility purposes;

(2) The plan satisfies the requirements of section 411(a) or fails to satisfy such requirements solely because the plan incorrectly credits service for vesting purposes;

(3) In the case of a plan subject to the joint and survivor requirements of section 401(a)(11) such plan provides a joint and survivor annuity;

(4) The plan has not failed to satisfy the requirements of section 414(1);

(5) The plan has not, in operation, violated the limitations of section 415 (c) by making excess allocations to individuals who are officers, shareholders or highly compensated; and

(6) The plan has not, in operation, been discriminatory in coverage or in contributions or benefits under sections 410(b) and 401(a)(4).

c. In the case of a plan that fails to satisfy section 2a solely as a result of not satisfying one or more of the requirements of section 2b, partial relief will be granted through section 7805 (b). The employer's contributions will not be deductible as contributions to a qualified plan. However, section 7805(b) relief will be applied to the trust and all employees except to the extent described in the next two sentences. In the case of a plan that does not satisfy section 2b(5), the 7805(b) relief described in the previous sentence will not apply to any officer, shareholder, or highly compensated individual who received annual additions that did not satisfy such section. In the case of a plan which does not satisfy section 2b(6), the 7805(b) relief will not apply to any officer, shareholder or highly compensated individual. Thus, any such officer, shareholder or highly compensated individual will not receive the tax treatment applicable with respect to qualified plans. In the case of a plan which fails to satisfy applicable requirements for any other reason relief can only be granted pursuant to section 1b.

d. The section 7805(b) relief detailed in sections 2a, 2c and 3 shall be effective for the period beginning with the ERISA effective date for the minimum participation standards determined with regard to each plan and ending on the date of final compliance which shall be no later than the date defined in section 2a(2) of this order.

e. In determining whether the requirements of this section are satisfied, proposed amendments received by the Service by June 4, 1980, will be taken into account.

3. a. In addition to the authority delegated in section 2 above, there is delegated to the Director of each EP/EO Key District, the Director, Employee Plans Division and the Director, Actuarial Division, the authority to limit the retroactive effect of the revocation, if any, of a favorable post-ERISA determination letter issued for a plan, except issues with respect to which an Alert Guidelines worksheet was completed. If a determination letter was issued erroneously with respect to issues covered by a completed Alert Guidelines worksheet, retroactive relief may only be granted pursuant to section 1b.

b. If a plan described in section 3a is amended in accordance with section 2a(2), restoration will be required and relief will be granted to the extent described below. If the defect did not exist at the time of the prior letter, the sponsor must restore any benefits and relief will be granted in accordance with the principles in section 2c for the period in which the defect existed. If the defect did exist at the time of the prior letter, the related benefits need only be restored for the period during which the plan was, without regard to the defect, not in compliance with Code section 401(a), and full section 7805(b) relief will be granted.

4. The delegation of authority granted pursuant to sections 2 and 3 above does not permit relief to be granted in any case if after September 30, 1982, amendments required for complete compliance have not been executed or a request for a determination letter with proposed ERISA amendments has not been filed. Notwithstanding the above, the Director of each EP/EO Key District is not delegated any section 7805(b) authority in the case of a plan which the Director of each EP/EO Key District determines to have been discriminatory for years before the effective date of section 410 for such plan. Cases described in this section must be referred to the National Office pursuant to procedures governing requests for technical advice.

5. Notwithstanding any of the above, section 7805(b) authority is not delegated to the Director, Employee Plans Division, the Director, Actuarial Division and the Director of each EP/EO Key District in the case of a plan which has been determined to have violated the exclusive benefit rule of section 401(a).

6. The section 7805(b) authority described in sections 2a, 2c or 3 will be exercised except in rare and unusual circumstances. Where rare and unusual circumstances exist, denial of section 7805(b) relief will be applied only if approved by the National Office.

7. The authority delegated in section 1 may not be redelegated.

8. The authority to grant 7805(b) relief in certain employee plan matters herein delegated to the Director, Employee Plans Division and to the Director of each EP/EO Key District may not be redelegated below the level of the Chief, Employee Plans Technical Branch and the Chief, EP/EO Division, respectively. The authority to grant 7805(b) relief delegated to the Director, Actuarial Division may not be redelegated.

9. This delegation order expires with respect to the Director of each EP/EO Key District on December 31, 1982.

10. This delegation order supersedes Delegation Order No. 96 (Rev. 3) [1976-2 C.B. 623] issued July 12, 1976.

JEROME KURTZ,
Commissioner.

Delegation Order No. 112 (Rev. 6) (Effective June 2, 1980)

Authority to Issue Determination and Revocation Letters, to Grant Extensions of the Remedial Amendment Period and to Issue Examination Reports Relating to Employee Plans

Pursuant to authority vested in the Commissioner of Internal Revenue by Treasury Department Order No. 150-37, authority with respect to issuance of determination and revocation letters, to granting extensions of the remedial amendment period and to issuance of examination reports pertaining to employee plans and related matters is delegated as follows:

1. The District Director of each Employee Plans and Exempt Organizations key district is authorized, subject to paragraph 3, to:

(a) issue determination and revocation letters involving the provisions of sections 401, 403(a), 405, 409A, 501(a), and 4975(e)(7) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 with respect to:

(1) qualification of stock bonus, pension, profit sharing, employee stock ownership, annuity, and bond purchase plans, and cash or deferred arrangements;

(2) exemption from federal income tax under section 501(a) of trusts forming a part of such plans, provided that the determination does not involve application of section 502 (feeder organizations) or section 511 (unrelated business income), or the question of whether a proposed transaction will be a prohibited transaction under section 4975(c)(1) or section 503 with respect to plans described in 4975(g)(2) or (3);

(3) compliance with the applicable requirements of foreign situs trusts as to taxability of beneficiaries (section 402(c)) and deductions for employer contributions (section 404(a)(4)); and

(4) amendments, (including those relating to section 414(l) of the Code), partial terminations or terminations of such plans and trusts.

(b) issue examination reports with respect to:

(1) continued qualification under sections 401, 403(a), 405, 409A, and 4975(e)(7) of plans and continued exemption under section 501(a) of the related trust;

(2) imposition of tax under sections 1, 511 through 514, 641 and Chapter 43; and

(3) imposition of penalties under Chapter 68 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

(c) issue determination letters with respect to whether a plan constitutes an employee stock ownership plan that is not intended to qualify under section 401 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 for taxable years beginning before January 1, 1979.

(d) issue modification or revocation of determination letters described above in accordance with currently applicable appeal procedures. If the revocation involves collectively-bargained plans, or plans for which the Internal Revenue Service is proposing to issue a revocation letter because certain fiduciary actions subject to Part 4, Subtitle B of Title I of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA) [Pub. L. 93-406, 1974-3 C.B. 1, 43] have violated the exclusive benefit rule of section 401(a), the plan must have been submitted for technical advice and the Assistant Commissioner (E) must have concurred with the revocation.

(e) redelegate this authority as follows:

(1) with respect to issuance and modification of favorable determination letters or examination reports, other than a report issued with a proposed revocation letter, not below Internal Revenue Agent and Tax Law Specialist, GS-12, and then only if such individual is a person other than the initiator,

(2) with respect to issuance of proposed and final adverse determination letters or proposed revocation letters and related examination reports, not below Chief, EP/EO Division.

(3) with respect to issuance of final revocation letters, this authority may not be redelegated.

2. In each region, the Regional Director of Appeals, Chiefs and Associate Chiefs, Appeals Office, are authorized to:

(a) issue final determination or final revocation letters on appeals from proposed adverse determination and proposed revocation letters issued by key district offices under this delegation.

(b) issue letters as to the decision on appealed examination reports or statutory notices as provided in Delegation Order No. 77 [(Rev. 14), 1980-19 I.R.B. 15].

(c) This authority may not be redelegated.

3. The Assistant Commissioner (Employee Plans and Exempt Organizations), with concurrence of the Chief Counsel, is authorized to require preissuance review of final adverse determination and final revocation letters covered by section 7476(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

4. The District Director of each Employee Plans and Exempt Organizations key district is authorized to:

(a) extend the remedial amendment period described in section 401(b) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 in accordance with currently applicable 401(b) procedures for individually designed plans and master and prototype plans not described in (b) below, but not in excess of eight months after the later of:

(1) the due date of the employer's income tax return without extension, for the year in which the remedial amendment period begins, or

(2) the end of the plan year within which the remedial amendment period begins;

(3) however, for a plan maintained by more than one employer, the remedial amendment period may not be extended in excess of two months after the last day of the tenth month after the end of the plan year.

(b) extend the remedial amendment period for a master or prototype plan whose sponsoring organization, after September 2, 1974, and on or before December 31, 1976, filed a request for an opinion letter with respect to the plan's qualification but not in excess of eight months after the later of:

(1) June 30, 1977, or

(2) the last day of the month that is six months after the month in which (i) the opinion or notification letter is issued, (ii) the request for the letter is withdrawn, or (iii) the request is otherwise disposed of by the Service.

(c) redelegate this authority but not below Chief, EP/EO Division.

Delegation Order No. 112 (Rev. 5) [1978-2 C.B. 481] issued October 1, 1978 is hereby superseded.

Commissioner

Rev. Proc. 80-32

This revenue procedure modifies Rev. Proc. 80-7, 1980-8 I.R.B. 24, with respect to the optional standard mileage rates for the business use of an automobile and for use in computing deductions for transportation expenses relating to charitable contributions, medical expenses, and moving expenses.

The first paragraph of subsection 1 of section 3.01 of Rev. Proc. 80-7 is amended to read as follows:

Subject to the conditions and limitations set forth below, with respect to transportation expenses paid or incurred after December 31, 1979, deductions will be accepted if computed at a standard mileage rate of (a) 20 cents per mile for the first 15,000 miles of use each year for business purposes, and (b) 11 cents per mile for use for business purposes in excess of 15,000 miles per year. Computation under this method is optional on a yearly basis.

The sixth paragraph of subsection 2 of section 3.01 of Rev. Proc. 80-7 is amended to read as follows:

With respect to automobiles that have been, or are considered to be, fully depreciated under the straight-line method, based upon their use for business purposes, deductions will be accepted if computed at a standard mileage rate of 11 cents per mile for all miles of use of such automobiles attributable to business purposes.

The first paragraph of section 3.02 of Rev. Proc. 80-7 is amended to read as follows:

A taxpayer who incurs costs of operating an automobile for transportation in connection with rendering gratuitous services to a charitable organization under section 170 of the Code, in connection with medical care under section 213, or for moving expenses under section 217 will be permitted to claim as a deduction the standard mileage rate of nine cents per mile, subject to the conditions and limitations set forth in these sections.

These amendments are effective with respect to transportation expenses paid or incurred after December 31, 1979.

EFFECTS ON OTHER DOCUMENTS

Rev. Proc. 80-7 is modified.

Part IV. Items of General Interest

Carryover Basis-Windfall Profit Tax

Announcement 80-91 [1]

The Crude Oili Windfall Profit Tax Act of 1980, Pub. L. 96-223, 1980-3 C.B. 2, 71, repeals the carryover basis provision of section 1023 of the Internal Revenue Code, but also provides that executors or administrators of certain estates may elect carryover basis treatment of assets acquired or passing from decedents.

The irrevocable election, which may be made only for estates of persons dying after December 31, 1976, and before November 7, 1978, must be made by July 31, 1980. Details on making the election are contained in News Release IR-80-46, issued April 7, 1980. Information for filing Form 5970-A, Election of Carryover Basis, which must be used to make the election, is contained in Announcement 80-63, 1980-20 I.R.B. 69.

The carryover basis election can be made in connection with an eligible estate that was closed prior to or after the enactment of the Act if the estate may be reopened under state law. In this case the election must be made by the executor or administrator so appointed.

As an alternative for a closed estate, all beneficiaries and legal representatives of deceased, unborn or unascertained beneficiaries must make the election. The election is made by filing Form 5970-A for the estate with a list of all beneficiaries and signed, notarized statements from each beneficiary or representative indicating that he or she consents to the election. The Form 5970-A together with the list and the statements must be filed with the Internal Revenue Service Center, Philadelphia, PA 19255.

To provide consistent treatment for pecuniary requests, section 1040 of the Code, as contained in the Tax Reform Act of 1976, Pub.L. 94-455, 1976-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1, 353, will apply to estates electing carryover basis.

Section 691(c) of the Code, as it existed prior to the 1976 Act, will apply to estates electing carryover basis. This avoids having a separate 691(c) rule applicable only to electing estates.

Announcement of the Disbarment, Suspension, or Consent to Voluntary Suspension of Attorneys, Certified Public Accountants, Enrolled Agents and Enrolled Actuaries from Practice before the Internal Revenue Service

Under 31 Code of Federal Regulations, Part 10, an attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, in order to avoid the institution or conclusion of a proceeding for his disbarment or suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, may offer his consent to suspension from such practice. The Director of Practice, in his discretion, may suspend an attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary in accordance with the consent offered.

Attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries are prohibited in any Internal Revenue Service matter from directly or indirectly employing, accepting assistance from, being employed by or sharing fees with, any practitioner disbarred or under suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service.

To enable attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries to identify practitioners under consent suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, the Director of Practice will announce in the Internal Revenue Bulletin the names and addresses of practitioners who have been suspended from such practice, their designation as attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, and the date or period of suspension. This announcement will appear in the weekly Bulletin at the earliest practicable date after such action and will continue to appear in the weekly Bulletins for five successive weeks or for as many weeks as is practicable for each attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary so suspended and will later be consolidated and published in the Cumulative Bulletin.

The following individuals have been placed under consent suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service:

Name	Address	Designation	Term of Suspension
John H. Frazier	Nashville, TN	Certified Public Accountant	Fifteen months effective June 16, 1980
Clifford Y. Pierce	Miami, FL	Certified Public Accountant	Indefinite effective June 13, 1980

Announcement Relating to Proposed Regulations Published With Notice of Proposed Rulemaking

Changes in regulations as announced below have been published in the Federal Register in tentative or proposed form to provide interested parties with an opportunity to file their objections or suggestions for consideration prior to final adoption of such regulations. These announcements will appear in the Bulletin during the period which has been prescribed for the submission and consideration of any views, arguments, or suggestions pertaining to the proposed regulations so published. Statement of such views, arguments or suggestions should be submitted in writing, preferably six copies, to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Attention: CC:LR:T, Washington, D.C. 20224.

Definition of Terms

Revenue Rulings and Revenue Procedures (hereinafter referred to as "rulings") that have an effect on previous rulings use the following defined terms to describe the effect:

Amplified describes a situation where no change is being made in a prior published position, but the prior position is being extended to apply to a variation of the fact situation set forth therein. Thus, if an earlier ruling held that a principle applied to A, and the new ruling holds that the same principle also applies to B, the earlier ruling is amplified. (Compare with modified, below).

Clarified is used in those instances where the language in a prior ruling is being made clear because the language has caused, or may cause, some confusion. It is not used where a position in a prior ruling is being changed.

Distinguished describes a situation where a ruling mentions a previously published ruling and points out an essential difference between them.

Modified is used where the substance of a previously published position is being changed. Thus, if a prior ruling held that a principle applied to A but not to B, and the new ruling holds that it applies to both A and B, the prior ruling is modified because it corrects a published position. (Compare with amplified and clarified, above).

Obsoleted describes a previously published ruling that is not considered determinative with respect to future transactions. This term is most commonly used in a ruling that lists previously published rulings that are obsoleted because of changes in law or regulations. A ruling may also be obsoleted because the substance has been included in regulations subsequently adopted.

Revoked describes situations where the position in the previously published ruling is not correct and the correct position is being stated in the new ruling.

Superseded describes a situation where the new ruling does nothing more than restate the substance and situation of a previously published ruling (or rulings). Thus, the term is used to republish under the 1954 Code and regulations the same position published under the 1939 Code and regulations. The term is also used when it is desired to republish in a single ruling a series of situations, names, etc., that were previously published over a period of time in separate rulings. If the new ruling does more than restate the substance of a prior ruling, a combination of terms is used. For example, modified and superseded describes a situation where the substance of a previously published ruling is being changed in part and is continued without change in part and it is desired to restate the valid portion of the previously published ruling in a new ruling that is self contained. In this case the previously published ruling is first modified and then, as modified, is superseded.

Supplemented is used in situations in which a list, such as a list of the names of countries, is published in a ruling and that list is expanded by adding further names in subsequent rulings. After the original ruling has been supplemented several times, a new ruling may be published that includes the list in the original ruling and the additions, and supersedes all prior rulings in the series.

Suspended is used in rare situations to show that the previous published rulings will not be applied pending some future action such as the issuance of new or amended regulations, the outcome of cases in litigation, or the outcome of a Service study.

INTERNAL REVENUE BULLETIN

The Introduction on page 3 describes the purpose and content of this publication. The weekly Internal Revenue Bulletin is sold on a yearly subscription basis by the Superintendent of Documents. Current subscribers are notified by the Superintendent of Documents when their subscriptions must be renewed.

CUMULATIVE BULLETINS

The contents of the weekly Bulletin are consolidated semiannually into a permanent, indexed, Cumulative Bulletin. These are sold on a single copy basis and are not included as part of the subscription to the Internal Revenue Bulletin. Subscribers to the weekly Bulletin are notified when copies of the Cumulative Bulletin are available. Certain issues of Cumulative Bulletins are out of print and are not available. Persons desiring available Cumulative Bulletins, which are listed on the reverse, may purchase them from the Superintendent of Documents.

BULLETIN INDEX-DIGEST SYSTEM

The Bulletin Index-Digest System (12-78) provides a fast and easy way to research Revenue Rulings, Revenue Procedures, Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and other matters of a permanent nature published in the weekly Internal Revenue Bulletin, or Cumulative Bulletin from 1953 on. It is a comprehensive and up-to-date research tool that requires no filing or other clerical maintenance. The current revision consists of four Services, available on a subscription basis, each including a basic volume that covers the period 1953-1978 and a cumulative supplement covering material published in subsequent Bulletins for the following two-year period. Cumulative supplements are issued quarterly for the Income Tax Service and semiannually for the Estate and Gift, Employment, and Excise Tax Services.

HOW TO ORDER

Check the publications and/or subscription(s) desired on the reverse, complete the order blank, enclose the proper remittance, detach entire page, and mail to the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. Please allow two to six weeks, plus mailing time, for delivery.

Internal Revenue Service

Statement of Principles of Internal Revenue Tax Administration

The function of the Internal Revenue Service is to administer the Internal Revenue Code. Tax policy for raising revenue is determined by Congress.

With this in mind, it is the duty of the Service to carry out that policy by correctly applying the laws enacted by Congress; to determine the reasonable meaning of various Code provisions in light of the Congressional purpose in enacting them; and to perform this work in a fair and impartial manner, with neither a government nor a taxpayer point of view.

At the heart of administration is interpretation of the Code. It is the responsibility of each person in the Service, charged with the duty of interpreting the law, to try to find the true meaning of the statutory provision and not to adopt a strained construction in the belief that he is "protecting the revenue." The revenue is properly protected only when we ascertain and apply the true meaning of the statute.

The Service also has the responsibility of applying and administering the law in a reasonable, practical manner. Issues should only be raised by examining officers when they have merit, never arbitrarily or for trading purposes. At the same time, the examining officer should never hesitate to raise a meritorious issue. It is also important that care be exercised not to raise an issue or to ask a court to adopt a position inconsistent with an established Service position.

Administration should be both reasonable and vigorous. It should be conducted with as little delay as possible and with great courtesy and considerateness. It should never try to overreach, and should be reasonable within the bounds of law and sound administration. It should, however, be vigorous in requiring compliance with law and it should be relentless in its attack on unreal tax devices and fraud.

Introduction

The Internal Revenue Bulletin is the authoritative instrument of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for announcing official rulings and procedures of the Internal Revenue Service and for publishing Treasury Decisions, Executive Orders, Tax Conventions, legislation, court decisions, and other items of general interest. It is published weekly and may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. Bulletin contents of a permanent nature are consolidated semiannually into Cumulative Bulletins, which are sold on a single-copy basis.

It is the policy of the Service to publish in the Bulletin all substantive rulings necessary to promote a uniform application of the tax laws, including all rulings that supersede, revoke, modify, or amend any of those previously published in the Bulletin. All published rulings apply retroactively unless otherwise indicated. Procedures relating solely to matters of internal management are not published; however, statements of internal practices and procedures that affect the rights and duties of taxpayers are published.

Revenue rulings represent the conclusions of the Service on the application of the law to the pivotal facts stated in the revenue ruling. In those based on positions taken in rulings to taxpayers or technical advice to Service field offices, identifying details and information of a confidential nature are deleted to prevent unwarranted invasions of privacy and to comply with statutory requirements.

Rulings and procedures reported in the Bulletin do not have the force and effect of Treasury Department Regulations, but they may be used as precedents. Unpublished rulings will not be relied on, used, or cited as precedents by Service personnel in the disposition of other cases. In applying published rulings and procedures, the effect of subsequent legislation, regulations, court decisions, rulings, and procedures must be considered, and Service personnel and others concerned are cautioned against reaching the same conclusions in other cases unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same.

The Bulletin is divided into four parts as follows:

Part I.—1954 Code.

This part includes rulings and decisions based on provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

Part II.—Treaties and Tax Legislation.

This part is divided into two subparts as follows: Subpart A, Tax Conventions, and Subpart B, Legislation and Related Committee Reports.

Part III.—Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous.

To the extent practicable, pertinent cross references to these subjects are contained in the other Parts and Subparts.

Part IV.—Items of General Interest.

With the exception of the disbarment and suspension list included in this part, none of these announcements is consolidated in the Cumulative Bulletins.

The first Bulletin for each month includes an index for the matters published during the preceding month. These monthly indexes are cumulated on a quarterly and semiannual basis, and are published in the first Bulletin of the succeeding quarterly and semi-annual period, respectively.

The Bulletin Index-Digest System, a research and reference service supplementing the Bulletin, may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. It consists of four Services: Service No. 1, Income Tax; Service No. 2, Estate and Gift Taxes; Service No. 3, Employment Taxes; Service No. 4, Excise Taxes. Each Service consists of a basic volume and a cumulative supplement that provide (1) finding lists of items published in the Bulletin, (2) digests of revenue rulings, revenue procedures, and other published items, and (3) topical indexes of Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and Tax Conventions.

The contents of this publication are not copyrighted and may be reprinted freely. A citation of the Internal Revenue Bulletin as the source would be appropriate.

Announcement Relating to Decisions of the Tax Court

It is the policy of the Internal Revenue Service to announce in the Internal Revenue Bulletin at the earliest practicable date the determination of the Commissioner to acquiesce or not acquiesce in a decision of the Tax Court which disallows a deficiency in tax determined by the Commissioner to be due.

Notice that the Commissioner has acquiesced or nonacquiesced in a decision of the Tax Court relates only to the issue or issues decided adversely to the Government.

Actions of acquiescences in adverse decisions shall be relied on by Revenue officers and others concerned as conclusions of the Service only to the application of the law to the facts in the particular case. Caution should be exercised in extending the application of the decision to a similar case unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same, and consideration should be given to the effect of new legislation, regulations, and rulings as well as subsequent court decisions and actions thereon.

Acquiescence in a decision means acceptance by the Service of the conclusion reached, and does not necessarily mean acceptance and approval of any or all of the reasons assigned by the Court for its conclusions.

No announcements are made in the Bulletin with respect to memorandum opinions of the Tax Court.

The announcements published in the weekly Internal Revenue Bulletins are consolidated semiannually and annually. The semiannual consolidation appears in the first Bulletin for July and in the Cumulative Bulletin for the first half of the year and the annual consolidation appears in the first Bulletin for the following January and in the Cumulative Bulletin for the last half of the year.

The Commissioner ACQUIESCES in the following decisions:

Part I. Rulings and Decisions Under the Internal Revenue Code of 1954

Section 43.—Earned Income [Credits Against Tax]

26 CFR 1.43-1: Earned income credit for taxable years beginning in 1975.

Earned income credit; life insurance salesperson. A self-employed full-time life insurance salesperson, within the meaning of section 3121(d)(3) of the Code, should report the gross commissions received as earned income under section 43(c)(2)(A)(i).

Rev. Rul. 80-194

ISSUE

How should the remuneration received by the life insurance salesperson described below be reported for purposes of the earned income credit provided by section 43 of the Internal Revenue Code?

FACTS

A self-employed salesperson, who is a full-time life insurance salesperson, within the meaning of section 3121 (d) (3) of the Federal Insurance Contributions Act (FICA), received remuneration of $6,500 in the form of commissions for the taxable year 1978 and incurred expenses of $3,000 in connection therewith. The salesperson qualifies for the earned income credit as an eligible individual.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 43(a) of the Code allows an eligible individual a credit against the federal income tax for the taxable year equal to ten percent of the individual's earned income for the year as does not exceed $4,000, for taxable years beginning before January 1, 1979 ($5,000 for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1978), subject to the limitation provided by section 43(b). Under section 43(b) the amount of the credit allowable to an eligible individual is reduced (but not below zero) by an amount equal to ten percent of the individual's adjusted gross income (or, if greater, the earned income) as exceeds $4,000 for taxable years beginning before January 1, 1979. For taxable years beginning after December 31, 1978, the amount of the credit allowable is not to exceed the excess, if any, of (1) $500, over (2) 12.5 percent of so much of the adjusted gross income (or, if greater, the earned income) of the taxpayer for the taxable year as exceeds $6,000.

Under section 43(c) (2) (A) of the Code, the term "earned income" means (i) wages, salaries, tips, and other employee compensation, plus (ii) the amount of the taxpayer's net earnings from self-employment for the taxable year (within the meaning of section 1402(a)). Under section 1402(a), the term "net earnings from self-employment" means the gross income derived by an individual from any trade or business carried on by such individual less the deductions allowed that are attributable to such trade or business. Section 1402(c) provides that the term "trade or business" when used with reference to self-employment income or net earnings from self-employment has the same meaning as when used in section 162 (relating to trade or business expenses) except that such term does not include the performance of service by an individual as an employee. Under section 1402(d), the term "employee" has the same meaning as when used in section 3121(d) (3) of the FICA which provides that the term "employee" includes an individual who performs services for remuneration for any person as a full-time life insurance salesperson.

The salesperson in this case had earned income for the year 1978, inasmuch as the salesperson performed services for, or on behalf of, other persons and received remuneration for such services. Thus, the salesperson is entitled to an earned income credit under section 43 of the Code. Since the salesperson is a full-time life insurance salesperson, the salesperson is a statutory employee under section 3121(d) (3) of the FICA. Therefore, under section 1402(c) of the Code, the salesperson is not carrying on a trade or business.

Accordingly, the commissions received by the salesperson are not earnings from self-employment under section 1402(a) of the Code but are commissions received as a statutory employee and includable in the wages category for purposes of the earned income credit.

HOLDING

The salesperson should report the gross commissions ($6,500) as earned income under section 43(c) (2) (A) (i) of the Code. The salesperson's earned income credit, as computed under section 43, is $150.

Section 48.—Definitions; Special Rules

26 CFR 1.48-1: Definition of section 38 property.

Investment credit; storage facilities; aluminum scrap. A taxpayer built a structure principally to store different grades and forms of aluminum scrap that are not intermingled. This storage of aluminum is not bulk storage of fungible commodities, and the structure does not qualify as section 38 property.

Rev. Rul. 80-195

ISSUE

Whether the storage of aluminum scrap in the taxpayer's structure, in the manner described below, is "bulk storage of fungible commodities" for purposes of section 48 of the Internal Revenue Code.

FACTS

A taxpayer is in the business of producing nonferrous metals alloys, primarily alloys of aluminum. All of the melting and refining activities are housed within a single building. Prior to 1978, taxpayer had no shelter for the raw materials used in production. After receipt, the raw materials were sometimes held in the railroad cars and trucks until used or stockpiled outside the building on adjacent land. This manner of storage, however, had often resulted in deterioration of the raw materials through oxidation and also made it difficult to handle the raw materials during or after rain and when snow was on the ground. During 1978, the taxpayer built a corrugated metal structure adjacent to the building housing the melting and refining activities to provide a sheltered storage area. The structure is erected on a single slab of concrete, contains no interior walls or partitions, and is 150 feet long, 60 feet wide and 20 feet high at the peak in the roof. The structure has lights, but no windows, water, toilet facilities, heating or cooling system, or insulation. It is subject to depreciation and has a useful life in excess of 3 years.

The principal materials stored in the taxpayer's structure is aluminum scrap of various grades. These materials are received in the form of ingots, sows (big slabs), and scrap clips. Scrap aluminum cans, for example, may be received in the form of metal clips. To the extent that skimmings from the molten metal operations contain reusable aluminum, they are recovered and stored in the structure. The stored materials are weighed upon receipt and tagged. The information entered on the tax includes: the name of the vendor, the weight of the material and, in some cases, its grade. Materials having similar characteristics are stored together and are not intermingled with other materials. However, there are no separate bins in the structure and no particular area of the floor has been designated for specific materials. A variety of ways of storing the materials are used. Large size units, for example, may simply be stacked one on top of the other in one area of the structure while smaller size units are frequently bundled or baled and stacked on pallets or skids and stored in a separate area of the structure. The taxpayer's employees store and remove the material from the structure using forklift trucks. No processing of material is done within the structure.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 48(a) of the Code provides, to the extent here pertinent, that the term "section 38 property" means tangible personal property or other tangible property (not including a building and its structural components) but only if such property is used as an integral part of manufacturing, production, or other specified activities, or if it constitutes a facility used in connection with manufacturing, production, or other specified activities for the bulk storage of fungible commodities. Section 38 property includes only property with respect to which depreciation (or amortization in lieu of depreciation) is allowable and having a useful life of 3 years or more.

Section 1.48-1(d)(5)(ii) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that in the case of property constructed after August 15, 1971, such property will be a storage facility only if the facility is used principally for the bulk storage of fungible commodities. Bulk storage means the storage of a commodity in a large mass prior to its consumption or utilization. Thus, if a facility is used to store oranges that have been sorted and boxed, it is not used for bulk storage.

Rev. Rul. 74-3, 1974-1 C.B. 10, provides that partitioned enclosures inside a building devoted to the storing of inventoried parts and assembly elements, such as radios and air conditioners that are individually identified, are not facilities used principally for the bulk storage of fungible commodities.

S. Rep. No. 92-437, 92nd Cong., 1st Sess. 29 (1971), 1972-1 C.B. 559, 575, relating to the Revenue Act of 1971, Pub. L. 92-178, 1972-1 C.B. 443, discusses the bulk storage of fungible commodities requirement, which was added to section 48(a)(1)(b) of the Code. This report states that "bulk storage has reference to the keeping of a commodity in a large mass prior to its consumption or utilization. The commodity stored must be fungible in nature; that is, of such a nature that one part may be used in place of another."

The taxpayer's structure is used principally to store different grades of aluminum that are received in various forms such as ingots, sows, and scrap clips with individual units differing significantly in size and weight, with some material stored in bundled groups and others stored unbundled. Each unit or bundled group is tagged and identified as to vendor, weight, and often its grade.

Stored materials that vary in composition, size, and weight are not fungible in nature. One part cannot be used in place of another part and the materials cannot be estimated and replaced by simple reference to weight, measure and number.

Therefore, the storage of the materials in this case cannot be considered to be the bulk storage of fungible commodities.

HOLDING

The storage of the aluminum scrap in the taxpayer's structure in the manner described is not bulk storage of fungible commodities for purposes of section 48 of the Code. Therefore, the structure used to house the materials does not qualify as "section 38 property" for investment credit purposes.

Section 61.—Gross Income Defined

26 CFR 1.61-2: Compensation for services, including fees, commissions, and similar items.
(Also Sections 83, 1012, 2511, 2512; 1.83-1, 1.1012-1, 25.2511-1, 25.2512-8.)

Transfer of stock by controlling shareholders to corporate employees. The transfer of a corporation's stock by the corporation's two shareholders to three employees for a valid business reason, to retain valuable employees, is compensation, is made for adequate and full consideration, and is not subject to the gift tax.

Rev. Rul. 80-196

ISSUE

What are the federal income and gift tax consequences of a transfer of stock under the situation described below?

FACTS

In 1979, A and B, individual founders of corporation X, each owned 50 percent of the 30,000 shares outstanding of the common stock of X. X employed 200 individuals. On December 31, 1979, A and B each transferred 100 shares of X to N, O, and P as a bonus in consideration of past services to X. N, O, and P were key employees of X, had provided exceptional duties to X for more than 5 years, and were considered valuable to the continued success of X. The stock transferred to them was fully transferable and not subject to any restrictions. Neither A nor B was related to N, O, or P, nor did any special personal relationship exist with N, O, or P.

LAW AND ANALYSIS— INCOME TAX

Section 61 of the Internal Revenue Code provides that gross income means all income from whatever source derived, including compensation for services.

Section 83(a) of the Code provides that when property is transferred to a person in connection with the performance of services, the person who performed the services must include in gross income the excess of (1) the fair market value of the property on the first date that the property is transferable or not subject to a substantial risk of forfeiture over (2) the amount, if any, paid for the property. The taxable year of inclusion is generally the first taxable year in which the rights of the person receiving the property are substantially vested (transferable or not subject to a substantial risk of forfeiture).

Section 83(h) of the Code and the Income Tax Regulations thereunder provide that if section 83(a) applies to a transfer of property, the person for whom the services were performed will be allowed a deduction equal to the amount included in gross income by the person who performed the services, but only to the extent such amount meets the requirements of section 162 or 212 and the regulations thereunder. Where property is substantially vested when transferred, the person for whom the services were performed is allowed a deduction in accordance with that person's method of accounting (in conformity with sections 446 and 461).

Section 1.83-6(d) of the regulations provides that if a shareholder of a corporation transfers property to an employee of such corporation or to an independent contractor (or the beneficiary thereof) in consideration of services performed for the corporation, the transaction shall be considered to be a contribution to the capital of the corporation, and immediately thereafter a transfer by the corporation of the property to the employee or independent contractor.

HOLDINGS—INCOME TAX

1. N, O, and P must include in gross income, for 1979, the fair market value, on the date of transfer, of the stock received. Section 83 of the Code and Rev. Rul. 69-140, 1969-1 C.B. 45.

2. N, O, and P's basis in the stock received is the amount included in gross income for 1979. Section 1012 of the Code.

3. X will be entitled to a deduction, for its taxable year 1979, of an amount equal to the amounts included in income by N, O, and P, provided such deduction meets the requirements of section 162 of the Code. Section 83(h) of the Code and section 1.83-6(d) of the regulations.

4. A and B will not recognize gain or loss as a result of the transfer.

LAW AND ANALYSIS— GIFT TAX

Section 2511 of the Code contains a broad statement as to what transfers constitute taxable gifts. Any voluntary transfer of property or an interest in property, whether direct or indirect, by one to another for less than adequate and full consideration in money or money's worth is subject to the gift tax.

Section 2511(a) of the Code provides that the gift tax shall apply whether the transfer is in trust or otherwise, whether the gift is direct or indirect, and whether the property is real or personal, tangible or intangible.

Section 25.2511-1(g)(1) of the Gift Tax Regulations provides that donative intent on the part of a transferor is not an essential element in the application of the gift tax to a transfer. Whether the gift tax is applicable is based upon the objective facts of the transfer and the circumstances under which it is made, rather than on the subjective motives of the donor. The tax, however, is not applicable to transfers for full and adequate consideration in money or money's worth or to ordinary business transactions. Under section 25.2512-8 of the regulations a transfer of property made in the ordinary course of business (a transaction that is bona fide, at arm's length, and free of donative intent) will be considered as made for adequate and full consideration. Estate of Anderson v. Commissioner, 8 T.C. 706 (1947); Bryan v. Commissioner, 16 T.C. 972 (1951); Weller v. Commissioner, 38 T.C. 790 (1962).

In Weller the court noted that donative intent is not a requisite for a gift for tax purposes. However, the absence of donative intent is relevant under the regulations in determining whether a transfer is made in the ordinary course of business.

Section 2512(b) of the Code provides that where property is transferred for less than an adequate and full consideration in money or money's worth, then the amount by which the value of the property exceeded the value of the consideration shall be deemed a gift and shall be included in computing the amount of gifts during the calendar quarter. However, under section 25.2512-8 of the regulations, a transfer of property made in the ordinary course of business (a transaction which is bona fide, at arm's length, and free from donative intent) will be considered as made for an adequate and full consideration in money or money's worth.

HOLDINGS—GIFT TAX

The transfer of 100 shares by each of A and B to each of N, O, and P were in the ordinary course of business, since they were motivated by a valid business reason, that is, retaining valuable personnel in the employment of X. Thus, the transfers are considered as made for adequate and full consideration for gift tax purposes. Therefor, the transfers by A and B are not subject to the gift tax.

Section 83.—Property Transferred in Connection with Performance of Services

26 CFR 1.83-1: Property transferred in connection with the performance of services.

Treatment of a transfer of corporate stock by controlling shareholders to employees of the corporation. See Rev. Rul. 80-196, page 7.

Section 103.—Interest on Certain Government Obligations

26 CFR 1.103-8: Interest on bonds to finance certain exempt facilities.

Industrial development bonds; reusable beverage container facilities. Machinery, equipment, and other facilities used by a beverage manufacturer to package beverages in reusable containers because a state law prohibited sale of beverages in nonreturnable containers do not qualify as solid waste disposal facilities under section 103(b)(4)(E) of the Code. The interest on industrial development bonds issued by various cities in the state to finance the facilities will not be excludable from the gross incomes of the bondholders under section 103(a).

Rev. Rul. 80-197

ISSUE

Do machinery, equipment, and other facilities acquired by a beverage manufacturer to package beverages in reusable containers qualify as solid waste disposal facilities under section 103(b)(4)(E) of the Internal Revenue Code so that the interest on industrial development bonds issued to finance their acquisition is excludable from the gross incomes of the bondholders under section 103(a)(1) of the Code?

FACTS

The taxpayer, a beverage manufacturer, acquired machinery, equipment, and other facilities necessary to package all its beverages in reusable containers because a new state law prohibited the sale of beverages in "nonreturnable" containers. The purpose of this law was to reduce litter. The law specifies that a nominal deposit be paid upon the purchase of each beverage and that the deposit be refunded upon return of the beverage container. However, the law does not specify what type of beverage container is to be used (that is, reusable vs. nonreusable).

Before the enactment of this nonreturnable container law, the taxpayer's facilities were primarily adapted for providing beverages in disposable nonreusable containers.

The taxpayer has determined that the cost of using reusable containers is less than the cost of providing new containers for each sale cycle.

To package all of its beverages in reusable containers, the taxpayer acquired certain machinery, equipment, and other facilities. The taxpayer is financing the cost of this project with industrial development bonds to be issued by various cities located in state X.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 103(a)(1) of the Code provides that gross income does not include interest on the obligations of a state, a territory, or a possession of the United States, or any political subdivision of any of the foregoing, or of the District of Columbia.

Section 103(b)(1) of the Code provides that, except as otherwise provided in section 103(b), any industrial development bond shall be treated as an obligation not described in section 103(a)(1).

Section 103(b)(4)(E) of the Code provides that section 103(b)(1) shall not apply to any obligation that is issued as part of an issue substantially all of the proceeds of which are to be used to provide sewage or solid waste disposal facilities.

Section 1.103-8(f)(2)(ii)(a) of the Income Tax Regulations defines the term "solid waste disposal facilities" as any property or portion thereof used for the collection, storage, treatment, utilization, processing, or final disposal of solid waste. Only expenditures for that portion of property that is a solid waste disposal facility qualify as expenditures for solid waste disposal facilities. Whether a collection or storage facility qualifies as a solid waste disposal facility depends upon all of the facts and circumstances.

Section 1.103-8(f)(2)(ii)(b) of the regulations provides that:

> The term "solid waste" shall have the same meaning as in section 203(4) of the Solid Waste Disposal Act (42 U.S.C. Sec. 3252(4)), except that for purposes of this paragraph, material will not qualify as solid waste unless, on the date of issue of the obligations issued to provide the facility to dispose of such waste material, it is property which is useless, unused, unwanted, or discarded solid material which has no market or other value at the place were it is located. . . . The term "solid waste" means garbage, refuse, and other discarded solid materials, including solid-waste materials resulting from industrial, commercial, and agricultural operations, and from community activities, but does not include solids or dissolved material in domestic sewage or other significant pollutants in water resources, such as silt, dissolved or suspended solids in industrial waste water effluents, dissolved materials in irrigation return flows or other common water pollutants.

Section 1.103-8(f)(2)(ii)(C) of the regulations provides that a facility which disposes of solid waste by reconstituting, converting, or otherwise recycling it into material that is not waste shall also qualify as a solid waste disposal facility if "solid waste" constitutes at least 65 percent, by weight or volume, of the total materials introduced into the recycling process.

In the instant case the machinery, equipment, and other facilities acquired by the taxpayer can not qualify as solid waste disposal facilities if the containers processed by such facilities are not considered solid waste. For any material to be solid waste, it must be useless, unwanted, or discarded solid material that has no market or other value at the place where it is located.

The amount of any deposit mandated by the state is only an inducement to the beverage consumers to return the containers and has no relation to the container's value. If the reusable container is not returned, but is discarded, it can potentially become "solid waste" as the term is defined in section 1.103-8(f)(2)(ii) of the regulations. However, once the reusable container is returned to the taxpayer and the deposit is refunded to the retailer, the reusable container is not useless, unwanted, or discarded solid material. Upon its return, the container has been reintroduced into the distribution process and may be reused, barring breakage or damage, numerous times. Every time the beverage container is reused, the taxpayer has eliminated the need to purchase a new container. Therefore, even though a market for used containers does not exist by virtue of the mandatory deposit, the reusable containers do have value to the taxpayer because reuse of these containers is less costly than the purchase of new containers.

HOLDING

The used containers are not "solid waste" within the meaning of section 1.103-8(f)(2)(ii)(b) of the regulations and the facilities acquired by the taxpayer to package beverages in such containers are not solid waste disposal facilities within the meaning of section 103(b)(4)(E) of the Code. The interest on the bonds will not be excludable from the gross incomes of the bondholders under section 103(a).

Section 351.—Transfer to Corporation Controlled by Transferor

26 CFR 1.351-1: Transfer to corporation controlled by transferor.
(Also Section 482; 1.482-1.)

Controlled corporations; transfers; accounts payable and accounts receivable. An individual transferred all of the assets and liabilities of a sole proprietorship, which included accounts payable and accounts receivable, to a new corporation in exchange for all of the corporate stock. Both the individual prior to the transfer and the new corporation used the cash method of accounting. There was a valid business purpose for the transfer, and the individual had neither accumulated the accounts receivable nor prepaid any of the accounts payable in anticipation of the incorporation. The transfer is an exchange qualifying under section 351 of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 80-198

ISSUE

Under the circumstances described below, do the nonrecognition of gain or loss provisions of section 351 of the Internal Revenue Code apply to a transfer of the operating assets of an ongoing sole proprietorship (including unrealized accounts receivable) to a corporation in exchange solely for the common stock of a corporation and the assumption by the corporation of the proprietorship liabilities?

FACTS

Individual A conducted a medical practice as a sole proprietorship, the income of which was reported on the cash receipts and disbursements method of accounting. A transferred to a newly organized corporation all of the operating assets of the sole proprietorship in exchange for all of the stock of the corporation, plus the assumption by the corporation of all of the liabilities of the sole proprietorship. The purpose of the incorporation was to provide a form of business organization that would be more conducive to the planned expansion of the medical services to be made available by the business enterprise.

The assets transferred were tangible assets having a fair market value of $40,000 and an adjusted basis of $30,000 and unrealized trade accounts receivable having a face amount of $20,000 and an adjusted basis of zero. The liabilities assumed by the corporation consisted of trade accounts payable in the face amount of $10,000. The liabilities assumed by the corporation also included a mortgage liability, related to the tangible property transferred, of $10,000. A had neither accumulated the accounts receivable nor prepaid any of the liabilities of the sole proprietorship in a manner inconsistent with normal business practices in anticipation of the incorporation. If A had paid the trade accounts payable liabilities, the amounts paid would have been deductible by A as ordinary and necessary business expenses under section 162 of the Code. The new corporation continued to utilize the cash receipts and disbursements method of accounting.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

The applicable section of the Code is section 351(a), which provides that no gain or loss shall be recognized when property is transferred to a corporation in exchange solely for stock and securities and the transferor is in control (as defined by section 368(c)) of the transferee corporation immediately after the transfer.

In Hempt Bros., Inc. v. United States, 490 F.2d 1172 (3rd Cir. 1974), cert. denied, 419 U.S. 826 (1974), the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit held, as the Internal Revenue Service contended, that a cash basis transferee corporation was taxable on the monies it collected on accounts receivable that had been transferred to it by a cash basis partnership in a transaction described in section 351(a) of the Code. The corporate taxpayer contended that it was not obligated to include the accounts receivable in income; rather the transferor partnership should have been taxed on the stock the partnership received under the assignment of income doctrine which is predicated on the well established general principle that income be taxed to the party that earned it.

The court in Hempt Bros. solved the conflict between the assignment of income doctrine and the statutory nonrecognition provisions of section 351 of the Code by reasoning that if the cash basis transferor were taxed on the transfer of the accounts receivable, the specific congressional intent reflected in section 351(a) that the incorporation of an ongoing business should be facilitated by making the incorporation tax free would be frustrated.

The facts of the instant case are similar to those in Hempt Bros. in that there was a valid business purpose for the transfer of the accounts receivable along with all of the assets and liabilities of A's proprietorship to a corporate transferee that would continue the business of the transferor. Further, A had neither accumulated the accounts receivable nor prepaid any of the account payable liabilities of the sole proprietorship in anticipation of the incorporation, which is an indication that, under the facts and circumstances of the case, the transaction was not designed for tax avoidance.

HOLDING

The transfer by A of the operating assets of the sole proprietorship (including unrealized accounts receivable) to the corporation in exchange solely for the common stock of the corporation and the assumption by the corporation of the proprietorship liabilities (including accounts payable) is an exchange within the meaning of section 351(a) of the Code. Therefore, no gain or loss is recognized to A with respect to the property transferred, including the accounts receivable. For transfers occurring on or after November 6, 1978 (the effective date of the Revenue Act of 1978, Pub. L. 95-600, 1978-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1, 88, with respect to sections 357(c)(3) and 358(d)(2) of the Code) the assumption of the trade accounts payable that would give rise to a deduction if A had paid them is not, pursuant to section 357(c)(3), considered as an assumption of a liability for purposes of sections 357(c)(1) and 358(d). See Rev. Rul. 80-199, this page, this Bulletin, for transfers occurring before November 6, 1978, which holds that trade accounts payable transferred to a corporation in a transaction to which section 351(a) applies are not liabilities for the purposes of sections 357(c) and 358(d) if the transferor of the accounts payable could have deducted the amounts paid in satisfaction thereof under section 162 if the transferor had paid these amounts in satisfaction of the payables prior to the exchange. The corporation, under the cash receipts and disbursements method of accounting, will report in its income the account receivables as collected, and will be allowed deductions under section 162 for the payments it makes to satisfy the assumed trade accounts payable when such payments are made.

A's basis in the stock received in the exchange of property for stock under section 358(a)(1) of the Code is $20,000 which is calculated by decreasing A's $30,000 basis in the assets transferred by the $10,000 mortgage liability under sections 358(a)(1)(A)(ii) and 358(d)(1). No adjustment to such basis is made under section 358(a)(1)(A)(ii) because of the assumption by the corporation of the $10,000 in accounts payable inasmuch as the general rule of section 358(d)(1), which requires the basis in the stock received to be decreased by the liabilities assumed, does not apply by reason of section 358(d)(2), which provides that section 358(d)(1) does not apply to the amount of any liabilities defined in section 357(c)(3) such as accounts payable that would have been deductible by A as ordinary and necessary business expenses under section 162 in the taxable year paid if A had paid these liabilities prior to the exchange. See Rev. Rul. 80-199, with respect to transfers which have occurred before November 6, 1978 (the date of the enactment of the Revenue Act of 1978).

LIMITATIONS

Section 351 of the Code does not apply to a transfer of accounts receivable which constitute an assignment of an income right in a case such as Brown v. Commissioner, 40 B.T.A. 565 (1939), aff'd 115 F.2d 337 (2d Cir. 1940). In Brown, an attorney transferred to a corporation, in which he was the sole owner, a one-half interest in a claim for legal services performed by the attorney and his law partner. In exchange, the attorney received additional stock of the corporation. The claim represented the corporation's only asset. Subsequent to the receipt by the corporation of the proceeds of the claim, the attorney gave all of the stock of the corporation to his wife. The United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit found that the transfer of the claim for the fee to the corporation had no purpose other than to avoid taxes and held that in such a case the intervention of the corporation would not prevent the attorney from being liable for the tax on the income which resulted from services under the assignment of income rule of Lucas v. Earl, 281 U.S. 111 (1930). Accordingly, in a case of a transfer to a controlled corporation of an account receivable in respect of services rendered where there is a tax avoidance purpose for the transaction (which might be evidenced by the corporation not conducting an ongoing business), the Internal Revenue Service will continue to apply assignment of income principles and require that the transferor of such a receivable include it in income when received by the transferee corporation.

Likewise, it may be appropriate in certain situations to allocate income, deductions, credits, or allowances to the transferor or transferee under section 482 of the Code when the timing of the incorporation improperly separates income from related expenses. See Rooney v. United States, 305 F.2d 681 (9th Cir. 1962), where a farming operation was incorporated in a transaction described in section 351(a) after the expenses of the crop had been incurred but before the crop had been sold and income realized. The transferor's tax return contained all of the expenses but none of the farming income to which the expenses related. The United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit held that the expenses could be allocated under section 482 to the corporation, to be matched with the income to which the expenses related. Similar adjustments may be appropriate where some assets, liabilities, or both, are retained by the transferor and such retention results in the income of the transferor, transferee, or both, not being clearly reflected.

Rul. 69-442 revoked.

Rev. Rul. 80-199

ISSUE

Whether the term "liabilities" as used in sections 357 and 358(d) of the Internal Revenue Code prior to amendment by the Revenue Act of 1978, Pub. L. 95-600, 1978-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1, 88, on November 6, 1978, includes accounts payable deductible under section 162 of the Code.

FACTS

Individual A conducted a small contracting business as a sole proprietorship, the income of which was reported on the cash receipts and disbursements method of accounting. On January 1, 1978, A transferred to a newly organized corporation all of the assets of the sole proprietorship in exchange for all of the stock of the corporation, plus the assumption by the corporation of all of the liabilities of the sole proprietorship, in a transaction that met the requirements of section 351(a) of the Code. The transactor did not lack a business purpose. The assets transferred were tangible assets having a fair market value of $20,000 and an adjusted basis of $10,000, and accounts receivable having a fair market value of $30,000 and an adjusted basis of zero dollars. The liabilities assumed by the corporation consisted solely of accounts payable of the sole proprietorship in the face amount of $20,000. The accounts would have been deductible by A as ordinary and necessary business expenses under section 162 if A had paid them. The new corporation continued to utilize the cash receipts and disbursements method of accounting.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

The applicable sections of the Code are 351, relating to nonrecognition in a transfer to a corporation controlled by the transferor; 357, relating to assumption of liability; 358, relating to basis to distributees; and 362, relating to basis to corporations.

Section 357(a) provides, in part, as a general rule that the assumption of liabilities on the part of a corporate transferee in connection with a section 351 exchange, or the acquisition by the transferee of property subject to a liability in such an exchange, shall not be treated as a receipt of money or other property by the transferor.

Section 357(c)(1) prior to amendment by the Revenue Act of 1978 provides, in part, that in the case of an exchange to which section 351 applies if the sum of the amount of the liabilities assumed, plus the amount of the liabilities to which the property is subject, exceeds the total of the adjusted basis of the property transferred pursuant to such exchange, then such excess shall be considered as a gain from the sale or exchange of a capital asset or of property which is not a capital asset, as the case may be.

Section 358(a)(1) of the Code provides, in part, that in the case of an exchange to which section 351 applies the basis of the property permitted to be received under section 351 without the recognition of gain or loss shall be the same as that of the property exchanged (A) decreased by (i) the fair market value of any other property (except money) received by the taxpayer, (ii) the amount of money received by the taxpayer, and (iii) the amount of loss to the taxpayer which was recognized on such exchange, and (B) increased by (i) the amount which was treated as a dividend, and (ii) the amount of gain to the taxpayer which was recognized on such exchange (not including any portion of such gain which was treated as a dividend).

Section 358(d) of the Code prior to the amendment by the Revenue Act of 1978 provides that if as part of the consideration to the taxpayer, another party to the exchange, assumed a liability of the taxpayer, or acquired from the taxpayer property subject to a liability, such assumption or acquisition (in the amount of the liability) shall, for purposes of this section, be treated as money received by the taxpayer on the exchange.

Since the adjusted basis of the assets transferred by A to the corporation was $10,000 and the accounts payable assumed by the corporation was $20,000, the primary question for consideration is whether the transfer of the assets and liabilities of A's sole proprietorship to the corporation results in gain under section 357(c) of the Code. In Raich v. Commissioner, 46 T.C. 604 (1966), the Tax Court of the United States directed its attention to such a question in a case where the taxpayer transferred assets of a business conducted as a sole proprietorship, the income from which was reported on the cash receipts and disbursements method of accounting, to a newly formed corporation in exchange for all of the stock of the corporation plus the assumption by the corporation of all of the liabilities of the sole proprietorship (trade accounts payable and notes payable) in a transaction meeting the requirements of section 351(a). The court held that the trade accounts receivable had a zero basis, and that since the total liabilities, consisting primarily of trade accounts payable, assumed by the corporation were in excess of the adjusted basis of all of the assets transferred, the taxpayer (transferor) incurred a gain under section 357(c) (as it existed prior to the amendment by the Revenue Act of 1978). In Rev. Rul. 69-442, 1969-2 C.B. 53, the Service indicated that it would follow the decision in Raich v. Commissioner and apply section 357(c) to other situations involving similar facts.

In Focht v. Commissioner, 68 T.C. 223 (1977), acq., page 5, this Bulletin, the taxpayer, in 1970, transferred to a newly-formed corporation all of the assets of a business conducted as a sole proprietorship, the income of which was reported on the cash receipts and disbursements method of accounting, in exchange for all of the stock of the corporation plus an assumption by the corporation of all of the liabilities of the sole proprietorship in a transaction meeting the requirements of section 351(a) of the Code. These liabilities consisted of the liabilities actually assumed by the corporation as well as liabilities to which certain of the property transferred was subject. The liabilities assumed by the corporation consisted primarily of trade accounts payable. The Internal Revenue Service treated all of the liability obligations including the accounts payable as liabilities within the meaning of section 357(c), and determined that the taxpayer incurred a gain, by reason of section 357(c), in the amount by which the liabilities assumed by the corporation exceeded the adjusted basis of the assets transferred. The Tax Court of the United States held that an obligation should not be treated as a liability, under sections 357 and 358(d), to the extent that its payment would have been deductible (under section 162) if made by the transferor. The court held that section 357(c) did not apply to the account payable liabilities for this reason and overruled its prior decision in Raich on this point.

The Service will follow the decision in Focht.

HOLDING

No gain is realized by A on the exchange of property for stock by reason of section 357(c) of the Code because the accounts payable assumed by the corporation would have been deductible by A as ordinary and necessary business expenses under section 162 in the taxable year paid if A had paid these liabilities prior to the exchange. A's basis in the stock received in the exchange of property for stock under section 358(a)(1) is the $10,000 basis that A had in the property transferred to the corporation. No adjustment to such basis is made under section 358(a)(1)(A)(ii) because of the assumption by the corporation of the $20,000 in accounts payable inasmuch as section 358(d) does not apply to the accounts payable. Likewise, no adjustment to such basis is made under section 358(a)(1)(B)(ii) because section 357(c) does not apply to the accounts payable.

Transactions which occur on or after November 6, 1978 will be govrened by sections 357(c and 358(d) as amended by the Revenue Act of 1978.

COURT DECISIONS THAT THE INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE WILL NOT FOLLOW

The Service will not follow the rationale of the decision of the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit in Thatcher v. Commissioner, 533 F.2d 1114 (9th Cir. 1976) which involved a transaction similar to the facts of this revenue ruling. The court agreed with the Service that the transferors must recognize gain under section 357(c) of the Code on the incorporation transfer, but the court also concluded that the transferor should receive a deduction for trade accounts payable discharged by the transferee corporation to the extent of the accounts receivable or the gain recognized under section 357(c), whichever is less.

The Service also will not follow the rationale of the decision of the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit in Bongiovanni v. Commissioner, 470 F.2d 921 (2d Cir. 1972), involving a similar transaction and which held that the term "liabilities," as used in section 357(c) of the Code, did not include all liabilities which are included for accounting purposes, but was meant to apply only to what might be called "tax" liabilities, that is, liens in excess of tax costs, particularly mortgages encumbering property transferred in an exchange within the meaning of section 351. The above mentioned language offers no clear guidance as to the meaning of the terms "accounting" liabilities and "tax" liabilities or to making a distinction between them. For example, to the extent that the Bongiovanni decision could be interpreted as suggested by Footnote 6 in Thatcher as holding that "liabilities" for the purpose of section 357(c) means only "the excess of secured debts over the transferor's adjusted basis in the assets transferred" (italics supplied), the Service would view such an interpretation as being unduly restrictive of the term "liabilities."

EFFECT ON OTHER REVENUE RULINGS

Rev. Rul. 69-442 is revoked.

Further, this revenue ruling is not to be relied upon for an interpretation of the term "liability" for any provision of the Code or Income Tax Regulations thereunder, other than sections 357 or 358(d), because in Focht the Tax Court properly limited its interpretation of the term to those sections.

SECTION 7805(b) OF THE CODE

Pursuant to the authority contained in section 7805(b) of the Code, this revenue ruling will not be applied to a transferee corporation that, pursuant to section 362(a)(1) of the Code, increased the basis of the property acquired in a transaction to which section 351 applied by the amount of the gain recognized by the transferor on such transfer under section 357(c) and Rev. Rul. 69-442. Thus, a transferee corporation will not be required to reduce the basis in the property received by the amount of such gain recognized by the transferor unless a claim for refund or credit relating to the gain is filed by the transferor because of the revocation of Rev. Rul. 69-442.

Rev. Rul. 80-200

ISSUE

Is the nonprofit organization that provides for the placement of orphan children from foreign countries in the manner described below operated exclusively for charitable purposes within the meaning of section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code?

FACTS

A nonprofit organization, which otherwise qualifies for exemption under section 501(c)(3) of the Code, was formed for the purpose of arranging for the placement of orphan children living in foreign countries with adoptive parents living in the United States. It receives applications from residents of the United States who desire to adopt a foreign-born orphan child, and conducts an investigation to determine whether the applicants are qualified as adoptive parents. It also locates, by means of its contacts with agencies and institutions in foreign countries, orphan children who are available for adoption in the United States.

The organization makes all the necessary arrangements for and pays the expenses of the child's departure and travel to the United States. It also handles all required administrative and legal proceedings, and it assumes financial responsibility for each child until the adoption proceedings have been completed. Its primary sources of support are fees paid by the adoptive parents and contributions from the general public.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 501(c)(3) of the Code provides for exemption from federal income tax of organizations organized and operated exclusively for charitable purposes.

Section 1.501(c)(3)-1(d)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that the term "charitable" is used in section 501(c)(3) of the Code in its generally accepted legal sense.

The term "charitable," in its generally accepted legal sense, includes the care of orphans.

By arranging for the placement and adoption of orphans the organization is engaged in charitable activities.

HOLDING

An organization that arranges for the placement of orphan children from foreign countries in homes of adoptive parents living in the United States, in the manner described above, is operated exclusively for charitable purposes and is exempt from federal income tax under section 501(c)(3) of the Code.

APPLICATION INSTRUCTIONS

Even though an organization considers itself within the scope of this revenue ruling, it must file an application on Form 1023, Application for Recognition of Exemption, in order to be recognized by the Service as exempt under section 501(c)(3) of the Code. See sections 1.501(a)-1 and 1.508-1(a) of the regulations. In accordance with the instructions to Form 1023, the application should be filed with the District Director of Internal Revenue for the key district indicated therein.

Rev. Rul. 80-201

ISSUE

Does section 1031 of the Tax Reform Act of 1976, Pub. L. 94-455, 1976-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1, 96, which amended section 904(a) of the Internal Revenue Code to provide that the limitation on the foreign tax credit shall be computed using only the overall method, supersede the foreign tax credit per-country limitation provided in United States income tax treaties?

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Subject to certain limitations provided in section 904 of the Code, section 901(b) authorizes qualifying United States taxpayers to claim a foreign tax credit for the amount of any income tax paid or accrued to any foreign country or to any possession of the United States.

Prior to its amendment by the 1976 Act, section 904 of the Code provided for both a per-country and an overall limitation in computing the total amount of allowable foreign tax credit. However, section 1031 of the 1976 Act amended section 904 by repealing the per-country limitation.

The present section 904 is inconsistent with treaties that provide for the per-country limitation by incorporating the foreign tax credit provisions of the Code in force as of dates specified in such treaties and at such time the Code provided for the per-country limitation. See Article XV of United States-Republic of Austria Income Tax Convention, 1957-2 C.B. 985, 990.

The present section 904 is not inconsistent with other treaties, such as those treaties that incorporate the foreign tax credit provisions of the Code as it may be amended from time to time or any treaty that provides for a per-country limitation but specifically indicates that changes in United States domestic law which do not eliminate the general principle of the foreign tax credit are not inconsistent with the treaty. See Article 20 of the United States-Poland Income Tax Convention, 1977-1 C.B. 416, 423.

Section 7852(d) of the Code provides that no provision of the Code shall apply in any case where its application would be contrary to any treaty obligation in effect on the date of enactment of the 1954 Code. This section indicates, in effect, that a mere inconsistency, without more, between a provision in a tax treaty and an amendment to the Code is not enough by itself to repeal the treaty provision. However, the general provision of section 7852(d) does not prevent Congress from passing legislation that, in effect, overrides a treaty provision.

Article VI, Clause 2 of the United States Constitution provides that both laws of the United States and treaties shall be the supreme law of the land.

Because treaties and acts of Congress are given equal weight by the Constitution as domestic law, Congress has the authority to overrule the effect of a treaty by subsequent legislation. When an act of Congress and a treaty relate to the same subject, the courts will endeavor to construe them so as to give effect to both, if this can be done without violating the language of either. The courts do not favor repudiation of an earlier treaty by implication and require clear indications that Congress, in enacting subsequent inconsistent legislation, meant to supersede the earlier treaty. Head Money Cases, 112 U.S. 580, 597-99 (1884); United States v. Payne, 264 U.S. 446, 448 (1924); Menominee Tribe of Indians v. United States, 391 U.S. 404, 413 (1967). An example of such a clear indication is the presence of subsequent inconsistent legislation together with a committee report indicating that Congress intended such legislation to supersede the earlier treaty. In Cook v. United States, 288 U.S. 102 (1933), subsequent inconsistent legislation was held not to supersede an earlier treaty provision because neither the committee reports nor the debates on the subsequent legislation mentioned the earlier treaty.

Not only is section 904, as amended by section 1031 of the 1976 Act, inconsistent wtih the aforementioned treaty provisions, but also the committee reports accompanying section 1031 express congressional intent to supersede those treaty provisions. For example, S. Rep. No. 94-938, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. 237 (1976), 1976-3 C.B. (Vol. 3) 49, 275, in discussing the elimination of the per-country limitation, states:

> It is the committee's intent that all existing treaties are to be applied consistently with this amendment by using the overall limitation in computing the allowable foreign tax credit.[19]

Footnote 19 adds the following:

> The committee further intends that . . . the amendments made by the committee's bill are to be used in computing the credit allowed all treaties.

This same language appears in H.R. Rep. No. 94-658, 94th Cong., 1st Sess. 226 (1976), 1976-3 C.B. (Vol. 2) 918.

These passages indicate a clear Congressional intent to have this amendment in the Act supersede any conflicting foreign tax credit provisions in the treaties. In addition, the reference to "all treaties" in S. Rep. No. 94-938 indicates that Congress intended the repeal of the per-country limitation to be applicable to treaty obligations in effect on the enactment date of the 1954 Code, and thus subject to section 7852(d), as well as to subsequently adopted treaty obligations.

HOLDING

Section 1031 of the 1976 Act supersedes, for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1976, the foreign tax credit per-country limitation provided in United States income tax treaties.

TITLE 26.—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER I, SUBCHAPTER A, PART 1.—INCOME TAX; TAXABLE YEARS BEGINNING AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1953

Exclusion from subpart F income of certain earnings of insurance companies

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Final regulations.

SUMMARY: This document provides final Income Tax Regulations under section 954(c)(3)(B) and (C) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, which provides an exclusion from subpart F income of certain earnings of insurance companies. Changes to the applicable tax law were made by the Tax Reform Act of 1976 [Pub. L. 94-455, 1976-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1]. This document also makes certain related, clarifying changes to the regulations. These regulations provide necessary guidance to the public for compliance with the law and affect under subpart F of the Code each United States shareholder owning the stock of a controlled foreign corporation that is an insurance company.

EFFECTIVE DATE: The regulations are, where indicated, effective for taxable years of controlled foreign corporations beginning after December 31, 1975, and April 23, 1979, and for taxable years of United States shareholders whose taxable years end with or within those taxable years of the controlled foreign corporations.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

On April 23, 1979, the Federal Register published proposed amendments to the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) under section 954(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (44 FR 23883). The amendments were proposed to conform the regulations to section 1023 of the Tax Reform Act of 1976 (Pub. L. 94-455, 90 Stat. 1620) and to clarify existing regulations under section 954(c)(3)(B). A public hearing was not held since none was requested. After consideration of all relevant matters presented by interested persons regarding the proposed amendments, this Treasury decision adopts the amendments to the Income Tax Regulations set forth in this document.

DESCRIPTION OF REGULATIONS

Section 954(c)(3)(B) provides, in pertinent part, that foreign personal holding company income under subpart F does not include certain dividends, interest, and gains derived from investments made by a controlled foreign corporation which is an insurance company of its unearned premiums or reserves which are ordinary and necessary for the proper conduct of its insurance business. Income eligible for this exclusion must be received from a person other than a related person. Existing regulations under § 1.954-2(d)(3) fail to establish a rule for computation of the amount of the exclusion. Section 1.954-2(d)(3) as amended by this document corrects this omission and in effect provides that the maximum amount excludable is limited to a portion of eligible income derived from investment of that proportionate amount of a controlled foreign corporation's assets which is equal to its unearned premiums and reserves. The amendment defines eligible income as dividends, interest, and the excess of gains over losses from sales or exchanges of stock or securities, other than amounts taxed to United States shareholders under section 952(a)(1), relating to income derived from the insurance of United States risks, and other than amounts received from related persons.

Section 1.954-2(d)(4) of the amendments with respect to section 954(c)(3)(C) reflects the enactment of section 1023 of the Tax Reform Act of 1976, which added an exclusion from foreign personal holding company income. This added exclusion parallels in many respects the exclusion under section 954(c)(3)(B) and § 1.954-2(d)(3). However, the maximum amount excludable is limited in effect to a portion of eligible income derived from investment of that proportionate amount of a controlled foreign corporation's assets which is equal to one-third of premiums earned on casualty insurance contracts which are not directly or indirectly attributable to the insurance or reinsurance of risks of related persons. Section 1.954-2(d)(4) of the proposed amendments defined eligible income as it was defined in proposed § 1.954-2(d)(3) reduced, however, by the income excluded under section 954(c)(3)(B) and § 1.954-2(d)(3).

COMMENTS FROM THE PUBLIC

Comments from the public questioned the methods for computing the exclusions under § 1.954-2(d)(3) and (4). Suggestions were made that if eligible income is defined in a way which does not take into account certain dividends, interest, and the excess of gains over losses from the sale or exchange of stock or securities, then a portion of the assets attributable to ineligible income should likewise not be taken into account in any exclusion formula. This suggestion fails to recognize that a portion of the unearned premiums or reserves under paragraph (d)(3) of § 1.954-2 and a portion of the one-third of earned premiums under paragraph (d)(4) of § 1.954-2, as the case may be, would also not be taken into account in any exclusion formula. The final regulations adopted by this document reflect the fact that a portion of a foreign insurance company's assets equal to its unearned premiums or reserves under section 954(c)(3)(B), or its earned premiums under section 954(c)(3)(C), is invested in assets which give rise to income which is either taken into account as subpart F income under other provisions (and hence is not taken into account under section 954(c)) or is not eligible for the exclusion from foreign personal holding company income under section 954(3)(B) or (C).

Some comments also suggested that the assets used in the exclusion formula under § 1.954-2(d)(3) and (4) should include only those assets which actually produce income. The final regulations adopt this suggestion.

The definition of the term "eligible income" under § 1.954-2(d)(4)(ii) of the proposed amendments is revised in response to comments. The final regulations define this term as it is defined in § 1.954-2(d)(3)(iv).

In response to other comments, the determination of the amount of the exclusion under § 1.954-2(d)(3) applies only for taxable years of controlled foreign corporations beginning after April 23, 1979. For taxable years beginning before that date, any reasonable method will be recognized.

Evaluation of the effectiveness of these regulations after issuance will be based upon comments received from the public and from offices within the Department of the Treasury and the Internal Revenue Service.

DRAFTING INFORMATION

The principal author of these regulations is Donald K. Duffy, of the Legislation and Regulations Division of the Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service. However, personnel from other offices of the Internal Revenue Service and Treasury Department participated in developing the regulations, both on matters of substance and style.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

After consideration of all relevant matters presented by interested persons regarding the proposed amendments to the regulations under section 954(c)(3), the following amendments to the regulations are hereby adopted:

Section 1.954-2 is amended by revising paragraph (d)(3)(i), by adding new subdivisions (iii), (iv), and (v) to paragraph (d)(3), and by adding a new subparagraph (4) to paragraph (d). These revised and added provisions read as set forth below:

§ 1.954-2 Foreign personal holding company income.

* * * * *

(d) Certain income received from unrelated persons in the active conduct of a trade or business. * * *

(3) Dividends, interest, and gains on securities derived by insurance companies from investments of unearned premiums or reserves—(i) In general. Foreign personal holding company income of a controlled foreign corporation which is an insurance company does not include certain income, determined under subdivision (iii) of this paragraph (d)(3), derived from investments made by the company of its unearned premiums or reserves which are ordinary and necessary for the proper conduct of its insurance business. Although the name, charter powers and subjection to the insurance laws of a foreign country are significant in determining the business which a controlled foreign corporation is authorized and intends to carry on, the character of the business actually done in the taxable year determines whether it is an insurance company for purposes of section 954(c)(3)(B). The term "unearned premium," as used in this paragraph (d)(3), means the amount which will cover the cost of carrying the insurance risk for the period for which the premium has been paid in advance.

* * * * *

(iii) Amount of exclusion. The maximum amount eligible for the exclusion under section 954(c)(3)(B) and subdivision (i) of this paragraph (d)(3) is an amount equal to the eligible income (as defined in subdivision (iv) of this paragraph (d)(3)) of a controlled foreign corporation which is an insurance company multiplied by a fraction. The numerator of the fraction is the mean of the corporation's unearned premiums or reserves described in subdivision (ii) of this paragraph (d)(3) at the beginning and end of its taxable year. The denominator of the fraction is the mean of the reserve assets held by the corporation at the beginning and end of its taxable year. Reserve assets are assets which may give rise to foreign personal holding company income described in section 954(c)(1) (without regard to modifications and adjustments under section 954(c)(3) and (4)). The amount of reserve assets attributable to real property and stock is determined on the basis of their fair market value. Any other reserve assets are taken into account on the basis of their adjusted basis for purposes of determining gain on their sale, exchange, or other disposition.

(iv) Eligible income. Eligible income equals the total amount of the dividends, interest, and the excess of gains over losses from sales or exchanges of stock or securities, reduced by the following amounts:

(A) The dividends, interest, and the excess of gains over losses described in this paragraph (d)(3)(iv) which are taxed under section 952(a)(1). See section 953 and § 1.953-1(a). This reduction is apportioned ratably between dividends and interest received from, and the excess of gains over losses from sales or exchanges to or with, related and unrelated persons (as defined in § 1.954-1(e)); and

(B) The dividends, interest, and the excess of gains over losses described in this paragraph (d)(3)(iv) which are received from, or derived from sales or exchanges to or with, related persons (as defined in § 1.954-1(e)(1)). The amount of the income described in this paragraph (d)(3)(iv)(B) which is received or derived from related persons does not include income described in subdivision (iv)(A) of this paragraph (d)(3) which is considered to be received or derived from related persons.

(v) Effective date. Subdivisions (iii) and (iv) of this paragraph (d)(3) apply to taxable years of controlled foreign corporations beginning after April 23, 1979, and for taxable years of United States shareholders whose taxable years end with or within those taxable years of the controlled foreign corporations. For taxable years of a controlled foreign corporation beginning before April 24, 1979, the amount of the exclusion under this paragraph (d)(3) may be determined under any reasonable method.

(4) Dividends, interest, and gains on securities derived by insurance companies from investments of earned premiums—(i) In general. Foreign personal holding company income of a controlled foreign corporation which is an insurance company does not include certain income, determined under subdivision (ii) of this paragraph (d)(4), derived from investments made by the corporation of an amount of its assets equal to one-third of certain of its earned premiums. For purposes of determining whether a controlled foreign corporation is an insurance company, see paragraph (d)(3)(i) of this section. This paragraph (d)(4) applies to taxable years of controlled foreign corporations beginning after December 31, 1975, and for taxable years of United States shareholders whose taxable years end with or within those taxable years of the controlled foreign corporations.

(ii) Amount of exclusion. The maximum amount eligible for the exclusion under section 954(c)(3)(C) and subdivision (i) of this paragraph (d)(4) is determined in the same manner, and with respect to the same amounts, as described in paragraph (d)(3)(iii) of this section with the following exception. The numerator of the fraction described in paragraph (d)(3)(iii) of this section is an amount equal to one-third of earned premiums. Subdivision (iii) of this paragraph (d)(4) defines the term "earned premiums."

(iii) Earned premiums. Earned premiums are premiums earned on insurance contracts (other than life insurance and annuity contracts) during the taxable year and which are described in section 832(b)(4), other than premiums which are directly or indirectly attributable to the insurance or reinsurance of risks of related persons (as defined in § 1.954-1(e)(1)). In determining whether premiums are directly or indirectly so attributable, see subdivision (iv) of this paragraph (d)(4).

(iv) Insurance or reinsurance of risks of related persons. A premium is directly or indirectly attributable to the insurance or reinsurance of a risk of a related person if the premium is derived by an insurance company from the assumption or sharing of the risk of a related person upon an insurance or reinsurance policy issued to or by the related person or from an arrangement by which all or part of the policy risk of a related person is in effect transferred directly or indirectly through an unrelated person to the insurance company. If an insurance company participates in an insurance or reinsurance pool, whether there is joint liability on the risk with a related person is not determinative of whether the insurance company insured or reinsured the risk of a related person. If a premium is attributable in part to the insurance or reinsurance of a risk of a related person, and in part to other risks, the amount of the premium is apportioned on a reasonable basis.

Rev. Rul. 80-202

ISSUE

How should the value of a decedent's interest as a proprietor in a trade or business carried on as a proprietorship be computed for purposes of determining the limitation on the amount of estate tax that may be paid in installments under section 6166A of the Internal Revenue Code?

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 6166A(a) of the Code provides for the payment of estate tax in installments if the value of an interest in a closely held business that is included in determining the gross estate exceeds either (1) 35 percent of the value of the gross estate, or (2) 50 percent of the taxable estate. This provision specifies that value for purposes of applying section 6166A shall be value determined for federal estate tax purposes.

Section 6166A(b) of the Code provides that the amount of tax that may be paid in installments shall be an amount that bears the same ratio to the estate tax imposed by section 2001 (reduced by credits against such tax) as the value of the interest in a closely held business that qualifies for the election to pay the tax in installments bears to the value of the gross estate.

Section 6166A(c)(1) of the Code provides that the term "interest in a closely held business" includes an interest as a proprietor in a trade or business carried on as a proprietorship.

Section 20.2031-1(b) of the Estate Tax Regulations provides that the value of every item of property includible in a decedent's gross estate is its fair market value at the time of the decedent's death.

Section 20.2031-3 of the regulations provides that the fair market value of any interest of a decedent in a proprietorship is the net amount a willing purchaser would pay for the interest to a willing seller, neither being under any compulsion to buy or sell and both having reasonable knowledge of the relevant facts.

For estate tax purposes, the fair market value of a decedent's interest as a proprietor in a trade or business carried on as a proprietorship is the net amount a purchaser would pay for the interest to a seller. The value of the gross estate includes only such net amount and not the total value of the assets of the proprietorship.

HOLDING

In computing the limitation on the amount of estate tax that may be paid in installments under section 6166A of the Code, the value of a decedent's interest as a proprietor in a trade or business carried on as a proprietorship is the net amount a willing purchaser would pay for the interest to a willing seller.

The above conclusion also applies to section 6166 of the Code.

Section 1. Purpose

.01 The purpose of this revenue procedure is to outline the requirements and instructions for reporting agents who perform a payroll service and who, in connection with this service, submit employment federal tax deposit payments for their clients. These payments are described in the Employment Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 31) under section 6302 of the Internal Revenue Code. All federal tax deposit payments are required to be deposited through a qualified federal tax depositary, as defined in 31 CFR Part 203. Each payment must be accompanied by the appropriate federal tax deposit card.

.02 Under the provisions of this revenue procedure, qualifying agents may request permission to prepare federal tax deposit cards instead of using the prepunched cards provided by the Treasury Department. These agent-prepared federal tax deposit cards must accompany the payments of clients who have been approved under this program. Authorization will extend only to those agents who have a minimum of 500 clients and who satisfy all the requirements of this revenue procedure.

Sec. 2. Background

.01 The Treasury Department furnishes federal tax deposit cards to those taxpayers who can reasonably be expected to make tax deposits. These cards are prepunched and preprinted with essential identifying information for processing the payment data to the appropriate tax account. Many payroll and tax preparation businesses have not had the prepunched deposit cards for making the required tax deposits, and, in most instances, this occurred because the agent had not requested that the client forward the deposit cards furnished by the Treasury Department. Some of these reporting agents have mailed deposits directly to an Internal Revenue Service office when the deposit cards were not available to them. This practice is not in conformity with the Employment Tax Regulations.

.02 Authorization for preparing Form FTD 501, Federal Tax Deposit, Withheld Income and FICA Taxes (FTDs), first appeared in Rev. Proc. 75-12, 1975-1 C.B. 653. The authority to prepare federal tax deposit cards is no longer dependent on the authority to file Form 941, Employer's Quarterly Federal Tax Return, on magnetic tape.

Sec. 3. FTD Payments Submitted by Reporting Agents

.01 All federal tax deposit cards prepared by an authorized agent must be submitted with payment to a qualified federal tax depositary. The only acceptable agent-prepared deposit cards are those relating to Forms 941, 940, and 943. Form 501 is used to report a deposit for withheld income and FICA taxes (Form 941). Deposit Form 508 is used to report a deposit for unemployment taxes (Form 940). Deposit Form 511 is used to report a deposit for agricultural FICA taxes and voluntarily withheld income tax (Form 943).

.02 Authorized agents will be furnished a supply of blank FTD cards. The same type of card is used for all three taxes. The agent will identify the type of tax by a tax class code punched in column 19 of the card.

.03 Deposits for other taxes and for clients who have not been accepted under this program must be made to a depositary by means of the prepunched cards provided by the Treasury Department. Reporting agents authorized under this program who mail payments directly to an Internal Revenue Service office will have their remittances returned to them under instructions that they obtain the appropriate deposit cards from their client and that they submit the same through a qualified federal tax depositary, as required. Taxpayers whose payments are returned to their reporting agent may be subject to appropriate penalty and interest charges. Unless the client delivers the prepunched cards to them, reporting agents should not assume the responsibility of making tax deposits on behalf of a client as to any deposit that may become due before the client is actually under this program.

.04 Agent-prepared FTD cards must be submitted to a qualified depositary separate from the prepunched deposit cards which were mailed to the taxpayer by the Treasury Department.

Sec. 4. Application to Prepare FTD Cards

.01 Agents who wish to prepare federal tax deposit cards must first file a letter of application with the Director of the Internal Revenue Service Center where the deposits will be processed. In most cases this will be the same service center that processes the related tax forms. See Exhibit 1 for a list of service centers and their respective addresses.

The letter of application should include all the following information:

1 The full name, address, and employer identification number of the firm making the application. If the reporting agent will prepare deposit cards at more than one branch or location, each location must be identified in the letter of application, or each location must submit an individual letter of application.

2 The name, title, and telephone number of a person the Service can contact regarding the application. In most cases, any problem with the letter of application can be resolved by telephone and this will expedite processing by the service center.

3 The name, address, employer identification number, Federal Reserve Bank code, bank identification number/check digit code, and the branch code of the federal tax depositary which will forward the agent-prepared deposit cards to the Service. Prior to submitting the letter of application, the reporting agent must have an agreement with a depositary that the depositary will accept the agent-prepared FTDs and will submit them under a transmittal separate from Treasury Deprtment prepunched FTDs.

4 A listing of the taxpayers who will have their federal tax deposit cards prepared by the reporting agent. See Section 5 for the information required on this listing. See Exhibit 2 for an example of a list of clients.

5 A power of attorney for each taxpayer on the listing. See Section 6 for information concerning the power of attorney. See Exhibit 3 for an example of a properly prepared power of attorney.

6 A statement of the approximate number of deposit cards the agent expects to prepare during the first six months after approval. The Service will issue a six-month supply of blank deposit cards with the authorization letter.

.02 Applications containing a listing of less than 500 clients will be denied. If an agent has previously been preparing federal tax deposit cards under the provisions of Rev. Proc. 75-12 before supercession by Rev. Proc. 79-15, 1979-1 C.B. 498, the agent is exempt from this qualification.

Sec. 5. Listing of Clients

.01 Each letter of application must include a listing of the taxpayers who will have their federal tax deposits prepared by the reporting agent. The listing must include each taxpayer's complete business name, address (including ZIP code), employer identification number, and an account number not exceeding five digits assigned to the client by the agent. For each client, the listing must specify the types of taxes for which deposit cards will be prepared.

.02 The listing must be double spaced to allow room for notations by the service center. The clients must be listed in account number sequence. A duplicate listing must be submitted so that the Service can maintain a file of taxpayers accepted under this program. See Section 8 for updates to the initial listing of clients. See Exhibit 2 for an example of the way the listing should be submitted.

Sec. 6. Power of Attorney

.01 A power of attorney must be submitted for each client on the listing. The power of attorney may be submitted on Form 2848, Power of Attorney, which is available on request. A sample power of attorney is set forth in Exhibit 3. If this form is not used, the power of attorney must clearly state that the reporting agent is granted the authority to prepare and submit federal tax deposits for the applicable tax forms. The power of attorney must be signed by the taxpayer and the reporting agent.

.02 If a power of attorney is already on file for full tax reporting, it is not necessary to execute a new agreement. If a power of attorney is already on file for magnetic tape filing of Form 941, it does not need to be revoked. However, a new power of attorney must be submitted to cover any federal tax deposits not already covered.

.03 The power of attorney for agent-prepared FTDs will be a limited power of attorney. Notices, refunds, tax forms, and other output will be mailed to the taxpayer. Requests from a reporting agent for information or adjustments on an account will be honored by the service center only to the extent covered by the power of attorney.

.04 Requests for taxpayer name and address changes may not be made by a reporting agent with a limited power of attorney. The only requests that will be honored will be those originating from the taxpayer or an attorney-in-fact if the attorney has a full power of attorney for all tax matters concerning a taxpayer and has filed a copy of the full power of attorney with the Internal Revenue Service Center.

.05 The reporting agent must keep copies of the power of attorney on file at the agent's principal place of business for examination by the Internal Revenue Service upon request. If the power of attorney includes the authority to sign and file tax returns, it must be retained until the statute of limitations for the last return filed under its authority expires.

.06 The power of attorney will remain in effect until such time as it is revoked by the taxpayer, terminated by written notification by the reporting agent, or expires under its own terms.

.07 The power of attorney is automatically revoked when the reporting agent notifies the Service that the taxpayer will no longer have FTDs submitted by the agent. It is also automatically revoked when the Service notifies the reporting agent that the requirements of this revenue procedure have not been adhered to and the Service will no longer accept the agent-prepared FTDs from that agent.

.08 Any time a power of attorney has been terminated or revoked, a new power of attorney will be required if a client re-enters this program. The new power of attorney must be signed and dated subsequent to the revocation.

Sec. 7. Acceptance of Agent's Application

.01 The Service will process each letter of application within thirty days of receipt. The authorization letter will include a three-digit identifying number which the Service will assign to the reporting agent. If the reporting agent will prepare deposit cards at more than one location or branch, each location or branch will be assigned a separate identifying number. After an agent has been assigned an identifying number, all communication regarding the preparation of federal tax deposit cards should include this number. Updates to the agent's listing of clients must always contain the identifying number of the location or branch handling the particular client's records. The agent-identifying number must be punched in card columns 72-74 of the agent-prepared deposit cards.

.02 One copy of the listing of the reporting agent's clients will be returned with the authorization letter. The Service will verify each client's employer identification number and will provide the client's name control which must be punched in card columns 13-16 of the deposit cards. An Internal Revenue Service district office code will be written in for each taxpayer and must be punched in card columns 17 and 18. If there is a discrepancy, the Service will also provide the business name as it is maintained on record with the Service. Corrections will be indicated by a line through the agent's information with the corrected information written above.

.03 Reporting agents must not change the validated employer identification number, name control, or district office code except when notified to do so by the Internal Revenue Service.

.04 All discrepancies in taxpayer filing requirements will be resolved by telephone if a contact is established in the letter of application. If, for any reason, a particular taxpayer whose name is recited on the agent's list is not accepted by the Service under this program, the name of the taxpayer will be circled out and the reason for non-acceptance will be stated in the acceptance letter.

.05 Based on the request by the reporting agent in the letter of application, the Service will issue a six-month supply of blank deposit cards with the acceptance letter. Orders of additional blank cards should be made by the reporting agent to the FTD Coordinator at the appropriate service center. Requests for more cards should be made at least thirty days before the expected depletion of the stock each agent has on hand. Reporting agents are cautioned that blank federal tax deposit cards are intended only for clients accepted under this program. Misuse of this privilege will be cause for disqualification of the agent.

SEC. 8. UPDATES TO THE AGENT'S LIST OF CLIENTS

.01 After acceptance of the reporting agent's initial list of clients, all additions and deletions must be reported to the service center immediately. New clients may not be included in the preparation of federal tax deposits by a reporting agent until they are accepted and the entity information (EIN, name control, district office code, and filing requirements) is validated and provided by the Service. If the reporting agent chooses to make federal tax deposits for a new client prior to being accepted, the agent must use the Treasury Department prepunched deposit cards and deposit the payment with a qualified depositary separate from the agent-prepared deposit cards.

.02 The Internal Revenue Service will process the agent's update listing within two weeks of receipt. The update listing should be in the same format as the initial listing, with the additions preceding and on a separate page from the deletions. Two copies of this listing should be submitted to enable the Service to maintain a file copy. The service center will process the additions on an expedite basis and in the same manner as the initial listing. Deletions will be acknowledged to the reporting agent.

.03 Once a client has been deleted under this program, the reporting agent may not request to re-enter that client until the next quarter. For example, if a client is deleted in the first quarter of the year (Jan., Feb., Mar.), the client may not be added back onto the accepted list of clients until the second quarter of the year (Apr., May, June). A new power of attorney must be submitted when the request to reenter the program is sent to the Service.

.04 Once each six months, the reporting agent must send a consolidated listing of their clients currently accepted by the Service. The consolidated listing is for information only and will not be returned to the agent. If no clients have been added or deleted during a six-month period, it is not necessary to submit this listing.

SEC. 9. PREPARATION OF THE DEPOSIT CARDS

.01 Keypunch instructions for agent-prepared federal tax deposits are included in this revenue procedure as Exhibit 4. The deposit cards must be interpreted across the top of the card. If the agent uses card columns 1-3 for internal control, interpretation of these three card columns should be suppressed, if possible. All other fields may be interpreted immediately above the punches, or each field may be separated by a single space. An uninterpreted card should never be included in the agent's shipment of deposit cards.

.02 The employer identification number, name control, and district office code fields must be punched with the information provided and verified by the Service. No change should be made to this information for a particular client unless the Service notifies the reporting agent to do so.

.03 The tax class field must be either a "1" for a Form 501 deposit (Form 941), a "6" for a Form 511 deposit (Form 943), or an "8" for a Form 508 deposit (Form 940).

.04 The tax period ending field must always contain the month in card column 20 and the year in card column 21. The month will be either a "3" for March, a "6" for June, a "9" for September, or a "12 (&) punch" for December. If the deposit is a Form 501 deposit (Form 941), the month will be either a "3", "6", "9", or "12" (&) punch". If the deposit is a Form 511 deposit (Form 943) or a Form 508 deposit (Form 940), the month will always be a "12 (&) punch". The year will always be the last position of the tax period year (8 = 1978, 9 = 1979, 0 = 1980, etc.).

.05 The payment date must always be punched in card columns 26-29. Punch the month (01-12) in card columns 26-27 and the day (01-31) in card columns 28-29. It is essential that the payment date punched in this field be the same date the depositary receives payment for the deposit and date stamps the deposit card.

.06 The payment amount must be punched unedited and right-justified in card columns 30-38. If the amount exceeds 9 digits or if the payment amount is changed prior to submission, the corrected money amount should be punched unedited and right-justified in card columns 39-50. If not, leave card columns 39-50 blank.

.07 The three-digit agent-identifying number must be punched in card columns 72-74. The agent's account number assigned to the client must be punched in card columns 76-80.

SEC. 10. SUBMISSION OF AGENT-PREPARED FEDERAL TAX DEPOSITS

.01 After all applicable deposit cards are punched and interpreted, the cards should be grouped and delivered with the appropriate payment to the qualified depositary specified in the agent's letter of application. It is required that the reporting agent deliver the deposit cards early in the day so that the depositary can date stamp each card and prepare transmittals on the same day as the payment date punched in card columns 26-29 of the deposit cards. The deposit cards should be in groups of 100 cards with a machine listing of each deposit amount and a total for each group. The depositary will prepare the transmittals and ship the deposit cards to the appropriate service center.

.02 If the reporting agent is a bank business service and is authorized by the bank to prepare the transmittals (Form 2284, Advice of Credit), the agent-prepared federal tax deposits must be boxed separately from the prepunched cards. The group of agent-prepared FTDs must be diagonally red-striped with a felt pen across the tops of the cards and the boxes must clearly indicate that the FTDs are prepunched agent-prepared FTDs. The boxes must be marked for the attention of the FTD Inter-agency Coordinator at the appropriate service center. See Exhibit 1 for the service center addresses.

SEC. 11. TERMINATION OF THIS AUTHORIZATION

The Service reserves the right to terminate this agreement with reporting agents because of possible systemic changes which may preclude the use of punched cards. If the reporting agent cannot modify processing to accommodate these changes, the agreement may be terminated with sixty days notice.

Part IV. Items of General Interest

Treatment of Gain from Disposition of Certain Oil, Gas, or Geothermal Property—Public Hearing

Announcement 80-93 [1]

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Public hearing on proposed regulations.

SUMMARY: This document provides notice of a public hearing on proposed regulations relating to the tax treatment of gain from the disposition of certain oil, gas, or geothermal property.

DATES: The public hearing will be held on September 9, 1980, beginning at 10:00 a.m. Outlines of oral comments must be delivered or mailed by August 11, 1980.

ADDRESS: The public hearing will be held in the I.R.S. Auditorium, Seventh Floor, 7400 Corridor, Internal Revenue Building, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. The outlines should be submitted to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Attn: CC:LR:T (LR-276-76), Washington, D.C. 20224.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: Charles Hayden of the Legislation and Regulations Division, Office of Chief Counsel, Internal Revenue Service, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224, 202-566-3935, not a toll-free call.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: The subject of the public hearing is proposed regulations under sections 170, 301, 312, 341, 453, 751, 1254, and 1502 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. The proposed regulations appeared in the Federal Register for Wednesday, June 11, 1980, at page 39512 (45 FR 39512).

The rules of § 601.601(a)(3) of the "Statement of Procedural Rules" (26 CFR Part 601) shall apply with respect to the public hearing. Persons who have submitted written comments within the time prescribed in the notice of proposed rulemaking and also desire to present oral comments at the hearing on the proposed regulations should submit an outline of the comments to be presented at the hearing and the time they wish to devote to each subject by August 11, 1980. Each speaker will be limited to 10 minutes for an oral presentation exclusive of time consumed by questions from the panel for the Government and answers to these questions.

Because of controlled access restrictions, attendees cannot be admitted beyond the lobby of the Internal Revenue Building until 9:45 a.m.

An agenda showing the scheduling of the speakers will be made after outlines are received from the speakers. Copies of the agenda will be available free of charge at the hearing.

This document does not meet the criteria for significant regulations set forth in paragraph 8 of the Treasury Directive appearing in the Federal Register for Wednesday, November 8, 1978.

By direction of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

Overseas Employees of Charitable Organizations

Announcement 80-94 [1]

Overseas employees of charitable organizations, as defined in section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code, who resided in a lesser developed country while employed by such organizations during any part of their 1979 taxable years will have until October 15, 1980, to file their 1979 income tax returns. This extension is granted to those taxpayers who, under legislation reported by the Senate Finance Committee, would be allowed to elect an income exclusion of up to $20,000 under section 911 in lieu of the deduction provided for excess foreign living costs under section 913.

In order to qualify for this extension, taxpayers must qualify for the exclusion election, and either be residing or traveling outside the United States and Puerto Rico on April 15, 1980, or if in the United States or Puerto Rico on April 15, have applied for and received an extension of time to file until June 15, 1980. If the legislation is enacted, any necessary revised tax forms will be issued.

Lesser developed counries are countries not on the following list:

- Australia
- Austria
- Canada
- Czechoslovakia
- European Economic Community member states
  - Belgium
  - Britain
  - Denmark
  - France
  - Ireland
  - Italy
  - Luxemburg
  - Netherlands
  - West Germany
- Finland
- Germany (East)
- Hungary
- Iceland
- Japan
- Liechtenstein
- Monaco
- New Zealand
- Norway
- Poland
- Republic of South Africa
- San Marino
- Spain
- Sweden
- Switzerland
- Union of Soviet Socialist Republics

Any foreign country within the Sino-Soviet bloc as defined in Section 2 of E.O. 11071, 1963-1 C.B. 137.

Taxpayers eligible for the exclusion who were outside the U.S. and Puerto Rico on April 15 will not be penalized for failure to pay any tax due on the return if they file their returns and pay the amount due by October 15, 1980. Taxpayers eligible for the exclusion who originally applied for and received an extension until June 15, 1980, will not be assessed penalties for failure to pay if they paid the required amount of tax with the application for the original extension and they file and pay the remainder by October 15, 1980. In any case, interest will be due on any unpaid taxes from April 15, 1980, to the date of payment.

The due dates for estimated tax payments for the 1981 tax year are not changed by this extension.

Foundation Status of Certain Organizations

If an organization listed above submits information that warrants the renewal of its classification as a public charity or as a private operating foundation, the Internal Revenue Service will issue a ruling or determination letter with the revised classification as to foundation status. Grantors and contributors may thereafter rely upon such ruling or determination letter as provided in section 1.509(a)-7 of the Income Tax Regulations. It is not the practice of the Service to announce such revised classification of foundation status in the Internal Revenue Bulletin.

Announcement of the Disbarment, Suspension, or Consent to Voluntary Suspension of Attorneys, Certified Public Accountants, Enrolled Agents and Enrolled Actuaries from Practice before the Internal Revenue Service

Under 31 Code of Federal Regulations, Part 10, an attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, in order to avoid the institution or conclusion of a proceeding for his disbarment or suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, may offer his consent to suspension from such practice. The Director of Practice, in his discretion, may suspend an attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary in accordance with the consent offered.

Attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries are prohibited in any Internal Revenue Service matter from directly or indirectly employing, accepting assistance from, being employed by or sharing fees with, any practitioner disbarred or under suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service.

To enable attorneys, certified public accountants, enrolled agents and enrolled actuaries to identify practitioners under consent suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service, the Director of Practice will announce in the Internal Revenue Bulletin the names and addresses of practitioners who have been suspended from such practice, their designation as attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary, and the date or period of suspension. This announcement will appear in the weekly Bulletin at the earliest practicable date after such action and will continue to appear in the weekly Bulletins for five successive weeks or for as many weeks as is practicable for each attorney, certified public accountant, enrolled agent or enrolled actuary so suspended and will later be consolidated and published in the Cumulative Bulletin.

The following individuals have been placed under consent suspension from practice before the Internal Revenue Service:

Name	Address	Designation	Term of Suspension
John H. Frazier	Nashville, TN	Certified Public Accountant	Fifteen months effective June 16, 1980
Clifford Y. Pierce	Miami, FL	Certified Public Accountant	Indefinite effective June 13, 1980

Announcement Relating to Proposed Regulations Published With Notice of Proposed Rulemaking

Changes in regulations as announced below have been published in the Federal Register in tentative or proposed form to provide interested parties with an opportunity to file their objections or suggestions for consideration prior to final adoption of such regulations. These announcements will appear in the Bulletin during the period which has been prescribed for the submission and consideration of any views, arguments, or suggestions pertaining to the proposed regulations so published. Statement of such views, arguments or suggestions should be submitted in writing, preferably six copies, to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Attention: CC:LR:T, Washington, D.C. 20224.

INTERNAL REVENUE BULLETIN

The Introduction on page 3 describes the purpose and content of this publication. The weekly Internal Revenue Bulletin is sold on a yearly subscription basis by the Superintendent of Documents. Current subscribers are notified by the Superintendent of Documents when their subscriptions must be renewed.

CUMULATIVE BULLETINS

The contents of the weekly Bulletin are consolidated semiannually into a permanent, indexed, Cumulative Bulletin. These are sold on a single copy basis and are not included as part of the subscription to the Internal Revenue Bulletin. Subscribers to the weekly Bulletin are notified when copies of the Cumulative Bulletin are available. Certain issues of Cumulative Bulletins are out of print and are not available. Persons desiring available Cumulative Bulletins, which are listed on the reverse, may purchase them from the Superintendent of Documents.

BULLETIN INDEX-DIGEST SYSTEM

The Bulletin Index-Digest System (12-78) provides a fast and easy way to research Revenue Rulings, Revenue Procedures, Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and other matters of a permanent nature published in the weekly Internal Revenue Bulletin, or Cumulative Bulletin from 1953 on. It is a comprehensive and up-to-date research tool that requires no filing or other clerical maintenance. The current revision consists of four Services, available on a subscription basis, each including a basic volume that covers the period 1953-1978 and a cumulative supplement covering material published in subsequent Bulletins for the following two-year period. Cumulative supplements are issued quarterly for the Income Tax Service and semiannually for the Estate and Gift, Employment, and Excise Tax Services.

HOW TO ORDER

Check the publications and/or subscription(s) desired on the reverse, complete the order blank, enclose the proper remittance, detach entire page, and mail to the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. Please allow two to six weeks, plus mailing time, for delivery.

Arbitrage bonds; advance refunding issue; acquired obligations; matured Treasury bonds. The yield on matured Treasury bonds purchased in an escrow restructuring transaction with part of the proceeds of an issue of advance refunding bonds may not be taken into account in computing the yield on the major portion investments of the issue for the purpose of determining compliance with the arbitrage yield restrictions of section 103(c)(2) of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 80-204, page 9.
Arbitrage bonds; temporary investment of proceeds. A political subdivision of a city issued bonds to finance construction of a water distribution facility more than two years before construction of the facility was to begin and invested a major portion of the proceeds in higher-yielding certificates of deposit to generate cash income from the large spread between interest rates on taxable and tax-exempt obligations. Because the political subdivision did not act with due diligence, the bond proceeds do not qualify for investment at a materially higher yield for a temporary period. Therefore, the bonds are arbitrage bonds, and the interest received by the bondholders is not excludable from their gross incomes.

Statement of Principles of Internal Revenue Tax Administration

The function of the Internal Revenue Service is to administer the Internal Revenue Code. Tax policy for raising revenue is determined by Congress.

With this in mind, it is the duty of the Service to carry out that policy by correctly applying the laws enacted by Congress; to determine the reasonable meaning of various Code provisions in light of the Congressional purpose in enacting them; and to perform this work in a fair and impartial manner, with neither a government nor a taxpayer point of view.

At the heart of administration is interpretation of the Code. It is the responsibility of each person in the Service, charged with the duty of interpreting the law, to try to find the true meaning of the statutory provision and not to adopt a strained construction in the belief that he is "protecting the revenue." The revenue is properly protected only when we ascertain and apply the true meaning of the statute.

The Service also has the responsibility of applying and administering the law in a reasonable, practical manner. Issues should only be raised by examining officers when they have merit, never arbitrarily or for trading purposes. At the same time, the examining officer should never hesitate to raise a meritorious issue. It is also important that care be exercised not to raise an issue or to ask a court to adopt a position inconsistent with an established Service position.

Administration should be both reasonable and vigorous. It should be conducted with as little delay as possible and with great courtesy and considerateness. It should never try to overreach, and should be reasonable within the bounds of law and sound administration. It should, however, be vigorous in requiring compliance with law and it should be relentless in its attack on unreal tax devices and fraud.
